Civic matters include activities toward the establishment of an airport and supporting the annual Willimantic exposition which will be held in January under the auspices of the Windham County Poultry, Pigeon and Small Stock association. President Frank P. Fenton of the chamber is to appoint a committee to co-operate in this work with the hope of giving special emphasis to the importance of the town of Windham as a poultry center. Windham ranks second in the state of Connecticut in poultry production.

The president was also authorized to appoint a committee to confer with service club committees in consideration of the Boy Scout movement in this city and surrounding towns. This is in connection with the organizing of eastern Connecticut as a district, excepting New Loudon, under the jurisdiction of the Norwich Boy Scout council. Activities along this line are in full swing in Stafford Springs, Putnam, Danielson and Jewett City. Willimantic yet remaining to become definitely affiliated with the movement.

FUNERAL

Mrs. Bridget Sullivan

Leaving the funeral chapel, 32 Jackson street, the funeral of Mrs. Bridget Sullivan was held Saturday morning with a high mass of requiem in St. Joseph's church at 9 o'clock. Rev. Francis Duch was the celebrant. Selections were by Miss L. Monica McKean and Mrs. Emma Doyle, accompanied by Mrs. Edmund R. Portelance, organist. Burial was in St. Joseph's cemetery where a committal service was conducted by Rev. Father Duch. The bearers were John S. Sullivan, James F. McGlone, Edmund R. Portelance and Patrick Dennehy.

The Willimantic chapter of the American Red Cross will open its annual membership campaign about Dec. 1. President Frank P. Fenton stated today. A chairman of the drive remains to be selected and no set goal as to the amount to be raised or the number of members secured has been set. A general appeal for the minimum membership fee of $1, without a canvass of business places or homes, will be made, the campaign depending entirely on public generosity. George H. Spencer is the local treasurer of the Red Cross.

Julius A. Hauschild, 75, of 698 East Middle turnpike, Manchester, died in a Hartford hospital Friday after a long illness. He leaves four daughters, Miss Johanna Hauschild, Miss Elsie Hauschild and Mrs. Herbert H. Bissell of Manchester, and Mrs. Leo Eisman of Bridgeport, and two sons, Paul Hauschild of Manchester and Walter Hauschild of Willimantic.

A general meeting of the chamber is to be held Thursday, Dec. 5, at the Nathan Hale hotel. Paul H. Wilson, secretary of the Graton-Knight Co. of Worcester, Mass., will be the speaker on the subject, Calendar Reform. The Worcester concern has been operating on the 13 months schedule for the past 12 years and in his talk Mr. Wilson will give his views of this experiment. The annual meeting of the chamber is to be held in February, at which time five new directors will be elected to take the places of those whose terms expire this year.

Another continuance was ordered in the case of Theodore Sorokolit of Hop River, charged with violation of the game laws in a case pending in the Columbia town court. Justice of the Peace Mrs. Fannie Dixon Welch, at the request of Attorney W. A. King for the defense, granted a continuance until next Wednesday night.

Several new features, including an exhibition of curios and antiques, are planned for the fifth annual Willimantic exposition to be staged in the state armory, beginning Jan. 3, under the auspices of the Windham County Poultry, Pigeon and Small Stock association. D. D. Cavanaugh, exposition manager, will receive the assistance of a committee from the chamber of commerce and the Connecticut Agricultural college in carrying out the plans which, in some respects, are intended to rival even the New York and Boston shows.

The sales of property are shown in the following warranty deeds filed Saturday at the office of the town clerk: A tract of land on east side of upper High street, 83 by 260 feet, by Ellery P. and Effie M. Weeks to Clarence P. and Helen I. Noel; tract of land with buildings, on east side of highway between South Windham and Williams' Crossing, by Nathan T. Ladd to Ira C. Wheeler of Bozrah.

Acting on a complaint that a couple were getting too hilarious in the rear seat of an automobile parked on lower Jackson street, Officers Roderick and Joseph Lariviere, about 2:20 o'clock this morning, arrested Mrs. Mary Chalifoux of 27 Valley extension and Helve Compagnat, 28, of Taftville, on intoxication charges. The woman, who is married and a mother, furnished bonds for her own release and that of her companion. Both are booked for police court Monday.

Pronounced out of danger, Robert Cushman, aged 7, is making rapid recovery at St. Joseph's hospital where he became a patient one week ago Saturday after being accidentally shot in the abdomen by a playmate in West Ashford with a .22-calibre rifle. The bullet penetrated through seven layers of the intestines.

Willimantic's model six-room home, now in the course of construction by Oliver L. Willard, a director of the chamber of commerce, will be open for public inspection about the middle of January. The inspection of the model structure, which is located at the corner of North and Bolivia streets, is intended to encourage people of the city to buy or build their own homes. In this connection expert advice on financing home ownership will be given. Furniture dealers in the city have offered their co-operation in furnishing the home along modern demands of beauty and efficiency.

Several guests from the East Hampton and Danielson clubs participated in an informal skeet shoot held at the range of the Willimantic Rod and Gun club in Mansfield this afternoon with Captain Carl E. Rice in charge.

Saturday went Friday one better and in turn became the coldest morning of the season. The mercury dropped to an average of five to eight degrees above zero during the early hours and hovered about the freezing mark practically throughout the day.

The return traffic of the Yale-Harvard game was in evidence here Saturday night and today. A number of parties remained as overnight guests in hotels here.

Ralph Williams of Westfield, Mass., was with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred J. Williams, for the week end.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederic W. Staebner entertained their son, William Staebner, of Cambridge, Mass., over the week end.

Week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. George C. Livezly were Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Phiffer of Hartford.

MAYOR GATES CONCLUDES HIS TERM OF OFFICE TODAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 24.—Mayor Charles A. Gates will formally conclude his fourth two-year term as mayor of the city of Willimantic at the adjourned common council meeting to be held Monday night. The meeting will be the final one of the present administration, the keynote of the session being the presentation of the mayor's annual statement. Other than the paying of the bills to date but little other business is expected to be taken up.

Mayor Gates was first elected to that office in 1917, being re-elected in 1919 and 1921 by overwhelming majorities. Again in 1927 he carried the republican colors by one of the greatest majorities ever accorded a candidate. In concluding his fourth term, Mayor Gates leaves a record of administration that stands among the greatest in the city's history.

In concluding his summary of the operation of the various city departments Mayor Gates' statement will close in part as follows: "I cannot but feel that after looking over the expenditures during this era of high prices, that we have much to congratulate ourselves on, both in respect to the quality of work done as well as to the reasonableness of the expenditures necessitated by that work."

The prepared statement of Mayor Gates shows that the water department closed with a balance of $6,137.67 as of Nov. 1. Under supervision of the sewer department a total of 2,330 lineal feet of eight-inch pipe has been laid during the year, this work furnishing employment to a large number of local men. The preliminary survey for the treatment of sewage prior to its disposal in public streams is now being made. The street department, under Superintendent Edwin O. Sumner, laid 4,654 square yards of permanent highway, while the 46 miles of accepted streets are in better condition than ever. The past season was a banner one for the construction of sidewalks and concrete gutters. There were 79,271 square feet of concrete sidewalks and 29,362 square feet of gutters laid during the year in addition to all necessary repairs. The figure shows an increase in installation of sidewalks of 36,000 square feet more than in any one year in the history of the city. The city is lighted by 555 electric street lights, many of them quite recently installed. The discipline and efficiency of the fire and police departments are highly commended in the report. The ice department, which offers a sufficient supply to the community and at a lower price than elsewhere, shows net earnings for the year of $402.78.

The financial report is most satisfactory. The appropriations for this year amounted to $285,030.89, of which the sum of $242,106.36 has been expended, leaving an unexpended balance of $42,924.53. The bonded indebtedness of the city is $275,338.34, this showing a reduction of $8,666.66 during one year. Note is made in the statement of the loss of William Ellis Jackson, alderman from the first ward, who died Jan. 29, 1929, and Wade U. Webster, chief of the fire department, who died Oct. 26, 1929.

GURLEYVILLE

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Morse and Antonette Heinige attended the football game between the Connecticut Aggies and the Rhode Island state college team, Saturday at Kingston, R. I.

The time of church service here has been changed from 9.30 a. m. to 1.30 p. m. Sunday school immediately following.

The November meeting of the church official board was held at the home of Mrs. Dwight Hanks Tuesday evening last.

MORE CARS IN TEN MONTHS THAN IN ALL OF LAST YEAR

DETROIT—(AP)—The United States had a daily average factory sale of 16,707 motor vehicles for the first 10 months of the year, according to department of commerce statistics.

A total of 5,017,806 vehicles was produced, in contrast to 3,867,503 cars and trucks for the same period last year. The entire 1928 production was 1,150,305 machines under the production in the 1929 period closing October 31.

Stafford Springs

State Policeman Henry Heinold, of Stafford Springs barracks, will go to New York today (Monday), bringing back Fred Carl Green for whom he has a warrant for non-support of his wife and children. Green is now serving a term in jail in New York state and will be released Tuesday. Since he deserted his wife more than two years ago the town of Stafford has spent about $1,000 for the support of his family. Green is also wanted in Rockville for breaking and entering a store and taking goods therefrom.

Several local fans attended the Yale-Harvard football game in Cambridge Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Irving Hayden entertained friends at their home in Stafford Hollow Saturday evening in celebration of their 10th wedding anniversary. Mr. and Mrs. Hayden were married by Rev. Felix J. O'Neill at St. Edward's church in Stafford Springs, Nov. 23, 1919. They have one daughter, Miss Barbara Hayden.

Benjamin Fessenden, Jr., of Providence, was a recent visitor with Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Pinney.

Wolcott chapter, O. E. S., will meet Tuesday evening. A social hour will follow.

At a recent meeting of the Parent-Teacher association the following officers were elected: President, Rev. C. D. Newton; vice-president, Mrs. Gilbert Wagner; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. Harold B. Pinney. The meeting was held at the Pinney grammar school in Stafford Hollow.

A very enjoyable card party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George P. Wise, in Hydeville, Friday evening. There were six tables of whist. Prizes were won by David H. McCormack and Mrs. Walter Greaves. Miss Elizabeth Moore and Francis Fagan. The proceeds of the whist will be given to the auxiliary of the A. O. H. The prize won by Mr. McCormack, $2.50 in gold, was later donated to the auxiliary.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Cox, of Hartford, were recent guests of Mrs. Cox's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Hayes.

Selah Sanger, of Worcester Tech, spent the week end at his home in Staffordville.

Mr. and Mrs. Bonan, of Rockville, have returned after spending several days with relatives in town.

James Adams, of Hartford, was a week-end visitor with his parents, Mr and Mrs. Forrest V. Adams.

COLUMBIA

The annual competitive program of the grange took place Wednesday evening, was open to grange families and these together with visitors from several neighboring granges filled the hall. The contest was between those with odd and even birthdays. The odds led off with their program, which started with a parade, those in line, dressed oddly in different ways. Misses Adella and Ahlene Badge gave a fancy dance. The next was announced as a male chorus, and the men moved their mouths while the sisters sang behind the curtain. A sketch by six sisters "Hiring the School Marm." Next came a violin duet by Lester Hutchins and Amelia Groff which proved to be a saxophone solo behind the scenes by Frederick Hunt, with William Wolff making the proper motions on a cornet before the audience and then a sketch "Entertaining Sister's Beau" by Misses Adella and Ahlene Badge and Raymond Clarke followed. An original sketch by four men "Mail Time at Porter's Store," gave hits on some in the even side. The closing number a song by all "odds".

The "Evens" opened with an original black-faced sketch by the master of the grange, Clayton Hunt, who gave a song and monologue. A shadow picture "The Eggs and Horses" the reading by Miss Gladys Rice, was acted in pantomime by several of the evens. Mrs. Philip Isham gave one of her pleasing solos. A sketch "The Third and Last Degree" by Miss Marie Isham was enjoyed by the audience. Clayton Hunt, Jr., played "Painting the Clouds With Sunshine" as a saxophone solo. The last number was pictured songs, tableaux with Mrs. Isham singing. The tableaux were as follows: "Daughters of Mother McCree," "The Long Long Trail," Daddy Long Legs," "Carry Me Back to Old Virginny," and "Home Sweet Home." The Virginny tableau was especially beautiful and the curtain was raised on the scene again in response to encore. The judges, Mrs. Dexter, Mrs. Ellis and Mrs. Hills of Hebron grange, after long deliberation announced that each side was so good that it was hard to decide but that they had finally agreed that the odds had won on points. The committee in charge of the odds was Mrs. Cora Hutchins, Miss Lucie Greene, Mrs. Mary Hutchins, William Wolff and Raymond Lyman. The even committee was Clayton Hunt, Miss Laura Greene, Miss Marie Field, Mrs. Elsie Collins and Philip Isham.

CHAPLIN

At the meeting of Natchaug grange, Friday evening at the Congregational church vestry the following were elected: Master, Ellsworth Weeks; overseer, Bernard Church; lecturer, Mrs. Walter R. Church; secretary, Mrs. Ellsworth Weeks; treasurer, Mrs. Merritt Welch; chaplain, David Griggs; steward, William Singleton; assistant steward; Bernard Potter; lady assistant steward, Pauline Landeck; gatekeeper, Robert Sherman; Ceres, Miss Teresa Dabeneck; Flora, Miss Helen Dawoncsyk; Pomona, Mrs. Alfred F. Biswick.

Rehearsals have been held of late for a play "Traipsin' Abroad with Obadiah" written by David Griggs of Bear Hill. It is to be given during a meeting of the grange and plans are to present the play in surrounding towns. The pupils of the Center and South Chaplin schools entertained their parents at a supper served in the Congregational vestry Friday evening.

It is reported that James Lewis a resident of South Chaplin for many years has recently sold his farm.

The annual Ladies' Aid society supper and sale of their handiwork was at the Congregational vestry Tuesday evening and was well attended. A number was present from Willimantic.

Burton M. Welch has tendered his resignation as town clerk and treasurer to the selectmen and it has been accepted. The board has appointed Bernard Church to fill the vacancy. Mr. Welch, who has also held the office of judge of probate for the district of Chaplin for a number of years has filed his resignation with Governor John H. Trumbull. Mr. Welch also resigns as agent of the town deposit fund and as a member of the town school committee. He plans to leave town the last of December and will assist his brother-in-law, William N. Smith of Bogota, N. J., in his prosperous and expanding paper business.

The first snow storm is here the 21st and old prophets would say we are to have 21 this winter.

COLCHESTER

STATE ROAD STRETCHES RECEIVING REPAIRS

Benjamin Green, superintendent of repairs of the state highway department, Norwich division, has men with big motor trucks and road-scraper at work making repairs to the two small stretches of state-aid road on the old Middletown turnpike. One of these stretches extends from the eastern end of the old gravel bank opposite Elcart's pond to the small bridge at the foot of the Addison Taintor hill. The other piece of state-aid road is said to extend for a short distance west of the big hill beyond the Gwirtsman farmhouse. These two stretches of state-aid road were constructed nearly 30 years ago but this is the first time that the state highway department has attempted to repair the road, the selectmen having found it necessary to make any needed repairs during past years. Superintendent Green's men are digging new and deeper ditches, cutting the bushes a number of feet back from the roadway and the roadbed is being resurfaced with a fresh coating of stones and gravel.

A. N. Lewis and his sister, Mrs. H. F. Sanford, who have been spending the past few months at their summer home on North Main street, left here Saturday to make a short visit with friends and relatives in New York before continuing on to spend the winter in Florida.

Misses Claire, Alice and Margaret Brown, teachers in Hartford schools, visited over Sunday at their home here.

Norman Lord and Theodore W. Doberentz of Marlborough, called on friends here Saturday.

First Selectman Charles A. Kramer had men and trucks at work the past week repairing the roadway on Linwood avenue and the Mill road.

Water Situation Serious.

Many Colchester residents are beginning to fear that they will be inconvenienced by the lack of well water throughout the coming winter. One well on South Main street which had nine feet of water during the middle of the summer, now has about three feet and is supplying eight families in the neighborhood. Many of the farmers are carrying water by team and truck from springs several miles distant to supply drinking water for their live stock. Seven new wells have been dug about the village during the past few weeks.

The "Where Next" bridge club was entertained Saturday afternoon by Mrs. Ina Griswold of Norwich avenue. Four tables were in play, prizes being won by Mrs. Clara Hanmer of Gilead and Mrs. Harry A. Bock of Westchester Center. Following the game, light refreshments were served.

Clarence R. Hoxie of Ridgefield, Conn., visited Sunday with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Rathbun.

Mercury readings as low as 10 degrees above zero were reported about the village early Friday morning.

Roman Salewski has resigned after several years at the Palmer Bros. quilt mill in Fitchville, and has secured employment in Marlborough.

Misses Cora E. Carrier and Rachel Freedman, teachers in Hartford schools spent Saturday at home.

LEBANON

Gov. Jonathan Trumbull chapter, D. A. R. held its meeting in the parlors of the First Congregational church the past week.

Over 100 were present at the supper and entertainment given at the Congregational church Friday evening. The supper consisted of escalloped potato and ham, baked beans, relish, rolls, pie, and coffee. After supper an entertainment of music and readings was given Miss Eva Kimball of Scotland at the piano and her brother, Burton Kimball playing the violin. Their music was greatly enjoyed as were the two readings given by Miss Palmer. About $46 was cleared.

Lebanon grange, No. 21 held its annual meeting at Town hall Thursday evening. The following officers were elected: Master, Rev. A. G. Littlefield; overseer, Chauncey Williams, lecturer, Mrs. Cora Aspinall; steward, Irwin Jones; assistant steward, Abraham Aspinall; secretary, Mrs. Hattie Taylor; gate keeper, Henry Aspinall, Ceres, Miss Beatrice Littlefield; Pomona, Mrs. Elsie Bruce; Flora, Miss Dorothy Kneeland; lady assistant steward, Miss Mary Chappell; pianist, Mrs. Nellie Pultz; executive committee, O. L. Pultz; sandwiches, cake and coffee were the lunch following the meeting.

At the First Congregational church Sunday morning, the 17th, the two children of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Grabber were presented for baptism, Helen J. and Frank Spafford. A large number was present to witness this beautiful service of dedication, recognition and reception. The C. E. meeting was led by Chauncey Williams.

At the Baptist church, Rev. A. G. Littlefield took his text from Rev. 1:9. Mrs. Ida M. Abel led the C. E. meeting.

An all day meeting of the Mission circle was held in the chapel of the Baptist church Tuesday with a good number present. Work was done on rugs, aprons and quilt blocks.

Miss Ruth Rosenlund of Maple avenue was the guest of Miss Anna Lambert of Norwich Thursday evening.

The right of a municipality to make all necessary noise in the removal of street car tracks has recently been upheld by the Swiss courts. The Savoy hotel, of Zurich, having lost a goodly part of its clientele, it was alleged, as a result of the noise made by a gang of workers removing nearby street car tracks, sued the city for $4,000. The Cantonal tribunal having dismissed the claim, appeal was made to the federal courts and they, too, upheld the right of the noise makers.

DANIELSON

STATE POLICE RAID KITCHEN BEER PLANT

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Nov. 24—Sergt. G. L. Gardner and State Officer Henry Mayo of the Danielson barracks walked in on a quiet little drinking party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Malo, in the rear of 172 No. Main street Saturday night at 11:30, and before they came away had collected a considerable quantity of liquor and beer. In searching the premises the officers uncovered a quantity of liquor cached under the floor of the bathroom. This hidden store was made easy of access by removing a loose board. Henry Barry, formerly of Wauregan, who appeared to be in charge, was taken into custody by the officers and locked up. Mr and Mrs. Malo were not at home at the time of the raid. The officers did not molest the frequenters, numbering about half a dozen.

As the result of a week end accident on the Brooklyn state highway, near Kum-Along-Inn Frederick Stanford is scheduled to make a court appearance in that town the early part of the week. Stanford was going west toward Brooklyn in his car when it was in collision with an east-bound car operated by H. Bissel Carey of Farmington. Stanford appeared to have been blinded by the glare of the headlights of the Carey car, which was being closely followed by another operated by Eugene Maynard of 33 Verdun street, Central Falls, R. I. After the crash the Stanford car shot off to the right side of the highway over a lawn at the home of Joseph Birch and onto the property of George Beeney. Mrs. Carey, riding with her husband, had his nose cut and bruised. Both cars were considerably damaged.

Danielson and other parts of the town of Killingly were represented by the second largest delegation of boys attending the Brown-New Hamoshire football game at Providence Saturday afternoon through the courtesy of the Brown University Athletic association co-operating with the Windham county Y. M. C. A. This town's delegation numbered about 150, whereas Putnam sent 300, and other towns in the county sufficient to make a total of 750 boys.

Details of the organization work for the trip were worked out splendidly by Secretary L. Edwin Hill of Danielson. A. M. Thompson was in charge of the Danielson group. The boys were assembled here and made the start at 12:30 reaching Aldrich field in time to see the practice of the teams and all the other incidentals leading up to the start of the big game, which, incidentally, was the best that the boys from this section have seen in the four years that groups have been taken over to Providence. Brown winning 14 to 7. Nearly 150 automobiles were used for the trip. Numbers of the cars used out of Danielson were furnished by the Danielson Rotary club members, and Victor Smith of Allen Hill supplied a truck on which the local troops of Boy Scouts rode. It was a great day for the boys, the majority of whom were back here at 6:30 p. m.

Though a smaller number of dogs were exhibited than was expected—66 being shown—the bench show under the auspices of the Windham County Kennel club in the town hall Saturday evening was a success and of very special interest to the large number of dog fanciers attending. Judging in the toy class was Mrs. Irene Cotrani of Providence, in the sporting dog class by C. Bartlett of Thompson and in the Boston terrier class by Frank Brayman of Providence.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Aurrilla Horton

Mrs. Aurrilla Horton, 85, a native of this town but resident in Central Village for about 40 years, died last night at the Day Kimball hospital in Putnam. The body was brought here in charge of Undertaker A. F. Wood and is now at his funeral home. Mrs. Horton was admitted to the hospital on Friday last. She had been in declining health for a long time.

Mrs. Horton was a daughter of Martin Luther and Sybil Franklin Smith and was born in Killingly, July 2 1844. She was the widow of Lowell Horton. She leaves a son, Walter, with whom she made her home at Central Village, a sister, Mrs. William Pray, a sister, Mrs. William E. Pray of East Killingly, and two brothers, Charles H. of Laconia, N. H., and Luther Smith of East Killingly.

FUNERALS

John B. Gosselin

Danielson relatives were at Plainfield Saturday morning to attend the funeral of John Baptist Gosselin for many years resident here. The funeral was held from the home of his daughter, Mrs. Alfred Brochu, and with services at St. John's church at 9 o'clock, Rev. J. H. Landry was celebrant of the high mass of requiem. Burial was in St. John's cemetery. The bearers were George Gosselin, Delphise Gosselin, Roger Gosselin, of Danielson, Onesieme Houle, Romeo Lambert and Jules Gosselin. Martin T. Burns was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Madeline Bernier

Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock the funeral of Madeline Bernier, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bernier, was held from the home on Water street with a service at St. James' church, Rev. Emile Ladoucier officiating. Burial was in Holy Cross cemetery. Martin T. Burns was the funeral director in charge.

Henry G. Stinberg of Rockville was taken into custody about noon today by State Officer Royal Scranton and held at the barracks on North Main street. He will answer in court Monday to a charge of operating a motor vehicle while he was intoxicated.

Mrs. Ashley P. Mills plans to leave Monday for Boston to spend the Thanksgiving season with relatives.

Ladies' silver watch lost between 37 Reynolds St. and St. James' church Reward. Miss Florida Bernier.—Adv.

Schools throughout the town of Killingly will close next Wednesday afternoon for the Thanksgiving recess.

There will be strict enforcement of the new no-parking rule effective Monday and applying to the westerly section of Main street between Academy and Spring streets.

PUTNAM

LARGE ATTENDANCE AT FUNERAL OF ALDERMAN DUBOIS

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 24—City and town officials, a large number of citizens, besides members of the town and city democratic committees on Saturday morning attended the impressive funeral service for Alderman Edmund Dubois, held at 9 o'clock at St. Mary's church. A solemn high mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. U. O. Bellerose, pastor, assisted by Rev. J. D. Casey, deacon, and Rev. Ernest J. Belleau, sub-deacon. Music for the funeral mass was rendered by the members of the choir accompanied by Miss Rose Metras, church organist.

The bearers were all city officials with whom Alderman Dubois had been associated during his six years as councilor from ward two in the common council. They were: Mayor Charles A. Richard, Superintendent of Streets Frank Dumas, Captain of Police William J. Jarvis, City Clerk Thomas P. Ryan, Alderman John M. Dean and Selectman Edward F. Girard, representing the town plan of government.

Burial took place in St. Mary's cemetery. Rev. U. O. Bellerose conducted the committal service at the grave.

Three hundred boys of this city went to Providence Saturday afternoon to attend the annual Brown-New Hampshire university football game, where they were the guests of the Brown university athletic council. The game was witnessed at no expense whatever to the Putnam delegation of boys and incidentally it proved to be one of the best tilts played in the Brown stadium this season. From observations, the Windham county youngsters who were herded into the New Hampshire cheering sections formed the granite state rooters in cheering themselves hoarse by their vain attempt to spur New Hampshire on to a victory over the Bruins.

While funds received to date by workers in connection with the annual Red Cross drive, have not been completely totalled Thomas H. deCoudres of Woodstock avenue, said this morning that many contributions are yet to be made before the drive can be pushed over the top. During the past week canvassers have experienced difficulties in reaching prospective contributors and Mr. deCoudres said today that a second visitation of the territories will be necessary before the books can be closed. The drive entered upon its third and final week today. Funds returned to headquarters of the local chapter show a bright outlook for the year.

The members of the Putnam lodge of Elks will pay tribute to the memory of their departed brothers on Sunday December 1 at the annual memorial exercises to be held in the lodge rooms. All arrangements for the programme have been completed. Attorney Joseph Genereaux of Webster will deliver the eulogy and Rev. Henry E. Hodge, pastor of the First Baptist church of this city will pronounce the invocation. A vocal quartet and an instrumental and stringed quartet will render the musical part of the programme, to be announced this week by Exalted Ruler Lione Charron.

According to press dispatches appearing in Hartford papers this week, Lowell K. Thompson, former resident of this city, being held on a manslaughter charge by police of Manchester will be arraigned in superior court there at the December session. Thompson while driving his automobile is alleged to have struck and killed a youthful bicyclist. He was arrested shortly after the accident and released on bonds of $500.

A few early risers who happened to be in the business section of the city Saturday morning, perhaps obtained a glance of the famous $10,000 antique Yale fence, stolen a week ago by Cambridge students and returned to the Elis Saturday. Yale's historic fence, which carries some of the most treasured traditions of the university after its recovery in Cambridge was shipped to Worcester and placed aboard a truck routed for New Haven by way of Putnam. The well guarded vehicle carrying the treasured barrier, according to schedule should have passed through here at about five o'clock.

Dan Cupid is slated for a busy week in Thompson. Six marriage ceremonies are to take place within the borders of the town between Monday and Saturday, Town Clerk Charles T. Chase issued the half dozen licenses during the past fortnight.

Christmas charity workers of the Putnam lodge of Elks and members of the Salvation Army post here shortly will begin their yearly task of investigating needy families in order to afford relief and extend the spirit of the Christmas season to the homes of the unfortunate.

JEWETT CITY

ROSIE WALENDA CLAIMS NAME USED FRAUDULENTLY

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, Nov. 25.—Prosecuting Attorney Richard J. Dudkowski will institute a check-up Monday, to determine whether there has been a falsifying of names relative to one of the eight arrests made here Friday by federal prohibition officers for alleged violations of the liquor law. In this column in Saturday's Bulletin, there appeared the names of those who were called to appear in court. In the list, copied from the writs themselves, was the name of Rosie Walenda. Now it appears, from statements made by Rosie Walenda Saturday, that she is not under arrest, and never was arrested, and she further states that Nellie Walenda, is the woman held on the liquor charge under $500 bonds to appear Tuesday next and that her name (Rosie) was falsely given to the officers.

Today, the Monday before Thanks-giving, is recognized in all the outlying farming districts as butchering day. Turkeys will be dressed and prepared for market; a large percentage of the nearby flocks will be handled locally. Local dealers are finding a growing demand for Vermont and New York state birds, and have already placed orders for such, with which to supplement the call for fancy natives. Around 40 years ago, when there was often as many as five tons of turkeys shipped from Jewett City station, the weather conditions for the four days preceding Thanksgiving day made the season's profits in poutry a sort of gamble. In those days the late John C. Hawkins, buying for the select Providence market, would visit every farmer within a radius of 10 miles of the village. He would purchase the two or three birds that some farmer's boy had raised, or take over the entire flocks of 50 or 100. Besides these, his own famous white breed made a high class addition to his city sales. Mr. Hawkins is quoted as saying that three "soft" days preceding Thanksgiving often meant to him a loss of $500.

At the Polish masquerade ball, in Danielson Saturday night, Mrs. Catherine Lupa and Mrs. Barbara Malek won the first prize for the prettiest costume and the second prize was taken by Mrs. Louise Papinski and Mrs. Lucy Malek, all of Jewett City.

Big Mould Filled

As the result of steady day and night cement pouring, the big mould for the east bridge abutment was filled Friday afternoon. Its completion will mark the building of one of the largest, one-piece, solid, bridge abutments to be seen in this end of the state. Considered with its cement foot, which nobody will ever see again, a small trainload of rock, sand and cement has gone into its construction.

EKONK

(STERLING HILL)

The rural communities are rejoicing over the rain storm of Sunday and Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Tanner and Mrs. Byron Gallup went to Auburn Tuesday to see Everett Gallup, who has been seriously ill.

Rev. Lydia Hartig spent three days last week in Saybrook.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Slocum and Tracy Allen, of Westerly, spent Saturday at the Slocum cottage here.

Mr. and Mrs. Arland Roode, of White Rock, spent the week end with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Willard Gardner.

Visiting firemen already were assembled by the hundreds for the laying of the corner stone of a new fire engine house at Greenwich, Conn., when it was discovered that the cornerstone, a granite block weighing more than 100 pounds and inscribed with the date, had been stolen. The local firemen, all dressed up in ornate uniforms, had to look for it, and they looked until they found it in an empty lot about half a mile from the new building. They carried it back and the ceremony was properly performed.

"The worst cough I ever had—stopped OVERNIGHT"

"I don't remember ever having coughed so often as that morning I was caught in a snow storm—six miles from nowhere. By the time I got home I was sure I was in for a long indoor spell. Days taken away from my business—a pleasant prospect! No such thing happened—thanks to Smith Brothers'. I took the syrup faithfully and when I awoke the next morning my cough had completely quieted down." FRANK MULLEN

THE COMING WINTER

For many people there is a fascination about predicting the weather. They like to draw on their experiences, the experiences of others and the old sayings to test out each succeeding winter, or season, for that matter, and as everyone knows they hit the bullseye sometimes.

Already we have received certain claims about the severity of the coming winter. There is a general admission that winter cannot set in in earnest until we have had much more rain but once it does come it is going to be a humdinger, icemen will be cutting their crop by the last of December and other things for those who do not like cold weather to worry about have been put forth in good faith. The next thing is to produce the goods.

But new conditions take on new interest for the weatherwise. One of the latest prophets, a Rhode Islander, insists that we are to have a cold winter but an open one. He reaches this conclusion because of the recent snow storm. Because it came on the 21st he is certain there will be 21 storms, but because it went off quickly in a rain he is convinced that that will be the fate of the rest of the snow storms. He presents a cheerful outlook to the fellow who has a long sidewalk to shovel, and to the cities which have at times been forced to large expense because of snow removal work.

There are those who put their dependence upon the breast bone of a goose, the conduct of the birds, the harvest by the squirrels, and they manage to work out an interesting story for those who like to have the future read in such a manner, whether it comes true or not. One other seer points to the fact that while the hornets built their nests low last year and we had a mild winter they built their nests high this year and we can expect a winter with much snow. Further than that the muskrats are building their quarters higher this fall in anticipation of deeper snow.

These last two are said to be Indian signs, but it is your privilege to pick what suits you best, go along with the rank and file and while winter is still with us or after it has gone mull over the promises of what was to be expected and note how close to or far from the facts the prognosticators were. Or, better still, do a little proclaiming yourself and see what a reputation you can make. No license is needed.

NEWFOUNDLAND'S TIDAL WAVE

While much has been learned concerning the havoc that was caused along the southern coast of Newfoundland by the earthquake's tidal wave it is possible that the whole story has not yet been told. It is a section that is far from any large center of population, located on a bold coast of abrupt cliffs which could easily stand any buffeting they might get from such unusual attacks by the sea, and its chief means of communication and transportation is by water. The great wave disrupted any wire communications that existed and not until a thorough survey of the region has been made will it be possible to appraise the whole damage.

No matter where such a wave might strike on the Newfoundland coast and destroy life and property, it would affect for the most part poor people, people who live humbly, depending upon their fishing for their living and their pursuit of the simple life. Thus such appeals as are being or may be made to meet the situation in the Burin district will have a special appeal.

While the high ground on the cliffs along the Newfoundland shore would insure the people who built thereon against any harm from the sea, it isn't on the top of these great rocky coastlines that they build. Many of the villages, hamlets or settlements are close to the water, down at the foot of the hills, on bays and coves. In well-sheltered places some of the structures are even out over the water so that the small boats can land there, and above and about them are the places for the drying of the fish. Thus it can be appreciated that a 40-foot wave rushing against any such structures would quickly demolish and carry with them those within and such stores as they may have put aside for the winter. With home, supplies and part of the family gone the prospects are certainly dubious and discouraging.

Where the center of the quake was that sent the wave against Newfoundland will probably be determined in time, as well as the extent of the havoc it caused, but for the present there can be no question of the need of aid for those who remain in those wrecked villages.

TROLLEY BUSINESS

Whether the trolley lines in cities are going to be able to recover any considerable portion of the business which they have lost remains an interesting question.

There are communities where the trolley service is but a semblance of its former self and others where it has gone entirely. Evidently there are others where it is going in the wrong direction, if we are to judge by the petition which has been made to the public utility commissioners of New Jersey by the president of the trolley line in Trenton, who has asked for a doubling of the fare for the casual rider so that he will pay ten cents but the regular rider who buys tokens would still get them at 20 for $1.

This is a city trolley line which has been operating by order of the commissioners on a five cent fare for the past six years with the result that the operating revenue has shown a smaller amount by $5,000,000 than the operating costs and fixed charges. Naturally a company has no desire to go on doing business of that kind indefinitely. Whether it will pick up enough additional through raising the rate for the casual rider is a question but one which the company seeks to get the chance to answer.

This is, apparently, the first move to be made by the Trenton company to correct a condition which is faced, in some other centers appeals are being made to citizens to ride to their places of employment, their own stores and business places on the trolleys instead of bringing their cars downtown and parking them in front of their shops to the handicap of highway users. In Philadelphia the idea of providing a parking place for autos on the outskirts and furnishing transportation into the city for the owners has been under trial by the trolley company.

These are efforts that are being made to recover business that was taken away by the auto and efforts to overcome street conditions which have been created by auto traffic and parking. How successful they will be is a question and yet it can hardly be expected that transportation companies are going to continue to furnish service at a loss indefinitely. Either they must get some relief or else they must abandon the rails for the bus, or go out of business.

CONNECTICUT TURKEYS

This is one of the weeks in which there is particular interest in turkey. Orders have been taken and soon they will be filled and there will come the great feast day of Thanksgiving.

In connection with the production of the piece de resistance for the Thanksgiving dinner the interesting statement is made that there is a large increase in the number of turkeys being raised in this part of Connecticut this year. This is good news and it is to be hoped that it will continue.

It has long been maintained, and in not a few instances demonstrated, that there was a good opportunity for the development of turkey raising in eastern Connecticut along with other farm activities. Turkey raising isn't exactly the same thing as growing a crop of trees, as anyone who knows anything about farming is fully aware. It calls for some knowledge of the birds, their diseases, their habits and the methods of protecting them against the various difficulties which prevail in turkey raising. But turkey raisers have brought a pleasing profit to New London county farms and they have produced those birds which were second to none.

Thus it is gratifying that there is a revival of interest in this direction, an interest which is being stimulated throughout the state and throughout New England, and in that connection it is a grand good move that is being made in labeling Connecticut turkeys as such. There is no reason why Connecticut cannot supply a much larger share of the turkeys that are wanted and consumed every year within its own borders.

GEORGES CLEMENCEAU

As if it were possible to ward it off by sticking valiantly to his task, Georges Clemenceau fought death but could not conquer it. Such was the determination, courage and persistency of the great French leader that carried him through many contests and helped him to solve many problems.

He had recognized the fact that death was not far away but he had set himself the task of completing his memoirs. He was not satisfied to let well enough alone, accept such medical treatment and advice as was given him and take a chance of improving his condition. He had gotten to the point where his work was his one goal and he could consider nothing else, not even his health.

Clemenceau lived to a ripe old age and retained his vigor well and during those many years he figured most conspicuously as one of the country's great statesmen. He was a leader with a large following, the man who gave the government the leadership it needed during the days when the Allied forces were being hard pressed in the World war. There was no such thought as being a loser in that contest for him. He quickly aroused the spirit of his people and rallied it under a leadership that had long before won for him the name of "Tiger." He was ever a fighter and nothing better illustrated that than the manner in which he carried on to the end.

While he was not the leader that France may have needed under all conditions, and while he might not have been inclined to support some of the conciliatory moves that have been made in bringing about better conditions in Europe since the war, he unquestionably knew his France and made it evident that he not only possessed strong convictions but was determined to carry them out. Clemenceau will have a most conspicuous place in French history.

ONE IN THIRTY MILLION

Jane was slim and trim and pretty, but she never suspected just how pretty until the night John took her to the beauty contest at the Peppy palace dance hall, and five judges selected her—but that's getting away ahead of the story.

Jane was feted and dated—and rated as the cleverest stenographer at the Phibbs Pencil company, where she had worked for five years. The "feted" and "dated" refer to the attentions of John Paul Phillips, who long had been aware of Jane's charms, and who, some day, planned to ask her—but that's also getting way, way ahead of the story!

As John entered the Phibbs Pencil company offices early one April morning and sat down at his desk he turned, as usual, to see if Jane was at her desk. As usual, Jane was right there, peering slyly over her typewriter to welcome John with her usual morning smile. And, as usual, John soon found a reason for going right past her desk.

"They're having a beauty contest over at the Peppy palace tonight," he remarked.

"Oh, really," smiled Jane encouragingly.

"The girl who wins," John went on, sotto voce, "will be crowned 'Miss Shopping District' and will get a free trip to the Pacific beauty pageant. Why don't you try out?"

"Me enter a beauty contest?" scoffed Jane, "Oh, John, how funny!" But just the same she was thinking: "How marvelous! Of course I'll go. But I do hope he begs me to."

He did. And she agreed to go. And so it happened that after some 200 pretty girls had walked past the judges' box, and after the judges had retired to deliberate, they returned with the verdict that Miss Jones was the most beautiful girl present and would be crowned "Miss Shopping District" with the chances for more honors at the Pacific pageant.

Jane was late to work the next morning. But when she did come in, dressed in her best, she surprised all the girls who crowded around with congratulations by pushing them hurriedly aside and going straight into Mr. Phibbs' private office. From there the office force plainly heard her announce that she was "through with office work and had decided to go on the stage."

"Why Jane!" exclaimed John, seizing her arm as she came out, "you're not giving up your job!"

"I beg your pardon, Mr. Phillips," returned Jane sloofly, "I am in a hurry and I really haven't time to discuss my affairs with you." And with that she left the astounded John speechless as she swept past him to the elevator.

A trifle breathless from speed and excitement, Jane entered the office of the city vaudeville agency a few minutes later and asked to see the manager.

"You'll have to wait," said the girl.

"But I'm the winner—" Jane began indignantly.

"I know," said the girl unimpressed. "You'll have to wait."

So Jane waited. She waited while a long row of people were shown into the inner sanctum. She waited while messenger boys and beautiful girls and busy looking men and stenographers came and went, in and out of the manager's office. Finally after aeons of waiting she was let in.

Brightly, Jane entered the manager's office. Brightly she laid her photograph on the desk before him and began, in her most vivacious manner:

"I am Miss Jane Jones and I've been selected Miss—"

"I know, Miss Jones," said the manager in a weary tone, "you've been selected 'Miss Link Bridge' or 'Miss River Straightening Celebration' or 'Miss Pickleville' or 'Miss Something or Other'—I've had six of 'em in here already this morning—all beauty winners, and all wanting to go on the stage.

"Listen to this, young lady: there are just about 3,000 beauty contests in this country every year. In ten years that makes 30,000 contests. And out of these, 30,000 winners aspire to go on the stage. How many do you suppose make it? On the legitimate stage today there are three beauty prize winners—about five more in vaudeville. In ten years, you see, you have eight chances out of 30,000 to get on the stage. Good day."

It was a timid Jane who opened the door of the Phibbs Pencil company that night after 6 o'clock. Every one had gone—every one but a solitary figure sitting at his desk looking for all the world as though he expected some one.

"John," said Jane softly, coming up behind him, "do you suppose—I—I've got more than one chance in 30,000 with Mr. Phibbs of getting my job back?"

"Why ask him?" replied John, softly, turning and taking her hand in his, "I've got a better job in mind for you—don't you know that you're the one girl in 30,000,000 for me?"—Chicago News.

CHILD TRAINING

Please Play With Aloysious.

A one-act play

By CHL.

Characters.

Mrs. Blank, a complacent matron
Aloysious, a timid boy of three.
Time: Early forenoon.
Place: Any town.
Scene: A modern living room.

(As curtain goes up Mrs. Blank is reading a letter. She frowns, walks to the left of the stage, slaps the letter down on a table, returns to center of the stage and begins to talk.

The child is leaning against a richly upholstered armchair at the right and to the back of the stage. He looks bored while his mother is reading. When she begins to talk he begins maneuvers to attract her attention to himself. From his manner it is easily deduced that he is afraid of his mother. And from the way he takes her snubbing one gathers he is accustomed to being snubbed.)

MRS. BLANK: (Her vowels are wide and emphatic, and halt like well-drilled soldiers before a consonant). I like that. What bother, I should like to know, would one more be to her? Having two children to look after anyway, what difference would one more make? She could do that much for her sister, I should think. I would do as much for her.

Stop pulling my skirt, dear. (This to Aloysious).

If she were a busy woman like myself, I would not think of asking it of her. But, she is such a home body. Now I never have a moment to myself. There is always something. If nothing else, a committee meeting. I am on so many committees. (The telephone rings. She gestures as much as to say, There, you see?)

Mrs. Blank speaking. — — — — Mrs. Darling is coming to the bridge luncheon today? You know, Mrs. Frankson, Mrs. Darling is a wizard at bridge. — — — — Mrs. Frankson, Mrs. Darling will win EVERYTHING — — — — I like that. — — — — By all means. Let us do that. An hour with Madame Sophonsie, will brush up our game — — — — I can go this very moment. — — — — You've already made an appointment? Very well. Hello, hello. — — — — Mrs. Frankson, we may as well go on to the luncheon from Madame Sophonsie's. — — — — Goodbye.

(She slowly rises from the chair at the telephone table, a concerned look on her face. Aloysious is staring at her, wondering what it all is about. As Mrs. Blank becomes aware of the child, she abruptly halts on her way to the center of the stage.)

Aloysious, why do you stare at me so? You make me nervous, darling. Go to the kitchen. No, don't. Maggie has threatened to leave if I send you into the kitchen again. Run into the dining room, that's a dear. No, no, you are sure to get into mischief. You will have to stay here. But do not stare at me so. Mother does not like it.

My sister simply must take him. I know what I shall do. I shall write my brother-in-law. He is so good-hearted. I shall explain to him how very much every moment of my time is taken up. Let's see. Monday, study club. Tuesday, bridge. Wednesday, the Guild. Thursday, Parent-Teacher association. Friday, teas. Saturday, we drive some place or another. And forenoons there are committee meetings, shopping and half a dozen other things.

But with my sister it is entirely different. I know she belongs to many clubs. But she does not give herself up to club work the way I do. She serves on one or two committees, perhaps. But she is not at all serious about the work.

What she enjoys doing is playing with her children. And I do say, she is a perfect child herself. I'll admit she is clever. You should see her backyard. It is a wonderful place for a child. All sorts of play devices. I can not see how she thought of those cunning things in that Japanese garden. Those Japanese gardens are quite the thing. Our study club gave one meeting to them. So interesting. And I assure you you would not believe your eyes if you saw her yard in winter. Statuary everywhere — sacred bulls, ducks, swans, pigs, dogs, horses. She sculptures them all out of snow and ice. That yard is the place for a child. She simply will have to take Aloysious. I'll have my brother-in-law see to that.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24—"Gin'ral" Dawes is ambassador to the Court of St. James only as far as the official records go.

If you chanced to listen in on the aftermath of his flying trip from London to talk over naval conference matters, however, you quickly found he had a far wider informal diplomatic mission to care for when he accepted the London post.

He was and is, it now appears, ambassador plenipotentiary and envoy extraordinary from Chicago to the world at large in connection with that city's plans for a whopping big show in 1933 to celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of its founding.

The "gin'ral" even regarded himself as ambassador to Washington in that connection, as some very high Washington officials discovered to their confusion.

"I have heard of nothing but the Chicago exposition; what Dawes has done to boost it abroad, and what's the matter with the senate rules since Dawes got here," one such official groaned privately.

Information for All.

And while the "gin'ral" was nominally housed in Pershing's vacant office at the state-war building, but was actually meandering about the corridors and oozing in and out of various offices, pipe in mouth and hands in pockets, even casual passersby heard plenty on both subjects.

They could catch the sound of the Dawes voice, orating in characteristically frank Dawes fashion even through closed doors.

It's quite natural, as a loyal Chicagoan, that Charlie Dawes should be enthusiastic about the coming fair.

A brother of the Dawes tribe heads the show and Charles G. is a greater booster anyhow, when it comes to that. He had a terrific lot of personal satisfaction out of getting President Hoover's signature to the proclamation inviting all nations to join in congratulating the husky, lakeside municipal infant on getting over its first—and hardest—hundred years.

Mr. Hoover handed the signed document to Dawes personally—and it was in the state department for promulgation before the ink on the signature was dry.

Inducement, Maybe.

The Bystander wonders whether the fact that Chicago was planning this 1933 show for which he could do a lot abroad may not have been one of the influences which led the "gin'ral" to take the London job.

He probably also had foreknowledge of the impending naval conversations when he signed on. Lacking such inducements, it was a little hard to see what attraction he might find in ordinary, run-of-the-mill diplomating in London.

While he talked a lot about senate rules, however, the former vice president did not visit the senate.

He was in a fine position—and took advantage of it by all accounts to scatter a lot of "I-told-you-so's" about the ways of the senate. Had he done so around the sacred precincts of the senate itself, however, fireworks on the floor might have followed. Senate nerves were even then getting a bit frayed with the tariff ruction.

Unless witnesses are at fault, Dawes brought imported diplomatic ways with him. He sat in Secretary Stimson's office at times, hat on, pipe in mouth and feet on the secretarial desk.

YOUR HEALTH

He Has Practiced What He Preaches.

By Mr. Robert M. Thompson,
New York.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

I have been asked to give some suggestions as to the health value of athletics, as a part of personal hygiene.

For many years I have been interested in athletics, though never a great athlete. Twice I have had charge of Olympic teams, in 1912, at Stockholm, and, in 1924, at Paris, and in the intervening years I have been in touch with Olympic athletes. For a great many years I have been a member of the Naval Academy Athletic association, and was, in fact, one of the founders, and hold, and am entitled to wear the golden "N" of the Naval Athletic association. I have entered my eighty-first year and I still ride horseback, play golf and this past winter, have again been killing tarpon.

My advice to young men and old, based on my experience, is to be moderate in all things. The athlete who trains himself into perfect condition for a match, and as soon as the event is over breaks training and does all of the things he did not do when in training, is making a great mistake. If you go into training you must keep in training. If you do you will enjoy your life.

As I look back over the athletes that I have known in my boyhood, their lives seem to be about average. Of my own classmates who were known as athletes at the naval academy only one is now living, Rear Admiral Royal R. Ingersoll.

In late years I have been commander-in-chief of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States, and in that capacity have visited every state commandery, and met substantially all the original living members of that great patriotic association. The majority of these men are over ninety years of age—none under eighty. They have lived average lives, and the one thing that I noticed especially is that they all had good teeth.

I have been a busy man of affairs, and for many years worked almost to the straining point, but as soon as certain symptoms appeared, showing excessive fatigue, I at once took a vacation. Often I was able to arrange so that the vacation could be combined with business, but when that was impossible I went somewhere and just loafed and invited my soul.

To sum up: Start early to educate your muscles; take care of your teeth; be moderate in all things; exercise regularly; ride horseback if you possibly can, and avoid fatigue as you would the Devil.

Little Talks on Thrift

Thrift by the Public Urgently Needed After Stock Market Crash.

At a time when business progress seems in somewhat of a hesitant mood the question arises regarding the best policy to be pursued in the matter of individual expenditures. A noted economist was recently quoted as saying that people should not put their money in savings banks but should spend it freely in order to keep the wheels of industry in motion.

This problem has an important bearing on the whole theory of thrift as an element of progress. It would not, of course, be possible for anyone no matter what might be his high degree of wisdom, to map out a plan that would be suitable for every individual under every circumstance. Each person has his own problems and each day is to some extent a law unto itself. The argument, however, that seeks to justify the free and reckless spending of money in order to help business, is not tenable although often employed.

The economic balance can not be preserved without the constant upbuilding of capital through the process of savings. In order that individuals may maintain their financial independence they necessarily must provide for emergencies through saving a part of their earnings. Also there can be no permanent business progress without individual savings because all financing in the final analysis receives its support from the savings of individuals directly or indirectly. Our highways, buildings, bridges and railways have all been brought into being because millions of individuals saved to create capital.

There is a tendency at times for people to economize in too drastic a manner, and, if sustained, these practices would throw the business machine out of gear. But there is never the danger here that there is from the standpoint of spending too much. After the disturbing conditions that have existed in the stock market, it is the opinion of this writer that now is no time to spend freely. Now is the time to practice thrift.

No man or woman ever will make a mistake in justice to themselves and to society by withholding for their own future protection a reasonable portion of their earnings.—By S. W. Straus, president American Society for Thrift.

IN DAY'S NEWS

Wuhu.

What is Wuhu?

"To the average American layman, the name suggests nothing more than the misspelling of the familiar beckoning call 'woo-hoo,' but to the Chinese, it is one of the republic's important Yangtze ports and to the world, one of the greatest rice centers," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"The city proper, surrounded by a crumbling stone wall, lies about a mile from the south bank of the Yangtze at the foot of a range of hills.

"According to legend it was once many miles farther up Wuhu creek, but progressive city fathers decreed that a removal of the city nearer the Yangtze was necessary to prosperity. Brick by brick and board by board, Wuhu was removed to its present location.

"Wuhu creek, which empties its sluggish torrent into the Yangtze, has long been too small to accommodate the city's bristling commerce, so a port was opened on the 'Father of Chinese Waters.'

"The road between the river and the city became a straggling suburb and the river front an animated scene of shifting crafts. Hundreds of sampans slowly move here and there among scores of junks, some painless and badly weatherbeaten; others displaying brilliant red, green and yellow hulls behind grotesquely carved bows.

"Most of the sampans and junks are occupied, for the Chinese rivermen's families as well as their barnyards usually accompany them. The 'skippers' must leave the craft to trade, and now and then the ducks are permitted to take a swim, but the women and children stay aboard.

"Day and night one hears the boisterous oriental chatter of the boats' people, which even the noisy 'put-put' of an occasional modern motor boat does not drown. The numerous dialects of the natives indicate that some of the boats have traveled many days to reach the port.

"Wuhu is a port of call for many of the large modern steamers that ply the Yangtze. From their decks, and from points along the road between the river and the city, panoramas looking toward Wuhu and its environs include numerous rice fields that have helped make this city world famous as a rice center.

"Each terraced hillside resembles a huge picture puzzle, each farm forming a part, different in size and shape. Some of the fields resemble ordinary ponds, lifted from the foot of a hill and placed on higher elevations. Another puzzle part is tinted a delicate green by new rice shoots that have poked their stems above the surface of the water. Then there are the black puzzle parts which are in preparation for irrigation and planting. All over the puzzle there are moving figures—women planting and transplanting rice, and men and oxen turning the fertile soil with crude implements.

4. How many mechanic's shops?
5. How many barns?
6. How many buildings for public use?
7. What buildings were included in these public use buildings?
8. What else did the traitor burn?

Answers will be found on Classified Page

Ten million bushels of rice are exported from Wuhu annually.

"To describe what is within Wuhu's oil walls is like describing the Chinese quarter of Canton, Shanghai or Foochow. Flagstone-paved alleys between solid rows of buildings are the Wuhu streets. Most of the city's 150,000 inhabitants live amid the noise of children who make these byways their playgrounds, and the unpleasant medley of odors from eating houses, congested workshops, and the stock in trade of cure-all herb venders displayed on white cloths spread on the flagstones. Beyond the wall, however, numerous schools, hospitals, and homes of wealthy Chinese merchants add a modern touch to the city's surroundings.

"An eighty-mile canal connects Wuhu with important silk and tea centers in Anwhei province. This canal and the fact that the nearest railroad station to Wuhu is at Hangchow, 159 miles to the southeast as the crow flies, makes the Yangtze port an important shipping point for products from the surrounding region, destined to foreign ports. Among the commodities exported are flour, dried eggs, lamp chimneys, coal and cutlery."

Stories That Recall Others

Nonresident.

Little Mary had mysteriously picked up an amazing vocabulary of swear words and slang. Mother had pleaded, scolded, reasoned. The ultimatum was applying home. "Why, Mary, daddy and mother just can't have a little girl here who says such naughty words. We'll have to turn you out if you swear again."

But again it came. Her hat and coat were handed her. Resolutely she walked out and sat on the curb with her thoughts. Along came a neighbor.

"Good morning, Mary. Is your father at home?"

"How in the h—— do I know. I don't live there any more!" she said.

Mechanical Heart Beat.

A man hastened to the doctor complaining that every time he breathed he could hear a mechanical clock. Although it caused him no pain he was beginning to fear it was his heart because the sound came from that region. He also told the doctor that when he went to bed at night he could not notice the peculiar sound.

The doctor listened and he too could hear the click with each breath. The stethoscope revealed nothing unusual but as the instrument was moved closer to the new suspenders the man was wearing, the noise was more noticable. Finally it was found that the new suspenders contained small coils of steel wire that expanded and contracted with each breath and in coiling so emitted a slight squeak. The doctor had no trouble in curing the suspenders.

Divorces Climb In England

LONDON—Divorce is steadily increasing in post-war England, and a noticeable feature is the number of cases involving young people who have been married only a short time.

Just as last year established a record for the number of divorces, so the ensuing year, begun with the fall opening of the courts, is expected to outstrip all others.

Before the war there were only a few hundred cases annually. The forthcoming list will mount to well over 4,000. This is small, as compared with America's huge total, but it is a sensational thing for Britain. So much has England frowned on divorce that even today the divorcee is barred from royal functions. Queen Mary won't have her about.

Several causes have contributed to the piling up of divorces:

Six years ago women were granted equal rights with men in the divorce courts.

A recently passed law forbids the publication of details of divorce cases by the newspapers, thus giving people a chance to separate without baring their souls to an inquisitive and critical world.

Another law provides assistance for poor people so that a divorce can be secured for as little as $50.

Some English students of the situation think there is another and important cause. They believe that the young people of today regard the marriage vows more lightly than did their Victorian parents, and the generations before them.

That is a matter of personal opinion, however. It is certain that two very vital causes for the increase are the laws giving women equality, and muzzling the press.

There is only one ground for divorce here, and that is misconduct. But it is only since 1923 that a woman could sue on that ground alone. A man could get a divorce for misconduct, but that wasn't good enough ground for the woman. She had to prove cruelty as well.

The idea was that man had special privileges by divine right. One of his prerogatives was to play about with the ladies, and the law said he had a perfect right to do this. At the same time, the law held that woman must remain virtuous.

Since an Englishman doesn't manhandle his horses, dogs or women, the charge of cruelty generally was hard to establish. Moreover, in the good old days before the war, the women of this country took it for granted that husbands had the right to sow wild oats and reap them, too. If a husband wanted a sweetheart, outside the family fold, that was his business.

The young English woman of today, however, is breaking away from this "lord and master" business, and is inclined to assert her rights. Thus it has come about that, under the new law, more husbands are being called upon to answer for their little indiscretions. The old story that hubby was "detained by business" doesn't stick so well as it used to.

The law against the publication of details of divorce trials has been a great boon to those suffering from marital troubles. Before that law was passed, the papers of England used to print volumes on any divorce of consequence, and the more lurid the details, the better the press liked it.

England is fond of accusing America of being the home of yellow journalism, but the papers here printed stuff daily which no Yankee editor would dare publish. Naturally, people hesitated before exposing themselves to such publicity. Now they are safe.

SCHNEIDER CUP FLIERS PLAN NEW SPEED TESTS

CALSHOT, England—(AP)—The air ministry has decided not to disband the royal air force squad which recently won the Schneider trophy and set a new world speed record.

A. H. Orlebar, squadron leader, and Lieut. G. Stainforth will return from leave to carry on the research work in high speed flying and form the nucleus of the British team for the next Schneider contest.

It is understood that smaller floats and wings will be fitted to the supermarine and alterations made to the Gloster-Napier high speed seaplane.

It is calculated that these alterations will increase the speed by at least 20 miles an hour giving the two planes a top speed of between 370 and 380 miles an hour.

New Mail Record.

HILO, Hawaii—(AP)—A new record for speedy transmission of mail was established when a letter reached Hilo from New York, 4,800 miles, in eight days 12 hours.

Central Heating for Duluth.

DULUTH, Minn.—(AP)—This city has approved the construction of a $1,250,000 central heating plant, work to begin next year.

A carrier pigeon escaped death at the claws of a chicken hawk at Porterville, Cal., by plunging through the closed window of the home of Phil Woertendyke. The hawk apparently was willing to follow, but stopped when it heard the crash of glass. When it later went back to investigate the pigeon's method of escape, it found the hole in the window pane too small for it to enter, and finally flew away. The pigeon was only slightly wounded and readily submitted to capture, Woertendyke said. It bore on its right leg a tag with the number "85". On its left was a tag, slightly defaced, apparently bearing the number "NPA 27-U 18258."

FUNERALS.

At 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon the funeral of Oliver L. Johnson, well known manufacturer, was held, with a prayer service at his home, No. 96 Union street, Rev. Theodore M. Shipherd, pastor of Park Congregational church, conducted the prayer service following which there was a funeral service at Park church. There was a very large attendance of relatives and friends and a wealth of beautiful floral tributes.

The service at the church was held at 2:30 o'clock and was conducted by Rev. Samuel H. Howe, D. D., pastor emeritus of the church, who spoke as follows in his brief eulogy:

"It seems eminently fitting that a few words should be spoken in this place today. A community should be vocal when it counts as its choicest asset a life that has been worthily lived in its midst. It is well when distinction has been achieved in the business or professional world by exceptional men, but it is better when to this is added a life that has been lived which has filled out all the folds of personality; and put life to its highest uses.

"We may be thinking of Mr. Johnson's exceptional success in business of many kinds, requiring exceptional acumen and resources, but we are thinking most of the beauty of his character and his mastery of those forces that go to the perfection of life itself. He seems to us a past master in the fine art of living.

"The apostle speaks of a divinely shapen life as God's poem, God's workmanship. There are those on whom God has wrought His utmost. To further advance them He must translate them to the larger fields of action which the life of the immortals alone can offer. Wherever we came upon him in secular life, in social life, in the life of the church, in benevolent circles we have found him filling out the full measure of the demand always, and everywhere the gentleman and the Christian. All men have spoken well—and only well of him. Such men discourage some of us who cannot escape the detraction of our critics, for of critics he seemed to have none. We call it popularity but it is more than popularity. It is the calm verdict of a conquered conviction.

"Always courteous, always self-controlled, yet self-reserved, always ready with the hand of help for every good measure for church and community, he stands out a beacon for us less perfect men to steer the ship of life by. A model for the business man, an ideal for the young, a standard for the churchman, an example for those who would bring life to the refinements and the beautiful courtesies of the Christian gentleman—by these things he will long be remembered. And all this and more I submit as the result of a close association with him for the past 45 years."

The bearers were H. A. Tirrell, R. W. Perkins, Frank L. Woodard, Charles R. Butts, Arthur M. Brown, Wallace S. Allis, S. B. Palmer and Daniel L. Brown, of Boston, and the interment was in the family plot at Yantic cemetery. Rev. Mr. Shipherd conducted the service at the grave. The Henry Allen and Son Co., were in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Wladyslaw Anuszewicz.

Many relatives and friends attended the funeral of Wladyslaw Anuszewicz, with services conducted at 8.15 o'clock Saturday morning at his late home by Rev. W. J. Topor and requiem high mass in St. Joseph's church at 9 o'clock at which Rev. Father Topor officiated and J. Haincin presided at the organ. The bearers were Adam Stanilonys, Ignacy Krawczyk, Alexander Zallowski, John Brokowski, Feliks Winiewski and Stanislaw Lubszewicz. The flowers were both beautiful and numerous. Burial took place in the family plot in St. Joseph's cemetery where Rev. Father Topor conducted the committal services at the grave.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Frederick J. Langenbach.

After an illness of about six months, Mrs. Rikste Auen Langenbach, widow of Frederick J. Langenbach, died at her home, No. 88 Lafayette street, about 12.30 o'clock Friday afternoon. She was the daughter of William and Lotie Koster Auen and was born in Stada Kanaal, province of Groningen, Holland, Dec. 3, 1852.

She was united in marriage September 9, 1879, with Frederick J. Langenbach in Holland and in 1888 Mr. and Mrs. Langenbach came to this country. For a number of years Mr. Langenbach conducted a greenhouse business on Lafayette street. His death occurred several years ago. Mrs. Langenbach was a member of the Holiness mission.

Surviving are two sons, Frederick J. Langenbach of this city John W. Langenbach of Sioux City, Ia., and a daughter, Mrs. Charlotte J. Orden of Hollywood, Cal. There are also a niece, Mina Bailey, and two nephews, William and Alex Disco, and six grandchildren.

Harry E. Packer

Harry Edward Packer, formerly of Noank, died at 5:45 o'clock the afternoon of Nov. 21 at his home, 112 Massachusetts avenue, Springfield, Mass. His death was caused by blood poisoning, the result of a slight cut while shaving on Sunday, Nov. 17.

He was born at Noank, Dec. 11, 1880, and had been a resident of Springfield for 19 years. He was an assistant superintendent of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., deacon and trustee of the First Baptist church at Springfield, member of Hamden lodge of Masons, DeSoto lodge of Odd Fellows, and the Sons of the American Revolution.

He is survived by his wife, Edith Wilbur Packer; his mother, Mrs. Lydia E. Packer; three brothers, Warren J. and Clifford I. Packer, of Meriden, and Capt. Ralph M. Packer of Vineyard Haven, Mass., and a sister, Mrs. Leroy I. Stiles, of Meriden.

The funeral service was held at 2:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon in Springfield. Burial is to be in Noank Valley cemetery.

Suffered Shock.

Deputy Sheriff George H. Stanton suffered a slight shock while in the city Saturday afternoon. He was taken to his home at 37 Hamilton avenue where he is under the care of a physician.

SUNDAY NIGHT PRODUCES CROP OF AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENTS IN CITY

Rain and slippery streets were responsible for four minor automobile accidents in the city Sunday. Two men were slightly injured.

During the afternoon Steve Lucas, about 50, of Mohegan Park road, was hit and knocked down by a machine driven by Harry Goldblatt, of No. 73 Woodmansee avenue. The accident occurred on North Main street, near the Greeneville fire station. Mr. Lukas' face was bruised and he was treated at the Backus hospital to which he was taken by Mr. Goldblatt.

At North Main and Eighth streets early Sunday evening, a machine driven by James Fraser of No. 280 Hamilton avenue, collided with two other machines. All were slightly damaged. One was driven by Dona Dugas, of No. 7 Palmer street, Jewett City, and the other, which was parked, is owned by William P. Salonski of No. 153 Hickory street. The damage to all three machines consisted of bent fenders and mudguards.

Early Sunday evening, machines driven by Clarence E. Douglas, of No. 235 Hickory street and Joseph W. Peloquin of Railroad street, Versailles, collided near the junction of Boswell avenue and Hickory street. Adrian Chancerelle, of No. 31 Providence street, riding in Mr. Peloquin's machine, received a bruised nose. He was attended by Dr. N. B. Lewis. Mr. Douglas' machine sustained a damaged right fender and running board, and Mr. Peloquin's machine received a bent axle, a broken spring and bent front fender.

Because he was driving a machine registered in the name of his father who has been dead eight months, Arthur L. Pariseau of Salisbury avenue, Moosup, was summoned to appear in the city court this (Monday) morning, following a slight accident Sunday evening. He is charged with driving an improperly registered machine. The collision occurred near No. 514 North Main street. The other machine involved is owned by Carrie E. Yerrington of No. 514 North Main street, and was driven by Isobel Donohue, of the same address. Mr. Pariseau's machine received a damaged front axle, and the machine driven by Miss Donohue received a damaged fender and the left tire was cut.

Jacob Katz of Long Island City, N. Y., and Raymond W. Mayo, of Brookfield, Mass., were summoned into court by State Policeman Bush, each charged with failure to grant right of way.

Motor Patrolman Clifford Crary summoned two Norwich men into court for this (Monday) morning. James Geragotelis, 17, is charged with driving a machine without headlight and also without having liability insurance as a minor.

Adolf Czikowsky has a speeding charge against him in which the complainant is Officer Crary.

THANKSGIVING MASS AT ST. PATRICK'S THURSDAY

From the pulpit of St. Patrick's church at the four masses Sunday the proclamation of Governor John H. Trumbull appointing Nov. 28th Thanksgiving day, to be observed in accordance with the noble traditions of the national thanksgiving, was read by Rt. Rev. Msgr. M. H. May and his assistant priests. It was announced that the special mass of thanksgiving would be offered Thursday morning at 8 o'clock.

The congregations were reminded that the coming Sunday, the first Sunday in Advent, is the annual collection date for the Catholic University of America at Washington, D. C., the center of Catholic culture in the country and the great center of educational activity, not endowed, but dependent upon the generosity of the bulk of middle-class Catholics throughout the nation.

Preaching at the 9 o'clock mass in St. Patrick's Sunday, Rev. John J. Reilly continued in his series of sermons, taking up the incarnation. Following the Bible literally, when Catholics read that Christ was conceived by the Holy Ghost, born of the Virgin Mary, as told by St. Matthew and St. Luke, for us the argument stops right there, the preacher said. He considered the personality of Christ, known to us only through the Scriptures, by pictures and statues as artists have expressed their ideals, by His description to the Roman senate as gentle, dignified and exalted. He made the point that the image of Christ is impressed and fixed upon the human hearts of those who receive Him in that sacrament which He instituted for the sustenance of their souls and for the perpetuity of His church. His likeness, indelible and luminous, will remain on the souls of men who have the loving Christ with them.

Following the eloquent sermon the junior choir, directed by the organist, Henry J. LaFontaine, sang "Ave Maria, Star of the Sea." The communion hymn, while Rev. Father Reilly assisted Rev. Myles P. Galvin in administering the eucharist to scores of communicants, was the refrain, "So through life and at its closing, Jesus, keep us close to Thee."

DEATH FOLLOWS INJURIES WHEN STRUCK BY TROLLEY

Alex Komurowski, 59, of New London, died at the W. W. Backus hospital Saturday morning at 2.45 o'clock from multiple injuries and the effects of heart disease. Mr. Komurowski was struck by a trolley on the Norwich-New London highway late in the afternoon of November 14th. His left leg was broken, and he also suffered a fracture of the left forearm and a fractured pelvic bone.

On the day he was injured Mr. Komurowski had been to the office of Attorney Charles L. Stewart. He started back to New London with Rev. J. N. Raniszewski in the latter's machine and near the scene of the accident he left the machine to visit a friend. It was while returning to the machine that he was hit by the trolley car which was due at Franklin square at 5.45 o'clock. It is said that he was running in the middle of the tracks when the trolley car bore down on him.

Motorman Thomas J. Talley saw the man too late to stop. Coroner Edward G. McKay and the public utilities commission will make an investigation of the man's death.

THANKSGIVING SCENE IN PALACE THEATER LOBBY

Patrons at the Palace theater Sunday night had their admiring interest attracted by a timely Thanksgiving scene arranged in the lobby. The setup was made with an old-time rail fence bordering a field of cornstalks and evergreen, with golden pumpkins peeking out among the corn and autumn leaves.

As a central feature is a two-headed calf, kindly loaned by Theophile Pelin of Jewett City, the stuffed figure of the animal showing two heads with four eyes, two mouths, and three ears. Pheasants, a chicken hawk, a barn owl a squirrel, a coon, a porcupine and a skunk are other birds and animals that add a touch of nature to the scene.

STATE READY TO MAKE NEW OFFER TO M'COOK

The state of Connecticut is preparing to make a new offer to the McCook estate for land needed for the construction of a new building for Seaside sanitarium at Crescent Beach, Niantic. While no definite action has yet been taken, it was learned at Hartford Friday that a formal offer will be made, perhaps within a few days, for the land declared necessary for use by the sanitarium for the treatment of tubercular children.

The offer by the state will set no particular valuation on the land, it is said, but will be merely the preliminary step for obtaining the land, even by condemnation proceedings if necessary.

LARGER GAS PIPES TO HARLAND CORNER

The city gas and electric department is putting in a larger gas main from Chelsea parade northerly as far as Harland corner. This will give an eight-inch main instead of a six-inch through Washington street, which has been made necessary by the building in that neighborhood and the increased use of gas through the installation of heaters and the supply required for the new houses on streets off Washington street.

CAPT. NELSON VARS DIES SUDDENLY IN PAWCATUCK

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Nov. 24—Capt. Nelson Byron Vars, 76, of Montville, a retired coastwise mariner, dropped dead on the piazza at 110 West Broad street, Pawcatuck, about 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

On Saturday Capt. Vars came here on a bus on the Norwich-Westerly line and alighted at the corner of Liberty and West Broad streets from where he walked to 110 West Broad street. As he mounted the steps he was seized with a heart attack and fell. He was pronounced dead when examined by Dr. William A. Hillard a few moments later.

Mr. Vars came to Westerly to call on friends and stopped at the store in the George O. Murphey building at the corner of West Broad and Chase streets to inquire where Mrs. Nathan Lewis lived. Upon learning that her residence was on the opposite corner he proceeded up the street. He walked up the front steps, seemed to hesitate, turned, stepped across the piazza and clasped one of the posts, held on an instant and fell to the floor.

Charles J. Norris a passerby, who saw the man fall notified the people in Murphey's store who rushed to his assistance. The man was lifted up and placed in a chair. Dr. William A. Hillard was called and responded immediately, but the man was dead when he arrived. Dr. Myers, medical examiner of Stonington, was notified and later ordered the removal of the body.

The deceased was born in Westerly, the son of George W. and Amelia Thompson Vars. He was a sea captain and had made his home for many years in Norwich and Montville.

Besides his wife, Mrs. Josephine Wilbur Vars, of New London, he is survived by four sons, Herbert B. of Lower Pawcatuck, Dr. William W. of New Haven, George W. of New York and Byron C. of Bridgewater, Mass., two sisters, Mrs. Pearl V. Palmer of Massachusetts and Mrs. Lila L. Niles of New York and by several grandchildren.

WHITE HOUSE TIMBER AT SAMUEL HUNTINGTON SCHOOL

The cabinet at the Samuel Huntington school has had an interesting historical piece added to its collection, it is a cube of wood, 3x3x2 inches from timber of the wood trusses which were removed from the roof of the white house at Washington at the time it was remodeled two years ago. These souvenirs have been prepared for distribution to schools which make application for them and Principal William G. Tarbox has secured one for the school at Norwich Town.

These sturdy wood trusses were put in to support the new roof of the white house when the building was reconstructed after it had been burned by the British in 1814. After literally holding the roof over the heads of the presidents of the United States for the last 112 years, these trusses are in excellent condition as far as the wood is concerned, and a half section of one will be preserved in Washington, not only for its historical association but as an example of the remarkable durability of wood. Twenty-six presidents have lived in the white house since the trusses were put in place.

Today these trusses, with their timbers in almost as good condition as when they were cut 112 years ago, are interesting as examples of early workmanship. The timbers, all hand sawn, are held together not only by mortising but with dowels and heavy wrought iron straps pounded out by hand.

When the old roof was removed it was found that there was practically no deterioration of material in any vital place in the massive main roof timber trusses and only the ends of the timbers forming the trusses over the north portico were damaged by powder post beetles. Builders of a century ago were not familiar with the use of preservatives to lengthen the life of the exposed wood and did not treat the material as would the builders of today.

CHARGES MADE AGAINST CONNECTICUT DOCTORS

Eight allopathic, two eclectic doctors, and a few druggists have been notified to appear December 3 at the office of Attorney-General Benjamin W. Alling to answer charges of "unprofessional conduct" being brought against them by the Connecticut medical examining board. The action has resulted from the revocation of federal physicians' permits to dispense intoxicating liquors.

That there has been a flagrant abuse in the laxity with which some physicians have distributed their prescriptions has been frequently brought to the attention of prohibition officials in Hartford and in many instances those guilty have had their permits revoked by Prohibition Agent Robert L. Sengle. Mr. Sengle said Saturday morning the action of the examining board was a surprise to him, as he was unaware that any procedure was to be undertaken. His office, he said, was obliged to send reports of violations of this character to Jonathan L. Lewis of Boston, national prohibition administrator for New England, and at this point his duties ceased.

He admitted that during his incumbency, some fifteen or sixteen physicians had had their permits withdrawn because of laxity in passing out prescriptions.

Dr. Stanley H. Osborne, state commissioner of health, said that he had received reports of misuse of permits from the office of Prohibition Administrator Lewis and in the case of allopathic physicians had turned them over to Dr. Robert L. Rowley of Hartford, secretary of the Connecticut examining board. The other reports had been turned over directly to the attorney-general's office.

Dr. Rowley, who filed reports of allopathic physicians with the attorney-general's office Saturday morning, refused to comment on the action of the medical board. He would neither disclose their names nor indicate what would result from the hearings before the attorney-general. "It is too early as yet," he said, "to give out any public statements. The story, if any, will be revealed on the date of the hearing."

The physicians notified to appear have been summoned under provisions of the public acts of the state, chapter 317, section No. 13. In the event that they are found guilty their licenses may be revoked, suspended, or annulled or less drastic action in the nature of a reprimand or disciplinary measure be meted out. The doctors will be represented by counsel at the hearing, it was learned. In case they are found guilty, appeals may be made to the superior court within thirty days.

FEWER CONNECTICUT FARMS FOR SALE NOW

Fewer farms are for sale in Connecticut than in 1927, according to the list of farms for sale issued by the state department of agriculture. The 1927 biennial list of farms for sale carried a description of 219 farm properties, while the present list—although similar methods of compiling were used as in past years—carries only 114 farms whose owners wish to sell. This represents less than one percent of the total number of farms in the state.

Commissioner of Agriculture S. McLean Buckingham in a statement points out that while the list does not include every farm that is for sale in the state, it would seem to give a fairly accurate picture of the trend of agriculture and indicates that the condition of Connecticut agriculture is improving.

The booklet, containing 27 pages in mimeograph form, may be obtained upon request from the state department of agriculture. It gives a complete description of each farm property, including the price and terms. While every effort was made, it is explained, to have the descriptions as accurate and as complete as possible, the department has had to rely entirely upon the owner for this information.

Tolland county ranks first in having the largest number of farms for sale, while Fairfield has the smallest number. The number of farms listed by counties is as follows: Tolland 20, Windham 19, Litchfield 18, New London 15, New Haven 14, Hartford 13, Middlesex 10, and Fairfield 5.

WEDDING

Miner-Miller.

Of interest to North Stonington and Pendleton Hill people was the marriage of Miss Susie Catherine Miller of Portland, Ore., to Willis Leonard Miner of Long Beach, Cal., which took place at the latter city on Oct. 30. The ceremony was performed at the home of the bridegroom's sister, Mrs. George H. Child, by Rev. W. H. Galbraith of Bethany Baptist church in the presence of a number of relatives and friends. The bride wore an ensemble of blue silk with a corsage bouquet of roses and sweet peas.

Following the ceremony a dinner was served by Mrs. Child. Chrysanthemums were used for decorations.

Mr. and Mrs. Miner will reside in Long Beach, Cal., where the bridegroom is connected with the DeLux Water Taxi company.

Patrolman William J. Ryan was back doing traffic duty at the head of Otis street, following the 9 o'clock mass in St. Patrick's church Sunday, going from there to Park church corner.

DECLARES "STOP AND GO" SIGNS ARE NEEDED AT THREE MORE CITY POINTS

Three additional "stop and go" signs are needed in the city, according to Alderman Frederick J. Ortmann, chairman of the board of police commissioners. Mr. Ortmann said Sunday evening that, in his opinion, "stop and go" signs are badly needed at Washington square, Laurel Hill bridge and Burnham square. Mr. Ortmann pointed out that the congested auto traffic at all three street junctions should be regulated by "stop and go" signals in order to prevent possible accidents. These signals, Mr. Ortmann said, would not only serve to prevent accidents, thus protecting the public, but would also keep traffic moving properly.

The alderman stated that he would like to have the city's taxpayers voice their opinion on the proposed installation of the "stop and go" signals. The entire cost, he estimates, would be within $1,500.

Mr. Ortmann declared Sunday evening that the radio interference caused by the signal lights at Broadway and Williams avenue and Washington and Sachem streets has been eliminated. The lenses on the light at Sachem and Washington streets have been changed from amber to red, and now carry the letters "R. R." The lights came equipped, through error on the part of the manufacturers, with amber lenses instead of red.

With reference to the proposed signal lights, Mr. Ortmann stated that he favors the suspension type for Washington square and Burnham square, while the signal at Laurel Hill bridge could be of the type now in operation at Shannon corner.

Sharp Pains in the Knees

Much Swelling and Redness. Then That Terrible Ache Spreads to Fingers, Wrists and Shoulders.

Countless sufferers know that these are the regular symptoms of painful joint and muscle infections. The pain keeps shifting from one joint or muscle to another, crippling otherwise able-bodied men and women, forcing them to spend days, weeks or even months in idleness.

It's a terrible condition. Break up your attack at once or it will surely grow worse. COULD NOT SLEEP NIGHTS

Helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Fairhaven, Mass.—"I am taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound during the Change of Life. When I feel nervous and run-down my husband gets me a bottle right away. It is a great help to me and I think that if other people would only take it when they feel all run-down and take it as the directions say, they would find it a great benefit. My worst symptoms were nervousness and tired feelings. I could not sleep nights and I was so nervous I would cry if anyone looked at me."—Mrs. Ada Bessie, 196 Washington Street, Fairhaven, Mass.

TWO UPSETS FEATURE COLLEGE GAMES IN COUNTRY OVER THE WEEK END

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—(AP)—The gridiron vanguard moved along today, minus some of its hitherto conspicuous membership, but with the positions of several of the foremost college football units more strongly fortified than ever.

Notre Dame, Purdue and Texas Christian all added impressive victories to records that show neither defeat nor tie, but California, Yale and Detroit met reverses that represented distinct shocks to the advance dope.

The two big classics of east and west resulted in sensational upsets as Stanford walloped the hitherto undefeated California Bears, 21 to 6, while Harvard's rugged forces beat Yale, 16 to 6, in a game that saw the Eli ace, Albie Booth, close his sophomore year as more of a goat than a hero.

California's last game smeared the bright championship hopes of the Bears and left the Pacific Coast conference race in a scrambled condition. California had beaten Southern California, which defeated Stanford, so that the "Big Three" of the far west now stand in something approximating a triple tie. St. Mary's remains as the only unbeaten team on the Pacific coast.

At Cambridge, in sub-freezing weather, Harvard closed an erratic campaign with a triumph over Yale especially satisfying because the Crimson put on its winning spurt simultaneously with the entry of the much-feared Mr. Booth. Little Albie had the unusual experience of seeing two of his boots blocked, one an attempted dropkick, the other a punt.

After each mishap, Harvard scored, and thereafter, except for a similar "break" in Yale's favor, put the shackles on Booth and the Eli offense, in this battle of blocked kicks. Barry Wood, Harvard star sophomore, outshone his little Blue rival and the Crimson exhibited two of the best defensive linesmen of the season in Ben Ticknor at center, Jim Douglas at end. Ticknor was the outstanding player of the game, shifting to guard after an injured arm made it difficult for him to pass.

Notre Dame swept Northwestern aside, 26 to 6, to make it eight in a row for the great Hoosier cast, which nevertheless suffered a severe blow in the loss of one of its finest linesmen, Tom Moynihan, aggressive center. Moynihan's leg was broken and Head Coach Knute Rockne, on his sick bed, will have the problem of replacement to deal with among other things in planning the drive against the Army for next Saturday in New York.

To make it a gala day for the state of Indiana, the Purdue Boilermakers celebrated their final appearance of the year by trouncing the University of Indiana, 32 to 0. Purdue thus closed its season with eight straight victories and a record that compares with those of the mightiest, including Notre Dame and Pittsburgh. Undisputed Big Ten champions, the all-conquering Boilermakers have finished the greatest campaign in their history. The high-powered Purdue backfield array, led by Captain Welch, Harmeson and Yerich, beat Indiana, Chicago and Iowa by bigger margins than any other team, scoring 18 more points against Indiana than Notre Dame was able to do early in the season.

Perhaps the biggest upset was Detroit's downfall at the hands of the Oregon Aggies, 14 to 7. Since early in 1927, the Titans coached by Gus Dorais had gone through 22 games without defeat and only one tie. They were heavy favorites to beat the far westerners, who had lost at home to four out of five Pacific Coast conference rivals. Apparently Oregon State needs a long trip to be at its best. The Aggies handed New York university a surprise beating last year at the Yankee stadium and their latest cross-country conquest is a fit companion piece.

Washington found the big trip no advantage whatever, being soundly trounced by Chicago, 26 to 6, as a climax to the most disastrous season the Huskies have ever experienced. The margin of Chicago's victory came as a surprise after Washington had held Stanford and California each to single touchdown victories on the previous two Saturdays.

Texas Christian's Horned Frogs, if they felt any ill effects from the reported epidemic of "flu" in the squad, did not show it in walloping the Baylor Bears, 34 to 7. The Frogs appeared in perfect health and now dominate the Southwestern conference race, with Southern Methodist to be met next Saturday in the decisive engagement. S. M. U. trimmed Rice by 34 to 0 yesterday.

Nebraska with a 10 to 7 victory over the Kansas Aggies, just about clinched the Big Six championship again, while Missouri was disposing of its old rival, Kansas, 7-0.

In the east, Fordham's rugged eleven repulsed the Bucknell Bisons, 14 to 0, to maintain one of the few remaining unbeaten slates. The Maroon, however, has been tied twice, intersectionally. It was a big day along the Atlantic seaboard, for Army's regulars beat Ohio Wesleyan, 19 to 6; Villanova downed North Carolina State, 24 to 6; Temple defeated Drake, 16 to 14, and Duquesne turned back the Haskell Indians, 6 to 6. The Navy handed West Virginia Wesleyan a broadside, 30 to 6, and Lehigh turned the tables on Lafayette, 13 to 12, for the first time in ten years.

Florida beat South Carolina, 20 to 7, in the only Southern conference game of the day, the leaders, Tennessee and Tulane, taking a rest in preparation for Thanksgiving day tests.

MANY GOOD BOXING ATTRACTIONS THIS WEEK

NEW YORK, Nov. 24—(AP)—Chicago, New York, Los Angeles and Detroit Dfurnish the high spots in the national boxing schedule this week.

Heading the list is the Chicago stadium show Friday night with Tuffy Griffith, Sioux City puncher, battling Paulino Uzcudun, the battling Basque heavyweight, in the ten round feature. Paulino will be making his first appearance since his defeat by Max Schmeling and the Basque may find Griffith just as touch as "Herr Maxie" was. Salvatore Ruggirello, Italian, heavy, meets Hein Mueller, of Germany, in the eight round semi-final.

At the Chicago Coliseum Tuesday night, Jack Dempsey has matched George Hoffman, New York heavy, with Les Marriner, the former Illinois athlete, in a ten rounder. Another Chicago attraction tomorrow night, finds Eddie Shea, Chicago featherweight, battling Babe Peleco, Newark, N. J., in the ten round final bout at White City for Promoter Jim Mullin. Johnny Burns, California light heavyweight, meets Joe Packo, Toledo, O., in the eight round semi-final.

At Detroit Friday, Leo Lomski, Aberdeen, Wash., light heavyweight, will face Charlie Belanger, Canadian 175 pound champion, in a 10 rounder.

Los Angeles big feature of the week will bring together Tod Morgan, junior lightweight champion, and Eddie Mack, Denver in a ten-round non-titular go on Tuesday.

Madison Square Garden's offering here on Friday night will bring together Al Singer, East Side junior lightweight and Pete Nebo, heavy punching Seminole Indian from Key West, in the windup of ten rounds. Johnny Farr, Cleveland lightweight, will tackle Sammy Fuller of Boston in the ten round semi-final.

The regular Monday night show at Philadelphia's arena should afford the customers with plenty of excitement. Three ten-rounders are on tap. Johnny Jadick, Philadelphia lightweight, meeting King Tut, of Minneapolis; Honeyboy Finnegan, Boston lightweight, faces Henri Dewancker, France; and Pablo Blanco, Cuba, battles Vidal Gregorio, Spanish bantamweight.

Other bouts on the national schedule include:

At Baltimore, Bud Gorman, Kenosha, Wis., vs. Al Friedman, Boston, heavyweights, ten rounds; at Boston, Willy Oster vs. Joe Zelinsky, Binghamton, light heavyweights, ten rounds.

Friday at Boston, Andy Callahan, Boston, vs. Jake Zeramby, Boston, lightweights, ten rounds; at Kansas City, Eddie Anderson, Wyoming, vs. Steve Smith, Bridgeport, Conn., lightweights, ten rounds.

HARVARD END IN GRAVE DANGER FROM INJURY

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 24—(AP)—Victor M. Harding, Harvard's substitute end who played a great game against Yale yesterday while winning his first football "H", lay in a critical condition at the Stillman infirmary here today after an emergency operation had been performed at midnight last night to save his life from a serious internal injury.

In some third quarter scrimmage, Harding received a bad blow just below the stomach and was taken from the game suffering severe pain. He was watched closely and later in the evening his injury was diagnosed as rupture of the spleen, an organ on the left side connected with the blood system.

Dr. Tommy Richards, the team's physician, was called from a theatre party celebrating Harvard's victory and at midnight he and Dr. Irving Walker operated on the boy.

This afternoon Dr. Richards said that Harding was in a critical condition but emphasized, "that boy is making a splendid fight and I think he'll pull through." Loss of blood, he said, was the most serious factor.

Vic Harding, whose home is in Hubbard Woods, Ills., first caught the public's eye by his last minute catch of a 50 yard forward pass thrown by Barry Wood, Harvard quarterback, which gave Harvard a 20-20 tie with Army just before the final whistle. Throughout the season he has been repeatedly on the receiving end of like successful forwards.

His mother came on to Cambridge to see him play against Yale and stayed at his bedside before and after the operation.

Eagles Beat Springfield

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 24.—(AP)—The New Haven Eagles easily defeated Springfield in a Canadian-American Hockey league game here tonight, by the score of 4 to 0. The New Haven defense, Speyer and Himes, featured.

Two goals in the second period were enough to clinch the game for the Eagles, but the margin of safety was increased by two more goals in the third period.

Y. M. C. A. LOSES FIRST GAME BY SINGLE POINT TO ALTEX TEAM

The Y. M. C. A. five lost its first game of the season Saturday evening to the fast Altex team of New London by the slim margin of one point the score being 30 to 29. It was a fast game with little to choose from between the two teams. The locals were in the lead 8 to 7 in the first quarter but the Altex team drew ahead in the second quarter to lead 18 to 14 at the half. The third quarter was practically even but in the final period the Y came from behind to nearly tie the count. A missed foul shot in the closing seconds of play left the local boys on the short end of the score.

A noticeable lack of teamwork on the part of the local team and a tendency to shoot from mid-floor was one of the factors that contributed to the defeat. Brown was high scorer for the locals, while Trude starred for the New London team. Harris, rangy center for the Y. M. C. A., played a brilliant game.

In the preliminary contest the Y Emps nosed out the Gamma club 16 to 13 in a hotly contested battle. The summaries:

Congratulations, Academy.

The boys certainly put up a mighty nice game at New London Saturday and deserve plenty of credit.

Whitney pulled a Knute Rockne on the Bulkeley team by starting his second team and then sending in the varsity when the going got rough.

And to change the subject abruptly, that old saying that the course of true love was always a rocky road to Dublin was forcefully brought home to two local youths Saturday night.

It seems the boys, two well known members of a local athletic club, decided to take in a dance at Willimantic Saturday evening and shined up the old bus and took two local young women up to the Thread City.

It was smooth sailing until almost to Willimantic when one of the tires went on a blowout of its own. The tire was changed and the party went merrily on to the dance.

A nice time was had by all at the dance and then came the delightful ride home. That is, it was delightful as far as it went which was but a short distance.

After rolling merrily along for a few miles two more tires gave up the ghost with loud bangs and the party was high and dry and about ten miles of cement road ahead of them.

The boys were in a quandry. No tires, no ride. And of course there were the girls to be taken home, but how and when. The outlook was far from cheerful and a ten mile walk is some taunt.

The girls, however, were equal to the occasion. They simply hailed a passing auto headed for Norwich and were soon just a remembrance to the local boys who were left with two flat tires.

As time wore on the boys decided that if the car would hold together they would get to Norwich. The two tires were tied onto the wheel with good stout pieces of rope and the old bus with its two pilots bumped into Norwich in the wee small hours of the morning.

A couple flat tires never added anything to any party.

WESTERN MARYLAND IN TIE WITH PITT FOR HONORS

NEW YORK, Nov. 24—(AP)—Through a desperate 7 to 0 victory over St. Francis at Altoona, Pa., the Western Maryland eleven yesterday moved technically to the top of the standing of eastern teams, with nine victories to Pittsburgh's eight. But the prerainence of the Panthers could hardly be affected even if Western Maryland should win its two remaining games, which now seem far from a certainty. Pittsburgh was idle yesterday, awaiting its annual clash with Penn State on Thanksgiving day.

Of the four teams undefeated but tied, Fordham sealed its claim to fame by ending its season with a smashing 14 to 0 triumph over Bucknell's fine team at the Polo grounds as Davis and Elkins added Canisius of Buffalo to its victims. Duquesne remained in the semi-select circle only by taking a stubborn decision over the Haskell Indians by 7 to 6. The remaining undefeated but tied eleven, Rider college of Trenton, N. J., has finished its season.

Harvard reached great heights in its objective game against Yale to turn back the Elis by 16 to 6 and steal by this one victory the prestige the Blue had been building for itself by victories over Brown, the Army, Dartmouth and Princeton.

The team scoring leadership remained unaffected, Dartmouth holding the top with 299 points against 263 for Colgate. Others in the 200-class are: Army, 263; Boston college, 258; Pittsburgh, 257; Syracuse, 253, Navy, 220, and Davis and Elkins, 200. Georgetown had no game and held the defensive lead with just seven points against its record. Hobart trails all the teams, with 309 points credited to its opponents.

MARSTERS ALMOST CERTAIN OF HIGH SCORING CROWN

NEW YORK, Nov. 24—(AP)—Alton K. Marsters, who scored 108 points for Dartmouth before suffering an incapacitating injury in his game against Yale, now may feel almost assured of individual leadership in the eastern sector. The last two threats against the supremacy of "Special Delivery Al" fizzled yesterday when Clark Hinkel and his Bucknell mates went scoreless before the Fordham defense as Ringle of Gallaudet fell far short in his final bid against Shepherd college of West Virginia.

Ringle scored 12 points, running his total to 83 and taking at least temporary possession of second place. Hinkle's failure to penetrate the Fordham defense left him in a tie with Dowler of Colgate, who did not play. Each has 78 points, one point fewer than Niles of Lowell Textile whose season has closed. Dowler has one game left, against Brown, which could hardly yield him the five touchdowns he needs to tie Marsters, but there is just a possibility that Hinkle may cross the line for six times against Dickinson in his final game on Thanksgiving day.

This more or less remote possibility is the last remaining possibility against the leadership of Marsters; all the rest of the field is out of reach.

The season approaches its final games with only one goal from the field credited to any of the scoring leaders—Albie Booth's three-pointer against Dartmouth three weeks ago. Booth attempted another one against Harvard yesterday, but it was blocked. Barry Wood topped off Harvard's scoring with a pretty shot from a dificult angle twenty-four yards from the posts, but Wood is far down in the list.

RICE AND ALLEN SCORE AS OCKFORDS BEAT WORCESTER

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 24.—With Wally Rice and Joe Allen, former Bulkeley stars, scoring the touchdowns, the Ockfords eked out a 12 to 6 victory over the Worcester All-Stars at Mercer field this afternoon.

The visitors scored in the first quarter, recovering a fumbled punt and then going over with a pass and a line play. In the second quarter the Firemen tied the count on a pass, Rice to Allen. In the last quarter Rice tossed a pass to Allen, who had a clear field to a touchdown, but stumbled and fell. Rice then took the ball over the line. No extra points were converted.

ACADEMY BEATS BULKELEY, 7 TO 0, IN THRILLING GAME AT NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 24.—Breaking a jinx that had extended back to 1916, Norwich Free Academy's Wildcats smashed through to a 7 to 0 victory over the Bulkeley Tiger in its home lair at Mercer field Saturday afternoon in their 65th meeting. The last N. F. A. football win in New London had been achieved just 13 years ago.

Taking advantage of their one real break of the game, the Academy boys scored in the middle of the third quarter after blocking a kick and recovering it deep in their rival's territory. Frank (Gink) Barber, who has been the mainstay of the eleven all year finally crashed over for the score and the extra point was converted by Golembeskie diving over the line.

Les Crowell Outstanding Player

While it fell to the lot of Barber to score the touchdown the outstanding player for the Academy cause, the one who gave Bulkeley piles of trouble all afternoon, was Les Crowell, the right tackle. It was he who recovered the blocked kick that gave the Wildcats their scoring chance and it was he who broke through repeatedly to throw the Orange and Black runners for losses. Crowell also did the kicking for the first half of the game and easily outdistanced his Bulkeley rival the major part of the time. Sharing the honors with Crowell were Ed Flather, left end; Hertz, left tackle; Barber and Brewer in the backfield.

Capt. Ken Barrows, end, and Pat Halifteras, halfback, gained the most ground for Bulkeley with some beautiful catches of forward passes. Collins and DeGaetano, in the backfield, also played well.

Bulkeley threw away four distinct chances to score, once in the second quarter when a Tiger punt was grounded on the 3-yard line and the Academy's return kick was short; and three times in the last quarter when they battled within the ten yard line only to be hurled back from the promised land.

On the fourth try, however, it was the umpire's whistle that called a halt for the game ended with Bulkeley in possession of the ball on the Academy's two-yard line, with one more down to make it.

N. F. A. Makes Desperate Stands

These four goal-line stands by the Academy may either be classed as great work by the N. F. A. forwards or dumb playing by the Bulkeley backfield. It was probably a combination of both, for the Academy was charging in fast and Bulkeley was fumbling or slow with their plays when things became tight.

Working a baffling forward passing game, Bulkeley had the Academy worried all through the second half and particularly the last quarter. It was these passes that put them within the ten-yard line on four occasions, when the ends and halfbacks and particularly Barrows and Halifteras, were left uncovered time and again. The Academy had no defense for this manner of play.

Play was in Academy territory for the greater part of the game but the Academy was not outplayed that had. Bulkeley, however, made ten first downs to the Academy's five. Poor kicks in two instances gave Bulkeley their chances to get past the 50-yard line and up in the shadows of the Wildcat posts. Neither team had any offense to speak of, outside of Bulkeley passing proclivities. The Academy had no particular play with which it could gain consistently.

Academy Seconds Start Game

Coach Whitney started his second Norwich team. Bulkeley received the opening kickoff on its 10 yard line, running it out to the 35-yard marker. Bulkeley kicked on third down to the Academy 40-yard line. The Academy made one first down, a 10-yard run by Zigstoriak. The Academy lost the ball on downs on Bulkeley's 35 yard line and Bulkeley punted back to the N. F. A. 30 yard stripe.

On the first play, the Academy fumbled and recovered and here the Academy first team made its appearance. On the next down the Wildcats punted to midfield and Bulkeley kicked on fourth down to the 20 yard line. The Academy punted back to midfield as the quarter ended with Bulkeley in possession of the ball on the Academy 45 yard line.

Bulkeley got its first break in the early part of the second quarter when a punt was grounded on the N. F. A. 3 yard line. The Academy got off a short punt that went to the 20 yard marker. Bulkeley smashed through to a first down to the nine yard line but a forward pass was grounded over the goal line on fourth down after Bulkeley had lost three yards on three plays and the Academy took the ball on their 20 yard line.

The Academy, for some reason or other, essayed to pass from their 20 yard line and Fontaine's toss went right into the hands of a Bulkeley man on the 30 yard stripe. This was another break.

Academy Complete Only One Pass

Bulkeley reeled off a first down to come within the 20 yard line but Flather intercepted a pass and almost got away free. Barber and Fontaine collaborated for a first down and then Fontaine made one all alone with a 12 yard run to the 40 yard line. Fontaine tossed a pass to Barber on Bulkeley's 40 yard line but the half ended to stop this short spurt of the Red and White. This, by the way, was the only pass completed by the Academy all day.

Bulkeley received again in the second half on their 25 yard line and made a short gain. A pass to DeGaetano made the distance to midfield but Bulkeley was unable to gain and decided to kick.

Crowell Recovers Kick

The pass came back true from center, the kicker's foot was set to meet the pigskin but, lo and behold, it seemed like the whole left side of the Academy line, Hertz and Wojstasiak, anyway, rushed in upon the kick. The ball struck one of them and bounded back about 20 or 30 yards. Cruickshank, center, and Crowell were after it. Cruickshank made an attempt to pick it up but instead booted it on towards the goal and Crowell finally fell on it on the 14 yard line.

The Academy tried two line plays that gained but little. Fontaine dropped back to pass but seeing no one to receive the ball, ran down along the sidelines before being forced outside at the 8 yard line for a first down. Barber then took it over on second down, crashing through the right side of the Bulkeley line. When the extra point was converted, Academy rooters went even a little wilder than they had a moment before.

Bulkeley received the kickoff and staged a little offensive show bringing the ball to the Academy 40 yard line, with three first downs and then punted just as the quarter ended.

Bulkeley Threatens Continually

The last quarter saw Bulkeley make several threatening gestures at putting over a score but always lacked the final punch. The Academy punted back to midfield at the start of the quarter, DeGaetano ran around end for 20 yards, bringing the ball to the 30 yard line. A pass to Barrows brought the ball to the nine yard line but Berghinzo, on fourth down, intercepted a pass on his three yard line after Bulkeley had failed to gain by line plays.

The Academy punted out to their 30 yard line and again Bulkeley uncorked a neat pass, this time to Halifteras, that brought the ball to the 10 yard line. Still again, Bulkeley could not gain after four downs and lost the ball when a pass was grounded over the goal line.

Stevens got off a short kick that went offside at the 30 yard line after the ball had been brought out to the 20 yard marker. Bulkeley, for the last time, again started towards the touchdown that never came. A pass to the ten yard line, held twice, a slice by Aguiar, who had just been inserted, to the 3 yard line—and then the whistle. The game was over.

WILDCAT SCRATCHES

The Academy boys took their victory rather calmly. Aside from a little cheering there was no celebration; no bonfires as of yore.

Bulkeley's last victory in football over the Academy came in 1925 at New London, 13 to 12.

Saturday's point after touchdown was the first made in these games since Marshall sent a dropkick over for the victory in '25.

The crowd was somewhat below the capacity audience expected. There were not many over 2,000 when it was predicted that more than double that number would see the fray.

The Bulkeley band made another great appearance, saluting the Academy rooters before the game and then leading its over enthusiastic rooters during the game.

There was but one penalty, a 5 yard one on Bulkeley in the third period for offside. The officiating, by the way, was of high order.

Both teams closed their seasons with this game. The Academy won three, lost five and tied one while Bulkeley tied three and lost six.

While Bulkeley lost the game, they had a big edge in the cheering, although fully half the crowd was from Norwich.

Of course, the next Academy-Bulkeley football game will be played in Norwich next fall.

This victory put Coach Whitney of the Academy ahead in his ventures with Bulkeley. Grid teams he has coached have now won twice, lost once and tied once with the Tigers.

The Academy has tied for second place with Windham in the Eastern Conn.-Western Rhode Island conference by this victory, although it may be lost sight of in the general excitement about the classic.

It is a tribute to the Academy defense that they were outplayed, 10 to 5, in the matter of first downs, but still won.

The next Academy-Bulkeley contest will be in baseball.

QUINN NOT TO BOX AT PROVIDENCE TONIGHT

Jimmy Quinn, local amateur featherweight, who was supposed to have boxed in the amateur show at Providence this evening will not appear as the bouts have been postponed until Friday evening. It is expected that Quinn's opponent will be Catalino, who has turned down a New York engagement to get another shot at the local boy.

PUTNAM TEAM HANDICAPPED BY LOSS OF FOUR MEN

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 24.—With the date of the annual Thanksgiving day meeting of the Killingly and Putnam high school football teams only four days away, Lauriston F. Noyes, coach of the local eleven, will be busy the first few days of this week selecting from his small group of substitutes, a team capable of taking the field Thursday morning to hurl back a Killionian array of gridsters determined they will upset the tradition that "Putnam always wins Thanksgiving day."

The seasonal interest in the Putnam-Killingly clash began to mount in the two towns today, with Killingly a slight favorite to win by reason of its better record established this season.

Injuries to first string men are the greatest handicaps with which the Putnam mentor is confronted. Three of the Noyesmen star performers are almost certain tonight of watching the game from the bench. The latest addition to the list of the indisposed is Stuart Sabin, halfback, and high scorer of the season. Sabin was host to leg injuries in the Chapman Tech game two weeks ago and has been limping since. Coach Noyes said tonight that Sabin will not start unless his condition is improved before Wednesday. Reynolds Deberdinis, Putnam quarterback injured early in the season, stands little or no chance of playing Thursday as does Nelson "Stubby" King, end, one of the outstanding linemen, who suffered ankle injuries in the Chapman Tech game. Coach Noyes intimated tonight that efforts will be made to iron out the Charley horses of King and Reynolds by Wednesday evening, but he was doubtful as to whether they will be able to take part in the final practices this week.

SOCCER LEAGUE ORGANIZED WITH FOUR E. C. TEAMS

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 24.—The efforts of a few soccer football fans, promoting local games in New London and Windham county towns during the past two years have resulted in the formation of a soccer league which will be known as the Eastern Connecticut league. Four teams, Putnam, Goodyear, Plainfield and Taftville, will be represented in the league.

At a meeting of the soccer enthusiasts, Ulric O. Baker of this city was named president of the organization, and T. Laycock of Taftville, well known in soccer football circles, was elected vice-president. A schedule was drawn up with the result that league teams will play on Saturdays in two towns and alternating the following week.

The schedule will open on Saturday, Dec. 1, and will be as follows: National Rhea (Putnam) vs. Taftville, at Putnam; Plainfield at Goodyear, Dec. 8—National Rhea at Taftville; Goodyear at Plainfield, Dec. 15—Taftville at Goodyear; Plainfield at Putnam, Dec. 22—Goodyear at Taftville; National Rhea at Plainfield, Dec. 29—Goodyear at Putnam; Plainfield at Taftville.

VELVETMEN AGAIN TROUNCE GOODYEAR SOCCER TEAM

The Velvetmen defeated the Goodyear soccer team 3-0 on Sunday afternoon at the J. B. Martin grounds before a good sized crowd in an interesting game. The first goal came after some fine combination play on the part of the J. B's, the ball finally going out to Labenski who cleverly tricked the opposing fullback and centered for Houston to score with a powerful drive. The same player got a second goal a few minutes later during a scrimmage in the goalmouth. This ended the scoring for the first half. The third goal was made about 10 minutes before the final whistle by Thompson with a fast drive which the Goodyear goalie touched but could not hold. The teams lined up as follows:

J. B. Martin's		Goodyear
F. Orcutt,	goal.	E. Childs
E. Eccleston,	rfb.	J. Scungis
A. Bjork,	lfb	A. Waldon

WESTERLY

JOHN F. BETTS, ST. LOUIS, SUICIDES BY TAKING POISON

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, R. I., Nov. 27—A Watch Hill summer visitor the past season, who occupied a cottage back of the Watch Hill post office, "Chalet," Westerly road, despondent and brooding over stock market losses, took his own life in St. Louis Saturday morning. John F. Betts, member of the New York and St. Louis stock Exchanges, who had lost more than $400,000 in the recent collapse of stock prices, ended his life by swallowing poison at his home, 5150 Westminster place, St. Louis. Unable to sleep for several nights because of worry, Betts had taken sleeping powders. When he got up shortly before 5 o'clock Saturday morning his wife prepared a sandwich for him. He returned to bed but soon went downstairs. Hearing him moaning in the kitchen his wife found him collapsed on the kitchen floor with the odor of poison on his breath. He was unconscious, according to the family. Removed to St. Luke's hospital, he died at 8:10 o'clock. He left no note.

Two months ago Betts paid $475,000 cash for a seat on the New York Stock Exchange, completing a comeback from from his 1921 failure in the brokerage business. He told his friends then that he had sold at a profit what stocks he owned to buy the Exchange membership. Born in Louisville, Ky., Betts was for many years a tobacco buyer for the old Drummond Tobacco company in St. Louis before entering the brokerage business. He is survived by his wife and three children—Mary, Audrey and John.

"He lost about $300,000 attempting to carry some of his customers when the market crashed," a spokesman of the family said Saturday. "He refused to sell them out to protect himself—he was too kindly. Although they owed him heavily, he let them hang on, hoping stocks would recover."

ALTON L. CLARK'S BODY ARRIVES FROM BROOKLYN, N. Y.

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Nov. 24—The body of Alton Linwood Clark, 22, instantly killed Friday in the Williamsburg section of Brooklyn, N. Y., in an accidental fall inside the stack of the American Sugar Refinery, arrived in Westerly late Sunday afternoon.

He was born in Franklin, Conn., Sept. 30, 1907, the son of Charles C. and Harriet Lewis Clark, now of Arctic R. I. When ten years of age he moved with his parents to Kenyon, R. I., where he was graduated from the grammar school of Charlestown and then entered the employ of A. D. Bridges Sons of Hazardville, Conn. He learned the plumber's trade of Fred W. Harvey of Pawcatuck and was later employed by the Steel Construction Co. of Framingham, Mass., and the Steeplejack company in whose employ he met his death. He was not related to the other two men who also died in the same accidental fall of 100 feet.

All arrangements had been made by the young man to sing three weeks from last Sunday over the WJZ broadcasing network. In Westerly he resided with his parents on the old Potter Hill road, also on Park avenue. He held membership in Battery E, 243rd R. I. C. A. C. (H. D.) and in the Rhode Island Ones, Steam Fire Engine company.

He is survived by his sisters, Mrs. James P. Bowning and Mrs. Elsie Fiddes of Providence, and Misses Euna and Phillis, who resided with their parents in Arctic. R. I.; also by four brothers, Harold L. of the New Park hotel, Westerly, and Gurdon E., Milton S. and Raymond, all of Arctic.

DRIVERS IN COLLISION WARMED UP WITH HOT COFFEE

Friday about 8 p. m. a Ford sedan occupied by Mrs. Dennis Keagan and daughter Katherine, of Pawcatuck, was in collision at the junction of Railroad avenue and Canal street with a Chrysler coach owned and driven by Miss Daisy Kenyon, of Beach street, Westerly. The Ford had a left front fender and running board bent and the Chrysler's left front tire was blown out. Lieut. George H. Champlin investigated.

Saturday at 5:45 a. m. Officer George L. Madison was called to investigate an auto collision at the junction of Railroad avenue and West street. A Ford touring car owned by Chauncey Coon of Potter Hill, driven by Richard Coon, who was accompanied by James Greene was proceeding up Railroad avenue with a load of whitine which they had secured during the night at the beach. A Ford coupe owned by Frank H. Cavanaugh, 5 Wall street, White Rock and driven by Harold W. West, milk man, came over the West street railroad bridge and struck the touring car amidship with such force as to throw it against and smash the picket fence at the corner on the property of Mrs. Alfred Wills. Greene was thrown through the windshield and had his face so badly lacerated that attention had to be given him by Dr. R. O'B. Shea. Mrs. Wills whose property was destroyed insisted that the three men come into her kitchen where she cheered them with hot coffee before they left. Contents of both autos were thrown into the highway. It was stated that by reason of poor light the parties were not able to see each other until the cars crashed.

Saturday evening Mrs. Michael Brown reported that while at the junction of Railroad avenue and Canal street an unknown driver struck the car operated by her and proceeded down Canal street without making his identity known. Officer Robert M. Kessel has secured evidence which may lead to the identification of the autoist.

The following transfer has been recorded:

Nov. 23. Clara C. Coad, Leocardstown, Md., to Elizabeth D. Kay, of Chester, N. J., land on the easterly side of Westerly road at Watch Hill, adjoining lands of Tuxedo Houses, Inc., acquired partly by deed from Henry L. Burdick, Aug. 23, 1924.

Nov. 23. Elizabeth D. Kay to Frank W. Coy Real Estate Co., the above described tract of land.

David A. Lowry has been re-elected president of Christ Church Choir club. E. Cranshaw is vice president. Miss Evelyn Lowry, secretary, entertainment committee, Miss Lillian Thorp, Miss Bessie Taylor, Miss Beatrice Lowry, librarian, Donald Friend, assistant librarian, Stanley Higginbotham.

Continued testing of Pawcatuck fire alarm system caused a number of blasts to be sounded upon the whistle at the Liberty street fire station Sunday afternoon.

Auction at Colonial Club

On Saturday, furniture, pictures, china and all belongings of the Colonial club were sold at public auction. The sale was held in the clubhouse on High street and lasted the greater part of the day. Although a comparatively small crowd attended, the bidding was fairly spirited. The money will be placed in the club treasury to remain until the membership takes final action as to the organization's future. For the present it will discontinue meetings and all social events. Its charter will not be surrendered, at least for the present. Just what will be the fate of the club remains undecided. Failure to renew a suitable lease or find new quarters resulted in the club's action in selling its belongings. The building and property was sold more than a year ago to Worcester and Boston realtors who planned a business block. A portion of block has already been erected and very soon, on the clubhouse site a second unit of at least two stories will be added to the new business block, which may be called the Colonial block.

FUNERAL

Maxson Kenyon

Saturday afternoon at his home at Grand View park, Westerly-Stonington road, funeral services were held for Maxson Kenyon and were conducted by Rev. B. U. Hatfield. Burial was in the First Hopkinton cemetery.

Baggageman Fred Palmer, about 9 p. m. observed an east-bound freight train with some of the running rigging dragging underneath one of the cars. The dragging parts ripped out heavy wooden planking on the baggage gate cross-over and scored and gouged out wooden ties and sleepers but the cars remained on the rails. For a mile or more the thrashing mass momentarily threatened derailment. The Bradford signal tower was notified and the damaged freight cars and train was set out on track No. 5 where attention was given the trouble-making car.

WEDDING

Turano-Falcone

Saturday morning at 9 o'clock at the Church of the Immaculate Conception, Miss Elena Falcone of East avenue was united in marriage with Eugene M. Turano of Central Park at a nuptial mass celebrated by Rev. Henry Bruno, S. M. The wedding marches were played by Mrs. James McMahon, and solos were rendered by Miss Mary LaPere. The bride wore a gown of white satin trimmed with Spanish lace. Her veil was of tulle in cap shape, with a crown of orange blossoms, and she carried Easter lilies. The bridesmaid, Miss Nancy Caccione, an aunt of the bride, wore yellow chiffon and tulle, with gold Landeau and carried yellow chrysanthemums. The flower girl, Rita Roscane was dressed in yellow crepe, and carried a basket of yellow chrysanthemums. The best man was James Falcone, a brother of the bride. Following the ceremony a breakfast was served at the home of the bride's uncle on East avenue, guests being present from Port Chester, N. Y., New York city, Worcester, Mass., and Providence. In the afternoon a reception was held at American Legion hall on Main street, music being furnished by the Imperial orchestra. Mr. and Mrs. Turano left for a two weeks' motor trip and on their return will occupy their new home on East avenue.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Adrian R. Pierce

Sunday morning Sarah Catherine, wife of the late Adrian R. Pierce, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. James P. Campbell, 14 Greenman avenue. She had been ill since Thursday. She was born in Ashaway July 10, 1859, the daughter of George W. and Mary Steadman Austin. She is survived by the following sons and daughters, all of whom with the exception of one live in Westerly: Mrs. Grace P. Willard, Adrian R. Pierce of Dover Foxcroft, Me., Paul W. Pierce, Myrtle P. Campbell and David K. Pierce. She leaves the following sisters, Mrs. Foster Jarger, Westerly, Mrs. Amy Chase and Miss Clara Austin of Providence, Mrs. Samuel Saunders, Westerly and Mrs. Alice Chase, Wickford.

Misses Mabel Cook and Georgia True, former Pawcatuck residents, were week end guests of Westerly friends.

George E. Leonard has returned to his duties in the drafting room of the C. R. Cottrell and Sons Co., after two weeks' vacation.

Mrs. William Grant of Norwich was a week end visitor with Westerly relatives.

Joseph T. Crowley, returned to New York Sunday night.

MYSTIC

George Hartley of Water street about 12 years old, who was reported missing from his home last Thursday, arrived at his home at about 10:30 o'clock that evening. During the day an older boy had asked him if he wouldn't like to go to the pictures in New London. He accepted and went off without telling his parents. They became alarmed and called the state police. The thoughtlessness on the part of the child caused a great deal of un-necessary trouble.

Mrs. William W. Beckwith, who attended the funeral in Preston City, of her cousin, Miss Emma E. Cook of Preston City, last Tuesday, and then went to Washington, D. C., where funeral services were held again, with burial in Rock Creek cemetery there, has returned to her home in Willow Point.

Governor Trumbull's proclamation was read in the churches Sunday. This short message from the governor is sent out annually and read the Sunday before Thanksgiving. Thanksgiving, as an institution, belongs to the Pilgrim Fathers. The earliest recorded appointment of Thanksgiving day was in July 1623, when there was a drought which threatened to ruin the crops. A day of prayer was appointed and during the observance, rain fell copiously. To thank God for the good world and the good things in it, the first American Thanksgiving was officially proclaimed and celebrated, when Elder Prewster preached the sermon. The second public Thanksgiving was observed July 8, 1630. In 1633 there was a joint observance in Boston and Plymouth by invitation of Governor Winthrop. In 1680, the custom had become annual and the time was late autumn or early winter. General observance began during the struggle for independence. Congress of 1777 set apart December 18, 1777, as a Day of Thanksgiving. Washington issued two Thanksgiving proclamations in 1789 and 1795. In the early years, the rule was for the proclamation to come from the governors of the states. In 1817 began the annual recommendation by the governor of New York. In 1858, eight of the southern states proclaimed Thanksgiving day. It was left for President Lincoln to establish Thanksgiving day as a national holiday. This he did in 1862. In 1864, the last Thursday in November was fixed upon as the date and has since remained. Thus, slowly, has Thanksgiving day been introduced as a national institution.

The Watchman Examiner for November 24, contains a poem on Thanksgiving, written by Gene M. Osborne wife of Rev. J. G. Osborne of Danbury, a former pastor for eight years of the Union Baptist church, Mystic.

Mr. and Mrs. Halsey Packer of New London, were recent callers on Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Dealey of Old Mystic.

Sunday morning and evening, there were special services at the Mystic Bridge Congregational church, in honor of the 70th anniversary of the laying of the cornerstone. The morning order of service was: Prelude; Call to Worship; doxology; Creedal Confession; invocation; responsive reading; Gloria Patri; Scripture lesson; solo, "I Will Be Exalted"—Treffly Morin; prayer; duet, "I Am His and He is Mine"—Mrs. Eugene Jones and Mr. Morin; announcements; offering; The Story of Our Church—Jerry Holmes; hymn; sermon, "Builders"—Rev. William G. Fagan; pastor of the church; hymn; benediction; postlude. In the evening at 7:30 the following program was given: Prelude; Call to Worship; doxology; Creedal Confession; invocation; responsive reading; Gloria Patri; scripture lesson; solo, "The King of Love My Shepherd Is"—Mrs. Jones; prayer; solo, "He That Dwelleth in the Secret Place"—Clifford J. Dessey; announcements; anthem, "I Hear Thy Voice" choir; hymn; sermon, "The Chief Cornerstone"—Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth of New London, a former pastor of the local church; hymn; Benediction Postlude. Both services proved very interesting and there was a large number out, morning and evening.

Another accident has occurred at the dangerous Wilcox Curve in Quinnebaug, Friday afternoon at about 3 o'clock, a Chrysler roadster, driven by Franklin Sykes of Portland, Me., was crowded off the road into a telephone pole. Mr. Sykes was thrown through the top of the car and received severe cuts in his forehead and the two boys belonging to the people named Royaal, living in Bridgeton, Me., whose car was following the Chrysler, received cuts and bruises. The two cars were coming from Florida, the families going to their homes in Maine. Both cars, the other one being a Hudson, which did not figure in the accident, were going at a moderate rate of speed. Evidently some one else was speeding who cared for no one on the road but himself. The injured ones were taken in the Hudson to Dr. Myer's office in Mystic, and treated. The Chrysler, which was badly damaged in the front, was taken to a nearby garage to be repaired.

A very good congregation was in attendance at the services of Old Mystic Methodist Episcopal church, Sunday evening. The members in the orchestra, consisted of Miss Beryl Marchand, piano; Lyle Davis, saxophone; Richard Walbridge, cornet; Albert Keeney, 1st violin; Kenneth Medbury, 2nd violin. The order of service was: Prelude, orchestra; doxology, orchestra and congregation; prayer, Rev. H. E. Moore; hymn, My God, I Thank Thee, orchestra and congregation; Scripture, First Chronicles, 16th chapter, verses 7-36; hymn, Lord, While for All Mankind We Pray, orchestra and congregation; special Thanksgiving responsive reading; hymn, Great God, Beneath Whose Piercing Eye, orchestra and congregation; governor's proclamation; vocal duet, The Old Rugged Cross, Leslie Haley and Charles Haddon; offertory, orchestra; hymn, Swell the Anthem, Raise the Song, orchestra and congregation; Why a Nation Has Reason to be Thankful, from the Point of View of the Educator, Doctor, Farmer, Business Woman and Minister. These views were given respectively by Miss Antoinette Morgan, Dr. Thurman P. Maine, John O. S. Williams, Mrs. Elizabeth Hudson and Rev. Homer C. Moore; vocal solo, Miss Fay Johnson; hymn, Come, Come Ye Thankful People, Come, orchestra and congregation; benediction.

The annual meeting of the stockholders in the Mystic Industrial company is to be held early in December.

Miss Eva Edwards entertained her sister, Mrs. Clifford Dolsen and two children of Pawtucket, R. I., over the week end.

Mrs. Ellery Davis has gone to Franklin, N. H., where she will spend the winter with her mother and sister, as is her custom.

Mrs. William Schwiebert of Forest Hills, N. Y., is visiting her parents on West Main street.

Mr. and Mrs. Perry H. Eldredge of Old Mystic, spent a day last week with their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Carter of Wethersfield.

STONINGTON

The Lions' club of Stonington conducted a dance in the Town hall Friday evening. The proceeds will be used to help needy children at Christmas time. The committee in charge was Paul Schepis, Leon Chesebro and Burrows Perry.

Flags on the public buildings in Stonington were flying at half mast Friday out of respect to the late James W. Good, secretary of war.

FUNERALS

Arthur Scheller

The funeral of Arthur Scheller, who died of double pneumonia Wednesday, was held from the home of his mother, Mrs. Henry Scheller, on Bay View avenue, Saturday afternoon at 1 o'clock. Rev. A. G. Haberlin, of the Second Congregational church, conducted a short service at the house and the body was taken to Westerly where services were held in Christ church at 2 p. m. Burial was in the River Bend cemetery, Westerly.

Maxson Kenyon

Funeral services for Maxson Kenyon, of Grand View park, were held Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Burial was in the First Hopkinton cemetery, Hopkinton, R. I.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank F. Dodge attended the Yale-Harvard game at Boston Saturday.

Miss Catherine Levens, R. N., has returned to Brooklyn, N. Y., after spending the week here with her parents.

Dr. J. Fallon, of Newport, R. I., is the guest here of his brother, William Fallon.

H. R. Oswald, the coroner of West London, who frequently conducts inquests into traffic fatalities, has a novel plan for reducing street accidents. "A pedestrian who is injured should be fined," he asserted at a recent inquest. "If he is killed the cost of any inquiry should be paid out of his goods. The recklessness of some pedestrians is appalling. Something should be done because these cases are becoming very numerous. In the very small minority of cases it is the motor driver who is to blame."

NOANK

A meeting of the executive committee of the Red Cross was called to order by the chairman, Mrs. Geo. C. Lane, in the Legion quarters the past week. Plans were discussed in regard to securing a district nurse; the following committee was chosen: Mrs. P. J. Shandeor, chairman; Mrs. Geo. C. Lane, Mrs. William I. Spicer, William I. Spicer and George Brown. Miss Florence Fitzpatrick was chosen chairman of Baptist church and met with Mrs. Albert Patterson of Pearl street Friday evening. After the business meeting refreshments were served by the hostess.

At a meeting of Boy Scouts held in the American Legion quarters, Scoutmaster Moon, of New London, gave the boys an interesting talk, also instructions. Several new members were at the meeting. During the membership drive the troop has increased so there will only be a few more members admitted for the required number. The usual work in knot tying and first aid was carried out. At the close a fine chowder was served by Capt. Ernest Franke, to the boys. Assistant Scoutmasters Eugene Butson and Robert Whittaker were in charge of the meeting.

Many from here attended the Bulkeley-Norwich Free Academy football game at Mercer field, New London, Saturday.

John Cameyer has returned after a short visit in Meriden.

Capt. Gus Anderson has returned to Dorchester, Mass., having visited local friends.

There was a large attendance at an entertainment and dance given by Washington council, Junior O. U. A. M., in Mechanics hall Friday evening. Both old fashioned and modern dances were enjoyed. Chappell's orchestra playing for the dancing. The entertainment given by Ingram, the magician, was very clever. The committee in charge of the social was: Orrin Oles, chairman, Frank Schoonmaker, Halstead Brown, John Bentley and Edward Wolverton.

John A. Ellis, of East Greenwich, spent the week end at home.

Miss Ann Robertson, of New London, spent Friday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Robertson.

Mrs. Nellie Ebbetts has returned home, after a visit with relatives in Haverhill, Mass.

Miss Hilda Fish has returned to Malden, Mass., after a visit with Mrs. Etta Crowell.

Mrs. Harold Vincent, of Groton, has been a caller on her mother, Mrs. Catherine Rollins.

Edward Morgan, Fred Refuse, Frank Babcock and John Morrison, of Harrison Morton Ward post, American Legion, attended the Fifth district meeting of the Legion held in Norwich Friday night.

When the Carpenters' union met in their rooms in the Shandoer block, the other evening, after the business session a chowder was served by Stephen J. Austin, Paul Sullivan and Jesse Bennett.

Charles Butson was a recent caller in Gloucester, Mass.

The Crusaders of Noank Baptist church held a successful food sale in the vestry Friday afternoon. A good sum was cleared by the finance committee.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wilson and son Robert, of Hartford, spent the week end with local relatives.

PENDLETON HILL

Mrs. J. R. Gilbert, of 473 Lebanon street, Malden, Mass, has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Thompson and family for the past two weeks. She is returning Sunday to Malden, where she makes her home the greater part of the time with her daughter, Mrs. Grace Gilbert Smith.

Marvin Palmer shot his twelfth coon Tuesday night. Thirty or more coons have been bagged in this community this season.

Mrs. Clifford Thompson attended an all-day meeting of 4-H club leaders at the Samuel Huntington school, Norwich, Saturday, a highly interesting and instructive meeting.

Plans for Thanksgiving day in this vicinity are well formulated.

Ferndale friends, Miss Carrie Ryder, Mrs. Sarah Brown, Mr. and Mrs. James Brooks and Weston Ryder will join a family party for a turkey dinner with Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Thompson at Clark's Falls.

Mrs. Annie Cook will dine at a family party given by Mr. and Mrs. Russell Cook, at Jewett City.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Johnson and daughter Mildred, will be Thanksgiving day guests of Mrs. Hannah Hiscock, at Jewett City.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cottrell and family will entertain Mrs. Charles Cottrell and Mrs. Sanford of Oak Lawn, R. I. and Miss Sarah I. Palmer.

Altogether there seems to be a general exodus from the Hill on Thanksgiving day.

Friends in this vicinity of Col. Edwin Pendleton of Washington, D. C. regret to learn that he has been so seriously indisposed as to necessitate hospital treatment. He is reported better. Col. Pendleton spent many years of his early life on his grandfather Chapman's farm and attended the Hill school. He is an occasional and very welcome guest of Hill friends.

Mrs. J. R. Gilbert spent Friday, Saturday and Tuesday and Wednesday with Mr. and Mrs. Willis E. Almy.

Mrs. Annie Cook entertained thirteen Sunday callers and dinner guests at Rose cottage.

Miss Lucy Lester visited Alton Thompson at Westerly hospital Wednesday evening, taking with her a large basket of fruit and confections, her own and her pupils' gifts to this unfortunate boy. The boy was recently injured severely by a dynamite cap which he had picked up and was unknowingly handling, causing a loss of much of his left hand, also facial injuries.

November twenty-first, the first snowfall, indicative, so the old saying goes, of the number of snowstorms which is in store during the winter season.

Miss Carrie Ryder reports calendula still fresh and blooming in her garden, with a sufficient number of blossoms to use for indoor decoration. Miss Cecile Palmer has a number of thrifty geraniums still in blossom out of doors.

Miss Sarah I. Palmer has returned after two weeks' visit with Mr. and Mrs. Irving Drubble and daughter Ardelle, of Providence. Mrs. Texanna Holman of Potter Hill and Mrs. Mary Frances Barbour, of Bradford. Mrs. Drubble was Lillian Chase, who spent several years of her girlhood here. Mrs. Holman was Texanna Slocum, a former resident. Mrs. Barbour and Mrs. Holman, though in their eighties, are vigorous mentally and physically.

Henry Johnson has sold a hundred or more bushels of turnips.

Mrs. Charles Cottrell and sister Kittie, are confined to the house with an attack of grippe.

Birdsey Palmer, Jr., recently entertained a party of friends on his birthday.

Paul Hoestinen has entered Connecticut Agricultural college, Storrs.

Eight sat down to the society dinner Wednesday. The menu consisted of potato salad, corn salad, mashed turnip, corn meal muffins and quince sauce, warm biscuit and grape jelly, plum cake and coffee.

Altogether, nearly forty blocks were contributed to the kaladiascope quilt upon which the members are working. Mrs. Gilbert was a dinner guest and contributed a large box of beautiful percales for this quilt.

Thomas Wheeler will market a large number of his handsome flock of turkeys for Thanksgiving.

MEXICO IN DRIVE TO LURE WINTER TOURISTS

MEXICO CITY—(AP)—The era of peace in Mexico following the Escobar revolution and settlement of the church problem has brought an awakening of tourist consciousness to the republic and an active campaign is on to attract Americans below the Rio Grande.

Several of the larger cities are engaged in a friendly race to be the first to receive the influx of tourists, while the federal government is sponsoring road building and tourist propaganda.

Monterey, the third largest city in the country, has been the first to benefit by tourist trade from the United States, following completion of the Laredo-Monterey highway. Thousands of tourists have swarmed into the city since June and plans are under way for two large new hotels.

Tampico, which advertises itself as having the best tarpon fishing and duck shooting in the world, has subscribed more than 100,000 pesos to speed up completion of an all-weather road from the United States. Tourist hotels at Tampico are also projected.

The federal government is pushing highway links lower down in the republic to connect with this road and it is expected that a first class route connecting Mexico City with the border will be completed early next year.

The tourist campaign already has produced an all-expense airplane tour with the Mexican Aviation company sponsoring a winter airplane trip from Brownsville to Mexico City and Tampico at a nominal rate.

A stay of seven days within Mexico is permitted by this tour.

Smooth barked trees served as fatal roosts for thousands of birds near St. Charles, Mo., when they were charged with electricity during a storm last August. Dr. William G. Wilson, Ornithologist, will tell the United States department of agriculture in a report which he is preparing. More than 5,000 dead birds were reported to have been found on a farm a short

SHIP OWNERS BALK AT 6-HOUR DAY

GENEVA (AP)—Commercial seamen—from galley to bridge—provide a baffling problem to industrial leaders in the world crusade for an eight-hour working day.

Two formidable obstacles in the way of protecting "every man Jack" from overwork through international agreements were thrust into the spotlight during the recent International Maritime coference here of 31 nations.

First—the natural circumstances of seafaring men, scattered over the seven or more seas, constitute an obstinate physical hindrance to the scheme for an unified "yo-heave-ho" in pulling for regulated conditions of their toil.

Second—the world's shipowners are almost unanimously opposed to international agreements for limiting work hours of men and women who seek their living by going down to the sea in ships.

Although they number hundreds of thousands, maritime workers have scant opportunity to pool their ideas and strength, since they spend much of their lives far from the home base. Lacking essential contact with one another, they tend to lose unity in negotiating with employers.

"Seafarers will be the last workers in the world to be successfully organized," said one of the prominent delegates to the maritime conference. "They admit this themselves, but they don't know what to do about it."

As for the shipowners, they want the question of hours left to legislation in each country, or, better still, to settlement between employers and seamen by bargaining. Their spokesmen from 31 countries were frankly hostile to limitation of international treaties.

Emphasizing their attitude, the shipowners of 30 countries abstained from discussions in the conference for one week—while British employers refused to enter the session at all!

"The varied character of labor aboard ships makes it quite unsuited to any general scheme of time restrictions," said the shipowners spokesman. "An eight-hour day, moreover, would mean a big increase in sea-going personnel. A much larger part of the ship's accommodations would then be required for the crew. Expenses would grow amazingly, profits shrivel painfully. Passengers and shippers would pay through the nose—or curtail their activities. These results would be bad for everybody in the industry, including the workers."

The recent conference was confined to discussions of maritime problems; decisions were left for a second session at a later date. But nobody knows, now, when the second conference will be summoned. It may be several years.

Has Your Husband Warm Underwear?

Health Protection Important!

At this time of the year most wives are urging their husbands to put on heavier underwear. And most husbands are arguing about or hesitating to do so.

The only way to make a man protect himself properly against the cold is to get him the right kind of "heavies" yourself.

Just now we have a complete assortment of Cotton Knit Union Suits in winter weight—also all Wool or Silk and Wool.

POETRY

Scrooge And The Ghost

I sat down with my conscience
In its clean, searching light
I heard its accusations
Like horrid dreams of night;
It pictured sins committed,
And sins that might have been
Had some occasion risen
To match the power of sin!
It pictured sins I never dreamed
As possible to me,
Abhorrent to my sense of right
And cherished piety.
And then a mentor rose within
And bade me look and see
One dangling on a cruel cross
Atoning there for me!
My burden and my guilt were gone!
Sweet peace succeeded strife;
I found it in forgiven sin
And His serener life!
The holiness of God in Him
Imputed thence to me;
He is my righteousness by grace
And I, through Him, am free!
Lost and undone I saw myself
As guilty as could be;
But mercy blots the scarlet stain,
And cleanses perfectly.
I sat down with my conscience
Accused! Condemned to die!
But Jesus in compassion heard
My penitential cry!
He pardoned and restored me,
Gave me the right to be
A son of God, adopted
Into His family!
Mortal men may not forgive,
And enemies cannot;
But love, atoning love through Christ
Erases every spot!

Somebody's Boy

Somebody's boy was crossing the street,
Innocent, young and fair;
He hadn't the judgment of older folks,
He didn't see danger there.

Somebody's boy had a song on his lips,
But it died in an instant away,
For an automobile struck the little boy down,
And he passed at the close of the day.

Somebody's boy! O Somebody's heart
Was broken with that bitter blow—
Somebody knelt by an empty bed
And fondled an empty shoe.

Somebody looked through the empty years
Where no little boy would be—
O God, is there need to this sacrifice?
Somebody makes this plea—

Will you not watch for the little boys,
Drivers, in city and town?
Will you not watch for the little boys,
To strike Somebody's boy down?

—Somebody, in Boston Transcript.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

Chief of Village Fire Brigade (entering local barber shop)—Quick shave, Joe—once over—I'm on my way to a fire.—Boston Transcript.

Teacher—Johnny, if I buy a pair of shoes for $4.87 and sell them for $9.50, do I make any money?

Johnny—Well, you make on the dollars but you lose on the cents.—Exchange.

Inspector (taking charge)—What's the man's complaint, officer?

Policeman—'E complained that the lamp-post passed 'im on the wrong side.—London Opinion.

Lady (phoning music store proprietor)—I've just had my radio installed and it's working fine, but the orchestra in Cincinnati is playing too fast. Is there any way I can slow it down?—Louisville Star.

"Did you notice how the conductor stared at you as if you hadn't paid your fare?"

"Yes, and did you notice how I looked at him—as though I had?"—Brooklyn Eagle.

Lady of the House (to the cook)—Marie, why does this policeman come here so often? Is there any danger of anything disappearing from here?

Marie—Yes, a perfectly good cook.—Detroit News.

Modern Young Man (after kissing a modern girl)—I'll be perfectly frank with you. You're not the first girl I've kissed by a long shot.

Modern Girl—And I'll be perfectly frank with you. You've got a great deal to learn at that.—Montreal Star.

The visitor was an ardent prohibitionist. The farmer listened patiently to his impassioned plea.

"And," concluded the visitor, "liquor ruins the body. You can see its evils reflected in the face of the many who drink."

"Well," said the farmer, "my old man just died a while ago at the age of 102. He drank a quart of good corn liquor every day of his life, and say, after he was three days dead he looked better than you do now."—Boston Transcript.

In line with a national policy of encouraging the establishment of new business enterprises and particularly manufacturing units, the legislature of the province of Buenos Aires, Argentina, recently approved a law authorizing the executive power of the state to create an "industrial reserve" zone of 400 hectares near La Plata. This land will be sold to promoters of new industries at what is regarded as almost a give away price.

There is a young chap whiling away a few months in a Berlin jail who probably has learned by now that he must be patient if he would succeed in his chosen profession. He broke into a house in the fashionable Tiergarten district some days ago, but before he completed his haul he was interrupted by the return home of the occupants. Seeing that his only means of retreat was cut off, he sought refuge under a divan. There he remained throughout the day. After fourteen hours had passed by the young burglar's patience gave out and he decided to make a dash for liberty. His dash ended in the arms of the housekeeper, who had little difficulty in holding him until the police arrived.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Unc' Billy Has a Feast.

By Thornton W. Burgess

Who would be master of his fate
Is patient and content to wait.
Unc' Billy Possum.

Unc' Billy Possum was safe and he knew it. He was on a beam underneath Farmer Brown's barn, safe from Flip. "All Ah has to do now," said Unc' Billy to himself, "is to stay right here until that silly dog done grow tired of hearing his own voice. Then he'll go away and Ah'll do the same thing." This is just what happened. Flip did grow tired. He would leave Unc' Billy and go out to see if Farmer Brown's Boy was coming. Then he would go back and bark some more. Farmer Brown's Boy had no intention of crawling under that barn, so Unc' Billy curled up and took a nap and finally Flip gave up.

Unc' Billy was wise enough to remain right where he was all the rest of that day. Two or three times Flip came back to see if he was still there. He was, but he showed no signs of life so Flip speedily lost interest.

It was just after dark that Unc' Billy

It was the best dinner he had had for a long time and he was perfectly happy.

poked his sharp nose out from under the barn. A sharp shrewd little face has Unc' Billy Possum. Unc' Billy looked this way and that way. He saw no one and he was sure that no one saw him. He stole along up to the door that the cows used. It was ajar. He poked his nose inside and pushed it open a little more. Then he slipped wholly inside. Unc' Billy grinned. It was a long time since yesterday. He made his way along the stairs that led up to the haymow. He went up. He knew he was safe now. He knew that he could hide under that hay anywhere. He didn't have the least bit of worry about being caught now.

"Ah wonder if any of those hens lay eggs up in here now," thought Unc' Billy. "Ah reckon Ah'll have a good look anyhow. Mah goodness, wouldn't Ah like some nice eggs!"

Now, it happened that one of Farmer Brown's pullets was laying up in the haymow and Farmer Brown's Boy didn't know it. No, sir, he hadn't discovered that that pullet was slipping away every day when the hens were let out in the yard. But that is what she was doing. In the hay up in a corner of the mow she had already laid seven nice eggs. Unc' Billy found them. You should have seen the grin on the old rascal's face when he discovered those seven eggs. He couldn't think of a single thing that he wanted more than he wanted eggs. He wouldn't have traded those eggs for a fat chicken, and that is saying a good deal. So it was that up there in the haymow Unc' Billy Possum had a feast. Yes, sir, he had a feast. It was the best dinner he had had for a long time and he was perfectly happy.

It didn't occur to Unc' Billy that he was stealing those eggs. To his mind, he wasn't stealing those eggs. To his mind, he wasn't stealing them at all. He felt that they were his by right because he was smart enough to find them. So his conscience didn't trouble him the least bit when he ate those seven eggs. But, having eaten the eggs, he suddenly decided that, in spite of the fact that he had slept all day, he would take another nap. He had too full a stomach to be traveling around. So he poked around in the hay until he finally found just the place that suited him and then he curled up there.

"Ah reckon this would be a good place to spend the winter," muttered Unc' Billy. "Yes, sah. Ah reckon this would be a good place to spend the winter."

OHIO TOWN CHALLENGES WETHERSFIELD'S BIGGEST ELM

Wethersfield's giant tree, known from coast to coast as the Washington Elm, is firmly rooted in the center of a lively dispute between the Marion, O., chamber of commerce and the Wethersfield Business Men's association. For the Ohio chamber has challenged the claim that this tree, believed to be two centuries old, is the largest elm in the United States.

This old tree is dear to the heart of every native of the town of Wethersfield, and each generation has pointed with pride to its spreading branches. And now comes the disquieting Marion citizens' claim that their elm rivals, even outshines, that of Wethersfield.

The controversy had its inception more than three weeks ago when a letter was received by Samuel J. Putnam, secretary of the Wethersfield Business Men's association, from the Marion chamber to the effect the Marion elm was the largest in the United States. The Wethersfield association did not take kindly to this assertion, and the controversy was formally brought to the attention of the members at a regular meeting three weeks ago.

J. R. Standish, president of the Wethersfield Village Improvement association, Sunday explained why a bronze plaque describing the tree as the largest in the country was placed on the venerable landmark more than a score of years ago.

At this time, Mr. Standish said, a survey of the largest trees in the country was made by the United States geodetic survey at Washington. The association wrote to the Village Improvement body asking for a sample of the tree's leaves, its probable age, a specimen of the soil in which it grows and the dimensions. The data was compared with that of other large elms and some time later Wethersfield's tree was pronounced the largest elm in the country by the geodetic survey.

Although Mr. Putnam did not confirm the fact, it is understood that he has written the Marion chamber suggesting that its secretary write to Washington for all information concerning the tree. Mr. Putnam indicated Sunday that he is also awaiting a reply to a letter sent to Washington in regard to the controversy.

The Ohio chamber, it is authentically reported, has distributed circulars setting forth the claim that its tree outpoints the Wethersfield elm in size. The Wethersfield elm stands on the east side of Broad street green, in front of the home lot owned in 1646, by Samuel Baldwin, the settler.

Its circumference, where it enters the ground, is 55 feet and 9 inches, the circumference 39 inches from the ground is 26 feet and 4 inches; its height is 125 feet, diameter of spread, 137 feet; circumference of spread, 450 feet. It has six branches the largest one being 17 feet in circumference. Twenty-five feet from the ground there are 12 large branches.

In the face of Marion's bold assertion, it is enlightening to note that pictures of the great elm of Wethersfield and figures giving its dimensions have been sent to the world's fairs at Chicago, St. Louis, Jamestown, Portland, Ore., Omaha, Nebraska, and many other cities, and students of trees from all parts of the country have visited it but its claim to size remained unshaken.

Single prescription made a family doctor famous

SELDOM has any single act been of greater benefit to mankind than the one which Dr. Caldwell performed back in 1885 when he wrote the prescription which has carried his fame to the four corners of the earth.

Over and over, Dr. Caldwell wrote this prescription as he found men, women, and children suffering from those common symptoms of constipation, such as coated tongue, bad breath, headaches, gas, nausea, biliousness, poor appetite, or lack of energy, etc. And it invariably relieved these symptoms so much more pleasantly, so much quicker than other things, that his patients simply had to tell other people about it.

The demand for this prescription grew so fast that by 1888 Dr. Caldwell was forced to have it put up ready for use and supply drug stores with it. Today you can get the generous bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, as it is called, at all drug stores.

When you or your children suffer from any of the symptoms of constipation, it will pay you to remember this safe, pleasant-tasting, effective laxative; made only from herbs and other pure ingredients; a real corrective for constipation. A doctor's 47-year experience behind this formula!

what is TRI-TONED radio?

Every musical sound has (1) pitch—is high or low, (2) intensity or loudness, (3) tone or character by which we distinguish one instrument or voice from another. In the new Grebe you have perfect blending of all three—pitch, intensity and tone... Tri-toned radio!

Made possible by the equalized band pass filter, exclusive Grebe development. A principle of the future, introduced now in this new set—re-creates tone so lifelike, so true, that the instrument becomes the sound-image of the figure before the microphone.

Four models, each beautiful furniture, $219.50 to $450, without tubes. Hear Tri-toned radio in this store—and in your home where 48-hour demonstration will gladly be given.

POETRY FOR THE WIDEAWAKES.

The Seasons and the Vine.

A few short months ago
Soft buds appeared upon the russet vine
That drapes my pergola,
Quickly they burst their furry coats
And tiny leaves unfolded;
Tender little hands outstretched,
Eager for the sun.
Thirstily they drank the showers of May;
Soon in answer to the call of sun and shower,
Blossoms appeared in tiny sprays—
Filling my house with fragrance.
The news was heralded—
Bees gathered with much humming
(As happy housewives hum about their work)
Design of larger patterns was stencilled on the floor,
And soon a roof of green,
Impervious to moon and sun and shower,
Stretched overhead.

Before the frost broke camp upon the heights
And hurried down the mountain,
A canopy of purple fruit swung there;
I understand the language of my vine quite well,
And knew this was a gift of love to share
With feathered friends, who stay the seasons through
After the harvest and yellow leaves had fallen—sighing.
Today at dawn an urgent tapping
Called me to my window—
The bare brown vine is glorified,
Frost clothes each tiny stem,
Feathers and fringe are worn,
Deep, soft white fur is used in great profusion—
And when I turn away, forgetting for a time
The beauty at my door—
My grapevine gently taps
To call me back again.

—Caroline Lawrence Dier in Christian Science Monitor.

Fairy Life.

I met a fairy in the night,
An anxious, troubled looking sprite,
And asked him what might be his plight.

"You should not have a care," I said,
"You do not have to work for bread
Nor keep a roof above your head

"For such poor things from day to day
We mortals toil our time away
That soul and body joined may stay."
He uttered then a fairy groan,
Remarking in a mournful tone,
"Your needs are simpler than my own.

"I always have to hunt," said he,
"For some one who believes in me,
For otherwise I cease to be."

—McLandburgh Wilson.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDE AWAKES

If you want to play all the time, you can't be wide awake, for, as we all know, all play and no work makes a boy an unproductive and worthless man. It is also true that all work and no play will harm a boy or girl almost as much. There is a time for play and a time for work. Both should go hand in hand.

No boy or girl is ever too small to learn how to do things. History shows us that some of the greatest men of our nation were forced to work for a living when they were as young, in some cases, as eight years. Work doesn't hurt us half as much as idleness and love of leisure. Our most able men make the longest days. Their purpose in life and their aims do not give them time to loar on the job or to think of short hours. Be careful and get your mind on the right side of things for that makes all the difference in your worldly view of things. Persons who are not wide awake, ultimately discover that to be of service to others is the way to find real happiness and contentment. It is a good thing to find this out when you are young.

All of us have trials and disappointments and the ones none of us should want are the other person's troubles. It is all we can do to take of our own.

LETTERS WRITTEN BY WIDE AWAKES

A House in a Tree

Dear Uncle Jed: As I haven't written to you in a long time I thought of sending in the story of a house in a tree.

The house is a large open space in the heart of the tree. There are three seats made between the boughs. They are nailed to the tree, so that there isn't any danger of falling out, unless you stand on the seats and fall backwards. There is also a door about two and one half feet wide. Placed at the door is a steep ladder leading to the ground. The roof is made of branches and leaves, which keep out the sun and it is most always cool and breezy there. The tree is embedded in roses which grow around the trunk and at the foot there are other flowers.

When I go up to see my aunt I always go up in the house made in the tree, put down the rug in the center of the floor, sweep, dust and place the covers on the seats.

This summer two of my girl friends from Brooklyn, N. Y., came up to see me. We all went up in the house to sew, string beads and tell stories. When we came home we were all tired but happy from our day's pleasure.

I hope all the Wide Awake circle will enjoy my story.

A Hallowe'en Party

Dear Uncle Jed: My story to you is about two Hallowe'en parties I attended last week.

The church I attend gave a Hallowe'en party and I asked three of my friends to go with me.

We walked into the church and at first we had a lot of fun trying to guess who each other was. I walked into the other room to look at the decorations and when I came back to join the crowd, a witch was on one side of the room and one on the opposite side of the room. The object was to take turns in breaking bags the first side to have each person break a bag first, winning.

I ran over to the corner of a room where there seemed to be considerable commotion. They were bobbing for apples. I removed my mask and ducked my head under the water and drew it out twice as quickly as I had put it in. The apples looked good so I tried it again. I got six before the evening was over. We were served cocoa, sandwiches, candy, cake, cookies, peanuts and apples. This party was in Woodstock. "Please hurry," I said to my friend, "we are late. "We are on time," she said, as we walked into the club house where the party was held. "Every one take a seat, as we are going to start the games now," we were told. A bag of peanuts has been passed across the circle which has been formed. "The bag is broken," my chum said. We scrambled for the peanuts. "I have ten, how many have you?" I asked.

Next we bobbed for apples. "Who has more than two apples?" the leader asked. "I have," I replied. "I have four." I was given a prize for getting the most apples and then I was asked to take part in a doughnut eating contest but I did not care for this.

Soon we were passed refreshments and we went home after telling the helpers that we had had a good time.

My First Cooking Lesson

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about my first cooking lesson. In seventh grade we have cooking. The first time we came in the cooking room I did not know what to do. We were told to take a seat. We first had to clean up the whole cooking room, wash all the tables, boards, stoves and dishes. We each were given jobs to do each week. After our cleaning was done we were to cook. We coked cream of wheat and rolled oats. Each of the cooking girls gets a rolling pin, egg beater, frying pan, pie plate, flour sifter, bowl, pudding pan, measuring cup, knife, fork, tablespoon and teaspoon. Last year in sewing we made aprons, towels and hot holders for cooking this year. I now enjoy cooking very much. So far we have made rolled oats, cream of wheat, stewed apples, baked apples, creamed onions, mashed potatoes, poached eggs, muffins and creamed beef. I do not like the onions at all. I don't like onions prepared any way.

I will now close.

A Walk in the Woods.

Dear Uncle Jed: I was one of the few who took your advice and went walking in the woods. One fine day my friend and I went walking in the woods not very far from our homes. We each took our lunch and a book to read. We walked until about noontime with nothing of any importance happening. Then we sat down under the trees with their many colored leaves which look like many beautiful rainbows. We ate our lunch and then decided to read. We hadn't read much when a small gray squirrel came running along. We were eating apples and we coaxed and coaxed it. It came near and nearer and just when we thought he would take my apple, he turned and briskly ran up a nearby tree and was soon hidden among the branches and leaves. He chatted and scolded until we wondered what we had done.

At last a large dog came into view. He had been hiding in the bushes near us and the squirrel had seen him with his bright eyes.

Nature Study.

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to thank you for my book which I received from you a short while ago. I have told a number of my friends about you and they have written letters to you and received books from you which they have found very interesting, and I have found the same. I am going to tell you about our trip out in the woods for nature study. We found an old bird's nest and a large hornet's nest. The nest was just the shape of a heart. It came down to a peak at the bottom. We went on until we came to a brook or stream. We started to follow the stream and we found a large number of muskrats' holes and their tracks in the mud. We followed the brook for about a mile and we saw about a hundred muskrat holes. there were two boys and two girls, my sister and I. We thought for a few minutes and then we said we would go home which was about two miles and we would get some traps and come back and set them. When we reached home it was just dinner time. I was very hungry and sat down to eat. After dinner I washed the dishes for my mother and then went out again. My mother and father told us that we had to have a license to trap and our names on the traps so we thought we had better wait until we got a license and then we would set traps for muskrats.

Greece.

Dear Uncle Jed: The Greek state was usually no larger than Ohio or Iowa. It had a capital with shops, temples, dwellings and market places. The Greeks of Macedonia were ruled by Alexander the Great, who built up a huge empire extending from the Danube river to the borders of India; but it broke up after his death, 323 B. C. The people of Greece were too independent to bow to a single ruler.

In the capital of Athens when the people ruled, the voters did not elect a few men to go to the capital and make laws. They voted "yes or "no" on laws laid before them

The Sunset.

Dear Uncle Jed: I want to tell you a story about sunset in autumn. Every day after I come home from school I wait impatiently for the evening to come, because I love to see the sun set, as the sun sinks slowly in the western sky. It looks like a great ball of fire. It is wonderful to see it. All around the sun are stripes of all colors, red, yellow and orange. They change every instant. After the sun goes down everything is quiet and peaceful. The birds are all gone and the cold wind whistles through the trees, whose leaves are peacefully sleeping on the ground. "Mother Earth" will soon let little flowers up and spring will be here, when all will be joyful and we will rejoice in the beauty of the earth.

About Rivertown.

Dear Uncle Jed: I have not written you for a long time and decided to write and tell about a trip to Rivertown. Rivertown's nickname is Hitchcockville, because years ago it manufactured Hitchcock chairs which are now wanted for antiques.

Most of the way from Hartford the Salmon river was in sight of the road. On its banks are many factories, some of which make clocks, hosiery and many other things.

On the way we passed many little towns. In one town we passed a large inn. On the front lawn of the inn there was standing a stage coach. It had a little ladder in front so that people could climb to the top. Years ago it carried passengers for that inn. As we were about to leave the town we noticed a large dam where the river once used to pass and now had taken a different course. The dam is made of tree trunks piled one on top of the other. Between the logs are pieces of wood and stones that got caught as they floated on the water. After we passed the dam we came near Rivertown. We soon entered it.

MODERATE DECLINE IN BUSINESS AND INDUSTRY REPORTED LAST WEEK

NEW YORK, Nov. 24—(AP)—Moderate retrogression was again apparent in business and industry last week, but there were several developments tending to restore confidence, including disclosure of large construction and expansion projects at President Hoover's conference, further improvement in credit conditions, and the return of comparatively normal conditions in the stock market.

Steel mill activity showed some further slackening, the United States Steel corporation reducing operations below 75 per cent of rated capacity. The automotive industry continued to lag as a whole, although resumption of operations in some plants tended to offset reductions in others.

Retail trade was stimulated somewhat by the colder weather, but was reported as slightly below last year at this time. Promise of industrial leaders who conferred with President Hoover to make no reductions in wages, Henry Ford's announcement of an increase for his employes, and continued improvement in agricultural commodity prices, were regarded as assuring good support for the general level of public purchasing power. The actual damage done to purchasing power by the stock crash remained to be thoroughly tested, however, and further conservatism was apparent in wholesale takings of goods. Sharp contraction of buying of luxuries and non-essentials, was fairly generally reported.

Total building contracts, as reported for the latest week by F. W. Dodge corporation, showed further recession, but many plans for large construction and public works projects were announced.

Further developments in the easing of credit included reduction of the Boston and Chicago rediscount rates to 4 1-2 per cent, the level inaugurated by the New York reserve bank the previous week. The Bank of England shaded its rate by 1-2 of one per cent to 5 1-2 per cent. Another sharp reduction in brokers' loans was announced, carrying the loans for all town banks to the lowest level recorded since the present loan compilation, dating back to January 1, 1926, has been compiled by the federal reserve. Return of these funds that have been tied up in speculation to their home centers is regarded as helpful to business.

In addition to stimulating the sale of bonds and mortgages to finance construction projects, the breaking of the recent credit jam is expected to have a salutary effect upon foreign trade, and several large manufacturers are planning to push their export sales departments.

Freight car loadings for the week ended November 8, were reported as again lower, but this time the reduction under the corresponding week of the previous year, was only 4,878 cars, and the total was substantially above the like week of 1927.

R. G. Dun and Company's insolvency record showed a total of 472 failures during the week, as increased from 404 defaults in the previous week, but slightly under the 476 reported for the like week of last year.

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—(AP) — The National Lumber Manufacturers' association reports that orders for lumber in the week ended November 16 were below production. Orders received by 644 softwood mills were 17 per cent below output, while 221 hardwood mills reported new business as 27 per cent under production.

The Western Pacific railroad has ordered 15,000 tons of rails from the Colorado Fuel and Iron company. Kansas City Southern is purchasing 3,000 tons from Illinois Steel company, 3,000 from Bethlehem Steel and 2,000 from Inland Steel.

Railway equipment inquiries, as reported by railway of Baltimore is preparing for expenditures of $7,500,000 next year. This total is $600,000 above the company's 1929 outlay for improvements and extensions.

A new issue of $1,500,000 province of Saskatchewan 30-year non-callable five per cent debentures is being offered. The debentures were issued to defray costs of constructing public buildings, telephones and highways.

Treasury Balance

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23 —(AP)— Treasury receipts for November 21 were $8,256,519.04; expenditures $7,158,764.74; balance $128,657,132.20.

GALES FERRY

When the Sunday school board meeting was held at the parsonage Monday evening with a good attendance of the board and teachers, matters pertaining to the church school were discussed and Christmas activities were talked over.

Mrs. George Brown of West Haven visited her brother, Nelson Parker and family over the week end.

Robert, young son of Mr. and Mrs. Orville D. Allen of Long Cove, who has been ill, with pneumonia, is very much improved.

Mrs. R. I. Hurlbutt, Mrs. Charles Bartlett and little granddaughter Florence Eugenia Hurlbutt visited Mrs. Robert Townsend of Mystic Wednesday.

Miss Stella Tweedly of Onset, Mass., is visiting her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Faford.

Nelson Parker attended the November meeting of the master painters at New Haven Monday evening and spent the remainder of the week on a business trip through Connecticut.

Mrs. D. C. Perkins left Saturday to visit her daughter Mrs. Robert Miller in Boston. Mrs. Miller underwent an operation at the Homeopathic hospital the first of last week.

Supervisor James Connolly of Norwich, visited the schools here Wednesday.

The chicken pie and rabbit supper at Ledyard Center church was attended from here by D. C. Perkins, Gertrude Allen, Alfred Ericson, Ida Ericson, Mrs. Ericson, Mr. and Mrs. Avery Main, Miss Mabel Smith.

Mrs. Marie Sorensen returned to the home of her daughter, Mrs. A. P. Miller Tuesday after a lengthy visit with Boston relatives.

Mrs. Jerome Greer and Mrs. R. I. Hurlbutt went Friday to Providence where they attended a meeting of the executive board of the Woman's Home Missionary society at Mathewson St. Methodist church.

ROAD CONDITIONS IN EASTERN CONNECTICUT

Road conditions in this part of the state made necessary by the highway construction and repairs announced by the Connecticut highway department as of Nov. 20, are as follows:

Route No. 12 —A section of the Norwich-Putnam road is being reconstructed just south of Central Village. Shoulders of this road are being constructed. Traffic can pass.

Route No. 106—Mansfield-Phoenixville road is under construction. The shoulders of this road are being built at this time. Open to traffic.

Coventry-Bridge over Willimantic river is under construction, but open to traffic.

Route No. 168—Jonathan Trumbull road is under construction from Route No. 3 to the end of the improved road north of Columbia Green and from the end of the improved road south of Columbia Green to the end of the improved road at Lebanon. Surfacing is being laid on the section south of Columbia Green. Travelers are warned to use extreme care in passing through.

Route No. 188—Flanders Village-Chesterfield road is under construction. Grading is being done and culverts are being installed. Traffic will find it difficult to get through this work.

No route numbers —Ashford, two bridges are being constructed on the Warrenville-Westford road. Traffic can pass.

Brooklyn-Pomfret road. An improvement is being made on the Pomfret-Brooklyn road, and delay to motorists may be expected where grading operations are being carried on and where surfacing is being laid.

Voluntown and North Stonington, Pendleton Hill road is under construction. Grading operations and macadamizing are in progress. Vehicles can pass through although delay and rough going will be encountered.

SPANISH LITERATURE IN SERIES OF LECTURES

In the fifth lecture of the series on contemporary European literature, given under the auspices of the Woman's City club Thursday afternoon in the club room at the Wauregan hotel, Prof. Carola Ernst, of Connecticut college spoke with great discrimination of the difference between Spanish literature and that of other nations recently considered. Alluding to Spanish art she reminded her audience of the prevalence of portraiture and regarded this as typical of the literature, for Spanish writers deal with man—"of flesh and bone"—the reality; man not living up to a class but himself.

Few nations can vie with Spain in the freedom of the intellect. Among some there is effort to show moral purpose but Spanish genius ignores virtue, regards it less than life and not entitled to consideration. Spanish literature makes man a complete creation of flesh and bone; this is the main subject of its art and literature.

The sixteenth and seventeenth centuries may be called the golden age; since then there has been a descent, not a flowering, and the re-action of the twentieth century against the nineteenth has been strong in Spain; spiritual realism prevails.

The great event which brought transformation beyond thought was the war with the United States in 1898. It opened their eyes to war and peace, and produced an intense distaste for professional politics; it was a means of exalting the spiritual life of the country.

Don Francisco Giner de los Rios turned to the Spanish classics and studied them, feeling them to be the necessary starting point for all investigation but as a young man he rejected the nineteenth century. Menendez y Pelayo has been in the limelight but has taught a difficult simplicity: everything is a symbol (as the vanishing tail-light of a train in the night is a symbol of the flight of time). He is an exquisite writer.

Pia Baroja feels that the soul is at its highest when re-acting upon the outside world and prefers to take his subjects from evils seen, as in poverty,—evil not of sin but of suffering. He is a physician and as he develops his theme he says in effect, "if you do not think that is trouble, you are a brute," and he bestows his sympathy upon little children and upon animals.

Don Ramon del Valle Incla's style is marvelously carved. In his book, "Voices and Gestures," he treats of primitive life and shows great skill and knowledge and the book is steeped in local color. In Incla appears an egotism degenerating toward tyranny, yet his religious faith is unclouded by superstition and he manifests humility toward the laws of the land.

Don Miguel de Unamuno is said to have a volcanic temperament. He lives in Salamanca and goes about the streets talking with friends and students. He believes in personal immortality and is interested in the mystery of man's destiny on earth but is more human than most mystics. Though a part in the world he refuses to be drawn away from the main business of a man. His writings have the true Spanish flavor; Man remains free; he refuses to deal with less than man's destiny and origin; to surrender life to ideas solely concerned with his own life. He asserts one can only feel and know humanity in the one human being we have in hand. He has a passion for life and his masterpiece has the significant title "The Tragic Sense of Life."

In Spain we have a blending of east and west. Ortega y Gasset is the leader of a band of scholars who have travelled much and his influence is great. The study of philosophy has become fashionable and he has written an interesting book called "Meditations of Don Quixote." He is a voice of critical Spain and stands for renovation of Spain. Unamuno has attained universality; Gasset has achieved local popularity.

Ayala has an American wife and has been in several consular positions so that he has had much contact with the modern world. St. Theresa is a wonderful study in self-analysis; she was the discoverer of vast certitudes of the inner life and psychology is finding her researches of present day value.

Gabriel Miro portrays the quiet life of small towns, nature, flowers, the village priest. His book, "The Figures of our Lord," reminds one of the art of carved wood.

Writers of fifty or sixty years of age love psychology but the younger set are sick of literature which banishes every form of expression.

Ramon de la Serna is a man of immense talents though it has been said that he doesn't know anything. He loves the movement of color and says he adores clowns. One of his descriptions is "a little winged monster of incredible swiftness." He has evolved a new literary form —a thought crystallized in a few lines and it has been termed Greguería.

The next lecture will deal with Scandinavian countries but because of Thanksgiving it will not be given for two weeks, on Dec. 5.

CLAIMS LEBANON MAN FRAMER OF CONSTITUTION

The important but almost forgotten part that a Connecticut patriot played in the framing of the constitution of the United States was told by James W. Cartwright of Hampton in relating to the Colonel Henry Champion chapter, D. A. R. at Colchester last week, the life of Pelatiah Webster, a "forgotten Colonial patriot." Pelatiah Webster, was rated as the greatest of the three noted Websters, Noah, Daniel and Pelatiah, he said. Pelatiah was a confidant of statesmen and congressmen of his time.

Pelatiah Webster was born in Lebanon, 1726. Mr. Cartwright said that he came across the data almost by accident while engaged in research work at the Library of Congress in Washington. The address brought out the fact that Webster was a descendant of John W. Webster, who came to Hartford in 1636, his house being located south of Little river, near Governor street, and about half-way between Charter Oak avenue and Wyllys street, as they now are. John Webster was the fifth governor of Connecticut.

In a direct line from Governor Webster, through Thomas, George and Pelatiah, the first comes the subject of the address, Pelatiah, second. Educated at Yale for the ministry he became a clergyman at Greenwich, but engaged in trade in Philadelphia in 1750 or about that time. He took an active part in financial and government affairs and members of congress met with him to discuss the affairs of the nation. In 1789 he published A Discourse on the Political Union and Constitution of the Thirteen United States of America. It is conceded that all the clauses contained in this remarkable paper were used by James Madison in his draft of the United States constitution. This fact, so well known at the time, the speaker said, has since been lost sight of and the name of Pelatiah Webster, greatest of the three great Websters, Noah, Daniel and Pelatiah, has dropped into oblivion. As a nation builder, second only to Washington, the great patriot lies in a forgotten grave in the old Arch street burying ground, Philadelphia, beside his son-in-law, John Perit. One slab covers both, there being an inscription for Perit but none for Webster.

Among those who met at his office in Philadelphia were such men as Benjamin Franklin, Thomas Jefferson, James Madison, Alexander Hamilton, Oliver Ellsworth and others. Webster was imprisoned by the British during the Revolution for helping American prisoners. The grave stone of Pelatiah first father of the patriot, may be seen in the old burying ground in Lebanon. The quaint inscription reads as follows:

"The body of Mr. Pelatiah Webster lies buried here. He married Jeanna Smith, by her had eight children. He gave his eldest son a liberal education. The rest he brought up respectably.

He was a pious and prudent man.

Born 7 November 1702
Died 15 Feb. 1756."

ENDORSEMENT BY MAYOR OF RED CROSS DRIVE

WOMEN ASKED TO AID IN AIR-MARKING CITIES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24—(AP)—Miss Amelia Earhart, noted woman flier, has asked the General Federation of Women's clubs through its 14,000 organizations to take up a new civic activity.

She wants club women all over the country to have the name of each town and city painted in big letters on the roof of the largest building.

Miss Earhart appealed to the club women because civic betterment is part of the federation's program for the coming year.

TENNIS COVERALLS MEANT FOR SHOWERY WEATHER

PARIS, Nov. 24—(AP)—A take-off top of rainproof cravenette to cover tennis togs in showery weather fastens with zippers which run from collar to cuff, down the top of both sleeves.

The rain-dress has circular skirt which is pulled in to a normal waistline by means of another zipper closing in the center front.

Oil is found in backyards of many homes in San Antonio, Tex.

A Charming Retreat in The Living Room

An Ideal Hideaway For The Book Lover

By Elsie Drew Kennedy

Some living rooms have an alcove space, closet or connecting room that can readily be converted into a cosy retreat.

Modern decoration allows for related groups or units of design, particularly in the arrangements of living room furniture.

Comfort, of course, should be the primary consideration, in conjunction with good taste. The modern hostess recognizes that her success depends greatly on the "atmosphere" of her home. A guest must sense that essential something which at once suggests harmony and restfulness.

Comfort as well as impeccable taste is apparent in the wall designed treatment of the recess illustrated. It is ideal as a background for afternoon tea, afterdinner coffee or for long talks with close friends.

In the illustration the living room is a panelled affair, with the retreat indicative of a fine sense of proportions in harmony with the main decorative features of the room.

If your living room is decorated in beige or green, the curved panelled section at the top of the opening is a happy design which emphasizes the main proportions of the room as well as indicating the character of the recess.

The color treatment of the recess might be in contrast to, but in harmony with, the room itself.

A daybed, or one of those intriguing modern couches, along with bookcases, either of the built-in or pyramid ditype, provide the decorative effects. Rich draperies, couch cover and gay pillows are in smart contrast to delicate tones of prints and landscapes tastefully arranged about the walls.

Arrangement of the interior of the recess is typical of the modern ideas of supreme comfort and luxurious good taste, particularly apparent in the draperies and coverings. Today we are particularly partial to the draping qualities of artificial silk, especially for interior decoration, since it imparts new color and luxurious simplicity.

Artificial silk, when combined with mohair or linen, is recommended for its fine wearing qualities and interesting patterns. If draperies and couch cover are subdued in coloring, one's imagination may take all sorts of flights into the realm of color by selecting pillows in a perfect riot of gay taffeta and satin shades, of every shape and size.

THE HOLIDAY DUCK

Fruit Appetizer
Roast Duck and Apple Dressing
Mashed Potatoes Creamed Carrots
Bread Currant Jelly
Green Bean and Celery Salad
Individual Pumpkin Pies and Walnuts
Coffee

Apple Dressing: 2 cups apples, peeled and chopped; 2 cups soft bread crumbs; 1-2 teaspoon salt; 1-4 teaspoon pepper; 1-4 teaspoon celery salt; 4 tablespoons butter, melted; 3-4 saltspoon celery; 3 tablespoons milk.

Lightly mix the ingredients and stuff the duck.

Green Bean and Celery Salad, serving six: 1 cup cooked green beans; 1 cup diced celery; 1-4 cup chopped pimentos; 1 tablespoon chopped onion; 1 hard cooked egg, diced; 1-2 teaspoon salt; 1-4 teaspoon pepper; 1-3 cup mayonnaise.

Mix and chill the ingredients. Serve on lettuce leaves.

Mayonnaise (for fruit, fish or vegetable salad): 1 egg; 1 teaspoon salt; 1-4 teaspoon dry mustard; 1-4 teaspoon paprika; 1-4 teaspoon celery salt; 1 cup chilled salad oil; 4 tablespoons lemon juice; 2 tablespoons boiling water.

Beat the egg and add the salt, mustard, paprika and celery salt. Beating the ingredients, slowly add 1-3 cup of oil. Beat in another 1-3 cup of oil and then alternate the remaining oil with the lemon juice. Beat until thick and creamy. Beat in the water. Chill.

Have all ingredients and utensils thoroughly chilled before making this dressing.

Individual Pumpkin Pies (Serving Six): 1 1-2 cups pumpkin, cooked and mashed; 2 cups milk; 2-4 cup dark brown sugar; 1-2 teaspoon salt; 1 teaspoon cinnamon; 1-2 teaspoon cloves; 1-2 teaspoon nutmeg; 2 eggs; 2 tablespoons butter, melted.

Fit pie dough into muffin pans. Mix the rest of the ingredients and pour into the cases. Bake for 8 minutes in a moderate oven. Reduce the heat and bake for 20 minutes in a moderate oven. Cool and remove the little pies. When ready to serve, sprinkle black walnuts on the top. The nuts give a fine flavor to the pie filling.

Guiding Your Child

By Mrs. Agnes Lyne

Disguising Foods.

Whole milk is generally regarded as one of the best available foods for children but, as many mothers know, it is a good deal easier to order a quart of milk than to get the child to drink it.

The experience of one mother who worked out ways of making her children take their milk without a murmur, indeed without knowing that they were doing it, should be helpful to many of us who find that our children either consistently refuse their milk or demand a good deal of coaxing and attention before they will consent to take even a part of what they should have.

A full glass of milk was consumed in the form of a chocolate mixture which the children called "chocolate soda" and drank eagerly.

A second glass of milk was taken in concentrated form as a part of old fashioned rice pudding. This dessert was made with raisins and a little cinnamon, and the children loved it. Custards, junket and the whole series of milk puddings were frequently given, although in none of them did the child get as much milk food value for the quantity eaten as in the rice pudding.

Cream soups, cereals cooked with milk, spaghetti or rice cooked with milk, were served at supper. By means of these disguises, the children, without drinking a single glass of milk, consumed at least a pint and a half of it daily.

In a similar way, the child who is prejudiced against eggs often can be made to take them without being aware that he is doing so. They can be served to him in pleasantly flavored eggnogs, in custards and in brown betty pudding.

The child who dislikes vegetables often will eat them without objection in soup.

When once the child's dislike for any wholesome food has become firmly entrenched, it is better to use diplomacy than to make an issue of the situation.

If we can gain our end of having him eat an adequate diet without his realizing that this includes his special dislikes, we should cheerfully waive the occasion for "discipline."

Women Of Far Climes Contribute To Delicacies Of Thanksgiving

Favorite recipes of their homelands are given their American sisters by Frau O. C. Kiep (left), Senorita Anne Theresa Grisanti (center) and Mme. Edgar Prochnik.

They universally observe the American national feast day, but they load their tables with famous delicacies of their native lands.

I asked three distinguished foreign women in Washington to give to American housewives their favorite holiday-time recipes.

Frau O. C. Kiep, wife of the counselor of the German embassy, offers her recipe for Stollen, the cake prized above all others in her native land. Senorita Anne Theresa Grisanti, daughter of Don Carlos F. Grisanti, minister from Venezuela, tells the secret of the delicious stuffed cake which adorns so many South American tables.

Mme. Edgar Prochnik, wife of the minister from Austria, personally translated into English her recipe for Husaren-Krapferl, just the thing to serve at bridge-luncheons as well as at Thanksgiving.

Here are the recipes:

Stollen (Frau Kiep)

2½ pounds flour, 1½ cups milk, 6 yeast cakes, 2 yolks and three whole eggs, 1-4 pound sugar, 3-4 pound melted butter, a pinch of salt, ½ pound seedless raisins, 1-4 pound almonds peeled and cut in fine slices, ¼ pound bitter almonds, ground, 1 small piece each of chopped orangeade, and citronade, the grated peelings of 1 lemon.

Sift the flour into a large bowl, make a little hole in the center, pour about 1 cup lukewarm milk into it and break all the yeast therein, mixing it lightly with a little of the flour.

Allow this to stand about 1 hour in a warm place.

When it has well risen, add eggs, sugar, melted butter, salt, and the rest of the milk. Beat very well for some time.

Then cover the bowl with a clean towel and let the dough stand once more in a medium warm place for about 2 hours.

Then the dough is put on a rolling board, and all the other ingredients—raisins, almonds, citronade, orangeade and lemon—are sprinkled on top and must be evenly and thoroughly kneaded into the dough, which is then folded together and formed into an oblong loaf.

This must again be allowed to stand in a slightly warm place till it has well risen—generally about 1 1-1 hours.

Before putting the stollen into the oven, lightly brush it all over with a little melted butter and after that with the unbeaten whites of 2 eggs. Then sprinkle a little sugar with some fine sliced almonds on top and bake in a well heated oven for about 1 hour. After about ½ hour cover with paper so that sugar and almonds will not turn brown.

Stuffed Cake (Senorita Grisanti)

Plain pound cake cut in four layers. First layer of prune stuffing moist with prune juice. Between the other layers spread the following mixture: Cream yolks or two eggs, one cup of milk and two tablespoons of sugar. Cook until thick. Ice the cake with sugar icing.

Husaren-Krapferl (Mme. Prochnik)

(Measures in grams must be changed into cup and spoon measure if no gram weights are at hand.)

Make a dough out of 170 grams of flour, 140 grams of butter and 70 grams of sugar (on board). Form little balls and put them on a buttered and floured pan. Press into the middle of each small hole. Cover with thin layer of white of egg, so that crystal sugar will stick. Bake in medium oven till light gold in color and fill center or cavity with your favorite jam.

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Potatoes that have been peeled will not turn dark if a little milk is added to the water in which they are boiled.

The cut surface of a lemon will remove marks made on painted walls when matches have been scratched on them.

Cut a piece of asbestos paper to fit the bottom of the oven. It retains the heat, saves fuel and prevents articles from burning.

If shredded cocoanut is left uncovered it soon becomes dry. To freshen it, soak it in milk for a few minutes.

If you wish to cool a hot dish quickly place it in a vessel of cold water to which a half cup of salt has been added.

Soiled spots on hardwood floors may be easily removed if rubbed with a little turpentine, then waxed and polished when the wax is dry.

Soap jelly may be made by dissolving small pieces of soap in water enough to cover them. Add one teaspoon of borax for every pint of mixture.

Glycerin poured around the neck of a glass bottle and allowed to remain for several hours will remove a stopper that refuses to come out.

The pasteurization, or boiling for a few minutes, of milk and the boiling of water when it is of doubtful purity will remove all danger of typhoid fever.

To preserve the dullness of dull mahogany, go over it occasionally with a cloth wrung out of vinegar and water, then polish with a soft duster.

To remove paint from cotton clothing soak the spot in a solution made of equal parts of ammonia and turpentine. When the spot disappears wash the garment in soapsuds.

When serving tea drop a little hot water into the saucer and then place the cup firmly over it. This will prevent the cup from slipping and rattling when being passed.

TO KEEP CHEESE.

If cheese is exposed to the air, it is apt to mold. To prevent this, wrap the cheese in a cloth saturated with vinegar, being careful that the entire surface is covered, for if two pieces of cheese touch each other mold is likely to form. If limberger cheese is wrapped in a cloth dipped in vinegar, it may be kept in the refrigerator without fear that the other food will take up the odor.

MODERNISTIC BATHROOM.

Refreshingly new are bottles for the bathroom of clear glass in a deep sapphire blue shade. The bottles are full of unexpected angles and planes.

FOR THE BABY.

Something very new indeed is a tiny link bracelet for the very young. Gold is chosen for girls and platinum for boys and a link is added for every month of the baby's age.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

If a patient refuses to take milk disguise it in cream soups, egg-nogs, milk-shakes and ice cream.

Before you start doing your dirtiest cleaning or gardening, rub your fingernails over and under with soap. This prevents dirt from caking under them and all you have to do is wash your hands and the nails come perfectly clean.

The development of the bust is accomplished by movements of the arms and shoulders. Such exercises as swinging Indian clubs and rotating the arms are good. Swimming is excellent for that purpose.

Stains on the nails may be removed with lemon juice, tomato juice or peroxide. Obstinate stains require the use of powdered pumice which has been dampened with peroxide. Dip a nail brush into the preparation and scrub thoroughly.

If there is no eyestrain there is no need of an eyewash. Apply a warm cloth to the lids at night and allow it to remain on a few minutes. This releases the eye muscles from their set position and rests them. In the morning repeat, using cold cloth instead of warm.

If your appetite is good, and you eat plenty of food but do not increase your weight it must be that you do not eat fat-producing foods. Eat cereals, with plenty of cream and sugar, for breakfast, creamed soups at noon, and for your dinner choose fattening meats such as ham, pork, roast beef, with rich gravies. Your desserts may consist of rice puddings, custards, fruits with fresh cream, and ice creams. Drink a quart of milk a day.

FOOT.

The skin of the foot can be kept soft and comfortable by frequent massage with olive oil. This will prevent painful rough heels and also eradicate soft corns which are apt to be the busy housewife's lot.

NAIL TINT NOW MATCHES GOWN

Finger nails come in for their share of attention this season. For some time artists have protested against the fad of staining the nails a deep red tint or some other rosy cast. Variety was their desire, and the couturiers have heeded this appeal to the extent of matching the nail tint to the color of the gown worn. This is indeed a caprice. But for the purpose is provided a bottle of special varnish and small boxes of powder in assorted colors.

A bit of powder of the desired tint is sprinkled on the varnished nails. It may be mauve, green, blue, orange or crimson—what you will. The colors can be washed off, of course, when the robe is changed.

LEATHER FURNITURE.

If leather furniture is neglected it becomes dry and brittle and begins to crack and show wear. At this stage it is quite impossible to restore it. However, it can be improved by gently rubbing the leather with a cloth moistened with a few drops of lemon oil. This may slightly darken the leather, but it will cleanse and soften it and conceal the cracks. By thus making it more pliable, its wearing qualities are materially increased.

DICTATES OF FASHION

The cape coat by no means has taken a back seat. A lovely bottle green princess line coat has a cape of its fabric edged in red fox.

One can not emphasize too strongly the off-the-face line that marks the new hats. They are worn far off the eyebrows, with no hair showing. A trying fashion, but a chic one.

True luxury is found in an afternoon coat of black, which has a huge collar of silky beaver and great cuffs of the same flattering fur which swish to the elbows.

The newest way to introduce color into a delicate evening frock is by using bright pumps and one of those exquisitely fine but ridiculously large chiffon handkerchiefs.

Several informal and very feminine frocks for fall use embroidery effectively. One cuts its edge in fancy effect, making leaves of embroidery around the bottom of the skirt.

Very autumn looking is a flaring brimmed hat of golden brown that uses seven shades of beige, brown and red in striped effect to fashion its crown. A tiny bow in the back is of the reddest shade.

A dainty pair of turquoise earrings has one large turquoise set in pearls for the lobe piece. From this four little strands of tiny turquoise and pearls, set in gold, dangle.

Some of the smartest and best looking coats for winter wear are of dark green cloth. It is possible to get a luxurious model of hunter's green, trimmed lavishly with black racoon or lynx. The high pointed cuffs and very deep collar of the fur add much to the beauty of the coat.

TRIPLE BAGS.

They are splendid for traveling, but any woman would love one for almost any purpose. They are flat bags, of medium size, and have three separate compartments. The colors harmonize with the new fall costume shades.

BUTTON CHIC.

Buttons are marching right into front of fashions now. A sweet violet taffeta frock for afternoon tea or informal evening parties buttons clear up the back with decorative little cut steel and mother-of-pearl buttons in the shape of half moons with a little lady in them.

VELVETS POPULAR.

For evening the pile fabrics are absorbing full attention. Chiffon, panne and transparent velvets all are utilized for evening dresses, while evening coats with the omnipresent fur trimmings seem to have been designed with the special purpose of utilizing the softness and draping qualities of these fabrics. The velvets for evening dress frequently have chiffon, lace, crepe or satin grounds.

LAUNDRY HINTS.

Knitted silk underwear should be pulled and stretched into shape by hand, never ironed.

Add a few drops of household ammonia to the water when sponging woolen clothes.

To remove stains from a taffeta dress sponge the soiled part with gasoline into which a little salt has been shaken. The salt prevents the ring which frequently appears when cleaning with gasoline.

With returning feminine styles, the old-fashioned sleeve board is an essential for good ironing. You can slip shoulders, flounces, jabots, peplums and other intricate parts of a frock over these little boards with excellent results.

HOW TO KEEP CURTAINS CLEAN.

Here's an idea for keeping your lace or scrim, net or swiss curtains clean:

Make one extra pair when you make the curtains. Then each week or each two weeks as necessary, take down one pair of curtains that are beginning to look soiled, and put up the extra pair instead. Wash the soiled pair, and have them ready to put up at another window the next week, or the second week after, as necessity indicates, so that another soiled pair may be washed.

Thus you always have clean curtains, you never have more than one pair to wash at a time, and you don't have that ugly spectacle of a curtainless house for three or four days while the curtains are laundering.

The only hitch in this plan is that your windows may not all be the same length. In this case you would have to have all curtains made for the longest window, and then when they were used on the shorter windows you could turn over an extra fold and baste it as the top.

Or you could have two extra pairs, one for the short windows and one for the longer ones. Either way would work out satisfactorily.

FACE WRINKLES.

Try binding the forehead with a linen bandage soaked in equal parts of alcohol and the white of an egg, allowing the bandage to remain over night.

GIFTS OF PEWTER.

The use of pewter is increasing and not only is really old pewter a feature of the smartest dinner tables but designers are turning out exquisite new pieces in lines characteristic a small tray of pewter holding a sugar and creamer. The tray is oval and all three pieces have fluted edges.

TO SHINE PEWTER

Pewter usually does not take on as high a shine as silver, but you can give it a delightful luster in this way: Rub it with a mixture of silver polish and vinegar, using a soft cloth. Then polish with a soft flannel cloth. You will be surprised at its beautiful appearance.

CONCERNING WOMEN

There are upwards of 400,000 girls in India who are widows before the age of 15.

Skiss or skates are used by the women of Sweden to help them reduce their surplus weight.

Women in Germany are reported to be going into the business and professional world in increasing numbers.

American War Mothers assisted 2,797 families during the last two years. They spent $107,949 in relief work.

Chinese women of the poorer sort are still sold into slavery. Peiping women are said to be in great demand, bringing as much as $1,0000 depending on their attractiveness.

The newest hospital in London, England, exclusively for women patients and devoted to cancer, is operated entirely by women. It has 25 beds and 17 women doctors compose the staff.

The first Indian woman of rank to engage in any form of trade is Maharani Komari Lolita Rani Devi, daughter of the Maharajah of Burdwan, one of the richest rulers in India. She sells Indian furniture, porcelain and embroidery in her shop in London, England.

Suffering from paralysis which grips her body from feet to shoulders, Miss Mary Fallon, aged 40, a patient in City hospital on Welfare Island, New York, for 15 years, has succeeded as a painter. She makes delicate colored designs upon chiffon scarfs and linen handkerchiefs with an artist's brush held in her teeth.

Mrs. Everett B. Griffin, of Edinburg, Tex., is believed to be one of the few, if not the only woman, driving a star mail route regularly. Every day she starts from Mission and drives a mail bus to Brownsville, and return, on a fast schedule, the round trip representing a journey of 135 miles with about 26 stops.

RECIPES

Orange Puff Sauce: Beat the whites of two eggs until very stiff, adding a few grains of salt. Then add two-thirds cup of powered sugar slowly, beating constantly. Then add the grated rind and juice of one orange and the juice of half a lemon. Serve with cottage pudding.

Cranberry and Raisins Two cups cranberries, 1 cup raisins, 1 1-4 cups sugar, 3 tablespoons flour. Cut the cranberries in half, mix with the raisins, sugar and flour and bake in one crust. When fruit is cooked remove from oven, let cool and cover with meringue made with the whites of two eggs and one teaspoon powered sugar beaten stiff. Then slightly brown meringue in moderate oven.

Scalloped Fish: Season two cups of cold flaked fish with salt and pepper, mix with one and one-half cups of white sauce, place in a greased baking dish, cover with bread crumbs, and bake in a hot oven until the crumbs are brown. Two hard-cooked eggs, cut in slices, may be used in place of one-half a cup of the fish. Two tablespoons of chopped green pepper or pimento may be added for seasoning.

DRESS PRINTS ISSUED IN LIMITED EDITIONS

PARIS, Nov. 24— (AP) —Paris dressmakers are advertising limited editions of dress prints in an effort to insure the exclusiveness of high priced models.

While the original designs from which the limited prints are made are not actually destroyed after the required yardage has been manufactured, dressmakers who purchase exclusive fabric rights are fully protected by French law and have the right to prosecute copyists.

High priced dress makers see in the control of fabric output a partial solution of their problem of suppressing copyists. Models so protected can be copied as to line but not in the original fabric.

The increasing use of fancy woolens and silk prints of limited editions is expected to have a noticeable influence upon fabrics used for spring styles. It is generally conceded that there will be a continuation of the vogue of printed silk crepes and chiffon. Spring woolen fabrics particularly for sport purposes, will develop further the colorful patterns of this winter, in featherweights.

JAPAN'S LABORERS ARE THIRD WOMEN

TOKYO, Nov. 24—(AP)—Women make up nearly one-third of Japan's laboring population, a survey by the home office shows.

Of a total of 4,832,000 non-agricultural workers, 1,577,000 are women. Among factory workers women are almost as numerous as men, 1,090,000 women to 1,256,000 men. In the transport services there are 89,000 women employes, mostly bus conducters and helpers.

Even in the rough work of the mines 57,000 women are employed, more than a fifth of the total of mine workers. Among the day laborers, coolies who do the heavy work of excavation, carrying and the like, nearly a fourth are women, 427,000 out of a total of 1,900,000.

Women operate most of the pile drivers in Japan, coal the ships at Nagasaki and load the heavy ore cars in the copper mines.

Women also play an important part in agriculture, in the actual toil of the rice paddies and the upland fields.

At planting and harvest time, the whole family turns out for the work of the Japanese farm, women taking their places beside husbands and brothers in the muck of the spring paddies or the dust of the harvesting.

MAIDS OF LONG SERVICE DECORATED WITH MEDALS

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Nov. 24—(AP)—Medals of honor have been presented by the minister of the interior to three housemaids, each of whom has served over a half-century in the same family.

Mary Sarmy has a record of 52 years' service and is 80 years old; Kate Widitz, has 54 years' service and is 81, and Stephania Torkenczy, who has 57 years' service, is 83.

All three remain with the families they have served so long but, now do very little work and are treated as respected members of the families.

GIRLS' SCHOOL HAS AN AVIATION COURSE

NEW YORK, Nov. 24—(AP)—Sub-debutantes attending the Mason Junior college at Tarrytown-on-Hudson are learning about flying.

The school has added a course in aviation. Prof. Roland H. Spaulding, Guggenheim professor of aeronautics, lectures twice a week on the tendencies of aircraft and the history of aviation.

Mrs. C. E. Mason, head of the school, thinks girls should learn about aviation, not only for flying but because she believes there will soon be demand for writers on aviation.

BRIGHTER JEWELRY FOR EVENING WEAR

PARIS, Nov. 24—(AP)—Brighter jewelry for evening, with belt buckles to match necklaces, is a vogue originating at one of the most important style houses. Red, green and blue, combined in a single necklace, enliven black costumes.

CABINET DEB FINDS DREAMS COMING TRUE

LAKE FOREST, Ill., Nov. 24—(AP)—Everything in that expression, "when you get to be a big girl," is coming true these days for 13-year-old Gertrude Lamont, daughter of the secretary of commerce and Mrs. Dobert P. Lamont.

Shortly after Thanksgiving, tentatively December 2, this tall, brown-haired girl, who loves horseback riding and all sports, will make her debut in Washington.

The Lamont's big house, on the extensive estate in this Chicago suburb of millionaires, has been closed. During the last few days of its occupancy, Gertrude and her mother were there only occasionally. They were shopping for the debut and the busy capital season into which Gertrude will be introduced.

Miss Gertrude Lamont, daughter of the secretary of commerce.

A canter in the morning with an army officer, lunch with a count, tea in an embassy, dinner in a company of celebrities, a dance with smartly attired and perfectly mannered young men clamoring for dances—so Gertrude's dairy might read.

Mrs. Lamont has not decided whether her daughter's coming-out party will be a tea or a dance, but it will be smart and interesting, whatever it is. The charming wife of the secretary of commerce has a reputation here as a hostess.

And to top off the party—and this is one reason why Gertrude is excited—the President and Mrs. Hoover will be invited.

Gertrude is a very modern young miss. She rides well, and her interest in all sports is wholehearted. Her mother told of a serious trait in the young woman—she is unusually appreciative of art.

Mrs. Lamont accounted for this by recalling that she often left baby Gertrude with her nurse in art galleries while the mother was shopping.

FEMINIZED FASHIONS DEVELOP OPPOSITION

PARIS, Nov. 24-(AP)-Formalized, feminized fashions are challenged by a few chic young Parisians who have adopted the three-piece lame costume made on sport lines for evening theatres and restaurant wear.

The lame three-piece is made on straight, boyish lines and is almost a direct contradiction of what most of the famous dressmakers show for evening wear.

The skirt is short and even hemmed, whereas most of the new evening dresses are long and uneven. The jacket is a straight cardigan instead of the elaborate fitted, furred short coats most women are wearing. The third piece is a tuck-in blouse of sheer lame or metallic-tulle.

Cuff Become Sleeves.

PARIS, Nov. 24—(AP)—Fur cuffs have grown up into fur sleeves on some of the afternoon coats and evening wraps shown in the new collections here. The fur comes only a few inches short of forming the entire sleeve.

SELLING AIR TICKETS NEW WOMEN'S FIELD

NEW YORK, Nov. 24—(AP)—Five women are selling air transportation to women. While they sell to men, also, they direct their main efforts to inducing women to fly.

Two girls at Oklahoma City increased business 60 per cent during the summer months and sold 13 tickets to women the first day they were employed.

They are Miss Evelyn Turner and Miss Gertrude Slater. Both are 23. They were employed as stenographer and telephone operator by the company which now has them selling tickets.

Miss Melba Nunn, 25, and Mrs. Estelle Diaz, 27, are former secretaries who have been advanced into the air transportation field. They work in New York.

Miss Zora Koritnik, traffic representative in St. Louis, was one of the first women to enter the new field. She also has completed a pilot's ground course.

REVOLVING WARDROBE WORKS ELECTRICALLY

PARIS, Nov. 24—(AP)—A revolving electric wardrobe was shown at the autumn salon as the last word in modern house furnishings.

Doors and drawers of the cabinet open at the touch of a button. It is designed to hold a man's complete wardrobe.

MRS. HOOVER NAMES 'MUMS FOR PRESIDENT AND HERSELF

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24—(AP)—Christening battleships and flowers are among the duties and delights of being the president's wife. Mrs. Herbert Hoover has done both.

She has named two chrysanthemums—one for herself and one for President Hoover. The "Mrs. Herbert Hoover" is an orange-cinnamon of the pompon variety. It is of unusual and striking appearance with delicate minaline of reds and yellows. It was obtained by cross pollenization of bronze and bronze-yellow flowers.

The "President Hoover" is a deep pink or magenta color. It has a yellow center and long stem.

The new blooms were developed by the United States department of agriculture and were exhibited for the first time at the twenty-eighth annual chrysanthemum show which was attended by 20,000 people.

At the close of the show the flowers were cut from the plants and sent to the White house. The plants themselves will be used in the propagation of future flowers. Many commercial florists over the country will want to raise Hoover chrysanthemums.

Requests will come, too, from individuals eager to have a glorious "President Hoover" blooming pinkly in the window. But of late years it has been impossible for the department to comply with these individual requests owing to their increasing number.

Four chrysanthemums developed in the last year were given Mrs. Hoover from which to select the namesakes for herself and the president. The other two were pink and white. They were named for Mrs. Caroline Mastick, mother of Secretary Hyde and for Mrs. Cornelia Cullers, mother of Mrs. Hyde.

It is customary to name a chrysanthemum for every first lady. Mrs. Wilson was the first to be so honored. Her flower is a large white Japanese chrysanthemum. The "Mrs. Warren Harding" is a light lavender Japanese. The "Grace Coolidge" is a cream white Japanese. Her personality is best expressed, however, in the "Mrs. Calvin Coolidge," a red pompon flower.

WOMEN OF ALGERIA AGAIN MAKING RUGS

TLEMCEN, Algeria, Nov. 24 — (AP)—Rug-weaving, once a great native industry, is regaining its lost importance.

A new training school is being built here by the government as a technical center, intended to raise standards of design and dyes.

Once nearly all native women made rugs. The industry was on the wane before the French conquered the country a century ago and has continued to lose favor since.

After the war French authorities encouraged a revival of interest by establishing a small training school at Algiers for girls who later went into native homes to stir up the women and get them back at the looms.

Within the last few years there have been established 320 small rug weaving studios where 2,000 girls and women work.

Girls are taken in very young and most of them leave when they are 12, the age at which they usually put on the veil in public and rarely go out unless accompanied by their parents. These girls, however, continue to weave at home.

In this way, besides the many rugs made for home use, the natives have tripled the country's exports in six years, selling abroad last year rugs valued at $500,000.

BIB FRONTED STEP-INS ELIMINATE BRASSIERES

PARIS, Nov. 24—(AP)—Turquoise and amethyst colored lingerie are the new shades for dance ensembles.

Step-ins with bib fronts are more or less replacing brassiere and pointed-top shorts with the French clientele.

Racine lace in sunburn shades is still the general favorite but deep cream shadow lace is newer with triple voile sets.

SELF-HELP FEATURES IN SMALL BOYS' SUITS

The incessant activity of the small boy of pre-school age, from 3 to 8 years, makes it important that the clothes he wears shall neither restrict his movements nor come to grief because of them, and his clothing may be a means of teaching him self-help, if properly designed, says the bureau of home economics, U. S. department of agriculture. The bureau has made a study of the clothing usually worn by little boys and designed garments which do away with some of the faults that are common in prevailing styles. The most important points about these designs are illustrated in a new department of agriculture leaflet, No. 52-L, "Suits for the Small Boy," by Clarice L. Scott, of the clothing and textile division of the bureau. The leaflet may be obtained free from the office of information, department of agriculture, Washington, D. C., as long as there is a supply available for free distribution.

The garments designed by the bureau are simple enough to be made at home and are easily laundered. Complicated fastenings, particularly around the waist line, have been a great fault in boys' suits heretofore, and the new designs do not have some of these hindrances to self help. Front and back drops have been arranged to button independently from each other, and to a large extent the belt has been discarded or abbreviated. The cuts for the legs and crotch seams and for the neck line have been carefully studied. Simulated collars, stitched flat, are preferred to attached collars. Elbow-length sleeves and trousers short enough to clear the knees are recommended. Fabrics which are substantial enough to take tailoring and which do not require starch are suggested.

A woman is interested in a man as long as he knows something that she is anxious to find out.

TRIBUTE

At a meeting of the Directors of The Aspinook Company, the following tribute to their late President, Oliver L. Johnson was unanimously adopted:

In 1893 Mr. Moses Pierce started to organize the Aspinook Co. and selected Oliver L. Johnson to assume the burden of development and active management. The wisdom of his choice is attested by the steady and consistent growth of the Company under Mr. Johnson's leadership and guidance during the past 36 years. Beginning as Secretary and Treasurer, in 1915 he was elected President, in recognition of the tireless and enthusiastic devotion which he always gave to the Company. He built with a vision for the future that was never discouraged by adversity nor unduly elated by prosperity. Integrity, tenacity, fixity of purpose, courage, unswerving devotion to the truth as he saw it, (his soundness of judgment and perspicacity were demonstrated with unfailing regularity) all these were combined with an innate gentility and rare consideration for others to form a character at once respected and beloved by all who knew him. His advice and counsel were eagerly sought, and he gave unstintingly of his time, strength and funds to help every good cause. A buoyant sense of humor endeared him to all and sustained him in the severe illnesses which overtook him in the last years of his long and useful life. His death in his 78th year leaves the host who were fortunate to know him as a friend with a great sense of personal loss, and with a priceless memory long to be treasured.

In affectionate appreciation of this rich life nobly lived, The Directors of The Aspinook Co. have voted to spread these minutes on the permanent records of the Company, to send a copy to his family, and to publish them in The Norwich Bulletin and Norwich Evening Record.

Attest: JOHN P. POST, Secretary.

LEGAL NOTICES

AT A COURT OF PROBATE HELD at North Stonington, within and for the District of North Stonington on the 22nd day of November, A. D. 1929.
Present, CHARLES A. PALMER, Judge.
Estate of Isaac F. Partelo, late of North Stonington, Conn., in said District, deceased.
The Administrator exhibited his administration account with said estate to the Court for allowance; it is therefore Ordered, That the 29th day of November, A. D. 1929, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, at the Probate Court Room in North Stonington, in said District, be, and the same is, appointed for hearing the same, and the said Administrator is directed to give notice thereof by publishing this order once in The Norwich Bulletin, a newspaper having a circulation in said District, at least 3 days prior to the date of said hearing, and make return to the Court.
CHARLES A. PALMER, Judge.
The above and foregoing is a true copy of record.
Attest, CHARLES A. PALMER, Judge.

AT A COURT OF PROBATE HELD at Norwich, within and for the District of Norwich, on the 23rd day of November, A. D. 1929.
Present, NELSON J. AYLING, Judge.
Estate of Anna H. Schelin, late of Norwich, in said District, deceased.
The Administrator appeared in Court and filed a written application alleging that said estate is now in settlement in said Court, and praying for an order to sell certain real estate belonging to said estate, fully described in said application and that some person other than the Administrator be appointed to make such sale.
Whereupon, it is Ordered, That said application be heard and determined at the Probate Court Room in the City of Norwich, in said District, on the 2nd day of December, A. D. 1929, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, and that notice of the pendency of said application, and of said hearing thereon, be given by the publication of this order once in some newspaper having a circulation in said District at least four days prior to the date of said hearing, and that return be made to the Court.
NELSON J. AYLING, Judge.
The above and foregoing is a true copy of record.
Attest, HELEN M. DRESCHER, Clerk.

GRACE E. GRAY, vs. JOHN J. GRAY.
Order of Notice.
State of Connecticut, County of New London, November 12th, 1929.
Upon the complaint of the said Grace E. Gray and asking a change of the plaintiff's name claiming for the reasons therein set forth a divorce, returnable on the first Tuesday of December, 1929, before the Superior Court in and for said County.
It appearing to and being found by the subscribing authority that the said defendant, John J. Gray, formerly of Norwich, Conn., is gone to parts unknown.
It is therefore ordered, that notice of the pendency of said complaint be given said defendant by publishing this order in the Norwich Evening Record, a newspaper printed in Norwich, Connecticut, two days successively, commencing on or before the 25th day of November, 1929.

GIVES BESSETTE JUDGMENT AGAINST INSURANCE CO.

By a decision handed down Friday by Judge Earnest C. Simpson of the superior court, Mrs. Agnes Bessette of Taftville, won her suit to compel the Fidelity and Casualty company of New York to pay a judgment for $8,000 which she secured against Frank Mader of this city for injuries she sustained when Mader's automobile ran into a group of five people on Nov. 10, 1928, as they were waiting for a trolley car in Taftville. The company carried Mr. Mader's insurance, but disputed its liability at the time of the accident claiming that the policy had been cancelled.

Judge Simpson finds the company liable for the judgment of $8,000, with costs of $69.93, plus interest from June 4, 1929, making a total of $8,294.52.

Five other judgments totalling $8,975 have been secured against the company in connection with the same accident.

In his memorandum of decision in the Bessette case Judge Simpson says in part:

The primary question in this case is whether or not the defendant company effectually cancelled the liability policy previously issued to Frank Mader by its notice of cancellation dated Oct. 24, 1928 and received by Mader on Oct. 26, 1928. I am of the opinion that it did not. While the question has never been decided in this state the great weight of authority is that where policies contain conditions for cancellation by the insurer like those in the policy in question, it is a condition that the unearned premium must at the time of the notice of the cancellation be tendered or returned to the insured. It is conceded in this case that the portion of the unearned premium was not tendered or returned to Mader at the time of the giving of the notice. For this reason the notice of cancellation was not effectual, and it follows that the policy was in full force and effect on Nov. 10, 1928, the date of the accident.

After the accident it appears that both the insured and the agents of the defendant attempted to "cover up" so to speak their previous neglect. The insured by making payments on the balance of the premium after the accident had occurred without disclosing to the defendant's agent that an accident had already happened, and the defendant, by not returning or offering to return the portion of the unearned premium to the insured, as well as the $21 paid to its agent on Nov. 10, 1928 to be applied on the balance of the premium, but by adopting the action of its agent in applying or attempting to apply the portion of the unearned premium and the $21 on a private indebtedness claimed to be due from the insured to the agent.

The further claim of the defendant that the amount actually paid on the premium was fully earned on Nov. 8, 1928 is without merit. This in itself would not cure an ineffectual attempt to cancel the policy as of Nov. 3, 1928.

Moreover it should be borne in mind that the liability of the defendant to this plaintiff is controlled by statute. Under this statute the defendant could not by express agreement with Mader effect a cancellation of the policy as of a date prior to the time the liability became absolute. Nor could a settlement with Mader as to the unearned premium effect a cancellation thereof by implication. The liability of the defendant is to be determined, therefore, by the situation at the time when the loss occurred. If the policy was in force then the liability of the defendant became fixed, and no actions of the insurance company and the assured could effect a cancellation of the policy.

In view of the foregoing, judgment must be rendered for the plaintiff.

Thanksgiving Service

The Thanksgiving service at Trinity Episcopal church will be held on Thursday morning at 10:30 o'clock. The offering taken will be for the United Workers.

RAIDS UP TO SATURDAY MIDNIGHT PROVE NEW LONDON IS NO SAHARA

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 24.—The police conducted three liquor raids Saturday afternoon and night. In two of them the raiding forces were successful in finding evidence of the law being violated, for a large quantity of beer and whiskey was seized. At the third place raided, no liquor whatever was found. Those arrested for violation of the liquor law and on two counts were Frank LaFemina, 154 Shaw street and Eugenie Conway, proprietor of the club room, 109 Main street. Both men were held for trial in the police court Monday in bail of $1000, which they furnished. At the club room were found James Laviana, Benjamin Roberts, John Harvey, James Ferris, George Nocery, Frank Moore, Sam Liviani, Rubin Cook, James Cavillaro, Joseph Kelley, William Sullivan, Joseph Joseph, Joseph Murphy, James Ruth and Frank Wood. They were arrested on charge of frequenting a club room where liquor is sold and where gambling is promoted. They furnished bonds of $50 for their court arraignment. The surety on the bands of Conway and the frequenters is I. Goldstein, New London business man.

Saturday afternoon a raiding squad, consisting of Detective Sergeant Nelson Smith, Sergeant Patrick Murphy, Automobile Patrol Officer Elwood Bailey and Patrolmen Dennis Murphy, George Laboue and Frank Linehan, went to the home of LaFamina, the officers being armed with a search warrant. Entering the house, a search revealed 27 quarts of King George whiskey, five bottles containing whiskey, 12 quarts of gin and four one-gallon jugs containing whiskey.

Saturday night when it was known that a large gathering of young men was in the Conway club room a search warrant was obtained, not only for the club room, but also for Conway's residence at 107. The raiding force was in charge of Detective Sergeant Smith and his associate raiders were Sergeant John Courtney, Automobile Patrol Officer Clarence Martin and Patrolmen Edward Skoczlas, Frank Philopena, Henry Sylvia and Arthur Feeley. Gaining entrance to the club room, two pints of whiskey were found and in Conway's residence was found 50 cases of beer, eight pints of whiskey and two gallons of alcohol. Conway has been arrested twice before this year charged with liquor law violation.

Saturday afternoon a raiding force visited the restaurant of Sophie Apanaschik, 17-19 Winthrop street, for it was claimed that liquor was being sold there. The raid, however, failed to result in the finding of beer or liquor although a diligent search was made for evidence of violation of the law.

Careless Drivers Pinched.

Several arrests for minor infractions of the law were made Saturday night and today and the men will be in court Monday. James M. Donck, 6 Forsyth street, Mystic, is charged with parking in a restricted zone on Bank street. David Rolleri, 242 Harrold avenue, Bridgeport, is charged with failing to stop at an automatic danger signal on Bank street. Joseph S. Coparo, 223 Poquonoc road, Groton, is charged with parking in a restricted zone on Pearl street and Arthur F. Champney, 58 Pleasant street, Groton, is charged with the same offense on Bank street.

JESNK DRIVING WILD RUNS INTO STEVENS' CAR

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 24.—William S. Jesnk, 23, of 49 Adelaide street, was arrested Saturday night by Patrolmen Timothy C. Sullivan and Louis Wheeler, charged with driving while under the influence of liquor. He was released upon furnishing a surety on his bond of $150 and will be in court Monday. Jesnk was driving on Bank street and at Tilley street the auto collided with a car driven by Robert Stevens, of Jefferson avenue.

J. E. Foran, 23, a sailor, was arrested Saturday night, charged with breach of the peace and intoxication and will be in court Monday. Foran went to the Garde theatre and created such a disturbance that he was arrested by Patrolman Louis Goldberg.

At 12:30 o'clock this morning William Prevost, 107 Main street, was arrested by Detective Sergeant Nelson Smith, charged with breach of the peace. Prevost furnished a surety on his bond of $50 and will explain in court Monday.

Harry Keeney, of Old Mystic, has made complaint to the New London police because of boys maliciously disfiguring his automobile Wednesday night last while the car was parked in front of the residence, 193 Hillman street.

MRS. RAMANONAK AND SON STILL ON THE DANGER LIST

Mrs. Julia Ramanonak, 38, of 315 West Main street and her son, James, 5, continue to be patients at Lawrence Memorial hospital in a critical condition as a result of the injuries sustained Friday afternoon when the automobile in which they were riding and which was driven by John Sek, also of Norwich, crashed against a telephone pole. Mrs. Ramanonak received a fractured skull, a crushed chest and body bruises, while her son sustained a fractured skull and bruises. At the hospital today it was stated that there was no change in the condition of the patients.

Miss Minnie Philopena, of 362 Shaw street; Mrs. Rodman Lynch and infant son, 78 Washington street; Miss Cynthia Walker, 42 Vauxhall street; Mrs. Albert Wheeler, 91 West Mystic avenue, Mystic; Wallace Jennings, Waterford; Jack Delmonte, 15 Jefferson avenue; Mrs. Rex Buck, Crystal Lake road, Groton, and Mrs. William Kay, Eiderkin avenue, Groton, patients at Lawrence Memorial hospital, were discharged Saturday.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Magor Miller

Mrs. Loretta Miller, 83, widow of Magor Miller, died Friday night at her residence, 23 Douglass street. She had long been ill. Mrs. Miller is survived by a sister, Mrs. Rachel Hicks.

GEORGE E. WEST DEAD—MEMBER OF NORWICH LODGES

George E. West, 64, died Friday night at his residence, 594 Bank street. He is survived by his wife, a son, George H. West, of Groton; two sisters, Mrs. Maryanna Tresily and Dr. Helen West, Meriden, and by his mother, Mrs. Marian B. West, also of Meriden. Mr. West was a member of many fraternal and benefit societies. He was a past noble grand of Uncas lodge, I. O. O. F., Norwich, past patriarch, Palmyra Encampment, Norwich; Union lodge, No. 31, F. & A. M.; Union chapter, No. 7; Cushing council, No. 4; Palestine Commandery, No. 6, and Pyramid temple, all of New London; King Solomon lodge of Perfection, Bridgeport; Van Rensalaer council, Princes of Jerusalem; Norwich chapter of Rose Croix; Connecticut consistory, Norwich; Fidelity chapter, Order of Eastern Star and Jessamine council, Order of Amaranth, this city, and the Cable club and New England order of Railroad Veterans. Mr. West was employed for 54 years by the New Haven railroad and his last employment was as yard clerk at Midway. He was born in Plainfield July 22, 1865. He married Adelaide M. Fuller, in Norwich, March, 1891.

The funeral was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at Brainard lodge temple and was attended by a large number of mourners. Burial was in Jordan cemetery.

Lucien Collart, New York, was in the East Lyme justice court Friday, charged with failing to grant right of way and was fined $10 and costs. Collart was driving on Niantic hill and left traffic in an endeavor to pass other cars and in doing so he encountered autos approaching from the opposite direction. When Collart endeavored to get back in traffic, his auto collided with a machine driven by Philip Geer, New Jersey, and in which was Mrs. Geer. The latter sustained slight bruises. Collart was arrested by State Police Officer Peter Busch.

John Guerra, of Shaw street, employed by the state highway department, sustained a fractured right leg and lacerations of the elbow and fingers Saturday when he was struck by the bucket of a cement mixer while at his work in East Lyme. He was brought to New London and taken to Lawrence Memorial hospital for treatment.

To Sell Building For $12,000

A bond has been filed for record at the office of the city clerk, which assures the sale of the brick building, corner of Jefferson avenue and West Coit street owned by Nora E. Sauter of Cheshire, to Guy F. Radway, of Waterford, on or before March 4, 1930. The price Radway will pay for the building is $12,000. The building was formerly used for the manufacture of soda water and will, it is understood, be converted into a creamery by the purchaser.

Fined For Perjury

Arthur Perry, 54 Howard street, was in the police court Saturday, charged with perjury. He pleaded guilty and was fined $50, but execution of sentence was suspended. Perry, who was arrested Friday by State Police Officer James Dygert, recently applied for a driver's license to the motor vehicle department and in his affidavit declared that he had never been arrested. He was apprehended on a charge of manslaughter about 12 months ago when the car he was driving struck and fatally injured a child on Broad street.

George O. Wright, 54, residing at 316 State street, was charged with violation of the state statute, prohibiting the practice of chiropody without obtaining a license to do so. The case was continued to Dec. 7. Wright, who is a nurse, furnished a surety on his bond of $200.

Tony Bagtallia, charged with non-support, was sentenced to 30 days in jail, but execution of the sentence was suspended upon Bagtallia's promise to pay $5 weekly to Probation Officer Richard W. Mansfield, which money will go toward the support of Mrs. Bagtallia.

The continued case of Henry Crociochia, 75 Howard street, charged with violation of the state motor vehicle law in driving with improper markers, was nolled. Crociochia was detected driving an automobile with markers that had been loaned him.

CORTICELLI PROMOTIONS ANNOUNCED AT WEEK END

Three promotions have taken place in the mills of the Corticelli Silk Co., in this city and Northampton, Mass. Robert L. Smith, formerly assistant plant manager, has been made plant manager to succeed J. P. T. Armstrong, who is now president of the company. Mr. Smith will spend part of his time here and part in Northampton, where the company operates 11 mills. Thomas B. Congdon has been made assistant to Mr. Smith in New London and Orville T. Colby, assistant to Mr. Smith in Northampton. Although President Armstrong will continue to make his home in New London, much of his time will now be spent in New York.

RUSSO HELD FOR TRIAL—NOW IN NEW LONDON JAIL

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 24.—John Russo, Newark, N. J., robber, who was arrested in that city several days ago and who was returned to New London Friday, was tried in the justice court at Colchester Saturday charged with breaking and entering. He was held for trial at the next term of the superior court and in default of bail, was committed to New London county jail. Russo and two companions last June robbed two Colchester garages, stealing two automobiles and then forced entrance to Cohen's mill, where they stole several thousand dollars' worth of raw silk. The other two robbers have been captured and sentenced, one being committed to state's prison at Wethersfield and the other to the reformatory at Cheshire.

VISITING N. Y. POLICE APPRECIATE COURTESIES

The following letter has been received by Lieut. James C. Sullivan from Captain John Reddan of the 23rd Precinct, New York, who was in command of the visiting police officers:

"On behalf of the members of this command and the members of the bereaved family of Patrolman John J. Duffy, I wish to extend to you, and through you, to the other members of your splendid department, our most sincere thanks for the great courtesy, local cooperation and the bountiful generosity which you all so gratefully and cheerfully tendered to us upon our arrival at, and during our brief sojourn in your beautiful city Wednesday.

"You certainly conferred a great honor upon us by having such a large number of your patrolmen, both on foot and motorcycle, in charge of that very capable officer, Sergeant Murphy, lead the funeral procession of our late heroic comrade from the New London railroad station to St. Mary's cemetery, where in conjunction with us, they very solemnly and reverently paid their last respect to our dearly Beloved and honored hero.

"Also, you and your men went to great trouble and expense by having several taxicabs and special trolley cars await us in order to convey us speedily back to the local hotel where a very elaborate and delicious lunch was ready for us, which I can assure you, we very much enjoyed.

"Will you please be so kind as to convey to the officers of the cab company and the Connecticut trolley company and last, but not least, our honorable friend, Mr. 'Leary, our sincere thanks and deep appreciation for the great favor they rendered us by supplying us with transportation and refreshments.

"In passing I wish to impress upon you that while our visit to your hospitable city was on a very sorrowful and mournful occasion, yet, despite that fact, the great courtesy and very friendly and brotherly love that you and your amiable officers extended to us, transformed it from one of sorrow and sadness into a visit which we deeply appreciate.

"In conclusion, I wish again to thank you for the great hospitality and cordial reception, which you tendered us, which we will long remember and deeply cherish and please rest assured that should you or any member of the New London department visit the 23rd Precinct in New York city we shall be only too willing to reciprocate your great kindness.

"Wishing you and your brother officers the best success with the full measure of good health, happiness and prosperity, I am

Yours very sincerely,
JOHN REDDAN,
Captain 23rd Precinct."

OBITUARY.

Hugh McGovern.

Hugh McGovern, about 65, died Saturday at his residence on Bank street, after a brief illness. He is survived by his wife and several children. Mrs. McGovern was for many years employed by the New Haven railroad as telegrapher and until illness incapacitated Mr. McGovern, he was employed as towerman at Waterford station.

Special Masonic Service.

Special Masonic services were held at the First Congregational church Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock when Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth delivered a special sermon. This service was in conjunction with the Sunday before Thanksgiving meeting being held throughout Connecticut at the request of Pyramid temple, Ancient and Arabic Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine.

Edward S. Neilan, vice president of New London council, Boy Scouts, urged the scouts of Troop No. 10 of St. Mary's church, to advance in scout work in a talk before the boys at their regular meeting at its week end.

Edited By Howard Palmer.

The New London County Historical society has just distributed to its members an attractive volume containing the narrative of a voyage from New London to Desolation Island in 1851, entitled Life on a Whaler, by Nathaniel W. Taylor. It is edited by Howard Palmer, a vice president of the society, son of George S. Palmer, and a former Norwich resident. Mr. Palmer also supplies an introduction dealing with the whaling industry of that period in New London.

The membership drive of the Boys' division of the New London Y. M. C. A. has resulted in forty-three new names being added to the junior and intermediate classes. With four divisions of ten fellows striving for first place in the contest, the results to date are very gratifying. The standing of the teams follows:

Captain Daniel Hendel 3, Harold Branche 2, Tom Frusher, 3rd, 2, Lawrence Peck 3, Thomas Quinn 3, Robert Reilley 0, Merrill Soltz 1, Louis Steinberg 1, Clifford Sullivan 0, Richard Woodworth 0, total 16.

Captain Kell Rose 0, Irving Bronitsky 2, William C. Dodge, Jr., 1, John Dwyer 2, Milton Gordon 1, Harold Hansen 1, Henry Hansen 0, Morton Jeffers 2, Albert St. Germain 0, Stanfield Taylor 1, total 11.

Captain Herbert Vogt 0, Robert Y. Cary 0, William Davis 2, Albert D'Elia 0, Pericles Halefitiras 0, John Hemingway 0, Frederick Keefe, Jr. 3, Joseph Rinoski 1, Morgan C. Smith 0, Z. Waters White 2, total 8.

Captain Leonard Cooper 1, Gerald Abernethy 1, Robert Acker 0, Chester H. Colby 0, Lawrence Hendel 0, Walter Kule, Jr 3, Albert Peck 0, Charles Quarry 2, Daniel Schwartz 0, Frederick Vogt 1, total 8.

In addition to the assistance each new member gives to the team, the individual bringing in another gets credit toward the award of his emblem pin. Thus far one ten-point pin has been won, and two five-point pins, while a number of boys have three and four points to their credit. The points thus secured are cumulative, holding over from year to year, so that a boy goes on adding to the total each year.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Conn. College Concert

The Roth quartet is made up of four players all of whom might easily be virtuosi should they choose to be, but luckily they all are of the same mind in their love of quartet playing, and they delight in their mutual successes. Few quartets, if any, have been so fortunate in their makeup as the Roth, for all are young men, three of them Hungarians and the fourth a Hollander. In meeting them apart from their music one would marvel at the comradeship of these four, and in their playing one sense the unity, and good feeling which prevails at all times.

The modesty of this ensemble is at once overwhelming. Directly following their American debut and before they had left the stage, there happened one of the most sensational ovations ever given to any one. Musicians well known to all music lovers stood and applauded them, some of them raising their voices considerably to add to the noise and applause, but, when spoken tot concerning their tremendous success, they replied, "We enjoy that music, too."

It is with the greatest of interest that the local music lovers await the appearance of this remarkable organization tomorrow evening in New London.

Palace Theatre

With the football season now raging at its final climax, what an opportune time it is to bring to Norwich that spectacular college drama, "The Forward Pass," starring Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Loretta Young! The Palace theatre, sensing the interest in the gridiron game at this time, made plans to make this great all-sound, all-talking film available for its patrons at the time when they would most enjoy it. It is now at the Palace and will be continued there through Tuesday evening.

Football honors may have inclined westward a bit last season, but Broadway chorus girls, in Hollywood to glorify themselves and the American cinema, took away all honors in high kicking recently.

The contest was held between the mighty U. S. C. football team of last year, which played in "The Forward Pass," and forty-eight shapely chorines on contract to the same studio.

The chorus girls kicked 2 feet 2 inches above their heads, on an average.

The football team, consisting of the eleven and five substitutes as well as Jeff Cravath, former All-American center and now coach at Denver university, kicked only 1 foot 10 inches above the head.

The highest chorus kick was 3 feet 8 inches, accomplished by an acrobatic dancer, Florine Dalzell. The top kick by a pigskin warrior was Jeff Cravath's 3 feet 1 inch.

A special measuring device used in testing chorus kicking was utilized. It registers the elevation of head and toe simultaneously.

A Thanksgiving treat will be had by all at the Palace the last half of the week as we are presenting for the first time a double feature, 100 per cent, talking bill, Lucky in Love, starring Morton Downey and In the Headlines, the first all-talking drama of newspaper life. Don't forget, Tuesday night is turkey night. Join the fun and take home our Thanksgiving turkey.

Broadway Theatre

"Ef ya wanta call me that—smile!" that historic remark that has thrilled audiences for many years on the legitimate stage and not so many years ago in the old "legit" days at the Broadway, is again thrilling spellbound patrons of the Broadway in the all-talking screen version of "The Virginian," Owen Wister's epic novel of the old West. Days on the old cattle frontier are faithfully reproduced, with the trail herds on the move, with their cowboy guards, the old time hotel and gambling hall, the battered railroad station with one of the original Union Pacific "wood-burnin' injines," the "christenin' dance" with all its hilarity, and the famous gun-duel at sundown between the Virginian and his rival, the rustler Trampas. An ideal cast portrays the characters, with Gary Cooper as the lanky Southerner, Walter Huston as Trampas, and with Mary Brian, Richard Arlen, Eugene Pallette, E. H. Calvert, Chester Conklin and a host of favorites living the roles they play. Excitement runs high from start to finish in this great picture which begins where "The Covered Wagon" left off. The Talking Collegians in "Graduation Daze," the latest Paramount Sound News and the "Singin' Hoboes" in "Travelin' Along," complete a most enjoyable program. In preparation for Wednesday's opening is the big all-talking production "The Broadway Scandals," which the Broadway is fortunate to secure at the same time as the New York showing at $2 prices. Sally O'Neil, Jack Egan and Carmel Myers head a big cast of singing and dancing musical comedy artists in a production at once tuneful and sumptuous. An early showing of "The Hollywood Revue," and "The Great Gabbo," two of the 1929-30 season's outstanding successes, is promised by the Broadway.

Breed Theatre

Carrying with him into pictures all the lovable and comic spirit which Broadway remembers from his triumphant run in "The Jazz Singer" and "The War Song," and the rest of the country knows from his years in vaudeville, George Jessel is revealed in "Lucky Boy," the Tiffany-Stahl production which opened yesterday at the Breed theatre, as richly deserving of screen fame as well.

"Lucky Boy," which was written for the comedian by Viola Brothers Shore, follows the rise of a Jewish boy from New York's East Side to the attainment of national fame as a night club singer and artist. The story, in fact, is somewhat similar to Jessel's own career.

In "Lucky Boy," Jessel sings five songs. They are "My Mother's Eyes," the theme song especially written for Jessel and "Lucky Boy," by L. Wolfe Gilbert and Abel Baer, "Old Man Sunshine," "My Blackbirds Are Bluebirds Now," "My Real Sweetheart" and "Bouquet of Memories."

Hate of Broadcloth.

PARIS, Nov. 24—(AP)—Broadcloth and wool velour hats made from the same material as coats and ensembles are a new phase of milliners' activity here. The cloth hats are treated with a special kind of liquid gum to prevent them from stretching.

FOLLERIN' THE BAND
WHO hasn't "follered" the band up Main street, or up Broadway or Michigan boulevard? Heart pumping joyously, feet beating the ground in time! Grandly intoxicating moment of childhood!
And—later in life—who hasn't felt a thrill as the conductor lifted his baton for the overture to begin? A moment pregnant with the glamour of the theatre! Music casts its spell throughout all the Ages of Man.
Is it wise then, in this enlightened and prosperous day to countenance substitution of a shadow of music for the real thing in the theatre?
Imagine the Irish following a Music Box on St. Patrick's Day! Or fife and drum music by a Machine on Memorial Day! Incongruous? Of course, but not more so than a mechanical overture in the theatre.
Talking pictures—a new dramatic form; the radio—which transmits music directly and DOES reflect the artist's mood of the moment; the phonograph in the home—where living music usually is not available—are not at issue here. We are discussing only the SUBSTITUTION OF MECHANICAL MUSIC FOR REAL MUSIC IN THE THEATRE, in consequence of which Real Music is being eliminated in theatres.

Needless Pain!
Some folks take pain for granted.
They let a cold "run its course."
They wait for their headaches to "wear off."
If suffering from neuralgia or from neuritis, they rely on feeling better in the morning.
Meantime, they suffer unnecessary pain. Unnecessary, because there is an antidote. Bayer Aspirin always offers immediate relief from various aches and pains we once had to endure. If pain persists, consult your doctor as to its cause.
Save yourself a lot of pain and discomfort through the many uses of Bayer Aspirin. Protect yourself by buying the genuine. Bayer is safe. Always the same. All druggists.

The Bulletin.

Norwich, Monday, Nov. 25, 1929

THE WEATHER

Conditions

The disturbance that was centered off the North Carolina coast Saturday has moved northeastward over the ocean. The disturbance that was over North Dakota has moved eastward to Ontario and western Quebec. High pressure prevails over Newfoundland, and over most of the United States.

Except for light local snows in portions of northern New England and northern New York, generally fair weather will prevail Monday in the Washington forecast district. Snow is probable in northern New England and northern New York, and light rain in the middle Atlantic states and southern New England by Tuesday afternoon or night.

The temperature will rise in the middle Atlantic and south Atlantic states Monday and Tuesday but it will be somewhat lower Monday and Monday night in northern New York and northern New England.

Winds

North of Sandy Hook: Moderate fresh shifting winds becoming western and partly overcast weather preceded by rain or snow over north portion.

Sandy Hook to Hatteras: Moderate to fresh west or northwest winds and fair weather Monday.

Forecast

For Southern New England: Generally fair Monday, somewhat colder Monday night; Tuesday increasing cloudiness; rain or snow Tuesday night.

Observations

The Bulletin's observations show the following changes in temperature and barometric changes Saturday and Sunday:

Saturday:	Ther.	Bar.
7 a. m.	20	30.60
12 m.	36	30.50
6 p. m.	30	30.40

Highest, 36; lowest, 20.

Sunday:	Ther.	Bar.
7 a. m.	26	30.30
12 m.	40	30.20
6 p. m.	36	30.00

Highest, 40; lowest, 26.

Comparisons

Predictions for Saturday and Sunday: Cloudy, probably occasional snow or rain; little change in temperature.

Saturday's weather: Fair, not quite so cold.

Sunday's weather: Cloudy and threatening, southeast wind, slightly warmer; rain in late afternoon and evening.

GREENEVILLE

At a whist and pinochle held at the home of Mrs. Charles Perry of Boswell avenue with ten tables of cards in play, Miss Margaret Reid won first prize in whist and Miss Helen Drescher was awarded second prize; Miss Elizabeth Lanz, consolation. Mr. Davis won the first gent's prize with second to Albert Burdick; Howard Gordon, consolation. In pinochle Mrs. James Service won first prize and Mrs. John Hall second; Mrs. Elmer J. Flynn, consolation. James Service won first gent's prize, William Banfield second, and Charles Perry consolation. The party was given by Mrs. Charles Perry and Mrs. John Telford. The proceeds of the successful card party will be added to the treasury of St. Andrew's Episcopal church.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. William P. Barwell.

The death of Mrs. William P. Barwell occurred at the home of her son, George Barwell, 259 Central avenue, Saturday morning at 2 o'clock. Her death was caused by a shock from which she failed to rally. Mrs. Barwell had previously been in good health.

She was born in North Hampton, England, January 29, 1867, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hudson. The family has resided in Greeneville for the past 35 years and during that time Mrs. Barwell has been a devoted member of St. Andrew's Episcopal church. Surviving are her husband and two sons, John, of Hartford, and George, of Greeneville. Mrs. Barwell was a loving wife, a kind mother and a most respectful neighbor, ready to serve and aid anyone in trouble. Her death was a shock to her many friends in this community who extend their heartfelt sympathy to the immediate members of the family in their bereavement.

FUNERAL.

Miss Ellen Kilrow.

Saturday morning the funeral of Miss Ellen Kilrow was held from the home of her brother, James T. Kilrow, 311 Boswell avenue, at 8.15 o'clock, followed by a solemn mass of requiem at 9 o'clock at St. Mary's Memorial church. The celebrant of the mass was Rev. William A. Keefe, the pastor, assisted by Rev. John J. Reilly as deacon and Rev. Frederick M. Coholan as sub-deacon. Mrs. Michael J. Farrell was at the organ and Mrs. Josie Hartie was the soloist. At the offertory Miss Hartie sang Pie Jesu and as a waiting hymn, When Evening Comes. Chopin's Funeral March was played at the recessional. Burial was in the family plot in St. Mary's cemetery and Rev. Father Coholan conducted the committal service. George Nolan, Nicholas Doyle, William Malone, M. V. Murphy, George Dolan, and John Quinley, acted as bearers. The services were well attended and there were many beautiful floral tributes. Included in the attendance were mourners from Newark, N. J., and Boston and New York city. The funeral arrangements were in charge of Undertaker Cummings and Ring.

Requiem Masses Offered.

In keeping with Rev. William A. Keefe's intention at different intervals during the year to remember the deceased benefactors whose names appear on the walls of St. Mary's Memorial church in the offering of the holy sacrifice of the mass, the November mass for this intention was celebrated Monday morning of last week at 7.30 o'clock. Saturday morning at 7.30 Rev. Frederick M. Coholan offered an anniversary mass of requiem for the deceased members of the family of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Fitzgerald. Music for both masses was in charge of Mrs. Michael J. Farrell, church organist.

Miss Catherine Berson has returned to her home on Fifth street after spending the week end at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Berson, of Waterbury.

The Woman's guild of St. Andrew's Episcopal church held a very largely attended meeting Thursday at the home of Mrs. James Johnson of Boswell avenue. Mrs. Johnson served a very dainty lunch.

Thanksgiving Day Services.

On Thanksgiving day divine services will be held at St. Andrew's Episcopal church at 10 a. m. conducted by the rector, Rev. E. J. Norris.

William Carroll of Waterbury is spending a few days with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Carroll of Wowry avenue.

A card party was held at the home of Mrs. Joseph Woolley on North Main street in honor of her daughter, Maude Woolley's birthday. Following cards a social hour was enjoyed with vocal and piano solos being rendered. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Woolley and Maude Woolley.

Mrs. Jane Suplicki, a student at the Willimantic Normal school spent the week end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Suplicki of Golden street.

MADE THANKSGIVING CONTRIBUTIONS AT CENTRAL BAPTIST SERVICE

A programme of special music was rendered by the church choir, augmented by Miss Jessie Guthrie of New London, who carried the solo parts, at the evening service Sunday evening at the Central Baptist church. Miss Guthrie, who has studied in London and is now studying in New York city, was in beautiful voice, singing in rich and sweet tone and understanding of the solo portions of the hymns. After the service many were the favorable comments heard upon her splendid work.

The choir members are Mrs. Olive A. Potter, contralto; Frank Steinke, baritone, and Fred J. Maples, tenor and director. Miss Louise Fuller was at the organ. The numbers sung include "Light of the World" by Stearns, "Hear, O My People" by Stevensen, and "Cast Thy Burden on the Lord," by Hamblin.

Decorations at the church were baskets of fruit and vegetables, which were distributed among needy families after the service.

In a brief Thanksgiving message, the pastor, Rev. David A. Pitt, D.D., spoke upon the topic, America Blessed and a Blessing, basing his sermon upon the scripture words, I will bless thee and be thou a blessing. The pastor spoke of the blessings that the people enjoy in this country, as contrasted with the rest of the world, and went on to say that we need to believe with all our hearts that He loves the world with the love of God. Jesus Christ came and loved and served for the whole world, and that when He called upon you He called us with the interest of the whole world. If I am an intelligent follower of God, the pastor said, I am working for the interests of the whole world.

Those who were born under the Stars and Stripes don't half appreciate the country, continued the pastor. You ought to have been born in another country with many handicaps and you would appreciate this country better. In speaking of the contributions of the country he said that the United States is great because of peace. I think we ought to thank God he said, because we have a man like Herbert Hoover at the helm now. I believe we as good Christians and good Americans should thank God for this man He has raised up for this year.

The pastor made the announcement that two prominent lawyers are to meet in debate at the church Sunday evening under the auspices of the Woman's Crusade of the W. C. T. U. The subject will be, Resolved: That the 18th amendment is contrary to the spirit of the American Constitution. The other announcement was that the church would hold a Thanksgiving social Friday evening.

CLYDE BURROWS BACK FROM EUROPEAN TOUR

Fresh from a series of triumphs in Germany, Clyde Burrows, eminent American baritone, former National league baseball star and all-southern athlete arrived at New York last week on the liner Dresden. He is shortly to start on a countryside concert tour.

Burrows, who sings in 12 languages, including Esperanto, in which language he was the first to sing in this country, is a native of Mystic, this state. A graduate of Mercer college, Macon, Georgia, where he was star pitcher, he was in 1910 named by Heismann, the Walter Camp of the south, as a member of the All-Southern baseball team, selected from the leading colleges of the south. During 1912 and 1913 he played with the Pittsburgh Pirates, and was later farmed out to Holyoke, under Dan O'Neill, in the old Connecticut state league. He was transferred to the New England league later on, and pitched for Lawrence, and later for Lowell.

Burrows was hailed in Berlin, in Dresden, as "a supreme interpreter of songs," "a cosmopolitan among singers." The former baseball star sang in English, French, German, Italian and the Slavonic tongues, and was given one of the most extraordinary receptions ever accorded an American in Germany.

"Back in my school days in Mystic, my ambition in life was to sing well enough to win a position in the church choir," said Burrows. "I had a certain lyrical ability as a boy, but dropped singing to take up baseball. After the unusual welcome I got in Germany I am definitely through with sports. From now on I will devote all my time to concert work."

ARE TO CELEBRATE THEIR GOLDEN WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. Frank M. Chapman of 41 Broad street, Groton, will observe the 50th anniversary of their wedding Tuesday when they will receive friends from 3 o'clock in the afternoon until 9 o'clock at their home.

Mr. and Mrs. Chapman were married at Groton, Nov. 26, 1879, by Rev. Mr. Goodrich, a Methodist minister. Mrs. Chapman, who was Miss Clara M. Denison, was born at Groton 70 years ago. Mr. Chapman was born in Ledyard 71 years ago. The couple have lived in Groton and vicinity all their lives.

They have four sons, Denison I. Chapman of New Haven, Robert A. Chapman of Mystic, Vine S. Chapman of New York and Frank H. Chapman of New Haven, and two daughters, Mrs. Clayton Chappell of Noank and Mrs. Harry J. Nellan of Groton. There are eight grandchildren.

Mr. Chapman served as purser on Groton-New London ferries for more than 30 years. He started his work when the service was conducted by the partnership of Walter R. Denison, Benjamin A. Armstrong, W. R. Perry and Frederick Sherman. He concluded his work when the ferry service was discontinued recently.

Girls' City Club Met.

The Girls' City club, under the auspices of the Woman's City club, held another interesting meeting at the club room at 9 Washington street last Friday evening. Three new girls were added to the membership list. At this meeting the girls took up the making of pretty Christmas girts and they are very enthusiastic about this new activity. After an hour of handicraft, a period of recreation took place during which folk dances and songs, under the direction of Mrs. W. B. McKean, were enjoyed by the girls and refreshments served by the committee. The next meeting will be held on Friday evening, Nov. 29, at 7.30 to which all girls between the ages of 13 and 21 are invited by the officers.

Fine Was For Speeding

A fine imposed upon Woodrow Gulle in the city court Thursday morning was for speeding. Through error it was reported that the fine was for reckless driving.

MOOSE HAD 18 IN CLASS FOR INITIATION

A class of 18 candidates was initiated late Sunday afternoon by Norwich lodge, No. 950, L. O. O. M., at the Moose home on Laurel Hill avenue. The initiation took place at 4:30 o'clock in the lodge room, under the direction of Dictator Bernard Wunderlick. Carl Peterson, (Chief Uncas) was selected to represent the class in the initiation ceremony. Later, Mr. Peterson entertained the large attendance with an Indian was dance, assisted by Teddy Taylor who used a tom tom which has been in Mr. Peterson's family for 91 years.

After the initiation, Dictator Wunderlich announced that if the members will secure a class of 75 candidates for New Year's eve he will guarantee to have Supreme Dictator Ladner of Philadelphia come to Norwich to conduct the initiation.

Secretary Rudolph Krohn spoke in an interesting manner on Mooseheart and Moosehaven. Herbert Koonz spoke on the progress made by Norwich lodge and gave a ten-minute talk to the newly initiated candidates. George Emback gave an interesting talk on the second degree. After the business meeting a buffet luncheon was served and was followed by a delightful entertainment provided by a troupe of three young women and two men from the Hartford entertainment bureau. The programme comprised vocal solos, quartette numbers, dance specialties and humorous stories.

NORTH WINDHAM GIRL IS ESSAY PRIZE WINNER

Pauline Landeck of North Windham is the first prize winner in Connecticut in essay competition on street and highway safety, promoted by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce and open to the younger members of the grange. She will receive a prize of $5 and a silver medal.

Laura Maquat, of Bridgeport, and Avis Main, of Waterbury, rank next in order and will receive bronze medals.

The contest, in which members of the organization up to the age of 16 years could participate, was open to members of all the 8,000 subsidiary granges in the more than 30 states in which the organization exists. The next contest will be held in 1930.

SURPRISE FOR TWENTY-FIFTH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Robinson of 145 Maple street were pleasantly surprised Sunday in honor of their 25th wedding anniversary. About 50 friends and relatives called upon them, presenting many beautiful gifts in silver and wishing them many more happy anniversaries. Those from out of town included friends from Northfield, Bridgeport, New Haven and New London.

TAFTVILLE

Wilfred Linderson has returned to Bridgeport after a week-end visit with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Linderson, of North Third avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Heselton and children, Kendall and Revela, of North B street spent the week end with relatives in Killingly.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Laramie of Plainfield were week-end guests of Mr. Laramie's brother-in-law and sisters, Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Smith and Miss Lillian Laramie, of North B street.

The Misses Catherine and Cecelia O'Farrell of Fall River, Mass., former Taftville residents, have been visiting friends in the village this past week.

As on former evenings, there was a satisfactory attendance at the carnival given by the two branches of the Children of Mary sodality, Saturday evening, at St. Theresa's hall. The carnival, which has been held for several evenings, is to come to a close this week.

Miss Helen C. Aberg of North Third avenue has returned from Mansfield, where she has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Porter Staebner.

Harold E. Linderson of Centerville, R. I., spent the week end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Yerrington and family of South Second avenue.

PROVIDENCE BAKERY OVEN STARTS ANOTHER FIRE

The second fire within a week broke out at the Providence bakery, No. 82 Franklin street, Emil M. Fox, proprietor, about 10 o'clock Sunday evening, which was such a stubborn blaze that the firemen fought it for about an hour before it was put out. The blaze was again caused from an overheated oven and originated under the same oven as in the first fire, when damage to an estimated amount of $10,000 was done. How much damage was done in this fire has not yet been determined.

The blaze was discovered about 10 o'clock in the evening by Howard Ludlow, a baker, who went into the place as is his usual custom, to inspect the oven fires. He was greeted with a large volume of smoke issuing from beneath the oven and quickly ran to the central fire station through Chestnut street to give the alarm. Squad A with Chief Henry R. Taft and Deputy Chief Dennis Brennan responded to the oral alarm, and used 31 gallons of chemical to subdue the flames, which started to burn a hole through the flooring.

Fire officials stated Sunday evening that the fire was started because of the close proximity of the oven to the floor. The first fire occurred at the bakery early last Monday evening and was discovered by Officer Luke Riley, who was trying out the doors in the building.

LIQUOR CASES DUE FOR MONDAY COURT SESSION

A score of liquor violation cases are scheduled for trial in the city court this (Monday) morning. In addition, several minor cases, including one or two auto law violation charges, are due for trial. The liquor law cases are those which were continued by the court last Wednesday morning, all of the accused, with the exception of one, having been arrested in the police hall on alleged local liquor joints last Tuesday evening. When the cases were called last Wednesday morning a continuance until Monday was granted as the state was at that time not fully prepared to present its evidence against the accused men and women.

NORWICH TOWN

THANKSGIVING SERVICES HELD SUNDAY AT M. E. CHURCH

Thanksgiving was the theme of the day in all the services at the Methodist Episcopal church Sunday. In the morning the pastor, Rev. George Warren Potter preached a Thanksgiving sermon from the text Leviticus 27:30 "all the tithes of the land, whether of the seed, of the land, or the fruit of the tree is the Lord's. It is holy unto the Lord." The junior choir under direction of Mrs. Lewis Aldrich sang an anthem.

The C. E. society meeting was led by William Weaver who gave an interesting talk on "Thanksgiving Through Thanks Living."

Following the session of the church school a board meeting was held and committees for Christmas were elected. For the Christmas tree entertainment, Mrs. Richard Carter was elected chairman and given the power to select her committee. Doris Rose and Virginia Ward were elected soliciting committee, Mrs. Reginald Ward, Mrs. Lewis E. Aldrich and Mrs. Richard Carter, committee to purchase gifts, Stanton W. Brown committee to secure a tree. Theb oard voted to hold the exercises Christmas night.

Plans are practically completed for a minstrel to be given for the benefit of the Sacred Heart church, Norwich Town.

GRANGE MEMBERS ATTEND STEREOPTICON LECTURE

There was a congregation of about 120 Sunday night at the Methodist Episcopal church when the pastor, Rev. George Warren Potter delivered a stereopticon lecture on "Farms and the Man." Members of the Norwich grange were special guests. The Junior choir, under direction of Doris Rose, sang a special selection. The stereopticon machine was operated by Ralph Smith and about 60 pictures were shown. Boy Scouts Leon Ladd, Earl Robinson, Frederick Ross, Edward Gallagher and Donald Olsen were on duty in uniform as ushers.

11 FARM REPRESENTATIVES AT WHITE HOUSE PARLEY

National Agricultural Organizations Pledge Support to President Hoover in His Program For Industrial Stablization —In Turn They Demanded That the Farmers Receive Lower Interest Rates From the Government Credit Agencies.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.— (AP) — Representatives of the national agricultural organizations pledged support to President Hoover today in his program for industrial stabilization, and in turn demanded that the farmers receive lower interest rates from the government credit agencies.

The matter of interest rates took up much of the two hours of plain talk the leaders of the National Grange, the Farmers' union, the American Farm Bureau federation and the Farmer's Equity union had with the chief executive in the cabinet room.

The agricultural conferees voiced satisfaction with the outcome, but whether they won their point was left both by them and by a statement subsequently issued at the white house entirely within the realm of conjecture.

This statement, for which Secretary Hyde became sponsor, said the farm leaders "felt that a concerted action by the credit agencies of the government is now possible, and that such action would reflect back to agriculture the lower interest rate" which has followed the break in stock market prices.

Another demand by the agricultural leaders was for an immediate extension of the road program, with special agriculture by lowering marketing costs.

Each of the 11 farm representatives present was given opportunity to express his views. In most cases these had to do in part with the disparity in interest rates in different sections of the country, and more particularly between the great industrial and agricultural regions.

The credit agencies of the government which the farmers hold should act in concert to lower interest rates are the Federal Land banks, the Federal Intermediate Credit banks and the Federal Farm board, which has or will have at its disposal half a billion dollars.

The statement issued at the white house, and agreed upon at the conference, follows:

"The secretary of agriculture said: "The representatives of the four national agricultural organizations canvassed the situation with the president. As representing such organizations they expressed themselves in hearty accord with the president's program for stabilizing the general industrial situation and securing the continuance of prosperity.

"The representatives assembled considered that agriculture was suffering and is now suffering to some extent from high interest rates induced by the absorption of credit for speculative purposes. They felt that a concerted action by the credit agencies of the government is now possible and that such action would reflect back to agriculture the lower interest rate. It was also the opinion of the conferees that the savings which might thus be made to agriculture by the lower interest rates would immediately be reflected back into the markets through the purchase of necessary equipment and supplies for the farm.

"The conferees also favored an immediate extension of the road program with special emphasis on farm-to-market roads. The opinion also was expressed that agricultural prices which had suffered in sympathetic action in the stock market have now begun to recover and that the efforts of the farm board in stabilizing those prices have been very helpful.

"The representatives of agriculture present also pledged support to cooperate in every possible way in the support of the president's program for stabilizing the industrial situation and mobilizing the economic power of agriculture."

GOVERNORS PROMISE TO CO-OPERATE WITH HOOVER

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—(AP)—Responses received today by President Hoover from a little less than half of the state governors to whom he appealed Saturday for co-operation in the present disturbed situation enabled him to envision a vast army of workers engaged upon accelerated programs of state, municipal and county construction.

Ten of the 22 executives who either had communicated with the white house directly or made statements for newspapers gave precise figures of the programs in their state which amounted to approximately $375,000,000. This figure was considered surprisingly large for less than a fourth of the country and exclusive of New York.

Governor Roosevelt telegraphed that his first recommendation to the Empire state legislature would be a building program for hospitals and prisons as extensive as possible without increasing taxation. Previously Mayor Walker had announced a huge building program for New York city exclusive of state funds.

There was only one dissenting voice among the governors, that of Bulow, of South Dakota, who was quoted in press despatches as having said that the remedy proposed "to me would only furnish temporary relief, postpone the agony and effect no permanent cure."

CLEMENCEAU BURIED WITH THE UTMOST SIMPLICITY

PARIS, Nov. 25.—(AP)—Former Premier George Clemenceau today was buried in his beloved Vendee with the utmost simplicity, but all France seemed determined to make his memory imperishable and forever ranking among the great figures of France.

At the very time when his coffin was being lowered into its grave near Mouchamps beside that of the veteran statesman's father, 101 guns of Armistice day fame boomed out the tribute of the French nation to the "Father of Victory."

Although the former premier had given command that his passing be marked by the utmost simplicity—and his wishes were respected in this—official France felt called upon to disobey him in some respects. For him the cannon thundered as on Armistice day and for him the chamber sat in a solemn special session to hear eulogistic orations from the president of the chamber, Fernand Bouisson and Premier Tardieu.

For him on Sunday the soldiers of the World war will march up the famed avenue of the Champs Elysee to the Arc de Triomphe, which Napoleon erected to commemorate the victories of France.

ACTOR RAYMOND HITCHCOCK DIED OF HEART ATTACK

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 25.—(AP)—Another familiar face was missing today from the ranks of the old troupers, whose memories are mellowed with the stage days of the gay 'nineties' in the sudden death last night of the great comedian, Raymond Hitchcock.

The star of "Hitchy Koo" was 64 years old. The end came about 10:30 p. m., Sunday as he stopped his car before his home in fashionable Beverly Hills after an evening automobile ride with his wife. His body slumped and his head fell against his wife's shoulder. He died from a heart attack, a malady which he had fought constantly for years, trying many climates throughout the United States for relief.

Throughout the motion picture colony he was mourned, for like many of his famed companions, Tully Marshall, Robert Edson and Maurice Costello, he had come to the land of a new era of entertainment, the screen to play in the movies now and again and pass the last days of his life.

SUPREME COURT FINDS CONNECTICUT LAW VALID

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—(AP)—Four state laws were pronounced valid today by the supreme court as the justices donned robes again after a three week recess.

The highest tribunal handed down 11 opinions, added two cases to those it will review, declined to consider 14, and refused to reconsider its former actions in 16.

In addition to upholding the validity of a Connecticut, an Oregon and two California statutes, the court declined to reconsider a refusal to review cases involving the Pennsylvania sedition law and the Iowa prohibition law.

That from Connecticut attacked the validity of a law regulating the liability of motor vehicle owners for injury of guests being gratuitously transported.

CARGO OF 10,000 TONS OF CRUDE OIL EXPLODED

GLASGOW, Scotland, Nov. 25.—(AP)—The oil tanker, British Chemist, which arrived at Grangemouth this morning with a cargo of 10,000 tons of crude oil, exploded tonight. Three terrific blasts shook the whole town but only one man had been taken to a hospital late tonight.

Six members of the crew saved their lives by jumping overboard but two were badly burned. Most of the cargo had been discharged before the fire. About 60 feet of the starboard side of the tanker was blown away.

A ship lying at an adjoining dock caught fire and the flames spread to the tanker. Many persons had almost miraculous escapes as wreckage was flung into the streets of the town by the explosions.

The British tanker, British Chemist, was a vessel of 6,997 gross tons. She was built in 1925 and her port of registry is London.

SAILING VESSEL CAPTURED WITH 20,000 CASES OF LIQUOR

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—(AP)—The 150-ton sailing vessel, "Stormy Petrel," which was captured at Port Chester, N. Y., today with 20,000 cases of liquor aboard, cleared Halifax, N. S., two weeks ago with a cargo of lath and a week later, after running into bad weather which stripped her of her sails, was towed into port at Boston by a coast guard patrol boat.

Although the coast guard craft had been dispatched specifically to examine the "Stormy Petrel," nothing suspicious came to light while the sailing craft was in Boston harbor and she was cleared for New York.

A customs squad of 16 men was sent to Port Chester today to search the craft but no report of the seizure had been received at the barge office here late this afternoon.

SNOOK STARTS FIGHT TO ESCAPE EXECUTION

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 25.—(AP)—Dr. James Howard Snook, former Ohio State university professor, began his fight before the state supreme court today to escape execution for the murder of Theora K. Hix, university co-ed, last June 13.

Dr. Snook, now in a cell in "Death Row" at the state penitentiary and under sentence to be executed Nov. 29, won a respite until Dec. 20, at the hands of Ohio's highest tribunal, or until his appeal has been disposed of by the court.

The court set Dec. 10 as the date to hear the two-way effort of Dr. Snook's counsel to obtain reversal of his conviction on a first degree murder charge in the common pleas court and which the appeals court affirmed last Friday.

REPRESENTATIVE GRIEST NOT EXPECTED TO LIVE

MOUNT CLEMENS, Mich., Nov. 25.—(AP)—Representative W. W. Griest, of Pennsylvania, was not expected to live through the night, Dr. Oswald C. Fluemer, his physician, said here late today. Representative Griest, who is 71, is suffering from pneumonia.

"There has been a decided change for the worse. I do not believe he can live through the night. His heart action is growing weaker," the physician said.

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

VATICAN CITY, Nov. 25.—(AP) — Pope Pius, at the secret consistory December 16, will appoint two or three more cardinals than those already announced, making seven or eight in all. All of the additional ones will probably be Italians.

JERUSALEM, Nov. 25.—(AP)—Attorney General Norman De Mattos Bentwich, the only Jewish high official remaining in the government service, was wounded in the leg by one of three shots fired at him in a corridor of the government office. His assailant, a messenger for the police department, was arrested.

BERLIN, Nov. 25.—(AP)—Montag, a nationalist newspaper, commenting today on the death of Georges Clemenceau, said "in the eyes of Germany Clemenceau will always appear as the father of the treaty of Versailles, who vanquished moderation and whose post-war speeches were more harmful than beneficial to France."

PARIS, Nov. 25.—(AP) —Aga Khan, wealthy Indian sportsman whose approaching marriage to Marcelle Carron, a comparatively poor young French girl, has attracted wide attention, will not have to have the banns published. He has been given dispensation by the French state's attorney for he is ranked as a sovereign because of being religious chief and head of the Ismailis, the dominant branch of Mohammedanism in India.

SLAYER TRIPPI DENIED EXECUTIVE CLEMENCY

BOSTON, Nov. 25.—(AP)—Hope for the life of Charles Trippi, Jr., of Fitchburg, condemned murderer, dwindled today upon submission of a report to the governor by A. Warren Stearns, state commissioner of correction, in which he declined to recommend executive clemency. Trippi was sentenced to death in the electric chair for the murder of Frederick Pfluger, a state prison guard, Nov. 11, 1928, when Trippi attempted to escape. He was granted a reprieve by the governor on application of his counsel who contended that the condemned man was of unsound mind.

Commissioner Stearns' report to the governor was made after alienists who examined Trippi reported that in their opinion Trippi was feigning mental illness.

GRANTED A CERTIFICATE OF REASONABLE DOUBT

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—(AP)—Frank W. Warder, former state superintendent of banks, who was convicted of having accepted a $10,000 bribe in connection with the operations of the bankrupt City Trust Co., was granted a certificate of reasonable doubt today and probably will be released on bail tomorrow.

When the matter of his release from the Tombs where he has been confined since his conviction, comes up tomorrow before Supreme Court Justice McGoldrick, who granted the certificate of reasonable doubt, a representative of the district attorney's office will ask that bail be fixed at $50,000. Before his conviction, Warder was at liberty in $35,000 bail.

CONCERN ACQUIRED BY BIGELOW-HARTFORD CO.

BOSTON, Nov. 25.—(AP)—Assets of the Stephen Sanford & Sons Co., of Amsterdam, N. Y., were today acquired by the Bigelow-Hartford Carpet Co. Under terms of the transaction, which was approved by a vote of stockholders, the new company will become known as the Bigelow-Sanford Co.

The position of the stockholders, it was said, remains unchanged by the transaction.

Issuance of 35,000 additional shares of Bigelow-Hartford common stock and $5,000,000 in six per cent serial notes is included in plans for the new organization.

The transaction becomes effective Nov. 30.

INCOME FOR OCTOBER REPORTED BY RAILROADS

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—(AP)—With the exception of the New Haven and the Ann Arbor railroads, carriers reporting their October operations today showed net operating income for the month below the figures for the corresponding month last year.

Railroads reporting income for October, 1929, today follow with comparable figures for the same month of 1928:

Railroad	1929	1928
N. Y., N. H. & H.	$3,967,851	$3,805,199
Erie System	2,654,388	2,974,800
Wabash	1,580,235	1,595,709
Wheeling & Lake Erie	503,317	583,776
Ann Arbor	114,804	102,970
Northern Pacific	5,268,828	4,913,602
Reading Co.	2,190,630	2,566,213

HOGAN DENIED INCITING STRIKERS TO VIOLENCE

MARION, N. C., Nov. 25.—(AP)— A. Lawrence Hogan, one of four defendants on trial for rioting and resisting an officer took the stand late today and denied inciting strikers to do violence during strikers in textile plants, here, last summer.

Three defense witnesses preceded Hogan to the stand and testified as to his good character.

Those on trial with Hogan are: Alfred Hoffman, an organizer for the United Textile Workers of America; Wes Fowler and Del Lewis.

A defense motion for non-suit of the case was overruled by Judge G. V. Cowper, presiding.

BANKERS CORP. REFUSES TO SURRENDER BOOKS

NE WYORK, Nov. 25—(AP)—Officials of the Bankers Capital corporation today again refused to surrender books and records sought by the government in its investigation of the activities of the defunct concern and its dozen or more affiliated companies.

Lack of these records has delayed the federal probe into the affairs of the Bankers Capital chain, through which it is alleged clients have lost millions of dollars in security deals. Investigators said steps would immediately be taken to seize the records.

RED CROSS SENT $5,000 TO TIDAL WAVE SUFFERERS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—(AP)—The American Red Cross today sent $5,000 to aid the sufferers from the tidal wave which engulfed the coast near Burin, Newfoundland, early last week. The money was sent through the state department to American Consul Avra M. Warren at St. John's, Newfoundland.

13 Ocean Mail Routes Involve $10,000,000

Establishment Recommended by Interdepartmental Board to P. O. Department.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25—(AP)—The interdepartmental board recommended to othe post office department the establishment of 13 ocean mail routes, involving about $10,000,000 obligations upon the government.

The sum approved would be about double the sum now being spent for the transportation of mail under poundage rates.

The routes approved are for one from New Orleans to Spain and west Portugal known as the west Mediterranean line, three in the north Atlantic from New York, one from New Orleans to the east coast of South America, one from Baltimore and Newport News to German ports, one from New York to Colombia, from San Francisco to Puerto Colombia, New York to Valparaiso, Tacoma to Valparaiso, New York to Lima New Orleans to Puerto Colombia, and San Francisco to Corinth.

TO FILL SHIPYARDS WITH NEW CONSTRUCTION

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25—(AP)—By a single action, the federal government moved today to fill American shipyards with new construction and restore the merchant marine to the position it held immediately after the war through the approval of thirteen new ocean mail routes.

Mail contracts to be let under the recommendations of the interdepartmental board will call for construction of about 40 new vessels, with a gross tonnage of about 460,000 during the next ten years at an estimated cost of $250,000,000.

WINS TITLE OF AMERICA'S CHAMPION HOME CANNER

CHICAGO, Nov. 25—(AP)—Mrs. Mary Hyass, of Kennan, Wis., was awarded the title of America's champion home canner, today, her entry of a quart of green peas winning the $1,000 grand sweepstakes prize for the finest jar of food submitted in the national canning contest. Another $250 prize was given her for the best jar of vegetables.

Mrs. Hyass is 50 years old, the mother of two grown sons. She preserves from 600 to 800 quarts of food annually for her home.

The contest attracted entries from 25,000 women and girls throughout the country.

MARRIED IN PLANE 2,000 FEET OVER ROOSEVELT FIELD

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., Nov. 25.— (AP)— Two thousand feet over Roosevelt field, in an 18 passenger, tri-motored bombing plane, Miss Marguerite Klinger of New York and Donald Babcock, chief of a crew of flying field mechanicians, were married today.

As soon as the ceremony was completed, the bride and bridegroom made parachute jumps, the best man, Eugene Kraus, a professional parachute jumper, following them. Both Babcock and his bride previously had made several parachute leaps.

C. A. C. SOPHOMORE STRUCK BY HIT-AND-RUN DRIVER

STORRS, Nov. 25.—(AP)—Struck by a hit-and-run driver, Donald T. Robison, president of the sophomore class at Connecticut Agricultural college and a member of the basketball squad, was severely injured here last night. He is at St. Joseph's hospital, Willimantic, with three fractured ribs and injuries to his head, arms and legs. His condition is not considered serious.

Robison, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Robison, of Meriden, was found unconscious on the highway by two freshmen. He was taken to the college infirmary and later removed to the hospital.

WOMAN ATTEMPTED TO KILL BISHOP IN VATICAN CITY

VATICAN CITY, Nov. 25.— (AP)—A Swedish woman named Ramstad Marguerite Gudum, was under arrest today for the first attempt at a crime in the history of the newly formed Vatican City state.

The woman, who is 30 years old and is believed to be mentally deranged, attempted to kill Msgr. Smit, titular archbishop of Paralo and former apostolic vicar of Norway, in St. Peter's cathedral yesterday.

CONTRACT FOR CONSTRUCTION OF A HIGH SPEED LINER

GENOA, Italy, Nov. 25.—(AP)— The Lloyd Sabaudo line today signed a contract for construction of a high speed liner for the North American route with the Triestino Shipbuilding company. As announced several months ago the vessel will have almost twice the tonnage of the present liners Conte Grande and Conte Biancamano and will be five or six knots faster.

U. P. TRAIN WAS HELD UP NEAR CHEYENNE, WYO.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Nov. 25.—(AP)—The fast westbound Union Pacific passenger train No. 17, was held up three miles east of here tonight. News of the holdup was brought here by a train crew which uncoupled the locomotive from the train and steamed swiftly into the city.

Chinese Pressed By Armed Soviet Forces

Are Favoring to Present United Front to the Russian Invaders

(By The Associated Press)

Hard pressed in Manchuria by soviet armed forces from both east and west, harassed by Civil war in its central and southern provinces, China sought today to compose its differences with rebellious factions to present a united front to the Russian invaders.

Simultaneously with its military action, China was reported to have appealed to Russia to reopen diplomatic negotiations for settlement of the Chinese eastern railway controversy in Manchuria which caused the rich Manchurian area to become once more the scene of Sino-Russo armed conflict.

The soviet forces, after many weeks of preparation, moved into Manchuria from Siberia both on the western and eastern frontiers, their object, as stated in the past, being to regain participation with the Chinese in control and operation of the Chinese eastern railway, a short cut across Manchuria from China on the trans-Siberian railroad to Vladivostok, Russia's port on the Japan sea. Since July China had operated the railroad without the aid of Russian officials whom it expelled for asserted propaganda against the Chinese government.

Sweeping in from the northwestern border, the soviet forces have advanced to the Khanan mountains, driving before them Chinese soldiers and civilians in a semi-panic. In this area, the Chinese losses are reported as high as 12,000, without a real battle being fought. Chinese bands of soldiers, leaderless, roam over the country living upon it. A general of China's northwestern Manchuria army, his troops scattered, arrived alone at Buchatu, 240 miles east of the western frontier.

On the eastern front of Manchuria, also, the Russian bear was making his claw felt. Coal mines were seized, with loss of life, as the soviet troops advances more than 100 miles into Chinese territory.

Future developments in the Manchurian situation are variously predicted.

The south China Civil war area, in recent days prolific of stories of advances toward Canton, Kwangtung province, of a concerted movement of the rebellious "ironsides" division and the Kwangsi insurrectionists, gave little information today of the turbulence within it.

$25,000 FIRE DAMAGE TO NEW BRITAIN CHURCH

NEW BRITAIN, Nov. 25.—(AP)—Fire of unknown origin in the First Congregational church, located in the heart of the business section, today resulted in damage estimated at $25,000 to $30,000.

Fire officials said the fire originated in a pile of rubbish underneath the basement stairway. It spread to the three upper stories and to the chapel adjoining the main auditorium, which was extensively damaged by smoke.

The church, a brick and stone structure, was erected 74 years ago and is the third to be occupied by the parish since its organization in 1764. Rev. Theodore A. Greene, who spent some time with Sir Grenfell in Labrador and secretary of the International Grenfell mission, is its pastor.

PLAN CONSTRUCTION OF FOUR GIANT MONOPLANES

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—(AP)—Plans for the construction oif four monoplanes, so big that Fifth avenue traffic could pass between their "landing legs," were announced today by the General Development Co. of Connecticut, through its vice-president and chief consultant, Dr. William Whitney Christman.

These titans of the air, the largest in the world, with a wing spread of 262 feet and a gross weight of 72 1-2 tons, will be capable of carrying 206 passengers under department of commerce regulations. They are scheduled to be completed late next year at an estimated cost of $2,000,000.

49 PERSONS INJURED IN COLLISION OF TROLLEY CARS

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—(AP)—Nine persons were injured seriously and 40 others were severely shaken up in a rear-end collision of two Brooklyn trolley cars today.

Eight of the more seriously hurt were women.

The accident occurred at St. Mark's place and Flatbush avenue, when a Seventh avenue trolley car crashed into a standing Flatbush avenue car.

Both cars were crowded. Failure of the brakes on the Seventh avenue car was blamed for the collision.

FIREMEN FOUND BOY SUFFOCATED BY SMOKE

BARRE, Vt., Nov. 25.—(AP)—Dean C. Davis, Jr., 5, ran into a closet and threw wraps over himself after he had discovered a fire in his home here today. After almost half an hour's search for the boy, firemen found him dead in the closet. He had been suffocated by smoke.

FUGITIVE FROM CONN. ARRESTED IN ROUND-UP

LOS ANGELES, Calif. Nov. 25.—(AP) —A police round-up of suspicious characters today included Charles H. Conlin, 41, whom fingerprint revealed as an alleged fugitive from Connecticut.

CHIEF OF POLICE OF WORCESTER AND WOMAN WERE FOUND DEAD IN LODGE

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 25—(AP)—Unwilling to accept the theory that poison liquor caused the death of Supt. of Detectives James J. Casey and Mrs Dora Bingham, who were found dead this morning in Supt. Casey's hunting lodge at North Brookfield, police tonight were acting on the assumption that poison had been deliberately injected into the liquor.

Supt. Casey's nude body was found on the floor of the bedroom in his camp on Brooks pond by detectives sent out to look for their chief after they received a call from Mrs. Casey, who became alarmed when her husband failed to return to his home here Sunday. A few feet beyond the dead detective was found Mrs. Bingham's body, clad in a night gown. An empty bottle which had evidently contained whiskey and a quantity of gin also was found in the room.

An autopsy performed at Worcester City hospital tonight failed to reveal the cause of the death and a chemical analysis of the contents of the stomach has been ordered.

Beside his record as a policeman and detective, Supt. Casey had made a reputation for himself in New England as a bicycle racer at the time when road races and bicycle clubs flourished.

TEST PILOT FELL TWO MILES IN PLANE AT BOLLING FIELD

Body of Lieut. George T. Cuddihy, Veteran Speed Flier, Was Buried Ten Feet Below the Soggy Earth—Water Filled the Hole and Two Hours Elapsed Before the Body Could Be Extricated—Cuddihy Was Testing a Little English Combat Plane—As the Plane Fell From a Height of About 10,000 Feet a Part of It Fell Off.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25—(AP)—The little English combat plane he was testing for the navy hurtled Lieutenant George T. Cuddihy to death today from nearly two miles above Bolling Field. The veteran speed and test pilot was buried with the ship's engine and fuselage ten feet below the soggy earth. Some who saw the plunge said the plane sliced through the clouds at about 10,000 feet elevation, dived approximately 1,000 feet and then went screechingly into a widening spiral as a part of the plane whirled off.

The ship hit a low section of Bolling Field, softened by a recent snow. Water filled the hole dug by the plane almost at once, and two hours passed before navy enlisted men could extricate Cuddihy's body.

A moment after the crash, Rear Admiral Moffett—the dead aviator's commander—telephoned the naval air station to ask that Lieutenant Cuddihy be ready to transport him to Charleston, S. C., in a day or so.

"He has just been killed," the navy's aeronautics chief was told.

The rear admiral was stunned. He considered the late officer one of the world's most excellent pilots, and held him in high personal regard.

Mrs. Charles O'Brien received word of her brother's death while at work in the veterans' bureau where she is a secretary. The shock prostrated her and she was taken to her home.

The airman's mother is listed on naval records as Mrs. Anna K. Cuddihy, rural route number 5, Grand Rapids, Mich.

Navy authorities tonight sought to determine what caused the plane to crash. The wreckage will be scrutinized, especially those retrieved parts which fell from the machine itself.

The plane was purchased from Great Britain for study and experimental purposes after the Schneider cup races last September, in which British ships established new speed records. Only last Friday the fleet Bristol Bull Dog craft was put through a spectacular demonstration for high naval authorities by Captain C. S. Uwins, a World war British ace, who had just arrived in this country with it.

Lieutenant Cuddihy had undertaken to carry the tests ahead today in his customary fearless way. A single seater, the ship was constructed to attain an 180-mile an hour speed carrying a full military load of two machine guns, ammunition, bombs, radio set and three hours fuel.

Born 33 years ago at Alto, Michigan, Lieutenant Cuddihy was graduated from the naval academy in 1917 and served on the U. S. S. Mississippi during the war and for a while later. After aviation training at Pensacola, Fla., he was designated a pilot in 1921 and served on the U. S. S. Aroostook. He assisted in forming the first fighting plane squadron for the navy.

He came here in 1924 and established a world record for seaplane speed. He won the high score in aviation gunnery for the years 1922-24. In 1925 he participated in the Schneider cup races near Baltimore, and a year later won in a field of 13, a race for fighting planes of the military services at the National air races in Philadelphia. A later achievement by Cuddihy was an extended flight over the Andes mountains in 1927.

Last year the aviator was assigned again to duty here, becoming head of the flight test division at the naval air station. In that capacity he was testing the plane, since the division is charged with judging what new types may be adopted by the navy.

WILL PAY TRIBUTE TO SEN. WARREN IN SENATE CHAMBER

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25. — (AP) — President Hoover will join the senate, house and supreme court tomorrow in paying tribute to the late Senator Francis E. Warren, of Wyoming, who died yesterday after a long life of public service.

For the second time within a month, the chief executive and his cabinet will go to the senate chamber for a brief, simple state funeral arranged to honor the veteran legislator who in both age and service was dean of the senate.

The president paid the same honor less than four weeks ago to the late Senator Theodore E. Burton, of Ohio, who died on October 28.

The service will begin at 2 o'clock and it will be concluded in time for the departure at 3:15 o'clock from Union station of a special train which will bear the body westward to a last resting place in Wyoming.

ATTEMPT AT SUICIDE BY PETERS TRUST CO. OFFICIAL

OMAHA, Nebr., Nov. 25.— (AP) — Reed C. Peters, executive vice president of the Peters Trust company, which closed its doors today, attempted to commit suicide today by throwing himself beneath a moving truck on a downtown street intersection. His skull probably was fractured and one leg fractured. He received other severe injuries.

Peters was taken to a hospital where it was said his condition was critical.

Peters, who is 40 years old, made at least one other attempt to take his life during the day. He tried to throw himself under the wheels of a truck backing into a loading dock. R. A. Randazzo, driver of the truck, stopped in time and pulled Peters from underneath the machine.

Friends said he had been despondent over the failure of the trust company.

BODIES OF 75 SOLDIERS ARRIVE FROM SIBERIA

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.— (AP) — Seventy-five American soldiers, most of them from Michigan, who died many weary miles from their own people in lonely army camps along the trans-Siberian railroad, 10 years ago this winter, will come back to their homeland this week.

Their journey, half way round the world by rail, steamer, and again by rail, will end next Sunday in Detroit, where 56 of the 75 caskets will be escorted to Cadillac square, in front of the city hall, to be received on behalf of the state of Michigan by Gov. Fred W. Green.

Aboard the U. S. liner, Roosevelt, the 75 bodies will arrive in New York harbor Wednesday. The U. S. destroyer Kane and municipal yacht, Macom, will meet the liner Roosevelt at quarantine and will escort her to her pier in Hoboken.

WIRELESS FOR ASSISTANCE FROM BRITISH STEAMER

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., Nov. 25.—(AP)— The British steamer, Jamaica Settler, London for Kingston, Jamaica, wirelessed here today for assistance. She said her rudder post was damaged and that she was helpless. Her position was given as 48 north 32 west. The tug Roode Zee left here at 5:30 o'clock this evening to go to her assistance. No further details were given in the message for aid.

ARRESTED FOR DRIVING CAR STOLEN IN HARTFORD

DARIEN, Nov. 25.—(AP)—John A. Cunningham, 27, of Tusca, Wyo., driving a car said to have been stolen in Hartford, was arrested here today for the Hartford police. The machine, the property of Guernsey-Westbrook, was badly damaged. Cunningham told the police that the machine was damaged in a collision near New Haven with a New York-Boston bus.

TESTIMONY IN ALBANY BASEBALL POOL CASE

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—(AP)—A former partner in the Albany baseball pool, testifying for the government today at the trial of James J. Otto for perjury, asserted that Otto, during the time he was president of the pool, went hundreds of times to Sam Daniel O'Connell, former Albany political leader.

It was on a charge of giving false testimony before the February and March grand juries this year in an alleged effort to shield O'Connell and others that Otto was indicted on three counts.

The witness, William J. Pringle, former treasurer of the pool—officially named the Capital City and Business Men's association—said he did not know the object of Otto's visits.

Pringle, who began his testimony Friday, testified today that when Otto and his associates heard on June 11, 1928, that the United States attorney here might impound the pool's funds, Otto had a cashier's check for $128,387.53 drawn to Robert E. Lee, a fictitious character, and withdrew that amount. The next day, when the fear of seizure was allayed, Pringle continued, the money was re-deposited.

On July 25 of that year, Pringle testified, $80,000 was deposited under the name of James I. Riley in the Rensselaer National bank, Rensselaer, N. Y., and the prize money for the following week paid out of this account.

Then the pool closed and he, Otto and Walter J. Kane, the third partner, divided the remaining money, Pringle said.

NERVOUS JUROR HALTS McMANUS MURDER TRIAL

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.— (AP)— Another of the vicissitudes which have beset police and the district attorney in their effort to bring to justice the slayer of Arnold Rothstein, Broadway's gambling king, today halted the trial of George McManus, charged with the murder.

The latest stumbling block was the nervous illness of a juror, which led to his being excused.

After two days of testimony, when the trial was adjourned Friday over the week end, Eugene Riker, one of the younger members of the "blue ribbon" jury, complained to presiding Judge Charles C. Nott, Jr., that he was ill and asked to be excused.

Today, Judge Nott formally granted his request, on the advice of a court appointed, physician who reported that Riker was on the verge of a nervous breakdown, evidently aggravated by the thought that he might have to vote a death sentence against McManus.

After adjourning the case until tomorrow, Judge Nott ordered a special panel of 15 talesmen called.

JASPAR BELGIAN CABINET RESIGNED LAST NIGHT

BRUSSELS, Belgium, Nov. 25.—(AP) —The cabinet of Premier Jaspar resigned this evening. It was unable to agree on the linguistic problem of Ghent university over which the liberals and Roman Catholic elements had differed.

Henri Jaspar formed a government from a coalition of the Catholic liberal and Christian democratic parties on Nov. 21, 1927.

Flemish extremists, allied with the Catholic parties, wanted to have all classes in Ghent university taught in the Flemish tongue, but Flemish liberals wanted to retain certain courses delivered in French.

ABOUT 50 MEN INJURED IN FIRE IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—(AP)— Police tonight reported that about 50 men were injured in a fire in a two-story frame building in Long Island City used as living quarters for 200 employes of the Mid-Eastern Construction company. Four ambulances were sent to the scene.

MAYOR GATES MAKES REPORT TO COUNCIL

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 26—The common council of 1928-29 held its final session in an adjourned meeting in the town building to hear the annual address and closing remarks of Mayor Charles A. Gates and conclude all business of the present administration. Of the council members present Alderman John Reilly is heading the democratic ticket for mayor in the coming election and Aldermen C. A. Lamoureux, William E. Webber and Eugene B. Lewis are seeking re-election.

The other aldermen present tonight were Oliver L. Willard and C. E. MacFarlane. Alderman A. J. Dubrieul, who is not seeking re-election, has been in Florida for a number of weeks. Pursuant to annual business a resolution fixing the salaries of city officials was introduced by Alderman Lamoureux, all salaries remaining as in the past with the exception of that of city clerk and city treasurer. Each of these offices, which are held by one man, received an increase of $250, making the total combined salary $2,500. An amendment to this made by Alderman W. E. Webber, provides, however, that the increase to the city clerk be in lieu of other compensations. These compensations have averaged about $200 per year in making out the tax abstract, leaving the actual increase approximately $300.

The weekly salary of the assistant city clerk was increased from $23 to $25. Other salaries fixed according to past schedule were:

Corporation counsel, $1,000; chief of the fire department and chief engineer, superintendent of fire alarms and fire marshal, $2,600; librarian, $1,200; superintendent of streets and sewers, $2,600; superintendent of water department, $2,600; superintendent of pumping station, with free rent and fuel, $26.74 weekly; chief of police, $2,600.

A resolution on behalf of the public library committee that an exchange be made of the G. A. R. rooms for the present library quarters to allow additional space, was voted referred to the new administration. The petition recommended that this matter be taken up with the board of selectmen and the Civil war veterans. The plan is to take over the large hall and dining room, now making up part of the quarters of the G. A. R.

The American Thread Co. was authorized to take water from city hydrants subject to the consent of the superintendent of the city water works for flooding the public skating pond at Recreation park.

Mayor Gates report follows:

To the President and the Honorable Board of Aldermen of the City of Willimantic.

Gentlemen:

Conforming to the provisions of the city charter, I have the honor to transmit herewith detailed reports of the several departments, together with receipts, expenditures, assets, liabilities, and a complete financial statement as prepared by the treasurer for year ended October 31, 1929.

Health Department—The city has been extremely fortunate during the past year in having experienced no epidemics of dangerous diseases. As in previous years, several complaints of nuisances have been made which were investigated and abated.

Water Department—The water department is a paying investment that returns a profit to the treasury. During the past year the receipts amounted to $49,202.10 which item with balance on hand November 30, 1928 of $3,206.12, makes a total of $52,4[illegible]8.22. The expenses, including interest on bonds of $3,232.34, were $46,276.55, leaving a balance on hand November 1, 1929, of $6,131.67. Bonded indebtedness November 30, 1928 $147,000.00; bonded indebtedness November 1, 1929 $33,666.66; borrowed money, November 1, 1929 $27,000.00; total liabilities, November 1, 1929, $120,666.66; indebtedness reduction of $26,333.34.

The work of the department has included the laying of 1,045 feet of six inch cast iron pipe extension of the system, as follows: Godfrey street 725 feet; Potter street 220 feet; Francis street 100 feet and installation of twenty-eight new services and meters.

Sewer Department—During the year the sewer system has been extended as follows:

Winter street 552 feet; Walnut street 775 feet; Chestnut street 360 feet; Washburn street 434 feet; South Park street 706 feet.

This shows that 2,830 lineal feet of eight inch sewer pipe has been laid during the year. The work was done by and under the supervision of the superintendent of sewers and streets, and furnished employment for a large number of local men.

A preliminary survey for treatment of sewage prior to its disposal in public streams, is now being given proper attention by the sanitary committee and the acting city engineer, and in accordance with suggestions made by the state water commission, the object being to ascertain the volume of sewage now discharged into the Natchaug river, to determine the best location, the topography of the ground surface where the plant is to be located and a profile made along the course of the sewer to enable the engineers to estimate the cost of construction.

Street Department—During the year 4,664 square yards of permanent highway were laid on lower Main street between Union and Beech streets, which work was done by the department, under supervision of an expert, and resulted in a very substantial saving to the city, also furnished employment to a large number of local men.

I feel that the present condition of our forty-six miles of accepted streets indicate that the question of general repairs and maintenance have been thoroughly attended to and are in better condition than ever before in the history of our city, and that the department is to be highly commended for the efficient manner in which they performed their duties.

Sidewalks and Gutters—During the year 79,272 square feet of concrete sidewalks and 22,364 square feet of concrete gutters have been laid, and in addition thereto repairs "in the interest of public safety and convenience" were made in various parts of the city. This shows an increase in installation of sidewalks of 34,000 square feet more than ever before constructed in any one year.

Probably no work under your supervision meets with more general approval than consistent and intelligent construction of sidewalks, which are a great benefit, not only to our citizens, but also to those who visit our city.

Fire Department—The excellent management of this department has been most creditable to the city. The discipline of officers and men is most excellent, and the brave firemen of Willimantic are now, as always, entitled to the thanks of our people for their gallant services in saving life and property.

Wade U. Webster, chief of the department, passed away October 26, 1929, after which Deputy Chief Michael J. English was appointed acting chief.

Police Department—The records of the past year show that active and persistent work has been done by the entire force. They have been faithful and diligent in attending to the duties involving upon them, and I desire to thank each and every officer of this department for the efficient manner in which they have performed their several duties. Additional traffic signals have been installed, which, without doubt, have prevented many accidents.

Street Lighting—Our city is exceptionally well illuminated by the use of 553 electric street lights at an average cost of $47.96 each per annum. During the past ten years, 310 additional street lights have been installed.

Ice Department—The city ice plant has proved a benefit to our citizens, both in having a sufficient supply, and at a lower price for ice than elsewhere.

Receipts from sale of ice $3,828.20; ice on hand Nov. 1, 1929, 1200 tons at $1.25 $1,500.00; total $5,328.20; disbursements $4,925.42; net earnings $402.78.

Memorial Park—Pursuant to the action of a city meeting held on August 23, 1929, at which meeting an appropriation of $9,000.00 was made for the purchase of the so-called Mazzola house and lot located at corner of Main and Tingley streets, which purchase was made by the standing committee, and is now a part of the Memorial park, the dwelling house has been sold and will be moved in the near future.

Financial—The appropriations for this year amounted to $285,090.89 of which the sum of $242,166.26 has been expended, leaving an unexpended balance of $42,924.53.

The bonded indebtedness of the city is $275,333.34 against that of November 30, 1928, $302,000.00 showing a reduction of bonded indebtedness of $6,666.66.

In conclusion Mayor Gates said:

"I cannot but feel that after looking over the expenditures during this era of high prices, that we have much to congratulate ourselves on, both in respect to the quality of work done as well as to the reasonableness of the expenditures necessitated by that work."

"During the year the city lost two faithful and efficient servants, William Ellis Jackson, alderman from the first ward, who died January 29, 1929, and Wade U. Webster, chief of the fire department, who died October 26, 1929. Each was typical of the best citizenship among us, and each had a warm regard of our entire community for their sterling qualities as men and public officials, and leave behind them memories that may well be revered."

"Our labors are fast drawing to a close, and I desire to extend my sincere thanks, not only to the members of the board, but to all of the city officials, for the prompt, punctual and intelligent manner in which their important duties have been discharged."

"Our official relations have been of the most pleasant character; harmony has prevailed in all our deliberations, and all measures considered by the board have been with an eye singly to the public good, and with a view of the advancement of our city."

Alderman Eugene B. Lewis of the fourth ward concluded his two year term with a 10 per cent perfect attendance for all regular and special common council meetings tonight. This is believed to be a record for an alderman as none of the special committee meetings were missed during the period.

WOONSOCKET WOMAN HURT WHEN CAR OVERTURNS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 25—Mary T. Cass of Woonsocket, R. I., was painfully injured this morning when the car in which she was riding and which was driven by a Woonsocket man named Brennan, skidded on the slippery surface of Natchaug bridge, leading from the North Windham road and overturned after striking the bridge railing and a fire hydrant just west of the structure. The accident was the fourth to occur at this point this morning due to the slippery condition of the flooring of the bridge. The three previous mishaps, however, were minor in nature. The woman was treated at the office of Dr. C. A. Jenkins for contusions.

WEDDING

Bertrand-Lord

Miss Irene Lord, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Lord of Hartford, became the bride of Mederill Bertrand of this city at a pretty November wedding solemnized in St. Marys church at 8 o'clock this morning. The ceremony was performed by Rev. H. C. Beloz during a nuptial high mass. The witnesses were Mr. Lord, father of the bride and Eugene Dube, uncle of the groom. The bride was crowned in brown satin and chiffon with a gold match and she carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses.

The reception was held at 268 Main street with about forty guests from this city and Hartford attending. A second reception was held this evening at the home of the bride in Hartford, the couple then leaving on an unannounced wedding trip. Upon their return they will reside at 268 Main street. The groom is in the employ of the American Thread company and the bride has also been employed by the concern.

OBITUARIES

George C. L. Flammand

Alfred Noel of the H. C. Murray company today received word of the death of George Charles Louis Flammand at the Brooklyn, N. Y., Naval hospital. Flammand, who enlisted in the World war from this city in the spring of 1917, had been a patient in the naval hospital on various occasions, having been a patient there for three weeks prior to his death. He saw considerable service overseas and was gassed. Upon returning from the war he resumed his former employment in the upholstery department of the H. C. Murray company. He later became a chiropractor and established an office in New Jersey. He became ill two years ago, however, and could not follow his vocation. At that time he returned to this city to make his home at 24 Turner street. He leaves his mother and two sisters the Misses Emilie and Louise Flammand.

Mrs. Bridget S. Donahue

Mrs. Bridget Sheehan Donahue, 76, widow of John Donahue, died at her home, 31 Jackson place this morning. She had been ill for several months. The deceased is survived by three sons, Patrick, Michael and Jeremiah Donahue of this city; and several grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

Mrs. Andrew Yuschalk

Mrs. Andrew Yuschalk, 33, died this morning at her home, Williams' Crossing Franklin, after an illness of three months duration. Besides her husband she leaves one son, John Yuschalk; a daughter Rose and several nephews and nieces.

The continued non-support case of Robert Zimmerman was taken up in police court this morning. Zimmerman is now employed in Hartford and on order of Judge Frank H. Foss must pay his wife $12 a week. Judge Foss is to have a conference with the couple Saturday December 21. A continuance until Saturday was offered in the case of Joseph Boucher of Prospect street, charged with carrying a concealed weapon and intoxication. Boucher had gone on a hunting expedition and gotten intoxicated while a revolver remained in his pocket. The court imposed fines of five dollars and costs for intoxication in the cases of a Taftville and local men.

The Exchange club will entertain the Lions club at a joint meeting in St. Paul's parish house Tuesday evening. Dr. George Alan Works, president of the Connecticut Agricultural college will be the speaker. Robert G. Remington is in charge of the arrangements which include a chicken dinner to be prepared and served by the women of the church.

Struck by a hit-and-run driver in Storrs Sunday evening, Donald Hudson of Meriden, a student at the Connecticut Agricultural college was an overnight patient in St. Joseph's hospital to receive treatment for an injury to his left arm. The young man was discharged this forenoon.

Merton E. Wright, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Wright of Coventry and Miss Alice M. Knight, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William O. Knight of North Windham road, were married by Rev. H. H. Critchlow at the Methodist parsonage on Prospect street Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Mr. Wright is employed as a clerk by the American Telephone & Telegraph company while the bride has been employed at the American Thread company plant.

The funeral of Mrs. Agnes Clark, wife of Reginald Clark, who died in West Newton, Mass., last Friday, was held Sunday with burial in the Mansfield Center cemetery.

Mrs. William A. Greene, chairman, reported today that the two-day Christmas fair held at the Baptist church last week end was a decided success, both from the sale of articles and the business done in the cafeteria.

Louis C. Vegiard, recently appointed special collector of personal taxes by the board of selectmen, has qualified and filed his bond with Town Clerk Frank P. Fenton. Collector Vegiard will begin his duties after the enumerators have completed their work in January, the collection of taxes to be done during February.

Two cures are claimed to have been witnessed at the grave of Rev. Patrick Power in Malden, Mass., Sunday by a party of local people including Mr. and Mrs. John Kelley and James Kelly. They were accompanied on their visit to the grave by Mr. and Mrs. Rushford and daughter of Worcester, Mass.

The 25th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Amos Bill of Lebanon avenue was noted Saturday evening when about 40 of their friends tendered them a surprise party. On behalf of the guests, Mrs. R. A. Clouch presented Mr. and Mrs. Bill with a purse of silver.

Guests of Mrs. Emily Platt of Main street today included her son, William S. Farrow and wife of New London, her grandson, William E. Farrow, his wife and son Mahlon of Mystic, Mrs. Harry Scales of Boston, Mass., Mrs. Annie E. Lincoln of Eastford and Mrs. John Paulding of West Woodstock.

Miss Avis Thompson, teacher at the Natchaug grammar school is confined to her home by illness.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Hartson of North Windham had as Sunday guests, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Moore and son Donald of Hartford.

Dr. Hugh E. Campbell of Norwich will hold his weekly free chest clinic at the Visiting Nurse association rooms on Main street Tuesday at 10 a. m.

Miss Louise Thompson has returned from a few days' stay with Miss Claire Smith in Wallingford.

Ash wood is used in making tennis racquets because of its bending qualities.

$10.00 IN CASH PRIZES FOR STORE SKETCHES

Instead of sending out of town for some art work, we are offering $10.00 in cash prizes—$5 for first, $3 for second and $3 for third—to high school students or any persons in Norwich for the best pen and ink sketches of the exterior of the Boston Store, showing the Christmas tree decorations, with or without the lights showing, but preferably the latter.

Sketches should be submitted to the advertising department on third floor not later than Saturday, Nov. 30.

REID & HUGHES CO.

Our Sincere Thanks

Recognizing a circumstance of timely appropriateness, we wish to express our very sincere thanks and appreciation for the gratifying response on 88c DAY, the last Saturday before Thanksgiving.

Customers turned out in such proportions, especially in the afternoon and evening, that we were handicapped in giving, for certain departments, the adequate service we like to give, although we had provided extra salespeople for the occasion.

Saturday's business demonstrated that there is nothing wrong with conditions of trade here in "The Rosebud of New England"—also that the Boston Store is the Cheerful and Satisfying Shopping Center of Norwich.

MODERN WAY TO relieve COLDS!

GRANDMOTHER'S remedies were good in grandmother's day—when folks had lots of time for "doctoring," hand rubbing, chest rubbing, etc.

But here is a modern, scientific time-saving treatment for colds. It is OZO MIST—a vaporizing liquid that is dropped on your handkerchief or your pillow at night. You inhale a pure, clean, pine-woodsy vapor that penetrates into the throat and deep down into the lung-cells depositing five healing medicaments. Your nose is cleared. You breathe easier. Throat irritation ceases. You feel relief with each breath.

For quick relief use OZO MIST. When those around you have cold-troubles OZO MIST regularly to prevent the germs from attacking you.

Ask your neighborhood druggist today for a bottle of OZO MIST. Fifty applications cost but fifty cents.

DANIELSON

LAMOTHE-VARIEUR WEDDING IS LARGELY ATTENDED

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Nov. 25.—Miss Irene Josephine Varieur of Danielson and Wilfred Joseph Lamothe of Plainfield were married this morning at St James' church at 7:30, in the presence of relatives and numbers of friends. Rev. J. A. Demers, M. S., performed the marriage ceremony and was celebrant of the nuptial mass.

The bride was attended by Miss Beatrice Lamothe, Plainfield, sister of the groom, and Roy Varieur of New Britain, brother of the bride, was best man.

The bride was beautiful in a gown of pale beige chiffon with hat and shoes to match. Her bouquet was of yellow chrysanthemums. The bridesmaid wore a gown of dark brown silhouette with hat and shoes to match and her bouquet was of harmonizing chrysanthemums.

After the marriage a wedding breakfast was served for members of the immediate families of the contracting parties at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Shippee, Reynolds street, brother-in-law and sister of the bride.

Mr. and Mrs. Lamothe left during the day for their honeymoon, during which they will visit with relatives and friends in Northampton, Springfield, Hartford and New Britain. They are to make their home in Plainfield.

The bride, resident here since childhood, received many beautiful gifts, including china, cut glass, linens, silverware and various other things for the home.

The club shoot held by the Danielson Rod and Gun club Sunday consisted of a 50-target program, and shooters were classified under the DuPont added target handicap system. Three prizes were given, high handicap, turkey; second high handicap, chicken, and the club gave a high gun prize of a turkey. Emile Meunier and Floyd Nettleton tied for first place in the handicap and Meunier won on the shoot-off, taking the turkey, and the chicken went to Nettleton. L. S. Ingalls won the high gun prize.

The scores follow:

This morning in the town court Judge W. Fenner Woodward imposed fines and costs of prosecution on two men charged with violations of the liquor laws and whose arrests followed raids made by state officers operating in Danielson late Saturday night and Sunday.

Henry Barry, who was in charge when state officers raided a home in the rear of 172 North Main street just before midnight Saturday night and seized intoxicants while frequenters vanished from the place, was charged with reputation and keeping with intent to sell. He was fined $75 on each count, a total of $150, and costs. The court was giving him time early this afternoon to arrange for the payment of the assessment.

Alpherie Bernier, also a resident here and charged with reputation and keeping with intent to sell, likewise was fined $75 on each count for a total of $150 and costs, which he paid. His place was raided late Sunday by state officers.

Henry Stinberg of Rockville, arrested Sunday, was fined $100 for operating a motor vehicle while he was under the influence of an intoxicant and an additional $5 on a count charging that he was operating a car with defective brakes. Costs of prosecution also were added.

Another case before the court today was that in which Wesley Patenaude of Washington, R. I., was fined $25 and costs under a count charging that he had recklessly operated a motor vehicle.

L. Edwin Hill, secretary of the Windham County Y. M. C. A., said today that as near as can be figured 762 Windham county boys attended the Brown-New Hampshire football game at Providence last Saturday. There were 300 from Putnam, 170 from Danielson, 130 from Plainfield, including Moosup; 39 from Thompson, 37 from Willimantic, 36 from Dayville, 20 from Woodstock, and though they cannot actually be rated Windham county boys, 30 from Baltic. Pleasure cars to the number of 160 and two trucks were used to transport them, and to all who contributed to the furnishing of transportation the Y. M. C. A. is deeply grateful.

TWO SLIGHTLY HURT IN AUTO ACCIDENT

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 25—Two motorists escaped serious injury this morning when a car in which they were riding skidded and crashed into a fence along the road just west of Abington Four Corners, six miles from here, this morning. The injured, Grant Ponnon, and his wife, Elizabeth Ponnon of Milford, Mass., were brought to the Day Kimball hospital in this city and were treated for sprains and abrasions of the skull face and hands. Both were discharged a few hours later.

State Officer John T. Murphy of Danielson barracks checked up the accident and assisted the injured couple. The car in which they were riding was damaged considerably. Ponnon, an official of a insurance company in Milford was enroute to Willimantic for a visit with relatives.

Only a week remains for Harvey J. Grinsell, republican and James J. Tharron, democrat, candidates for office of city tax collector to carry on their campaign. The race between Tharron and Grinsell constitutes the only contest on the city ticket this year. No campaign, other than the personal canvass of the voters, by the respective candidates is being waged. Neither candidate displayed any degree of enthusiasm in the campaign which is now in its final week, election to take place on Monday, December 2. Mayor Charles A. Richard will be returned to office without opposition as will Alderman-at-Large Warren S. Ames while City Treasurer Charles H. Brown, veteran municipal official, is the choice of both parties. All candidates named for seats in the 1930-31 council were ratified at the general caucuses and will take the oath of office at the initial meeting of the new administration in January. Thus, the democratic sweep, predicted early in the year, has proved to be but a myth, which has now disappeared, insuring Mayor Richard his place at the head of the city government for two years more.

Upon on order of notice to the members of the bar association from State's Attorney Howard C. Bradford, lawyers who anticipate trial of criminal cases in the continued session of superior court slated to open in Willimantic next week, were in this city today for consultations with the state attorney, relative to their impending cases. Only a few cases of minor importance have found their way into superior court from this city for trial at the forthcoming term.

About 15 men and women, from this city, members of the L'Union Ste. Jean de Baptiste were in Baltic Sunday where they attended a district meeting of the French society.

An item appearing on the sporting page of the Bulletin this morning under a Putnam date line concerning the organization of the Eastern Connecticut Soccer league made mention of the dates on which games between the various teams represented in the league will be played. Saturday was stated as the choice of the league officials, but this according to information received today was incorrect. The soccer league contests will be played according to the dates announced in this morning's Bulletin but the days incidentally fall on Sunday, instead of Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Johnson and daughter, Miss Mildred Johnson for a number of years residents in West Thompson and well known in this city have removed to Wheeling, West Virginia. Miss Johnson has resigned her position in the office of Bradley and Co., here to accept a secretarial position in the executive offices of a southern textile company.

Attorney Archibald Macdonald Jr. was in Hartford today on business.

The public schools of the town will close Thursday, along with manufacturing plants and business houses for the observance of Thanksgiving day. The schools will not, however commence the first recess of one week as many believe, since the adoption of the Massachusetts sessions programme. The schools will continue in session until December 21, when the annual Christmas recess will be had, followed by another recess of one week, eight weeks later. The schedule, according to a bulletin recently issued by the school department calls for sixteen weeks of school from September 3 until December 21 and not eight weeks as many have been led to believe.

Monday proved to be the coldest day of the winter season so far entered on local weather records. The mercury descended to points as low as four degrees above zero, according to reports of readings taken at early hours this morning. Streets were ice coated this morning as water froze Sunday evening upon the arrival of a cold wave following the rain the previous day. No auto mishaps occurred according to police this afternoon. Ponds and brooks were frozen over today, and in some places to a considerable thickness. Steaming automobile radiators which have been common sights the past few mornings were experienced again today by drivers who failed to heed the warning of winter's approach last week.

At a meeting of the headquarters company of the 43rd division of National Guard, held at the state armory tonight, instruction in the care of pistols and close order drill constituted the evening's programme. The membership of the local military unit has increased to a point above its minimum strength. Winter activities in military circles have induced many youths to affiliate themselves with the organization which is commanded by Captain John J. McGarry.

The hook and ladder company and the hose company at the Central fire station in Union square responded to a chimney fire alarm at 5 o'clock this afternoon in the north end. The blaze which was quickly extinguished proved to be of little consequence in regards to property damage. Chief Thurston directed the work of the firemen.

Captain James J. Casey, head of the detective bureau of the Worcester police department, reported this afternoon, as a victim of an assassin, was well known in local police circles. Detective Casey played a prominent part in the undoing of Roland Balonis and Albert Raymond, "Icebox" bandits of Worcester Mass., now serving a life sentence at the state prison for the murder of State Policeman Irving H. Nelson of Danielson barracks at Pomfret on the night of April 6, 1928. Captain William J. Jarvis, a close friend of the slain Worcester police official, expressed regret when informed of Captain Casey's death.

Captain Casey was an ardent lover of outdoor sports and especially of the rod and reel. He made several fishing expeditions in company with former Chief Hill of Worcester to brooks and lakes in this region.

CENTRAL VILLAGE

Mrs. Everett Ladd, Mrs. Samuel Collins and Mrs. Warner Smith attended the meeting of Lucy Webb Hayes circle of Ladies of the G. A. R., at Plainfield.

Mr. Smallwood, employed in East Gardner, Mass., spent the week end with his family.

The Art and Travel club will be entertained today (Tuesday) at the home of Mrs. Everett Dawson.

Mrs. Mary Bates, of Plainfield, visited Sunday at the home of Mrs. Otis Conant.

Albert Warren, employed by the state highway department, injured his foot Saturday. A roller rolled on it, cracking a bone. He was taken to the Day Kimball hospital, Putnam, where an x-ray picture was taken. He returned home and his foot was put in a cast by Dr. James L. Gardner, who accompanied him to the hospital. He injured the same foot several weeks ago and has been back to his work but a short time.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Lowell Horton

Mrs. Lowel Horton, 85, died from heart trouble Saturday night at the Day Kimball hospital, having been taken there Friday afternoon. She had been very feeble for a long time but was able to be out until a few days before her death. She had been a resident here about 40 years and was always a helpful and willing worker in the church, the W. C. T. U., Missionary society and Ladies of G. A. R. She leaves a son, Walter Horton, who lived with her; a brother, Luther Smith, and a sister in East Killingly. Her husband died several years ago.

Henry Loughran was at Malden, Mass., Sunday.

Several local people attended the Sunday evening service at the Methodist church in Moosup.

A lad about 10 was brought Saturday from Wauregan to the office of Dr. James L. Gardner. He had been injured when riding on the running board of a milk dealer's car that ran into the corner of a house. The boy was taken to Day Kimball hospital, Putnam, where it was found that two bones were broken in his leg. He remains at the hospital for an indefinite time.

Mr. and Mrs. Otto Lehrer and children were guests, Sunday, of Mrs. Lehrer's mother, Mrs. Mary Johnson, at the home of Edward Spicer.

While flying over the dreary Nuliator Plains, returning from Perth to Sidney, N. S. W., Flight Lieutenant Eatone fell asleep at the controls when flying at 100 miles an hour at an altitude of 1,000 feet. When he awakened the machine was flying along normally, but the observer also was asleep.

WHEN A CHILD IS FEVERISH, CROSS, UPSET

Colic, gas, sour belching, frequent vomiting feverishness, in babies and children generally show food is souring in the little digestive tract.

When these symptoms appear give Baby a teaspoonful of Phillips Milk of Magnesia. Add it to the first bottle of food in the morning. Older children should be given a tablespoonful in a glass of water. This will comfort the child—make his stomach and bowels easy. In five minutes he is comfortable, happy. It will sweep the bowels free of all sour indigestible food. It opens the bowels in constipation, colds, children's ailments. Children take it readily because it is palatable, pleasant-tasting.

Learn its many uses for mother and child. Write for the interesting book, "Useful Information." Address The Phillips Co., 117 Hudson St., New York, N. Y. It will be sent FREE.

In buying be sure to get genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia. Doctors have prescribed it for over 50 years.

"Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Chas. H. Phillips Chemical Co., and its predecessor, Chas. H. Phillips, since 1875

Had Coon Dinner

At the Quinebaug camps Sunday afternoon a party of guests gave a grand coon dinner. The hosts were Ed. Murphy and Charles Russenas. The coon was one of the special Mt. Misery breed. The dinner was prepared by Mrs. H. E Paul, with the whole company voting in favor of the excellence.

The new Quinebaug viaduct will possess a feature hardly equalled by any other within this or any other state. The Pachaug river is spanned by the straight roadway, twice within a distance of 500 feet. The stream doubling upon itself in a few hundred feet makes this peculiarity necessary.

BIG BEND STATE NEWS FROM NORTHERN TOURIST

Writing from Memphis, Tenn., to The Bulletin correspondent a motor tourist gives the following interesting facts, under date of Nov. 21:

Day before yesterday we came over the Cumberland Mountains; part way down the mountain on the west side we stayed at Crossville. The hotel reminded me of Ira Lewis's of the old days.

The old houses of large size have two big chimneys, one on each end, and this hotel had two very large fireplaces and around these fires were a good many natives. Some of them were in rather rough clothes, but all were very cordial and gave way for us to get near the fire.

Coming up the mountains we had to make some very sharp turns and as the surface of the road was what they call "sand-clay," we had to be very careful. On one side the mountain hundreds of feet high, on the other side gullies the same depth. I don't know how many hair-pin turns there were. They told me there were 96. They also said that was nothing, as on the road from Bristol there were 360.

Murfreesboro was full of natives as we came through. I learned that it was on account of agents there were there to buy the tobacco crop. There were several large tobacco warehouses in that place. Coming down the mountain in the foot hills we passed through a corn belt. Some of these foot hills looked as if the surface of the hill was about on an angle of 45 degrees. The hill back of Enoch Cheney's is not to be compared with these corn fields. The pastures all had circular paths around them about three feet apart, for no cow could pasture with her head down hill.

In the mountains were no frame houses, all log cabins; one room mostly—some had two rooms. And to think that the men and women we saw were of the oldest and best blood in this country!

The men were all tall, and rather thin; the women were working in the little fields, each with the man, a mule, several children and two or three dogs.

After leaving the corn belt we came to level (rolling) land and the crop here was peanuts—fields, acres on acres of peanuts.

They were pulled up and put in shocks around a center pole.

We stopped at a place called Waverly, in a private house, as the hotel did not look very nice. One of the sons of this house was in the Naval academy at Annapolis, another son in Duke's college, another in high school and he wants to go to West Point.

At this house I met a steamboat captain on the Tennessee river. The Tennessee river is very high now and there was a question if we could get across, as the river was over the ferry slip and we might not be able to get near the slip or on the boat. The captain told us what to do and we got across all right. There was a ferry boat that left one minute ahead of us that got stuck in some trees after leaving. The water was so high that the trees must have been 20 feet under water. I was told that the water was 40 feet deep at this point and the captain said it was running 14 miles an hour. He told me at extreme low water it was four feet, and his boat could navigate in low water better than in high, especially up-stream.

After leaving the Tennessee river we came to a cotton belt, nearly all the farmers are Negroes (Niggers they are called here) and the picking was by men, women and children, all black.

We passed several cotton gin mills and usually at these points were mule teams loaded with cotton to be ginned.

As we came nearer this city we passed four mule wagons loaded with baled cotton—the drivers of these mule teams were mounted on the rear wheel mule. We saw several 5-mule wagons, three abreast leading, with the Negro driver on the near wheel mule.

This city is the center of the cotton trade in this section. On front street, next to the river, are cotton brokers' offices, and nearly every one you meet has cotton sticking to him. Men with whiskers, all look like old men. One old Negro had a bunch of cotton on one side of his face which made him look grotesque.

Splendid city, some buildings 20 stories high.

We go from here to Little Rock, and then to Hot Springs, Ark.

I am astonished at the energy and enterprise of the people in the cities.

An Ailing CHILD

Are you prepared to render first aid and quick comfort the moment your youngster has an upset of any sort? Could you do the right thing—immediately—though the emergency came without warning—perhaps tonight? Castoria is a mother's standby at such times. There is nothing like it in emergencies, and nothing better for everyday use. For a sudden attack of colic, or the gentle relief of constipation; to allay a feverish condition, or to soothe a fretful baby that can't sleep. This pure vegetable preparation is always ready to ease an ailing youngster. It is just as harmless as the recipe on the wrapper reads. If you see Chas. H. Fletcher's signature, it is genuine Castoria. It is harmless to the smallest infant; doctors will tell you so.

You can tell from the recipe on the wrapper how mild it is, and how good for little systems. But continue with Castoria until a child is grown.

CONNECTICUT FARMS

Connecticut isn't a state whose interests are chiefly centered in agriculture. It is placed among the important manufacturing states of the country and yet there is a large acreage that is devoted to the various branches of farming. It has its good farms and its poor ones. It has those which are advantageously situated and those which are not, but it is keenly interested in endeavoring to have all of them put to the best possible use.

In a recent statement which has been given out by the state department of agriculture it is set forth that in comparison with two years ago there are now in Connecticut less farms for sale than there were in 1927. The department has employed the same method in compiling a list of farms for sale in the two years in connection with the service which it renders and it finds that where there were 215 listed two years ago there are but 114 on its for sale list now.

Even though it is not claimed that this includes every farm that is for sale in the state, it represents the response to the department's efforts in both years and it is therefore a fair presumption that the situation at the present time is much better. It would also indicate that a greater interest is being displayed in the possibilities of agriculture in this state, for with less farm land on the market it is apparent that someone is putting it to profitable use.

Connecticut has been persistently endeavoring to develop a greater interest in the possibility of its farms. There have been set forth the opportunities for increasing production in various directions with the idea of raising a larger proportion of the farm products which the people of this state consume. And it is not solely garden truck and vegetables that are included. Connecticut raises much tobacco, but its acres which would not permit of that can be employed for dairying, fruit growing, tree growing or the raising of chickens, sheep and turkeys, and out of the combination it would appear from the decrease in the number of farms for sale that those who have been giving study to the situation have found opportunities worth improving.

BAD DRIVING CONDITIONS

Only a few weeks ago special warnings were issued to motorists to exercise extra care in order to meet the dangerous conditions that were created by the leaves and rain. It was good advice, even though it developed that the dry weather helped to reduce the hazard somewhat and, even though there is never any opportunity of telling how many accidents were prevented thereby, there is no doubt there were many.

We have now reached another period of the year when added caution is needed to secure proper protection in case of icy pavements. It goes without saying that there should be careful driving, but in the interest of prevention it is none too soon to put the chains into the car and keep them there in case conditions require their use. There is no telling when they will appear.

Over the week end in western Massachusetts rain and snow covered the highways with sheets of glare ice. Many were not prepared to deal with the treacherous situation and others didn't consider it necessary to begin so early. The result was that there were many jams on steep hills which the cars could not make, many cases of skidding and ditching because it was impossible to control the machines, many collisions for the same reasons and one woman had a narrow escape after plunging into a river.

These predicaments are the natural result of weather conditions and it is a wise driver who is prepared to cope with them, to say nothing of being disposed to drive cautiously whether he is using chains or not. Under all conditions care is needed for, even though one car may have chains because of the foresight of the driver, there is no assurance that the others will have and it is frequently necessary to keep out of the other fellow's way.

The number of accidents which cannot be avoided is large enough without having it increased, as is being done each day, by those which can and should be prevented, and when the extra hazardous periods of the year roll around with their uncertainties there are opportunities for bringing about decreases which every driver should employ.

CONGESTED PATENT OFFICE

According to the report which has been made by Commissioner Robertson of the patent office at Washington, each year is placing a larger volume of business before the bureau and because of a lack of experienced men it is not making very flattering progress in handling it.

It is an office which calls for much detailed work by careful and experienced examiners. It is an office that is regarded by many corporations as the training school for future employes and they proceed to take them away yearly, to the handicap of the bureau. Commissioner Robertson points out that as the result of an increased personnel during the last half of the fiscal year under review there was a decrease of 5,414 in the number of applications awaiting action, but in spite of that there still remained 193,788 which had not been acted upon and at the rate of gain it would require from five to six years to catch up with the applications and act upon them within a month or two.

When he declares that the patent office is in need of more help he is unquestionably dealing with facts. It is a condition which has existed for a number of years with the situation getting steadily worse and complicated by the ability of corporations to hire away some of the best examiners.

New inventions are constantly being sent in for patent action and yet there are so many ahead of them that it will probably be years before the inventors know whether they have a patentable article. In fact, they may long be dead before the patent office is able to act upon the application.

There are two good reasons why the office should be giving better service. In the first place it is due to the inventors to know within a reasonable time whether their claims are good ones and several years cannot be regarded as a reasonable time. In the second place the patent office is self-supporting. It receives from the applications more than enough to maintain it and it is only fair that its work should be speeded up by employing the necessary help at such an increase as may be justified in order to hold the valuable examiners. The congestion in the patent office ought to be ended as quickly as possible, consistent with accurate work.

SENATE RESPONSIVENESS

There were those in the senate last week who did not relish the manner in which that august body had been criticized and they proceeded to express themselves in regard thereto. They took exception to the opinions that had been expressed concerning the failure of the senate to accomplish what was expected and some were even called before the lobby committee because they dared to give their views concerning the coalition and its effect.

Among those who voiced his resentment was Senator Harrison of Mississippi. He objected to the wholesale criticisms and advanced the interesting opinion that "Today this senate is more responsive to the will of the American people than ever before."

That is the Harrison method of justifying whatever pleases him, but such doesn't appear to be the case from the results that were accomplished.

It cannot be forgotten that the people elected Mr. Hoover by a huge plurality. That meant that they endorsed his policies and expected they would be carried out. The senate hasn't shown itself responsive to the will of the American people as expressed at the election a year ago if we can judge by the delay and the obstruction which the senate has caused.

The senate, through the coalition, has insisted upon going directly against the wishes of the president in regard to the flexible provision of the tariff and in regard to the debenture plan. It has also stood in the way of tariff action and brought about the failure of the special session of congress. That doesn't look very much as if the senate was very responsive to the will of the American people as expressed last November. It is by the deeds, not words of explanation, that the acts of the senate will be judged.

SENATOR F. E. WARREN

Not very many people continue in the active conduct of public office after reaching the age of 85, but that was the record of Senator Francis E. Warren of Wyoming and as the dean of the upper house of congress he exceeded in length of such service any other senator. Up to the time of his brief sickness he was among the active members of that body and one whose appearance gave little indication of his years.

Senator Warren was a New Englander by birth, who years ago saw possibilities in the west and proceeded to develop them until he became one of the greatest sheep raisers in the country. But that did not command all of his attention. His ability was recognized in other directions and he was called upon for public service in city, state and nation, and in every instance he carried to such offices as he filled an integrity and an influence that commanded general confidence and respect. His personality and his judgment made it inevitable that he should be called to positions of responsibility. To him public service was a public trust and it was inevitable that he should rise to such a high and coveted chairmanship as that of the senate appropriations committee, in which he has been of the greatest value to at least three administrations.

He was a consistent worker, one who believed in getting things done and in looking after the welfare of the nation at all times. He will never go down in history as a waster of senate time, but his death, along with that of the late Senator Burton, means the removal of two stalwart and reliable national lawmakers whose places will not be easily filled.

EDITORIAL NOTES

It would be just retribution for the hit-and-run driver if he got treatment similar to what he gives others.

It was bad enough for Yale to lose the fence and then to lose to Harvard, but to have the fence returned at Cambridge was too much.

The man on the corner says: Too many disposed to bask in the good graces of Lady Luck and then kick if things go wrong.

When the senate declares it has done all it can do, it will have no difficulty in finding out that it was a poor job and leaves a bad impression.

That youth who was killed in the Maine woods for a deer will never know it but he probably took no greater chance than he would have on the highways of any one of several states.

If you have any cherished predictions regarding the coming winter it is time to trot them out. Unless they are wrong you get no credit by keeping them to yourself.

WASHINGTON AFFAIRS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—The extra session of congress came to an untimely end last Friday, and apparently has but few mourners in its funeral train.

Floor Leader Tilson, close to President Hoover in views as well as in personal relations, condemns the action of the senate in not passing the bill, but even Tilson probably would not care to have the matter run along the line of the last few weeks, unless some agreement could be made to settle the wide differences that have arisen within the party.

Unless the senate factions are playing the Uncle Billy Possum game, and merely playing dead, some of the threatened feuds will not appear when congress convenes next week in regular session. That applies to personal, not to political coalition.

Watching the senate as it went through the final pangs of dissolution, was much like attending a talkie. But we needed the old-type screen-flash announcements to tell us what it was all about.

For instance, Senator Walcott, a member of the Young Turks, or young guard, would assure you there was not a bloc and there was no leader to the movement. It was simply an effort to pass a bill that would allow President Hoover to keep his campaign pledge. Next you would approach a member of the old guard, who would not only assure you it was a bloc, but would name the leader. Then you would stop—look—listen, as at a grade crossing, and decide it was a bloc, but lacked a leader.

Next you settled down to watch the senate as a whole. From the press gallery you would see Walsh of Massachusetts, democrat, pointing an accusing finger at Blaine of Wisconsin, an insurgent, who had been condemning everything that bore a republican tag, especially if it related to New England. Walsh is a staunch democrat, but had sided with New England republicans on certain schedules he believed essential.

Bingham bore the brunt of the old guard fight for Connecticut's interests, and Walcott stood firm for them under the new guard make-up. So Connecticut found itself in the palm of a helping hand, from both factions.

While all this was going on it was interesting to see how cleverly the democrats managed the matter. Senator Pat Harrison would softly tiptoe over to LaFollette, whisper in his hear, receive a nod of assentment, then slip back to his seat in the front row of the democrats. Every now and then Smoot would slide over to Walsh and give him pointers, as they were in accord on the schedule Walsh was defending. Close by was Norris, insurgent leader, tipped far back in his chair, smiling complacently at every tirade into which Blaine burst, especially when he attacked the Cheney silk makers of Connecticut. Once during the confusion, one of the senators said the heads of the Young Turks were so swelled that he wished he had a tape measure so to prove it. At that Norris shuffled over to the table known as the "Grundy Piggly-Wiggly" shop, and brought back a yard stick. In the confusion and laughter that followed, Norbeck, insurgent, got the floor, and referred, by a slip of the tongue, to "Our great senator from Borah," whereupon there was another uproar. Sometimes LaFollette led the fray, at other times Blaine or Norris, depending on the schedule. Jones, republican leader, did not hold much of a following, but he followed his own lead, which is more than can be said of some of the self-designated leaders of the opposition.

But when the curtain fell, harmony prevailed. Men who had wrangled and called each other names, said good bye with hand shakes and smiles; the wounds created by Senator Moses' utterances regarding the insurgents have quickly healed; the threatened break between Metcalf and Moses failed to materialize, and when they met, there was a cordial hand shake, broad grins, and "wish-you-well" attitude on the part of both. Senator Bingham met with nothing but courteous treatment and attention when discussing the tariff, from the very men who were foremost in grilling him a few weeks ago.

Very likely the old feuds will crop up again, but the night of the adjournment all the senators might have well joined in singing "All's Quiet Along the Potomac Tonight." But if the Vare case is followed by a renewal of the tariff when the session convenes next Monday, the whoopee for harmony may as well be scrap-heaped at once.

Representative Tilson will spend Thanksgiving in New Haven with his children. Mrs. Tilson, who has been abroad several weeks to place her daughter in school in Paris, will soon return and join Colonel Tilson here soon after the holidays.

Senator and Mrs. Bingham are established in their home here for the winter. Members of the Connecticut delegation in the house will all be in Washington before congress convenes Dec. 2. Their offices are now open and secretaries or clerks on duty.

The period of official mourning for Secretary Good puts a damper on many proposed Thanksgiving galeties, for in the high social circle it is the white house that sets the pace. Such a period of official mourning has never before been announced for a member of the cabinet. The president is wearing a band of mourning on his coat sleeve, which gives added evidence of the regard he held for the late secretary. It is an innovation, however, that has been the case in many other instances during the Hoover regime. It is the topic of the day in the social circles of the capital. The white house cancelled all dates for state affairs, and of course the cabinet and many others followed suit.

The hobby of Mrs. Floyd Davis, of Webster Groves, Mo., is remembering birthdays, and she not only remembers these birthdays, but sends each person who is listed in her birthday book a card on the anniversary. Some days she sends as many as ten cards. Mrs. Davis says that even in girlhood it was very easy for her to remember natal anniversary dates, and that at the present time she has a list of 1,000 birthdays. She only regrets that her list does not comprise every day of the year. There are twenty-one days on her calendar that are blank. She hopes, however, to have these spaces filled before long.

THE GOOD FOR NOTHING

Lucia thought of Green Haven and was unhappy. Unhappy, too, on a perfectly beautiful sunny afternoon. But what good was a sunny afternoon when one must preside over a sedate law office and finger a typewriter? Of course, there were the thin slants of yellow sunlight coming through the windows, and a purple-blue sky and a wind, but these were a luxury when one must continue to write about executors of estates, disabilities and modes of absolute ownership.

And Green Haven was such a glory in the spring, with the brown twigs turning green while you were looking at them—and the sun-warmed fragrance coming from the earth, and the creature noises that hummed right into your heart! Green Haven—where Mr. Roger was going that very afternoon to settle a will. Lucia wished she never had heard of law offices.

It was all very well, working for Roger & Roger, law firm. It had given her prestige to be the senior Roger's secretary for four years. But, somehow or other, distinguishing herself in the eyes of her business associates meant little. Her position with its increasing responsibility only meant that Thaddeus Roger, Sr., expressed his appreciation of her ability by giving her more work to do.

And so today, as she filled the portfolio for Mr. Brian Roger, Lucia Trent did so without being conscious of the nice smooth leather and the fact that Brian Roger was standing nearby admiring her. She knew that she looked especially nice and that Mr. Roger usually stood staring at the squares in the carpet. When she looked up a moment later her face flamed prettily, Brian Roger was intent upon her.

"Er—I guess we have everything," he muttered. "I'm driving today. The train's too stuffy. Besides, I want to investigate some land off the main road." His words, a little curt, came in swift jerks. Lucia had always favored "the silent member" because he rarely spoke unless spoken to. And she felt this was a good quality to possess.

She watched the tall, somewhat stooped man swing into his car and turn to give a quick glance at the building. Then he was gone. And Lucia—certainly feeling all of her thirty-one years that afternoon—opened the window and cooled her face in the wind. The drapes flapped importantly and papers slid off the desk into scattered heaps on the floor, but she was oblivious.

She, too, was skimming along a white road with the sunlight beating down upon her and the trees flying past. She was through with law offices. She ached for the seashore. Anywhere—somewhere—that meant the out of doors and freedom under a broad sky! She would tell them tomorrow she was leaving. She would take the bond money and buy a little shack with a thatched roof where she and her sister could live maybe six months, and—

Lucia looked up. Brian Roger, looking very stern and perturbed, stood in the doorway. The white papers on the floor seemed accentuated in the silence and the flapping window draperies were like silly ducks flapping in the wind. Lucia raised her deep blue eyes, slowly emerging from her fairy dream, and then realized at whom she was staring.

"That's all right. Leave them there. That's where they belong on a day like this," said Brian Roger as Lucia suddenly knelt to collect the bad white papers.

"Get on your hat, Miss Trent. I'm taking you to Green Haven this afternoon." Lucia stared again.

"I need a witness to the signing today. An old lady is leaving a fat fortune to a good-for-nothing nephew. You'll like her and we'll probably stay for the evening meal. Would you like to go?"

Lucia didn't have to answer. She flew for her hat and hummed a little song that made tears in her eyes.

On the white road, an hour later, with the trees flying past, and the sunlight beating upon her, Lucia listened to the grave voice beside her and decided it belonged to the most wonderful man in the world.

"And—er—Lucia, it's a little thatched house with the river just below. Do you think you could learn to love Green Haven? I'm the nephew, you know, who's been good for nothing for four years, because all this time—"

"You didn't know what you wanted," finished Lucia. "Well, neither did I—until now."—Exchange.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Scrapple

Mr. Editor There must be some unusual merit in the culinary art of New England, for I have been in many places, in many states and have noted signs which told a waiting and hungry world the news that "here tonight will be held a New England supper." Now I have been into some of these places, but I am free to say that they are not like anything that I recall, for where could an imitation be like the real article? Where could they make brown bread such as those old New England mothers used to make, and the echo says, "Where?" And I say, nowhere, for there seemed to be a charm, and a something in everything they did that was missing elsewhere. And the side dish that went with this confection, baked beans, that gave off an aroma that would appeal to even a man with a jaded appetite and cause him to eat.

Then there is that dish called succotash, one of the real things that was handed to the early settlers by the original Americans, the Indians. Say, boy, isn't this one of the finest things you ever ate when made from young green corn, brown beans and a piece of salt pork to give it just the real flavor? By the way, don't forget to give this just a little bit of sugar to sweeten it all. And yet a bright and sunny smile from one of those blessed old New England mothers would sweeten anything. Just a thought—do you recall when the brown bread would become very hard and the crusts were of the consistency almost of iron, how they would use these to make a drink, as a substitute for coffee? Take it from me, brother, it wasn't so bad. I wonder if this wasn't the forerunner of postum. That's all right; no extra charge for the thought.

Oh, yes, the New England supper would not be complete without the doughnuts, gingerbread and the many other accessories that went with it. Well 'tis said, imitation is the sincerest flattery. And they may imitate all this, but they can't beat it, nor even tie it. Perhaps you who read may ask, What has this got to do with "scrapple," and what is scrapple any way? Don't rush to the dictionary to find the meaning of the word, for this is one word that Webster missed. If you will read along you will be told. Many years ago, but to me it only seems a few days, in the Greenville section there was at one time only one butcher shop, and that was owned by Thad Gordon. This was located right opposite to the cobbler shop of Boss Palmer and here, in the rear room of this shop, they would try out leaf lard and the residue was called, for short, "Scrap," and was really scrapple. My dear young old friend, Oscar Carpenter, will no doubt recall this place and perhaps have heard of "scrapple" for the people would buy this by the pound. Now I want you housewives to note what was done with it, and here is the recipe, for this, with other pieces of meat or pork all chopped fine, was mixed with real corn meal, and with a little summer savory, sage, or a little thyme as a seasoning and a pinch of salt. It was then placed in the frying pan with a little fat and fried to a fine golden brown. Then with a little molasses on it, boy, was that good! Right here, as I write this, I can hear someone say, "I have an idea it must have been good." All right, no extra charge for this either.

At the beginning of this letter I made mention of the fact that Gordon's butcher shop was the only one in Greeneville at that time. That was so, but afterwards there was another shop started by two brothers named Billy and John McNaught at the corner of the "Lower" road and Eighth street. Bill, as we called him, has gone over the top, so far as I know. But John is living on Sachem street in the Rose of New England. I know, for I called upon him only a short time since. Now you know what scrapple is. I want to say just recently, to be exact, in the New York Evening World of the date Nov. 14, page 23, there was an article that was sponsored by the bureau of economics extoling the goodness that is to be found in corn meal and, in fact, all corn products, but particularly corn meal when combined with the necessary things to make that wonderful old-fashioned dish called scrapple.

The Use and Abuse of Tobacco.
By Horace W. Soper, M. D.
St. Louis.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

There are some simple truths worth telling about the use of tobacco. This is particularly true now that women and girls have taken up the habit of smoking cigarettes. Smoking is like everything else connected with the human body and with health—it requires intelligent information.

It is well known that nicotine is a deadly poison. One or two drops of the pure drug placed on the tongue of a dog will produce instant death. Yet in ordinary moderate smoking very little nicotine is absorbed—far less than alarmists would have us believe.

The physiologic action of tobacco may be summed up as follows:—It has a mild sedative effect upon the nervous system, it helps one to relax, aids digestion and contributes to a general feeling of well being. After meals is the best time to enjoy a smoke. But it is wrong to pull away at the weed while you are working. Unfortunately tobacco is generally abused. Among the evil effects of excessive smoking are disturbances of the nervous system, palpitation and irregularity of the heart, eye diseases, bronchitis and dyspepsia. The inveterate smoker who always has a pipe, cigar or cigarette in his mouth invites disaster. Pipe smokers' cancer of the lip has long been known. The tissues of the mouth and throat are not built to stand such continuous irritation.

The correct method of smoking is to expel the smoke through the mouth or nostrils. Inhaling the smoke is a pernicious habit. It should never be drawn down into the bronchial tubes. Moreover this habit destroys the fine aroma of the tobacco. Inhaled smoke has a characteristic odor. Cigarettes are not more injurious than the pipe or cigar but because of their mildness they are more easily inhaled. This fact accounts for the prejudice against them. The young person usually learns to smoke from some older schoolmate and is told that he is a sissy if he does not inhale. Once acquired the habit is difficult to break. Young adults should be taught the correct use of tobacco. Remember that your boy and girl are going to learn to smoke. Instead of trying to bribe them or deluding yourself with the fond hope that your children are different, see that they are properly instructed how to use tobacco. In time I believe that our schools and colleges will be equipped to instruct students in regard to this matter.

Individuals differ in the amount of tobacco they can consume without harmful effects. Therefore learn your own dosage and stick to it. Make that question one for your doctor to think about when you have your annual health audit.

In advertising or condemning cigarettes many absurd claims are made. They will never be used as a cough medicine or as a substitute for food. Neither is the moderate smoker driving nails into his coffin.

"That's your own fault," she replied snappily. "You should have got up and shot the person. If you hadn't been such a coward, you wouldn't have lost your money."

"Yes, perhaps you're right, my dear, but then I didn't want to become a widower."—Boston Transcript.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25—Army folk doubly mourned the death of Secretary Good.

In the few months of his cabinet service they had come to look upon him as a friend; and to rely upon his long congressional experience and political sagacity in the difficult times they see just ahead with army legislation.

Although he lacked personal military experience, Mr. Good had proven himself a fighting man of courage and judgment in his dozen or more years "on the hill."

He had a host of personal friends in both house and senate. No man could have reached the place he held when he retired voluntarily to private life without marked abilities generally recognized by his colleagues.

For Mr. Good was not alone chairman of the powerful appropriations committee of the house in a critical period, but also headed the select committee that pressed the budget legislation to accomplishment.

Upon that fact present day military leaders like General Summerall, chief of staff, have banked heavily in formulating under presidential instruction the projects still to be disclosed for curtailing army yeoats without impairing efficiency of national defense.

They felt that in Jim Good they had an able and friendly chief who had both the ear of President Hoover and an influential voice "on the hill".

Drafted.

Good was drafted for cabinet service by President Hoover over his own strong protests. He had no desire to return to political life. Mr. Hoover found himself in need within his official family, however, of just those congressional contacts the Cedar Rapids attorney could supply.

It was an added argument for Good's selection that his appointment was not of the lame duck sort. He gave up his place in congress with almost certain prospect of continued reelection. He could have aspired hopefully to a seat in the senate.

Nor was Mr. Good anxious to assume the burdens of executive responsibility that fall on the shoulders of a cabinet officer. He had little taste for that and probably it was only the great urgency of the friend whom he had done much to elect to the presidency that moved him to come back to Washington as war secretary.

Once having made the decision, however, he threw himself into his work with characteristic wholeheartedness.

In Football Row.

Secretary Good had few departmental controversies to handle. That lay ahead of him in the regular session of congress. He did, however, personally enter into the row between West Point and Annapolis over severed football relations. And his attitude then did much to endear him to West Pointers.

For Mr. Good met the arbitration suggestion of his colleague, Secretary Adams, which implied, at least, designation of Secretary Wilbur as arbiter, with the calm assertion that he felt quite able to handle his own department unaided. That killed the arbitration plan a-borning. It also squarely endorsed the West Point view.

Take Care of Your Kidneys!

One should not neglect kidney and bladder irregularities.

TOO many people sacrifice health by failing to heed the early danger signals of kidney disorders. Even minor irregularities should be dealt with promptly.

A drowsy, listless feeling; lameness and stiffness; constant backache and bladder irregularities are often timely warnings. Don't neglect them.

To promote normal kidney action and assist your kidneys in cleansing your blood of poisonous wastes, use Doan's Pills. Recommended the world over.

50,000 Users Endorse Doan's:

Benjamin Faucher, 262 Silver St., Manchester, N. H., says: "For a time I couldn't do any work, for when I bent over my back would ache. My kidneys acted very irregularly and I felt all out of sorts. After using Doan's Pills, I felt fine again."

This Nurse Just Couldn't Stop Coughing

Specialists Didn't Help

It takes more than ordinary sweet, syrupy cough mixtures to stop a stubborn cough that persists in hanging on.

For slight ordinary coughs almost any decent cough syrup will do, but if you have one of those tough ones that won't yield to common remedies and often keeps you awake at night then your one best bet is Bronchuline Emulsion.

Often one half bottle forces the most stubborn cough to yield and you are better almost before you know it.

There is no sugar, chloroform or dope in Bronchuline Emulsion; it's a wonderful medicine for people who are getting over a heavy cold or an attack of Flu.

A New York nurse just couldn't stop coughing even after consulting specialists yet one half bottle of Bronchuline Emulsion did stop it—completely.

Ask Lee and Osgood or any good dealer for a bottle—often three or four doses will stop an ordinary cough.

LIQUOR CASE TRIALS FILL WHOLE DAY IN NORWICH CITY COURT SESSION

The city court put in an all-day session Monday, which was not adjourned till 7:10 in the evening in the trial of the liquor cases in which arrests were made on Nov. 19. When court adjourned for the day there were still several of the 20 cases which had not been disposed of.

It was disclosed by the testimony that Armistice day was the time when operators from the Forest detective agency of Boston, New York and Bridgeport did their big work in securing the evidence upon which warrants were issued for the raids of the 19th. These operators were known by numbers and were James Bustis of Bridgeport, No. 11, Herbert J. Gray of Boston, No. 12, and John Williams, colored, No. 13.

Method Followed

The usual practice in most of the cases, according to the testimony, was for one of the operators to find a place where he could buy drinks. Later he returned with one of the other operators, who waited outside while the first man went to make the purchase of a bottle, having previously been searched by his companion operator to see that he had no bottle when he went in. If the man came out with a bottle this constituted the evidence, which was duly labelled by the operator who had secured it. Williams, the colored man, was the operator who was chiefly used to purchase the liquor for evidence and Gray was the man who watched outside.

Cost For Detective Service

According to William Forest, proprietor of the agency, the city paid the agency $10 per day for each man plus expenses, and there were four working here.

It was understood that of the $650 to be paid to the agency $400 was to come through the clerk of the city court and $250 through the city treasurer.

Joubrey Case First Heard

The case of Monica Joubrey of 154 West Main street was first heard. Williams testified that he took a room at the Joubrey place when he came to the city on Nov. 4 and represented himself as a chauffeur. He bought drinks there at two different times and got his evidence on Nov. 11.

When the marked bottle in the case was shown in court it was found that it was marked as having been bought from George Cross. Counsel for the Joubrey woman at once moved for a dismissal of the case against her which Judge Libby granted.

Cross and Lee Discharged

Cross, who was in court as a spectator, was then arrested at the direction of City Attorney Cassidy, but was discharged late in the afternoon, when court adjourned.

George Lee of 5 Forest street, who was charged with keeping liquor with intent to sell, was also discharged. He was found at the home of Emma Leviano house at the time of the police raid.

Jail Sentence

Mrs. Emma Leviano of 5 Forest street was tried and found guilty on the charge of selling liquor. She was given a sentence of 30 days in jail.

Williams gave testimony that he secured the evidence at her house on Nov. 11, buying a half pint for 75 cents.

Found Guilty on Two Counts

Joseph G. Bedard, 55, of 163 West Main street, was found guilty of actual sale and of keeping with intent to sell. He was bound over to the criminal term of the superior court and he furnished a bond of $1,000.

Gray testified that he bought a bottle of beer and a drink of liquor at Bedard's place on Oct. 29 and came back on the 31st with Forest. At this time a half pint was purchased for $4 and kept on evidence.

The raid on Bedard's place was made by Officers Michael Pounch and Francis Kelly, the former testifying that Bedard dumped liquor into the sink when they came in, but they got three dozen bottles of beer and a quart bottle with about one glass of liquor in it.

Another Jail Sentence

Mrs. Viola Neville of 28 High street was found guilty of keeping with intent to sell and was sentenced to 30 days in jail.

Gray testified to buying liquor which he drank at her place and on the second visit which he said was on Nov. 11, he secured a half pint which he saved for evidence. He said he paid 50 cents for it. Mrs. Neville denied selling him any liquor on the 11th, saying that she was doing some washing that day for Mrs. Adelard Morin at 22 Perkins Avenue. A telephone call to Mrs. Morin substantiated this statement and this count against Mrs. Neville was nolled.

The evidence on which she was convicted of keeping with intent to sell was secured in the police raid by Officers Joseph Farrell and Clifford Crary when they found three milk bottles full of alleged liquor at her place.

Savard Held in Jail

During the court session, Walter Savard of 332 Blackstone street, Providence, who was stabbed in a row at the Neville place some time ago and has been in the Backus hospital, was brought to court, having been discharged from the hospital Monday.

He was charged with liquor violation. Not being able to furnish $500 bonds he was taken to jail to await trial of his case on Wednesday morning.

Afternoon Session

After the noon recess which was taken at 1 o'clock, court came in again about 3 in the afternoon to resume hearing the liquor cases. At both the morning and the afternoon sessions all the spectators seats in the court room were filled and the window sills also held their quota of spectators.

Jail Sentence For Bush

The afternoon session began with the case of James Bush, colored, of 150 West Main street, on the charge of selling liquor and keeping with intent to sell. The man had no lawyer so that Attorney Thomas M. Shields volunteered to represent him and was assisted by Attorney Thomas J. Kelly.

Williams testified to buying a half pint of whiskey and a bottle of beer on Nov. 6 at Bush's place and a half pint on Nov. 12 in cooperation with Operator No. 12. He identified a bottle in court as the one he bought.

Gray told of searching Williams before he went into the Bush place and when Williams came out he had the bottle which was in court, the witness said.

Officer Frank Gwiazdowski testified to going to the Bush place on Nov. 19 and finding on the sideboard a tall, brown bottle of liquor which was produced in court. He made a thorough search of the house.

Bush, called to the stand, said he had seen Williams, but Williams had never been in his house, denied he ever had any pint bottles in his house but only the tall brown fish bottle which was for his own use. He said the officer came in and asked if he had any liquor and the witness told the officer he had the bottle on the sideboard which the officer took. The witness denied that he was home at the time Williams said he was there, because he remembered he was moving a house at the time. He raised a laugh in the court room when he said he was working for the hardest man in town to get any money out of and he had no money to buy liquor.

Russell Morgan, colored, denied that he was ever in the Bush house with Williams when the latter bought liquor from Bush.

Williams testified to a time when he played Morgan for the championship of the West Side in coon-can, this in contradiction to testimony of Morgan that he never played cards with Bush.

Judge Libby found Bush guilty of making actual sale and gave him a sentence of 28 days in jail, taking into consideration the fact that Bush has already been in jail five days.

Dispute Over House Number

In the case against Mrs. Agnes Hall, colored, of 13 North High street, Williams testified that on Nov. 8, he bought a half pint of whiskey and four bottles of beer from the accused and on Nov. 11, with Operator No. 12, bought a half pint of whiskey. The price was 75c. He identified the labelled bottle in court. Operator No. 12 stayed outside.

Gray testified to the usual search of Williams and finding a bottle of liquor after Williams came out of the Hall place.

Mrs. Hall said her house number was 11 North High street, not No. 13. She denied ever having seen the two operators before. She said she had never been in trouble before.

Judge Libby had the city directory brought into court and the book showed there was no number 11 but there was a number 13 North High street.

The witness, Williams, said he got the number of the house from seeing the number on a letter addressed to Agnes Hall which he saw on a shelf in her house.

Judge Libby made the sentence on Mrs. Hall 25 days in jail with the appeal bond set at $200. Mrs. Hall has been in jail since her arrest.

Given 30 Days in Jail

Abraham Scott, colored, of 42 High street, charged with a sale on Nov. 12, pleaded not guilty. Attorney J. J. Kelly was his counsel.

Williams testified that Charlie Woods took him into Scott's place on Nov. 6 and on the 12th he bought a half pint of whiskey there from Scott. On the previous time, he had bought four drinks from a woman at the place, but Scott wasn't there then. Williams said he first saw Scott on Nov. 11 at Emma Laviano's.

Gray told of following the usual method search before Williams went into the Scott house.

Scott, the accused, testified that he saw Williams at Emma Laviano's on the 8th, 9th and 10th and at Emma Laviano's, but denied that Williams was ever in his place at 42 High street.

In asking for sentence, Prosecuting Attorney Cassidy stated that Scott was a second offender, having been arrested on July 22, 1929, but the court record showed there had been two counts and he had been fined $25 and costs on a disorderly house charge.

Judge Libby imposed a sentence of 30 days in jail.

Forest Street Place

Pauline Wilbur, alias Midgie Simons, of 5 Forest street, and Arthur Simons, were the next cases taken up.

Williams testified to buying liquor at the place from Midgie Simons on Nov. 8 and again on Nov. 12. At that time Operator No. 13 was with him. This is the house where Emma Laviano lives upstairs. The witness identified a half pint bottle.

Gray told of waiting outside and being able to see quite a crowd in the place when Williams went in.

None of the witnesses said anything

COUNTY SHEEP BREEDERS ELECT CLUB OFFICERS

The New London County Sheep Breeders club held its first meeting Monday evening at the New London county farm bureau office in the Shannon building with about 15 members present, when the officers for the ensuing year were elected and an interesting talk on sheep, illustrated with slides, was given by Prof. L. V. Tirrell of Connecticut Agricultural college, Storrs.

The officers named follow: President, Harold Gray, of North Stonington; vice president, Birdsey Palmer, Jr. of Pendleton Hill; secretary, Richard Palmer of Pendleton Hill. It is the plan of the organization to meet at least three or four times a year, the members to be informed of the date through County Club Agent Randolph Whaples. Moving pictures on sheep will be shown at these meetings.

The talk by Prof. Tirrell and the slides primarily had to do with the various breeds and types of sheep that are raised in the New England states, these consisting of Shropshires, Hampshires, Dorsets, etc. The pictures depicted the proper way to feed them, how they are herded onto trains for shipment and views of single sheep that are the best in their breed. One scene showed the ravages to sheep from dogs, with two of the latter perched upon a pile of dead sheep in a lot.

Prof. Tirrell spoke at some length upon the number of sheep killed by roaming dogs, citing several cases of destruction in this section and stating that the reason why more sheep are not raised in Connecticut was due primarily to the fence proposition and secondly because of dogs destroying sheep. A valuable suggestion upon the proper procedure to take in the case of sheep killings by dogs was given by the professor.

Numerous questions concerning what variety of sheep is best adapted for the vicinity, the best for breeding and for raising for their wool were asked by the youthful sheep raisers after the talk and answered by the speaker, who also gave other valuable suggestions at this time.

MRS. EDSON F. GALLAUDET UNDERGOES OPERATION

Monday morning, in Providence, at the Jane Brown Memorial hospital, Mrs. Edson F. Gallaudet, of East Greenwich, R. I. underwent an operation for appendicitis. Late Monday evening Mrs. Albert H. Chase of Sachem terrace was notified that the operation appeared to be very successful and that the patient had rallied in a most encouraging way.

Mrs. Gallaudet is wife of the president of the Gallaudet Engineering company, pioneer builders of airplanes. Before leaving for East Greenwich the family resided at 270 Broadway, Norwich, also for a time in Huntington place. Mrs. Gallaudet is a daughter of the late U. S. Senator Cockrell, of Missouri and Washington.

BEAUMONT, LEBANON NATIVE, IN SCIENCE BIOGRAPHY

In October, 1832, there was executed at Plattsburg, N. Y., a contract the like of which has probably never been written. Under its terms, Alexis St. Martin, Canadian woodsman, bound himself to serve for one year as the subject for any experiment that Dr. William Beaumont, army surgeon, might wish to make upon him. In return, he was to receive "good sustenance, suitable housing, wearing apparel, washing and $120."

The events which led up to this unusual agreement were quite as interesting as the agreement itself. On June 6, 1822, St. Martin, a hardy day laborer, had been accidentally shot, receiving at short range a full load of buckshot and powder in his left side. Beaumont, then acting as post surgeon for Fort Mackinac, was called immediately. In his diary he wrote at the time: "In this dilemma I considered any attempt to save his life entirely useless. But as I had ever considered it a duty to use every means in my power to preserve life when called to administer relief, I proceeded to cleanse the wound, give it a superficial dressing, not believing it possible for him to survive 20 minutes."

The patient survived, however. Beaumont placed him in the military hospital where he dressed the wound once and often twice a day for more than a year. Ultimately, St. Martin fully recovered—except for a wound in his stomach; a flap of the inner lining formed a valve, closing the orifice, but easily pushed back exposing the interior of the organ. All of Beaumont's efforts to close this opening were unsuccessful.

The idea of using his patient for scientific studies in digestion did not occur to Beaumont, apparently, until 1825. By this time, St. Martin had become, to Beaumont's diary again reveals, "quite a lusty man, capable of doing heavy service such as chopping wood and keeping the house fires burning." The doctor then, began to experiment; he studied the temperature of the stomach in digestion, the movement of the walls, the relative digestibility of foods; he discovered that the gastric juice, when removed from the stomach and placed in a bottle, digests food in the same way but more slowly than under natural conditions.

With his experiments only fairly begun, Beaumont awoke one morning to find that his patient had stolen away. It was only after a four years' search that the truant was located in Lower Canada where he had married and become the father of two children. At Beaumont's expense the whole family was transported to Fort Crawford on the upper Mississippi, where the doctor had been assigned. The experiments were resumed and continued for almost two years, when St. Martin and his family, again increased by two, were allowed to go home with the promise to return when requested.

In the fall of the next year, Beaumont summoned his patient in the hope that he might be able to take him to Europe for further study. Having had one unfortunate experience in losing the subject of his experiments, the canny doctor sought to safeguard himself this time. It was on this occasion that was executed this unique contract.

Early in 1834 the patient "with the lid on his stomach" returned to Canada, and although Beaumont succeeded in locating him and made many attempts to have him returned, he failed. St. Martin lived 37 years longer than his doctor and died at the age of 83. His family refused an autopsy and buried him eight feet below the surface in order to make attempts at resurrection difficult.

The results of the experiments with St. Martin were published in book form by Beaumont in 1833, at his own expense. The paper was poor; the illustrations were crude; typographical errors were many; but it constituted one of the greatest contributions ever made to scientific knowledge. Dr. Victor C. Vaughn, former dean of the School of Medicine and Surgery at the University of Michigan, in writing the account of Beaumont's life for the recently published second volume of the Dictionary of American Biography (Scribner) states that most of his 51 conclusions are still accepted and since that time, no writer on gastric digestion has failed to utilize Beaumont's work.

Dr. Beaumont was a native of Lebanon, where a memorial boulder to him was dedicated on Lebanon green in June, 1926.

CAPT. ISAAC B. SMITH COMMANDS GIANT TANKER

"Among Ourselves," the monthly publication for and by the employes of the Standard Oil company of California and issued from San Francisco, devotes a page to the whale of tankers—"California Standard," the largest oil-tanker having a Pacific coast city as her home port. Her commander is a Norwich boy, Captain Isaac Bromley Smith, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. George S. Smith, of Laurel Hill avenue.

This leviathan was built for the Standard Oil company of California by Krupp's Germaniawerft, A. G. at Keil, Germany, her construction keeping Captain Smith in Germany for over eight months last year. She was launched there Aug. 25, 1928, after being christened by Mrs. Margaret W. Perkins, daughter of Director R. C. Warner, of the company.

April 6, 1929, she left Germany on her maiden voyage to San Francisco Bay, via the Panama canal, arriving May 7th. She was given a tremendous welcome, as brought to her home port by Capt. Smith.

She is 530 feet in length, 68-foot beam, makes 11.5 knots when fully loaded has a capacity of 5,549,761 gallons, and is equipped with two full diesel engines of 1600 h. p. each.

It was computed that if stood on end she would tower 200 feet above the 22-story Standard Oil building in San Francisco. Her three steam-driven cargo pumps have a capacity of 9,000 barrels per hour. She is provided with the latest in equipment—gyro compass, mechanical automatic steering device, radio compass and electric sounding machine. Everything possible has been done for the comfort of the tanker's personnel, their accommodations being light, airy and comfortable for all climates.

After being admired at San Francisco's water front and visited by thousands the California Standard proceeded to San Pedro, where she took aboard 5,543,000 gallons of gasoline for shipment to London. Her service will take her on many transoceanic trips, since she will be operated under the American flag in the company's offshore trade out of San Francisco and Los Angeles harbors.

She is contrasted in pictures with the company's first tanker, the George Loomis, which was 175 feet in length and had a capacity of 273,748 gallons, her power being reciprocating steam, 400 h. p.

LEGHORNS DID BEST IN THIRD WEEK AT STORRS

In the third week of the Storrs egg-laying contest, all but one breed continued to show further improvement in the matter of production. The average was 1 per cent as compared with the previous week and 8 per cent better than the corresponding week a year ago.

The total production for all pens was 5,487 eggs or a yield of over 64 per cent. A-1 class Leghorns did best with a batting average of .712, Barred Rocks with .661 ranked second, and Rhode Island Reds with .658 were almost good enough to tie. These three breeds therefore led the list in the matter of pen performances.

Rhode Island Reds, although at the top of the heap, did not succeed in sweeping the other breeds off their feet as they did a week ago. They share honors almost equally with White Leghorns and Barred Rocks. Homer R. Rowell with a pen of Reds from Groveland, Mass., headed the list with a score of 56 eggs for the week. Harold G. Colt of West Hartford, Conn., and Hanson's Leghorn Farm of Corvallis, Oregon, sponsored Reds and Leghorns respectively that tied for second place, with 65 eggs each. Tolvonen Farm's pen of Leghorns from Girard, Pa., was a close third with a lay of 64 eggs. Two pens of Barred Rocks entered by R. Walter Bishop of Guilford, Conn., and Westfield Poultry Farm of Westfield, Mass., and George Lowry's Leghorns from West Willington, Conn., all tied for fourth place with 60 eggs each.

The mash formula below is an attempt to solve, at least in part, one of the practical poultryman's principal problems, namely, that of feeding. Good, clean, wholesome feeds are unqualifiedly recommended in respect to each ingredient in the mixture. This mash formula is supplemented by a daily allowance of 3 pounds of dry oats for each 100 hens. The oats are germinated, mixed with one pound of semi-solid buttermilk, and to this is added not more than one-quarter pint of cod liver oil.

200 lbs. Coarse yellow corn meal
100 lbs. Wheat bran
100 lbs. Wheat flour middlings
100 lbs. Ground oats, 38-40 lbs. per cent protein
25 lbs. Meat scraps, not less than 50 per cent protein
25 lbs. Alfalfa leaf meal, not more than 20 per cent fiber
25 lbs. Edible steamed bone meal
25 lbs. Dried skimmed milk or dried buttermilk
5 lbs. Common salt
630 lbs. Total.

The leading pens to date in each of the principal varieties are as follows:

Barred Rocks—R. Walter Bishop, Guilford, 175; Westfield Poultry Farm, Westfield, Mass., 168; David Deaterly, Fayette City, Pa., 167.

White Rocks—Davidson Bros., Upton, Mass., 155; Harold F. Barber, Valecroft, Dover, Mass., 154; Kalerok Farm, Westford, Mass., 147.

White Wyandottes—The Locusts, West Cornwall, 155; Ebenwood Farm, West Bridgewater, Mass., 114.

Rhode Island Reds—Harold G. Colt, West Hartford, 190; Homer R. Rowell, Groveland, Mass., 185; F. S. Chapin, Longmeadow, Mass., 168; W. Otis Day, Westford, Mass., 165.

White Leghorns—Geo. Lowry Poultry Farm, Inc., West Willington, 183; Hasson's Poultry Farm, Corvallis, Ore., 168; Hollywood Poultry Farm, Woodinville, Wash., 166; Otis T. Gregg, West Willington, 163; Fox & Sons' Poultry Farm, Little Falls, N. J., 163.

MADE FEDERATION REPORT TO NORWICH TEACHERS

Miss Mary Rogers, one of the three Norwich delegates to the recent meeting of the Connecticut Teachers federation in New Haven, presented an interesting report of the federation meeting before the Norwich Teachers league Monday afternoon at Broadway school house. Miss Anna McGuinness and Miss Amelia Young also attended the New Haven meeting.

Various business matters were discussed at the league meeting and the plan for holding a series of whists was left in the hands of the executive committee.

BOY SCOUTS "THANKED BY ROBERT FLETCHER POST

A letter has been received by the Boy Scout headquarters from the commander of R. O. Fletcher post A. L. thanking the scouts for their Armistice day co-operation. The letter follows: "On behalf of the members of the R. O. Fletcher post of the American Legion we have been asked to express to you their appreciation and thanks for your co-operation in the celebration of Armistice day, 1929. You have helped to make the celebration of the day what the Legion desired it to be."

CHRISTMAS TREES AT REID & HUGHES STORE

Christmas decorations are making their appearance in the city, the first to be noted being on the front of the building occupied by the Reid and Hughes company on Main street. Here three large Christmas trees have been attached to the second story and decorated with vari-colored lights. The scene offered a pretty appearance early Monday evening when the lights were lighted.

Husband Repelled By Varicose Veins

Bob was fast losing every bit of his love for Mary—somehow those hideously enlarged Varicose Veins on her legs made him shudder—actually repulsed him.

Foolish Mary—if only she'd got a bottle of that wonderful Mother's Emerald Oil from any druggist, her ugly veins and bunches would be gone almost in no time.

This powerfully penetrating and antiseptic Oil quickly stops the pain and soreness, marvelously strengthens the legs and swiftly reduces the most enlarged and swollen veins to normal. You'll soon be able to wear the sheerest hose and short skirts without the slightest fear of criticism—the appearance of your legs will improve 100% when those unsightly blue veins disappear.

TWO MAINE RUNNERS FINISH IN DEAD HEAT FOR CROSS-COUNTRY HONORS

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—(AP)—Lanky Harry Richardson and wiry little Francis Lindsay, team mates and seniors at the University of Maine, coasted home ahead of a big field today to finish in a voluntary dead heat for the Eastern Intercollegiate cross-country championship and set a new course record.

The University of Pennsylvania, placing five men in the first 27, captured team honors after a lapse of a dozen years with a point score of 42. Michigan State, the first intersectional entry in the long history of the classic six-mile event, was second with 81 and Bates college third with 93. Syracuse was fourth; Maine fifth; and Penn State, the defending champion, sixth, in a record turnout of 19 full teams.

Never before in the 21-year history of the event did the six-mile varsity chase result in a tie and seldom has it seen such an exhibition of running as these two Maine country boys. Lindsay and Richardson, put on over the hills and flats of Van Cortlandt park. Their time of 30 minutes six seconds was five seconds faster than Jimmy Reid of Harvard made last season, the year the new course first was run. Bill Cox of Penn State covered six miles at Van Cortlandt park in 1926 in 30:02 but not over the same route.

Nearly 100 yards behind the Maine pair as they crossed the line hand in hand came Lauren Brown of Michigan State, followed closely by a team mate, Clark Chamberlain. Joe Hagen of Columbia was fifth, while in sixth and seventh positions were Bill McKniff and Carl Coan, members of the Pennsylvania freshman team of last year, leading a well balanced varsity array to victory. John Montgomery, tenth; Dan Dean, 12th; and Roland Ritchie, 27th, were the others who scored for Penn. All but Montgomery, a member of the last Olympic team, are sophomores.

Another course record was shattered in the three-mile freshman chase when Joseph McCluskey of New Britain, Conn., running for Fordham, finished in 14 minutes, 47 seconds—24 seconds faster than the winning time of last year. George Barker of New York university was second a dozen yards back; and Wilson Streeter, Syracuse, third. New York university gained team honors for a metropolitan sweep of both titles with Cornell second; Syracuse, third; Yale, fourth, and Penn State, fifth.

An unprecedented pack of 135 harriers representing a total of 22 institutions got away at the crack of the gun in the blue-ribbon varsity feature but before they had traveled a mile and a half Lindsay and Richardson had forged into the lead and after that they were never headed or even threatened, although both were attacked by cramps mid-way in the race.

It was little Joe Hagen of Columbia, destined to finish fifth, who took the lead at the start, closely pursued by Paul Rekers, the Penn State ace who was classed as one of the leaders but was fated to finish only 52nd. These two, with John Fortier, of Manhattan; Charley Meisinger of Penn State, and Nat Lerner, N. Y. U., set the early pace but as they hopped the first hurdle and headed for the hills Lindsay pulled out of the ruck, looking over his shoulder for Richardson who soon drew up beside him. Lerner, in third place, faded and as they swept down the wooded grade Chamberlain of Michigan State was third but a full 50 yards back. This order continued but in the last few hundred yards, Brown of Michigan State, passed his team mate to take third place.

Lindsay and Richardson, eager to share the laurels, called to the official auto to make sure a dead heat would be allowed, then came in side by side, the happy-go-lucky Lindsay grinning broadly. He was second last year and fourth the year before while Richardson was second in 1927 and fourth in 1926.

Jadick Kayoes King Tut

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 26—(AP)—Johnny Jadick, Philadelphia, scored a technical knockout over King Tut, Minneapolis, in the eighth round of the 10-round feature bout at the arena tonight.

Jadick scaled 134 1-2; Tut, 136.

Pablo Blanco, Cuban featherweight, won on a foul over Vidal Gregorio, of Spain, in the third round of their 10-round fight.

Blanco weighed 122 pounds, Gregoria 121.

COLLEGE TEAMS WORK HARD FOR THANKSGIVING DAY BATTLE

NEW YORK, Nov. 25—(AP)—There are very few days of practice left for the teams which will participate in the east's big Thanksgiving day football battles and they are making the most of what time there is. Only the few who do not play until Saturday could indulge in the luxury of an easy day's drill.

Pennsylvania, in its last hard workout before going to the Jersey shore to rest before the Cornell clash at Franklin field, put the finishing touches on its offense. One change in the Penn backfield is expected for the game, Greene replacing Opekun at fullback. Cornell also staged its final long home workout, easing up a bit after a hard week end. Two hours of signal drill and limbering exercises made up the day's stint for the Red team.

Carnegie Tech, hopeful of its first victory over New York university, put in its longest and hardest day of the year. The Tartans did well against the N. Y. U. plays run by the scrub team. Carnegie also leaves home tomorrow. N. Y. U. likewise did some defensive work against a scrub "Carnegie" eleven with considerable success. The Violets worked longer and harder than they usually do on Monday, adding signal practice and kicking to the long dummy scrimmage.

Colgate and Brown, which clash in another of Thursday's leading battles, brought their squads to full strength as they entered the last stage of preparations. Three regulars who have been out of the Brown lineup since the Dartmouth game came back for an hour of dummy scrimmage but one more, Quarterback Gurll, may not be ready for the game. Colgate got two men back and sent them through a long defensive drill. No scrimmage was on the program for the semi-final practice of the year.

Columbia, after a week end rest, had an hour of rough scrimmage against a "Syracuse" team made up of the strongest scrub lineup available. The scrubs stopped the Lion backs at first but could not keep on with their good defense.

Army and Navy, which meet strong opponents in Notre Dame and Dartmouth Saturday instead of playing each other, went about their preparations more slowly. Biff Jones, Army coach, put his team through the usual Monday routine of blackboard drill and group work. Navy had a long signal and formation drill, using Lou Kirn, star of the West Virginia Wesleyan game, at halfback.

PUTNAM-KILLINGLY GAME MAY BE PLAYED AT GOODYEAR

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 25—The scene of the Putnam-Killingly high school Thanksgiving day game is slated to be played in this city, but owing to the torn up campus at the local school which is being repaired and the poor condition of the utilized gridiron at Adam's field on Main street, Putnam's only alternative, it was expressed to school circles today that a possibility exists whereby the ancient rivals may clash at Goodyear, scene of the 1928 battle. Coach Noyes refused to comment on the existing possibility this afternoon, stating that he had not conferred with Killingly high school officials, but asserted he would give the matter consideration tomorrow and would announce where the game will be played.

LEE, ME., PRODUCES FAST CROSS-COUNTRY RUNNERS

LEE, Me., Nov. 25—(AP)—This little town with its school of less than 100 students, Lee academy, lays claim to some distinction as a cradle of cross-country runners. Harry Richardson joint winner of the varsity title, and three others who acquitted themselves well in the intercollegiate championship in New York today are Lee boys and products of the academy.

Besides Richardson the runners of whom Lee is proud are Norman Whitten of Bates, who finished fourteenth; Stuart Jones, Bates, forty-fourth and Madison Haskell, Maine, fifteenth in the freshman event. Francis Lindsay, who shared the title with Richardson, is from Orono.

MARSTERS WILL SEE GAME FROM THE BENCH

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 25.—(AP)—Al Marsters, still the east's highest football scorer, today rejoined the Dartmouth varsity football squad as it prepared to leave for Atlantic City to complete its training for Saturday's clash with the Navy at Philadelphia.

Marsters, however, will have less chance of playing against the midshipmen than any of the 27 substitutes who will accompany the regular players. The Green backfield ace, with his back injured in the Yale game, encased in a metal brace, was accorded the trip by the Dartmouth athletic council, to enable him to end his college football career sitting as one of the Green's coaching staff.

TWO HIGH SCHOOL GAMES IN E. C. ON THANKSGIVING

There are but two high school football games remaining for the fans of Eastern Connecticut, but both are between old rivals and promise plenty of action. The two games will be played on Thanksgiving day and bring together Westerly and Stonington at Stonington and Putnam and Killingly at Putnam.

This is the second meeting of Westerly and Stonington, Westerly getting a last minute touchdown to win Armistice day at Westerly. Putnam is favored over Killingly.

Randall Beats Zivic

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 25.—(AP)—"Tiger Joe" Randall, Elizabeth, Pa., won a decision over Jack Zivic, Pittsburgh, in a ten-round bout tonight. They are welterweights.

The Washington and Lee-Florida game is going to be a dry affair.

That is, it will be dry if the Jacksonville authorities have anything to say about it.

Last night the authorities of that southern city issued a statement that any spectator seen taking a drink out of a bottle would be given the gate and his money refunded.

Now ain't that going to be a hot football game—no liquor and no raccoon coats. The law says no liquor and the weather says thumbs down on the racoons.

Can you just imagine what that edict would do at a game in a New England stadium? Just think it everybody seen taking a nip out of a bottle was shown the way out what it would mean.

By the time the second half arrived all who would be left in the stadium would be the two teams, substitutes and coaches. And I'm not so sure about them.

Believe me folks the authorities of Jacksonville have got their work out cut for them. It looks like it will take the entire population of Jacksonville to carry out that order.

One official to watch each spectator at the game is just about the proportion. Of course, I'm basing my opinion on northern football crowds, the southern spectators may be different.

And they say they'll give the spectator who is ushered out his money back. Ah, there's an idea. Stay and see the game until it's almost over and then hit the old bottle a crack and out you go, collect your money and you've had a nice afternoon, all for nothing.

Of course us prohibitionists admire the stand of the Jacksonville authorities just like we admired the fellow who was going to be shot to the moon in a rocket. We would like to see it done but we doubt it can be.

And it's going to be mighty hard to smuggle in a quart into the stadium without a racoon coat. You know many a quart can be hidden under a racoon coat.

It's a tough life.

"Y" Athletic Activities

The Hartford Y. M. C. A. Leader corps will be the guest of the local Leader corp tonight. Both corps will participate in an informal round of apparatus work. Games will be played on the gym and a social period will follow in the dining room.

The basketball team will play the Heller Bros. of Willimantic Thanksgiving night. A preliminary game with the Bear Cats of New Britain will start at 7:30 p. m.

The church league will start on Dec. 2nd with 7 church teams in the race. The Gamma club won the cup last year.

All members of the Leader corp are asked to be present tonight at 7:15 sharp.

Saturday's Game

Capt. Malagridis led his team to a 4-0 victory over the Athletics last Saturday. It was hard fought and the fact that the Cubs took advantage of their foul shots made victory more certain.

For the Cubs the lineup was Pavlok, L. Litchenstein, Allegredi and Sinay guards, Malagriedis (C.), N. Ververis, P. Ververis, forwards. Athletics: W. Riordan, J. Riordan, Baker and Hastings, (C.), guards, Budjek, Sandberg, Kennedy, Hotchkiss, forwards.

Goals, Cubs, Malagriedis (2), N. Ververis (2). Two ten minute halves.

Capt. Skee Harmon and his Jr. Wildcats were tamed again Saturday by Jimmy Hoffman and his young Hawk's. The Jr. Wildcats led at half time 1-0. The Young Hawks came back in the second half and they were too much for the Wildcats.

Lineups: Wildcats: Harmon, Capt., Hill, P. Tongren, Edwardson, Chards, Bynnam, Degley, Tedeshi Evans, Standish, forwards. Young Hawks: Lane, Panagreston, Cochrane, D. Tongren, guards, Hoffman (C)., Brown, Wrona, Kostisky, Carlson, forwards.

Goals, Jr. Wildcats Harmon (1), Young Hawks, Panagiston, Kustisky, Mascione. Two ten-minute halves.

THREE BROWN REGULARS RETURN TO THE LINEUP

PROVIDENCE, Nov. 26—(AP)—Three regulars who have been out since the Dartmouth game, three weeks ago, returned to the Brown lineup today and went through an hour of dummy scrimmage in preparation for the Colgate game to be played Thursday morning. Frank Gurll, quarterback; Joe Schein, tackle, and Ernest Hapgood, guard, all took their places and indicated that they will be ready for action. Some doubt hinged on the status of Gurll, for Link Fogarty has handled the quarterbacking satisfactorily and will probably start with Gurll in reserve.

McLaughry ordered the men to the blackboard drill following the field session this afternoon, and Dr. Snell explained the Colgate attack in detail.

CLARKE TO MANAGE ALLENTOWN E. L. TEAM

ALLENTOWN, Pa., Nov. 25—(AP)—"Bill" Clarke, Princeton baseball coach and former catcher on the famous Baltimore Orioles team which included John McGraw and Wilbert Robinson, today was selected manager of the Allentown Eastern league baseball team.

Clarke formerly managed the Toledo club in the American association and Albany in the old New York State league.

Denies He Will Leave Minnesota

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 25.—(AP)—Denying that he would leave Minnesota, Dr. Clarence Spears, football coach, today said "there is nothing to the whole matter" of his accepting appointment as head football coach at the University of Washington.

Fred Luehring, athletic director of Minnesota, supported Dr. Spears' statement. Dr. Spears will leave tonight for the east. He will attend the coaches meeting of the Big Ten in Chicago Dec. 6.

PLAINFIELD PROS TO CLASH WITH HOBOKEN GERMANS TOMORROW NIGHT

On Wednesday evening the Plainfield Pros tackle one of the strongest teams yet encountered this season when the Hoboken German Five comes to Plainfield. The Germans have a record that is very impressive and one which puts them along beside the fastest teams in the country. Included in the list of wins by the Germans are found such teams as the Renaissance Five, the New York Celtics, Patterson Lexingtons, Chicago Americans and a number of other American basketball league teams.

It goes without saying that any team that can boast of victories over the Renaissance and Celtics is bound to give the Plainfield Pros plenty of opposition. The Germans have two players in the Johnson brothers who are known throughout the basketball world. Charlie and Bill Johnson were members of the famous Johnson brothers team and are classed as exceptionally fine basketball men. Bill is at present leading the Hudson county league in scoring while Charlie is classed as one of the best guards in the league. Others in the Hoboken lineup are Katz, a former all-scholastic forward, Stephen, all-Hudson county center and Jimmy Magna, formerly with the noted St. Joseph team of Hoboken.

Plainfield without a doubt will have to step to take the measure of this club. Manager Salisbury is undecided as to his lineup for Wednesday evening. The team he sent in against the New York Pros last week worked well but there may be a shift this week. His team will be chosen from Pop Williams, Brusso, Kasper, Bernot, Conway and Dissinger.

In the interests of the public Manager Salisbury has decided to cut his reserved seats to half the number. In previous games 200 seats had been reserved for out of town patrons who could not get to Plainfield early enough to get good rush seats. However, the patronage was not large enough to warrant continuing the plan and he has thrown open 100 of the reserved seats to the public.

N. B. A. TO INCLUDE WRESTLING IN ACTIVITIES

CINCINNATI, O., Nov. 25.—(AP)—Wrestling was adopted as its own by the National Boxing association in a special session of that body here today and hereafter the grappling game will be under the exclusive control of the association, according to Stanley M. Isaacs, Cincinnati, president. Steps are to be taken at once to investigate conditions and to standardize the sport he said.

Al Haft, manager of John Pezek, heavyweight contender, placed a certified check for $10,000 in the hands of President Isaacs to bind a match with Gus Sonnenberg, who claims the title, or with Richard Shikat, recognized in several states as titleholder.

All wrestlers, managers and promoters must register with the association before they can take an active part in the sport and no champions will receive recognition until after January 1. In the meantime the board suggested it would be acceptable to the association if promoters would get together and put on an elimination tournament.

President Isaacs said he was working to formulate a boxing law to put before the next legislature legalizing the sport in Ohio, stating that although boxing has been conducted in Ohio for many years, the law against prize fighting has never been changed.

Mickey Walker, considered the middleweight champion by thousands of boxing followers, was not recognized as the titleholder. His name did not appear in the association's report because he is under suspension for violating National Boxing association rules, President Isaacs said.

DARTMOUTH TO PRACTICE AT ATLANTIC CITY

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 25.—(AP)—The Dartmouth Athletic council, taking cognizance of the wintry weather conditions that have hampered the Green's varsity football team during its preparation for next Saturday's clash with the Navy at Philadelphia, today authorized Head Coach Jackson Cannell to take his players to Atlantic City on tonight's midnight train from White River Junction, Vt.

The original plans would have delayed the Indians' departure until Wednesday night.

Since the Cornell game, here a week ago last Saturday, the Dartmouth squad has had just two outdoor drills, and one of these was run off on a snow covered gridiron.

The Dartmouth football party will reach Philadelphia at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning and will go on to Atlantic City by bus. The first workout at that resort is scheduled for tomorrow afternoon in the Municipal stadium.

Nothing in the way of extensive work was accomplished during today's indoor session. The Green regulars had their first defensive drill against Navy plays as presented by "Swede" Youngstrom's fourth team, and then held a brief dummy scrimmage using Dartmouth running plays.

ACADEMY LOSES TEN REGULARS BY GRADUATION

Many new faces will grace the Academy football lineup next fall as the majority of the regulars of this year's team, which was the first to beat Bulkeley in New London in 13 years, will graduate next June. Only two of the regular linemen, Les Crowell, the hero of the Bulkeley contest and Fat Stevens, are left for Coach Whitney. There was no regular backfield combination used through the season but Frank Barber, Bud Fontaine, Billy Brewer, Sherry and Sura are slated to leave.

Coach Whitney will lose Capt. Bergbinzo and Ed. Flather, ends, Hertz, tackle, Wojstasiak, guard and Cruickshank, center.

There are several backfield prospects remaining for the 1930 team who made a good impression this year and they include Zictoriac, little quarterback, Cotter, Golembeskie, Bob Geer and Armstrong. On the line Mack at center and Mike Abugle, who plays either guard or center, should be a big help in Whitney's plans for construction next autumn.

However, the athletic careers of all of the above seniors have not ended, especially Bud Fontaine, catcher on the baseball team, Sherry, infielder, and Chet Berghinzo and Flather, who are looked upon as strong candidates for next year's nine.

Slattery Beats Rosenbloom

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 25—(AP)—Jimmy Slattery, local lightheavyweight tonight took a ten round decision over Maxie Rosenbloom, leading candidate for Tommy Loughran's vacated lightheavyweight crown. Slattery weighed 167 1-2; Rosenbloom 171 1-2.

ACADEMY IN TIE FOR SECOND IN CONFERENCE

By winning from Bulkeley Saturday in the annual classic, the Academy eleven finished the season in a tie for second place with Windham in the Eastern Connecticut-Western Rhode Island conference. Westerly high, although beaten last Friday by Chapman Tech, won the title. The Wildcats won from Chapman Tech, Stonington and Bulkeley and lost to Windham and Westerly.

The championship was decided on a point basis this year for the first time. Two points were given for a victory and one for a tie, but Westerly would have won the title even with the old percentage system in use. Bulkeley was the only member of the Big Six that failed to win a conference game. No team was undefeated in the race.

Saturday's Academy-Bulkeley game brought the conference campaign to a close. This was the second year that six teams had been represented, Stonington winning the title in 1928 and also in 1927 when four teams found it out for the championship.

	W.	L.	Ties	Pts.
Westerly	4	1	0	8
N. F. A.	3	2	0	6
Windham	2	1	2	6
Stonington	2	3	0	4
Chapman Tech	1	2	2	4
Bulkeley	0	3	2	2

SONNENBERG MAKES PEACE WITH ILLINOIS COMMISSION

BOSTON, Nov. 25—(AP)—Gus Sonnenberg announced here today that he has complied with the order of the Illinois athletic commission to post a $2,500 forfeit to give any grappler that body named a chance to wrestle for his heavyweight mat title.

The Illinois commission, according to Sonnenberg, intends to supervise a wrestling tournament in that state and compel the champion to wrestle the winner. As a result of posting the forfeit, Sonnenberg said, the Illinois body had re-instated him in that state.

As soon as he regained good standing in Illinois, Sonnenberg said, he promptly agreed to meet the winner of a tournament to be staged in one of the Chicago ball parks next summer by Promoter Joe Coffey of that city. The latter, Sonnenberg said, has offered him $200,000 for the title match.

TAKE A NIP AND OUT YOU GO AT JACKSONVILLE

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Nov. 25.—(AP)—Persons caught taking intoxicating drinks at the Florida-Washington and Lee game here Thanksgiving day will be escorted to the gate, given their money back and ejected from the stadium.

City and county authorities decided today to avoid arrests if possible, but were agreed that all persons "drinking in plain sight" should be ejected.

Pop bottles also came under the official ban. To avoid any trouble with this sort of thing, vendors of soft drinks will be required to use paper cups.

SHARKEY TO SEE SCOTT-VON PORAT BOUT

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—(AP)—Jack Sharkey, Boston heavyweight, informed Madison Square Garden officials today that he would come to New York to "scout" the Otto Von Porat-Phil Scott match at the Garden, Dec. 9. Sharkey evidently believes that the winner of the engagement will be the man the Boston sailor will fight at Miami in February.

Speedboys Beat New London.

Sunday afternoon at Ashland park, Jewett City, the Speedboys nosed out the New London Boys' club team, 7-0, in what proved to be the hardest fought and most thrilling game of the season. The Speedboys were outweighed, at least 10 pounds to the man but more than made up for their lack of weight with a stonewall defense and a tricky offense.

The outstanding feature of the game was the passing combination of John Walsh, Speedboy back, to his brother, Red, on end. Two of their passes covered 50 yards each and the last pass made it possible for Murphy, fullback, to score the only touchdown of the game when on a fake line buck Murphy crossed the opposition and slid around right end for 15 yards and goal. Murphy added the extra point on a placement. After the touchdown the play seesawed up and down the field with Jewett City having a slight edge. The game ended with the ball in the Speedboys' possession on the New London 20-yard mark. Captain Marinello and Babe Mondor played wonderful games on the Speedboy line while Walsh, Murphy and Jube excelled with back field. The rest of the team played a hang up good game but were less spectacular.

Mileski of Greeneville, refereed. Kolbus was head linesman.

VIC HARDING SAID TO BE OUT OF DANGER

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 25.—(AP)—The condition of Victor M. Harding, Harvard varsity football end, who sustained a rupture of the spleen in the Yale game Saturday, was reported as improving at the Stillman infirmary late today. Infirmary officials said he was "still comfortable" and "out of danger."

Harding, whose home is in Hubbard Wood, Ills., was injured shortly after he had entered the game in the fourth period. It was not until several hours later, however, that the seriousness of the injury was learned and an operation performed.

Shikat Throws Caiza

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—(AP)—Richard Shikat, recognized as heavyweight wrestling champion in New York and Pennsylvania, tonight threw George Caiza, in 58 minutes 54 seconds of their match at the 71st Regiment armory. Shikat weighed 217 pounds; Caiza, 230.

DIVORCE SUIT BROUGHT AGAINST WALTER HILL

LIVINGSTON, Mont., Nov. 25.—(AP)—Mildred Hill today brought suit in district court here asking divorce from Walter Hill, youngest son of the late James J. Hill, railroad magnate. Mr. Hill operates a large stock ranch near here.

Papers in the case were immediately withdrawn from court files. Mrs. Hill's attorney would not divulge their contents.

AGRICULTURAL INTERESTS

THINNING TIMBER PAYS

Thinning of crowded stands, on a 26-acre tract of southern white cedar concluded this year on the Lebanon State Forest, N. J., yielded products worth a total of $8,760, according to reports received by the forest service of the United States department of agriculture. The operation was conducted as a cedar-thinning experiment by the New Jersey state conservation department. On individual acres of dense young growth, the value of the thinnings reached $500. The financial return was realized from work which left the stand in better condition than before, with the best young trees released for more rapid growth.

SAVING FARM-SLAUGHTER WASTE.

Open kettle rendering is the easiest way to utilize wastes from livestock slaughtered on the farm. A 65 gallon farm cauldron or open-kettle cooker may be bought for around $20, and a wooden cover and stovepipe for about $2 more. This outfit may be used for cooking feed, scalding hogs, and making soap as well as for rendering offal. In tests conducted by the United States department of agriculture, 17 pounds of crude tallow or grease and 63 pounds of wet tankage were obtained from the cleaned offal of thirteen 65-pound lambs. The offal was boiled for about six hours, requiring 69 pounds of wood for fuel. The contents of the kettle were allowed to cook over night and the cake of tallow and grease simply lifted off the next morning.

PASTURE-IMPROVEMENT WORK STARTED IN FIVE STATES

The task of reviving old, work-out pastures in the east and replacing the native grasses with improved varieties in the south is a job forage specialists of the United States department of agriculture have undertaken as a part of an extensive program of pasture improvement. Results already obtained show that application of fertilizer, reseeding, and getting rid of weeds are the first steps in reclaiming run-down pastures.

During the past year cooperative pasture experiments have been started in Pennsylvania, Michigan, and Georgia. Similar work will be started in Louisiana and Mississippi next spring. Pasture experiments in Florida have been under way for the last few years. Other states are anxious to cooperate with the department as soon as arrangements can be made to begin the work.

In these experiments various grasses are grazed under similar conditions and their value compared. Then the same grasses are grazed under different conditions to determine which system of grazing is best. In many cases grasses and legumes new to the region are added and their growth is carefully measured in terms of gains in the animals pastured. Numerous tests designed to ascertain the kind and amount of fertilizer to use are included in the experiments.

Records from New York show that cows on pasture during the summer months returned a profit of 24 cents a day on the milk sold. During the winter, because of the high cost of feed, there was an actual loss of 4 cents a day. This is due in large measure to the small labor cost of maintaining pastures. Results in Pennsylvania show that the labor cost of producing 1 ton of digestible nutrients in a hay-grain rotation is twenty times as much as the labor cost for the same amount of feed in the form of good pasture. Experiments in Florida have shown a net return of $7.82 per acre from improved pastures grazed by beef steers.

An increase of 30,000,000 acres in the area of improved pastures in the humid eastern states has been suggested as a possible remedy for overproduction of some of the staple crops.

PREVENTING A FALL MOLT.

From the 1st of November until the 1st of January, while practically all of the old hens are in a molt, the pullets must be depended upon to carry the load, insofar as egg production is concerned. With the growing tendency to hatch pullets earlier house them earlier, and count on early pullet production through September and October, the problem of carrying the pullets straight through the winter without a break is becoming more difficult.

The first requirement in preventing a fall molt is having a flock of pullets which are bred to lay and reared free from parasites and disease. Pullets must be housed for winter when they start to lay, before they have lost flesh on range, and they must be kept in good flesh by good feed, in spite of high egg yields.

Unless one is very familiar with poultry and their changes in body weight due to production, it is well to band and weigh at least a half dozen pullets from each pen or flock each week or ten days. If, from the time of housing, the pullets are increasing in weight as well as laying heavily, there should be no difficulty; while if pullets gain for a time, and then start losing weight, the necessary feeding changes must be made to correct this condition.

The amount of grain fed per 100 birds per day should not be less than 12 pounds if the birds are well matured, if the pullets are laying heavily, they may consume 15 to 16 pounds of grain per 100 birds per day. This amount may be increased to 18 and even 20 pounds, as production advances and the weather gets colder. It is safe to say there is no risk in feeding birds all the grain they will consume at night; but better mash consumption can be obtained if the birds are kept slightly hungry for grain during

BOY OF 14 STEALS CAR FOUND IN FRONT OF CHURCH

A 14-year-old Westerly boy was taken into custody Monday morning by troopers of the Hope Valley barracks. He was later turned over to the Westerly police. The lad had taken a machine owned by Richard M. Graves, 28 River street, Wakefield, from in front of a church on Pleasant street, Westerly, late Sunday night. Graves reported the theft to Patrolman Paul McCarthy of the Westerly police and the latter notified the state police at Hope Valley barracks. The boy offered no resistance when stopped by a trooper a short time later.

The lad still is detained at the Westerly police station awaiting a decision of the authorities concerning possible action. It is alleged he stole a bicycle a week ago.

FUNERAL

Alton L. Clark

Monday afternoon funeral services for Alton L. Clark were held at the Gavitt funeral home. The services were conducted by Rev. B. U. Hatfield, pastor of the First Baptist church, the bearers being James Browning, Sidney Fiddes, Harold Clark, John Blanchard, Ernest and Leo Pelland. Burial was in River Bend cemetery.

WEDDING

McKenna—Glynn

Monday morning at 8 o'clock, Miss Mary Glynn, of Westerly, was united in marriage with John McKenna, Pawcatuck, at the Church of the Immaculate Conception, the ceremony being performed by Rev. J. F. Vincent, who also celebrated the nuptial mass. The wedding marches were played by Mrs. James McMahon, and during the ceremony Martin J. Spellman sang "O Promise Me," and a Hymn to the Sacred Heart. The bride wore brown chiffon with trimming of chiffon velvet, and a hat to match, and carried yellow chrysanthemums. She was attended by her sister, Miss Cecilia Glynn, of Providence, who wore apple green crepe with hat to match and carried yellow chrysanthemums. James McKenna, a brother of the groom, was best man.

Following the ceremony, a breakfast was served at Elm Tree Inn. Mr. and Mrs. McKenna left by automobile for a trip to New Haven, New York and other cities, and on their return will make their home on Mechanic street. The bride received many beautiful gifts.

Elks' Lodge of Sorrow

At the United theatre Sunday, Dec. 1, at 3 p. m., Westerly lodge, No. 878, B. P. O. E., will hold its annual public lodge of sorrow. Rev. E. Dean Ellenwood, of Woonsocket, will deliver the memorial address and there will be a special musical program.

Monday morning at Washington county courthouse, Frederick Von Shuckman, of 37 East 64th street, New York, pleaded not guilty to a charge of reckless driving, causing death, when brought before Judge Charles A. Walsh in the superior court. The case was continued to next Monday, the respondent furnishing bail in the sum of $2,000. The accident occurred in the town of North Kingstown, Sept. 6, last. The automobile crashed into a tree, according to the investigation made by the state police, and Jack James, proprietor of a store at Watch Hill and one of the occupants, died after the crash.

Another occupant of the machine, Myra Carlson, of Bradford, was taken to the South County hospital at Wakefield and was later discharged. She was soon afterward admitted to the Margaret Edward Anderson hospital at Westerly and is still being treated there.

Salvatore D'Onofrio pleaded not guilty to a charge of possession of a wild bird. A game warden testified that he took a loon from D'Onofrio at Narragansett Oct. 13. Judge Walsh fined him $10 and costs.

Raymond A. Roberts, commonly of North Kingstown, pleaded not guilty to being a vagrant at North Kingstown on the 20th day of October.

In the case of State, Leo A. Celia vs. Antonio Sciola, charged with reckless driving, the defendant having been fined $50 in the district court, Sciola entered a plea of nolo. Judge Walsh refused to disturb the fine of the district court and sentenced the respondent to pay a fine of $40 and costs.

No More Sore Aching Joints

No Matter What the Weather Rheuma Is Guaranteed to Relieve All Your Rheumatic Aches and Pains or It Costs You Nothing.

Refuse to be one of the vast army of men and women whose joints swell, stiffen and throb with nasty, twitchy, shooting pains every time the weather changes. For they are the unlucky people who through neglect let their rheumatic condition become chronic.

Any time you feel the slightest pain or discontent in your knee, elbow or wrist, in your fingers or in any muscle in your body, go right away to the handiest drugstore for a bottle of Rheuma—a wonderful pain destroyer that contains no narcotics or habit-forming drugs.

There is nothing like Rheuma to drive out the poisons before they have a chance to settle in the joints and muscles. Yes, Rheuma drives them out three ways—through the pores, the kidneys and the bowels. It stops rheumatic aches and pains the first day and quickly brings about a complete recovery.

If your attack is already under full headway and the leave movement of the affected parts is an aching torture, and you face days, weeks or even months of crippling pain and incapacity for work, by all means try Rheuma. It's just the thing to stop the hot, feverish, throbbing pains and cut short the length and severity of the attack.

Rheuma is a scientific, up-to-date combination of powerful ingredients whose effectiveness in the relief of joint and muscle infections is well known to the medical profession. Remember that Rheuma is not an external relief, but an internal remedy that is sold by Lee and Osgood and all good druggists with guarantee that it will end all your rheumatic suffering or it costs you nothing.

MYSTIC

Sunday, after having lunch at the church, 11 teams started out from the Union Baptist church for the Every-Member canvass, made each year about this time. Following are the teams: 1. Miss Pauline Miner, Mrs. J. E. Newbury and Mrs. George Richmond; 2. Mr. and Mrs. Albert Neff, Jr., and Miss Harriet Fish; 3. George S. Richmond and Guy R. Francis; 4. J. Harold Thorpe, Mrs. Gurdon Allyn and Mrs. Latham Packer; 5. Louis F. Allyn, Mrs. David M. Bennett and Mrs. J. Harold Thorpe; 6. Mrs. Louis M. Allyn, Mrs. Eleanor Lucy and Miss Dorris Bindloss; 7. Mrs. Albert Wheeler, who has been a surgical patient at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, New London, for about two weeks, was dismissed from that institution Saturday morning and returned to her home in West Mystic. She is improving rapidly.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Sinclair have left for Florida, where they will spend the winter at Orlando. Last winter they stayed in Eustis.

Mrs. Ira Avery was soloist at the Baptist church Sunday morning.

During the past week the West Mystic Parent-Teacher association met in the school house with 29 members present, and a number of guests from the Mystic Academy Parent-Teacher association. Mrs. Edith Lamb, vice-president, was in charge of the meeting in the absence of Mrs. Alice Gildersleeve, the president. The meeting opened by singing America. This was followed by the Lord's prayer. Various reports were given. It was voted to hold a whist soon and E. H. Collington was appointed on the committee. It was also decided to hold a Christmas party for the school children. The program consisted of a vocal solo by Mrs. Ira Avery, a violin duet by Miss Julia Avery and Miss Ruth Andrews, of New London, and a very interesting talk on China, Old and New, by Rev. F. S. Sanford, of Stonington. Rev. Mr. Sanford has traveled a great deal and knows how to make these talks interesting. Following this, refreshments were served and a social time enjoyed.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Edward Campbell

Mrs. Addie Lamphere Campbell, widow of Edward Campbell, died at her home in Old Mystic Sunday night, following a long period of ill health. She was born in Stonington in 1861, the daughter of Joseph Lamphere and Lucy Crandall. She had lived in Old Mystic for many years and in the house in which she died for nearly 25 years. She had also been a member of the First Groton Baptist church of Old Mystic for many years. She is survived by a brother, Frank Lamphere, and a sister; a daughter, Mrs. Maud Everett, of Essex; two sons, George Campbell, of New Britain, and Stephen Campbell, of Stonington, and several grandchildren. One of her grandchildren, Mrs. Lucy Everett Turney, with her husband, Judson Turney, made her home with Mrs. Campbell.

Mrs. Lucy Pollay, of Waltham, Mass., was a caller on friends in Old Mystic, Sunday, in company with her sister, Miss Agnes Chapman, of Boston.

Mystic Methodist church had the largest number present at the Sunday School institute held in North Stonington last Thursday evening from this part of the town: Rev. and Mrs. William M. Newton, Charles and Chester Gremley, Harry Board, George, Earl and Gordon Wallace, Eddie Dick, Donald Johnson, Mrs. Charles L. Crouch, Misses Thelma Crouch, Gladys Barber, Esther Barraclough, Mary Taylor, Lillian Duerr and Muriel Davis. Those attending from the Union Baptist church were Rev. Louis J. Shepler, Sands Fish and Mrs. David M. Bennett. The Old Mystic Methodist was represented by Rev. and Mrs. Homer C. Moore and son, Mrs. Elizabeth Hudson, Mrs. Thomasine Marchand, Mrs. Ella Marchand, Mrs. Belle Tift and Miss Beryl Marchand.

Mr. and Mrs. William Kalms and family are visiting relatives in Hackensack, N. J.

There was an attendance of nearly 75 at the Old Mystic Methodist church Sunday evening.

Miss Annie Lee has rented several rooms in the house belonging to F. A. Chapman, in Old Mystic.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Hodgson and two sons are spending this winter in the house at Old Mystic owned by Dana T. Gallup, of Boston, and rented by Mr. and Mrs. Albert W. Burrows. Mr. and Mrs. Burrows have gone to North Carolina to spend the winter with their daughter, Mrs. Norvin Smith, and family.

Special Fro-joy Ice Cream Layer Cake

WHO ever heard of a glorious layer cake... sumptuous and beautiful enough for a banquet? Who ever heard of a cake like this which turns out to be no cake at all... but ice cream through and through?

A luscious novelty in desserts which will vie for table honors with the toothsome turkey... which will make you a greater favorite than ever with the family. That's the Fro-joy ice cream layer cake. It comes in two sizes—the small serves six to eight and the large size ten to sixteen.

We've packed it in dry ice which keeps it hard for several hours. By dessert time it's just right for slicing. And then what a sensation when you reveal the mystery!

These delicacies create the masterpiece: Top layer... French vanilla ice cream. Center layer ... orange ice cream. Bottom layer... plum pudding ice cream. Orange and brown whipped cream form the design and lettering.

Place your order right away with the nearest Fro-joy dealer, so that he can be sure to have your cake ready. General Ice Cream Corporation.

STONINGTON

THREE MEN BURNED WHEN FIRE STARTS IN GAS PUMP

Three persons were burned Saturday afternoon when an overheated bearing caused a fire in a pump used to pump gasoline into the big supply tank of the American Oil Co. from a tank car more than 300 feet away. One of the men with clothing afire jumped into the water, thus saving himself from fatal injury. John Hasvey, manager of the company, was treated by Dr. D. E. Taylor and taken to his home in New London. Walter Briggs of Elm street, and Frank Keane, of Williams street, his assistants were burned about the hands and face and were attended by Dr. William T. Veal. An alarm was sounded and the pumper of the Stonington fire district responded quickly, extinguishing the fire. The large tanks are situated on Water street, near the tracks of the New Haven railroad company.

Traffic over the highway through Stonington was very heavy Saturday due to the Yale-Harvard game at Cambridge.

The sum of $150 was realized from the dance of the Lions' club held in the town hall Friday evening, and to be used for the children and needy at Christmas.

The South Shore Auction Bridge tournament continued Monday evening when the Stonington club played the Square and Compass club of Westerly at the Mistuxet club rooms, Water street.

Miss Helen L. Reckham, of Charlestown, R. I., and Edwin A. Taylor, of Wakefield, R. I., were married Friday by Jerome S. Anderson, a justice of the peace, of Stonington borough.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Schepis were in Boston Sunday where they met relatives who recently arrived from Italy.

The meeting of the World Wide Guild of the First Baptist church was held at the home of Mrs. Ralph Rathbone on Friday evening. Following the meeting a kitchen shower was given in honor of Miss Mary Kelly, a member of the guild, who will be married Christmas day.

There will be a high mass in St. Mary's church Thanksgiving day at 8:30. Services will also be held Wednesday evening at 7:30.

Sunday was Harvest Sunday in the Second Congregational church when the members of the church brought vegetables and fruit which was distributed to the needy and sick members of the congregation following the Sunday morning service.

Clicquot Club
PALE DRY

1/3 more than ordinary "pints"

THE best ginger ale on the market and the best value too. In clean, new bottles only, and one-third more in every bottle!

Sparkling, exhilarating in itself . . . and a perfect mixer besides. Thoroughly digestible because it's fully aged. If the label says "Clicquot Club Pale Dry" it's a full pint. Not the ordinary 12oz. bottle, but 16oz.—1/3 more.

A lot more, isn't it? You actually get this much ginger ale—extra in each pint bottle of Clicquot Club Pale Dry.

Try the Party Package. 12 pts. in each carton. 48 oz. (3 bottles) more in every 12.

Stafford Springs

The registrars of voters of the borough were in session Monday revising the voting list which will be used at the borough election December 9th. Indications are that the borough election will be a very tame affair. There will be only one ticket, the citizens, in the field, headed by Francis Luce as warden. Mr. Luce has been renominated after a successful year's administration of the borough's affairs and there is no desire for a change. Most of the other candidates on the ticket have also served the borough faithfully, some of them for a number of years, and their renominations came without solicitation.

Francis S. Brick has gone to Walpole, Mass., to visit his wife who is convalescing at the home of their daughter Mrs. Ernest Swedburg, after having received treatment at a Boston hospital. Mr. Brick will spend Thanksgiving in Walpole.

William Galbraith of the Chestnut Hill district is ill.

Charles B. Pinney and daughter Miss Elizabeth Pinney attended the Yale-Harvard football game Saturday.

Attorney Richard D. O'Connell of Hartford called on friends in the borough Saturday.

Arthur Champagne, of East Hartford, formerly of Stafford Springs was a week end visitor at his home.

Miss Nancy Fisk of Sutton, Mass., spent the week end with her parents Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Fisk.

Mr. and Mrs. Armand Chaundonnet of Schenectady, N. Y., were week end visitors with Mrs. Catherine Tonon.

Mrs. Grace Reinhardt is a patient at Johnson Memorial hospital.

Rev. W. E. Rogers, field secretary of Zion's Herald, preached a very interesting sermon at the Methodist Episcopal church Sunday evening, on "Greater Reasons for Thanksgiving."

Louis St. Germain has returned to his duties in Hartford.

Miss Roberta Kaddy was a recent visitor with Middletown friends.

The boys' basketball team of Stafford high school is to play the following games this season: December 20, Palmer at Stafford; January 3, Enfield at Stafford; January 10, Stafford at Agawam; January 14, Stafford at Ludlow; January 21, Stafford at Enfield; January 28, Stafford at Palmer; February 4, Ware at Stafford; February 11, Stafford at Ware; February 21, Ludlow at Stafford; February 23, Agawam at Stafford.

There is to be a meeting of the Parent-Teachers association at the Grange hall in Stafford Hollow this (Tuesday) evening.

Miss Dorothea Johnson of Troy, N. Y., has been spending several days with her parents Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Johnson.

Welton Welles, a student at Stafford high school, spent the week end at South Manchester with his parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hewett visited Hartford relatives Sunday.

Professor and Mrs. Antonio Netto visited at the home of Mrs. G. Netto Monday.

No More Piles

Pile sufferers can only get quick safe and lasting relief by removing the cause—bad blood circulation in the lower bowel. Cutting and salves can't do this—an internal remedy must be used. Dr. Leonhardt's Hem-Roid, a harmless tablet, succeeds because it relieves this blood congestion and strengthens the affected parts. Hem-Roid has a wonderful record for quick safe, and lasting relief to Pile sufferers. It will do the same for you or money back. Lee & Osgood Co. and druggists anywhere sell Hem-Roid with this guarantee.

COLCHESTER

RUSSO'S CASE NOT TRIED—GOES OVER TO FRIDAY NEXT

The case of Louis Russo, 31, of Newark, N. J., who was arrested in that city last week by State Policeman William E. MacKenzie of Groton barracks, for the part he took in the theft last June of a new Dodge sport coupe from the A. H. Chapman garage, a 1926 Hudson brougham from the London garage and a large quantity of valuable dress goods from the Cohen brothers' factory, was scheduled to come up for a hearing Saturday before Justice of the Peace Charles F. Brown but has been adjourned to Friday, Nov. 29 at 2 p. m. The accused requested adjournment so that he could procure counsel. In the meantime he is being held at the New London jail. It is thought probable that Russo will be bound over to the next term of the superior court.

Two other members of the theft ring, Joseph Marinello and Angelo Sica have previously been captured, the former being sentenced to 1 to 4 years in Wethersfield prison while the latter is serving an 18-months sentence at the Cheshire reformatory for the part they took in the Colchester thefts. It is understood that the state police are also looking for a fourth member of the gang.

Change in Library Hours

After December first, 1929, the Cragin Memorial library will be open four days each week to accommodate the high school pupils and others who are more and more making use of its resources. The schedule will be as follows: Tuesday, 2 to 5, 7 to 8; Wednesday, 2 to 4; Thursday, 2 to 5, 7 to 8; Saturday, 2 to 5, 7 to 8:30.

Two members of the Wesleyan Deputation team, Mr. Coons and Mr. Hodgman were entertained Saturday evening by the local C. E. society at a supper held in their honor in the remodeled old town hall. Mrs. Arthur H. Chapman was chairman of the supper committee assisted by Mrs. A. L. Stebbins, Mrs. Fred Kopp and Mrs. H. H. Tompkins.

After the supper, a community social was enjoyed, sixty-five young people being in attendance. The visitors from Wesleyan had charge of the entertainment program.

Special Thanksgiving services will be held in the Congregational church Thursday evening at 7 o'clock.

Work was started Monday on the digging of a new well at the home of Fred Fedus on Pleasant street.

About thirty local people attended the tri-county union meeting of the C. E. society held at Marlborough Congregational church, Sunday evening. The program was in charge of ten students from Wesleyan university, who constituted the deputation team sent to the six churches of the three counties of this C. E. union.

Mrs. Eva Freedman returned Sunday from a week's visit with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Murray Cohen in Bridgeport.

Edward Jones and son Bradford Jones of Lebanon called on friends here Monday.

Miss Silvia Jaffe, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Jaffe of North Main street, graduate of Bacon academy and of a Middletown business college, commenced work Monday in the accounting department of the Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance Co., Hartford.

Miss Sarah B. Cutler is making several days' visit in Washington, D. C.

HEBRON

Rev. John W. Deeter, pastor of the First Congregational churches, Hebron and Gilead, and Mrs. C. Daniel Way, gave a fine talk Sunday morning on "Rural Life," and Fred Smith's address on the Church of the Future. This was a report of the conference held in Ansonia a week ago, which they attended.

Funeral services for William John Dowling, 62, were held Friday morning, in St. Andrew's church, Colchester, at 9 o'clock. Burial was in St. Andrew's cemetery. Mr. Dowling was the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Dowling. He was born in Colchester, but had spent the greater part of his life in Hebron. He was a painter. Death followed a shock. Dr. Cyrus E. Pendleton, of Colchester, found him in a critical state and advised him to go to the William Backus hospital. Norman Rathbone and Clarkson Bailey took him to the hospital Saturday. He died Wednesday morning. He leaves his wife and three children, of Willimantic.

Tri-County C. E. societies of Colchester, Columbia, Hebron, Gilead, Marlborough and West Chester met Sunday evening in Marlborough. Deputation group of 2 for each town from Wesleyan university had charge of the meeting. They also attended a social given in Gilead by the Hebron and Gilead Endeavor societies.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Hilding, of New York, spent the week end at the home of Mr. Hilding's sister, Miss Victoria Hilding. Mr. and Mrs. Hilding returned Monday night.

Far Better Turkey Stuffing

From this Slo-Baked Bread

Slo-baking with super-quality ingredients makes fresh Wonder Bread ideal for better-tasting stuffing. Order it from your grocer with your other holiday foods.

By ALICE ADAMS PROCTOR

SLO-BAKED Wonder Bread has completely upset the old idea that good stuffing could be made only from stale bread!

Today many housewives have discovered that the finest stuffing they've ever known is made from fresh Slo-baked Wonder Bread!

The extra-fine ingredients used in Wonder Bread and the special slo-baking process eliminate all excess moisture and give you a bread of even, delicate texture.

Your grocer has everything for a complete Thanksgiving Dinner

When you do your shopping for Thanksgiving Day meals, remember that your neighborhood grocer carries the season's choicest delicacies fresh from the world's markets.

Not only does he carry the staple groceries that you buy daily, but also the treats that you need to round out a holiday dinner—celery, fruits, cranberries, nuts, raisins, figs, plum pudding, cakes, candy and many more items, attractively arranged on his shelf.

So when you moisten Wonder Bread crumbs as your first step in making stuffing, they fluff up lightly almost as if baking powder had been added, while ordinary bread crumbs become flat and heavy.

With such a good start as this, even the amateur cook can make turkey stuffing that the seasoned housewife would be glad to call her own! All that remains is to add the proper seasoning.

I'm giving you here what I consider my best stuffing recipes, with the seasonings correctly balanced, and I know you'll have good luck with any one of them.

PRIZE RECIPES

Here is my method for a delicious moist Turkey Stuffing

Crumb one loaf of fresh slo-baked Wonder Bread. Mix it with 1½ cups boiling water and one cup butter. Add 1 tablespoon of minced onion, 1 tablespoon salt, 1 tablespoon sage, and if you like, add the giblets first cooked and chopped.

VARIATIONS of this recipe may be prepared as follows: 1. For Sausage Stuffing. In place of the cup of butter, substitute 1 lb. sausage meat and add one orange, including skin put through the grinder. 2. For Celery Stuffing. Add ¾ cup of finely chopped celery and 1 teaspoon pepper. 3. For Oyster Stuffing use the heated liquor from the oysters in place of hot water. Discard tough muscle from oysters. Wash and mix into stuffing. 4. For Chestnut Stuffing. Shell and blanch 2 cups chestnuts. Cook in boiling salted water until tender. Mix into the bread stuffing from which you have omitted the onion and sage. © 1929, Continental Baking Co.

MARKET UNSETTLED BY PROFIT-TAKING IN ADVANCE OF FOUR DAY SHUT DOWN

NEW YORK, Nov. 25—(AP)—The stock market was somewhat unsettled by profit taking in advance of the protracted closing beginning with the Thanksgiving day holiday, and a mild break in the coppers, today, as normal five-hour trading sessions were restored after three weeks of three hour periods.

The market was well supported on declines, however, and traders were encouraged by a noteworthy slackening of trading on downturns. Cautious short selling, still restrained by the members daily reports to the stock exchange as to short accounts, was in evidence, but it made little impression.

Total sales for the five-hours of trading were only 3,130,000 shares, the smallest turnover for a full session since Oct. 17, and but little larger than the average volume of trading during last weeks three-hour periods.

Declines among popular shares ran from 1 to 11 points, but a large part of these losses was regained before the close. Profit taking appeared in some volume during the morning, and no sooner did it seem to have been absorbed, than reports of price cutting by some of the smaller copper producers depressed the red metal shares, and caused further unsettlement.

Some profit was expected to result from the announcement after last Friday's close that the exchange would be closed beginning with the holiday next Thursday, until the next Monday. This four-day shut down will be one of the longest on record in peace times.

The day's news continued to be of a reassuring character. The reports of copper price cutting were regarded calmly in red metal trade circles. Leading producers are still determined to maintain the 18-cent-a-pound price level. Foreign buying was said to be somewhat better today, and cheaper credit is expected to help electric power construction projects.

President Hoover's conference with agricultural leaders, at which rural building and grain elevator construction were suggested, was regarded as marking further definite progress in the administration's plans to keep the wheels of business spinning smoothly. Announcement of plans to merge the United and Cuyamel Fruit companies, and to bring Anglo-American oil back under the fold of Standard of N. J., gave evidence that the merger movement has been but momentarily restricted. A few extra dividends and fairly good earnings statements were announced. Railroad income statements for October were somewhat less favorable, but this had been foreshadowed by the decline in car loadings.

Credit remained abundant. Call money held at 4 1-2 per cent officially, but was again offered as low as 3 in the outside market. Time money was nominally quoted at 5 per cent, but the demand was slight, and some lenders offered funds as low as 4 3-4. A few bankers acceptance dealers quoted further reductions of 1-8 of one per cent.

General Electric dropped 11 points to 210, rallied to 222 and closed at 220, off 1 point. U. S. Steel sagged 2 3-4, but closed nearly a point higher, net. American Can, American and Foreign Power, Columbia Gas, Consolidated Gas, and Johns Manville dropped 4 to 6 points, but wiped out all but a point or so of their losses before the close.

Coppers rallied but moderately, from the day's lows. Calumet and Arizona dropped 6 1-2 points, and closed 4 off. Anaconda and Kennecott dropped about 4 points, and closed down about 1. American Tobacco, Atchison, Macy, National Dash Register, U. S. Industrial, New York Central and Norfolk and Western were among issues closing 3 to 5 points lower.

Rails having coal interests were in demand as a result of the cold weather. Delaware and Hudson and Lackawanna gained about 4 points each. New Haven was firm in response to a favorable October earnings report.

Cement issues rallied briskly, stimulated by the heavy building and public works projects disclosed by the Washington conferences. International Cement, Alpha Portland and Penn Dixie preferred rose about 5 to 5 points.

In the commodity markets, wheat moved about a cent a bushel, and corn also was under moderate pressure, resulting primarily from large receipts at the markets. Cotton futures showed little change.

Foreign exchanges were irregular. Sterling was firm, and the German mark reached a new high for the year. The Canadian dollar rallied to above 98 cents. The Spanish peseta, however, sank to another new 1929 low.

SLACK SEASON FOR LOCAL BUILDING ACTIVITIES IS FAST APPROACHING

Little activity along the lines of new building is indicated by the few permits issued by Fire Marshal Henry R. Taft during the past week. There were only three permits granted as the fire marshal's office during the week, the smallest number since almost a year ago. This falling off in the number of building permits is to be expected at this season of the year. Contractors have been favored this year with exceptionally good weather and practically all projects are so far along as to be out of danger of being hampered by extreme cold weather.

At the Norwich Inn, the largest building project in the city, work is being rushed along at good speed. The brick walls are nearly complete and the steel work for the roof is being set in place as fast as the walls reach the proper height. It is expected that within a short time the entire building will be housed in and work on the interior will progress rapidly throughout the winter.

A number of new houses have reached a point where the cold weather will not hold up the work. These houses will be ready for plastering and the interior work this coming week.

The permits granted by Fire Marshal Taft are as follows:

To Mrs. Rosa Segal to raise the roof and rearrange the partitions in the present frame house on Mechanic street. The estimated cost is $200.

To Samuel W. Loshin to build an addition to the present house at 79 Mt. Pleasant street. The addition will be 10x14 feet and when completed will make additional rooms so that the house will be a ten-room house. The estimated cost is $400.

To Contractor P. F. Sweeney to erect a frame garage for John Wilson on Robbins court. The garage will be 16x30 feet and of frame construction. The estimated cost is $200.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 25—(AP)—The noteworthy rise in bond prices which followed the release of vast amounts of speculative credit through the recent crash in stock values continued today in an active market. Advances were mostly in fractions and the list had its weaker spots, but the undertone was distinctly strong.

Two months ago the quotation tables were showing numerous new lows each day in bonds of prime investment calibre. This situation has now been completely reversed and scores of domestic loans are at or near their 1929 peaks as a result of the demand fostered by declining money rates, the returning popularity of bonds with the investing public, and the scarcity of the better grade issues. Last week saw the first turns into new high ground by corporation bonds, and today more than a dozen low coupon rails, the bulwarks of the market, joined that group.

With call money at 4 1-2 per cent and time loans nominally quoted at 5 per cent, the monetary markets hold small inducements to corporations with funds to lend and the inquiry from these sources for good bonds is growing. The consensus among observers is that money rates will go still lower, and hence dealers in fixed-income securities are making purchases in expectation of a livelier demand after the turn of the year.

United States government securities displayed some irregularity today, although the Liberty Fourth 4 1-4s managed to squeeze into new high ground. The terms of the December 15 treasury financing are better awaited with interest, but it is generally expected that in view of the improved conditions in the forthcoming issue will bear less than 4 per cent interest.

High grade rails, industrials and utilities were in about equal favor. Atchison General 4s especially active in the first named group, touched a new high at 95. Baltimore & Ohio 5s, Denver & Rio Grande 4s, Chesapeake & Ohio, Richmond & Allegheny division, 5s, New York Central 4s, Pennsylvania gold 5s, Reading General 4 1-2s and Wabash 5 1-2s were among the leading carriers to make new highs. There was also marked activity in Union Pacific first 4s, which all but touched a new 1929 peak, and in the Rock Island listings.

Steel company loans featured the trading in the industrial section, while telephone issues led in the utility group.

Foreign bonds moved higher on moderate turnovers. French Republic 7 1-2s went to a new top at 115, and the 7s also rose a shade above their previous peak.

It was reported that the proposed Brazilian coffee loan would be floated in France, marking the first participation of that country in foreign financing in some time.

Convertibles had an irregular day in sympathy with stocks. American Telephone 4 1-2s, showing a flash of their mid-summer popularity, made a net gain of half a point.

LIGHT FIXTURES CALL FOR MUCH STUDY

After a house has been treated to a modern system of electric wiring to make possible complete use of modern lighting facilities, altogether too many home owners are prone to neutralize the effect by a display of poor taste in selecting electric lamps and shades. That is, floor and table lamps, although the selection of permanent fixtures is fully as important and should be attended with the same care in making selections.

In the selection of lamps there are proper and highly improper choices which may be made. A glimpse into scores of homes will reveal some highly improper choices. Even homes of unquestioned refinement are far from immune; floor and table lamps are found equipped with shades which have no artistic relationship with the character of the room or its decorative plans.

Interior decorators and designers of electric fixtures have much in common. Each of these keeps in close touch with developments in the other's line, to make it possible for home owners to select lamps and shades which will be in perfect harmony with the decorative plan. It is not impossible to secure lights which blend with any decorative plan one may choose. Electric lamps and standards today are being made in a multitude of designs and of many materials, to fit any possible interior "atmosphere." The point is to identify the "atmosphere," and then find the proper fixtures and shades to blend with it. Merely to look in a window, or to visit an electrical showroom, and then make a choice without a thorough study of the needs is folly. Dealers in electrical appliances, home furnishers and others invariably have experts in their employ whose sole duty is to serve in an advisory capacity. Most of them, as the result of much experience, invariably handle affairs in such manner that a customer's desires are gratified, even though the customer's curious tastes for color and material may be altered to some degree.

INSIDE CHIMNEYS FAVORED

Outside chimneys may look swanky, but enclosed chimneys are by all odds more economical and effective. The sheltered position causes it to heat evenly throughout, thus producing a better draft, while by passing upward between partitions it has the added virtue of sending some of this heat through the walls to help bring up the interior temperature.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Black Pussy Has a Fright.

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Surprise the key to fear doth hold
And often puts to flight the bold.
—Unc' Billy Possum

Black Pussy the Cat, who has always lived at Farmer Brown's, dearly loves to prowl around in the big barn. Yes, sir, she dearly loves to prowl around in the big barn. You see, she has caught many a mouse there and if there is anything that Black Pussy loves, it is catching mice. So there is very little that Black Pussy does not know about Farmer Brown's barn. She has explored it all over. She knows just where the mice make their little runways. She knows just where the holes are to watch.

On this particular morning Black Pussy had decided that she would have a look around in the haymow. It was several days since she had been up in the haymow. In fact, it was a long time since she had looked in a certain corner. She remembered now that once in that certain corner she had found a nest of young mice.

"Of course," said Black Pussy to herself, "I don't expect to find another nest of young mice there. Of course not. But it will do no harm to have a look. I might have a pleasant surprise."

Now, this was the corner where one of Farmer Brown's pullets had been laying eggs—the eggs that Unc' Billy Possum had found and eaten. And now Unc' Billy was curled up in that corner. He had eaten so much that he just had to take a nap. So he curled up half buried in the hay.

Black Pussy came creeping along as only a cat can creep. You know how carefully a cat moves when she is hunting. This was what Black Pussy was doing now. Her eyes grew larger in the darkness of the haymow, as a cat's eyes will. Nearer she crept to that corner. At last she was within jumping distance. Even in the darkness there she could see that there was something in that corner. It looked very much like a nest of some sort. What she really saw, of course, was the whitish fur of Unc' Billy as he lay curled up partly buried in the hay. The end of Black Pussy's tail was twitching with excitement and eagerness. She crept one step nearer. That was fur, she was sure. But it was too dark for her to make out whose fur it was. Could it be that there was a rat there? She would find out.

Black Pussy did find out. And yet she didn't find out. She found out there was some one there, but she didn't find out who it was, because she was too frightened. She jumped and landed with her claws outstretched on that bunch of fur in the corner of the haymow. And that bunch of fur suddenly came to life. Yes, sir, it came to life. Black Pussy suddenly found herself staring into a sharp face with a mouthful of sharp teeth, and from that mouth was coming a snarl that gave Black Pussy a most uncomfortable feeling.

Black Pussy jumped back as quickly as she had jumped forward. She jumped back and how she did race for the stairs! The hair on her tail was all on end, so that her tail was about three times as big as it ordinarily appears. To the head of the stairs she raced and down the stairs. Farmer Brown's Boy was just coming into the barn. Black Pussy ran right between his feet and almost upset him. She shot across the barnyard straight to the house and under the porch.

"Well, well, well!" exclaimed Farmer Brown's Boy. "Some one or something has given Black Pussy an awful fright. I wonder who or what it can be."

OLD ENGLISH HOUSE ON HARLAND ROAD

The above is a picture of the new home recently built on Harland road for Ellis Thayer. The house is one of the most attractive in this section where many homes are being erected. It is of the English gabled type of architecture with beamed work and stucco on the second story. The walls of the first floor are of brick. The interior is very pleasantly arranged as well as handsomely finished.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre

The lowing of the gigantic trail-herds moving slowly over the plains on their way to market, the ringing shouts and crooning songs of the cowboys, "ridin' herd," and the sinister bark of six-guns will echo across the Broadway screen today for the last times with the closing of the engagement of Owen Wister's epic of the old West "The Virginian." With tomorrow's production the scene rapidly shifts to the glare of the Great White Way and the dazzle of the footlights with the screening of the big all-talking-singing-dancing revue, "The Broadway Scandals." Sally O'Neil proves herself a real trouper with her songs and dances, and fresh from a Fanchon & Marco season, displays stage gifts of considerable merit. Her leading man is Jack Egan, a real Broadway star, with seasons of Keith time back of him and a wonderful future waiting his bidding. A song-and-dance man, "born on the stage," he has bucked the "small time" successfully, working his way until now his name is one of the brightest on Mazda Lane. Carmel Myers, well known screen star, discloses hitherto unknown talent in a beautiful coloratura soprano voice, which she uses to advantage in the "Scandals." Produced on a lavish scale, with gorgeous scenery, costumes, and with a big beauty chorus, catchy song hits, peppy dancing and riotous comedy, with a tensely dramatic story as its theme, "Broadway Scandals" more than justifies its opening this very week in New York at $2.00 prices. A surrounding bill that has never been equalled is provided by the Broadway management, with Tom Howard in "The Spy," a rollicking two-reel comedy of the World war, Mickey Mouse in "The Barn Dance," Miller & Lyles colored stars of "Shuffle Along," in "They Know Their Groceries," Kraft & Lamont in "R'arin' to Go," with Miss Lamont in a cowboy costume that will drive the boys west, and Red Nichols and His Five Pennies, a red-hot phonograph and radio sextette, and the latest Fox movie-tone newsreel rounding out the long program.

Thanksgiving day, the performance will be continuous, starting at 1:30 p. m.

Bread Theatre

All you need for an entertaining picture is to turn a camera loose on George Jessel and use some of his wise cracks as titles. So, when a clever scenarist combines his life story and some of George's ideas with a little love at first sight, a strong mother-love interest, and the under dog eventually landing on top, as was done in "Lucky Boy," you may know it is good entertainment with plenty of humor and romance, too.

This young star, who can sing the heart right out of an audience, has a personality which, of necessity, brought him to the stage and to pictures. "Lucky Boy," which is a Tiffany-Stahl production and the main attraction until Wednesday at the Bread theatre, in many events follows Jessel's own career. It's the story of a boy, born on New York's East Side, who didn't want to be a repairer of watches, like his poppa. The aid of his adoring mother gives him his first chance to make money as an entertainer, and the laughable yet heart-breaking disaster which overtakes that first venture nicely blends humor and sympathy.

Commencing Thursday for three days the Bread will present "Salute", a Fox all-talking movietone with George O'Brien and Helen Chandler in the leading roles.

Palace Theatre

Because Thanksgiving is so near, the Palace theatre has decided to give away its turkeys one day earlier than was previously planned. This means that the birds will be given away tonight and the fun will start early enough so that those who get turkeys will have plenty of time to prepare and dress them for the big dinner Thursday. There will be other surprises on the program at the Palace tonight, but no one is allowed to say anything about them until they actually transpire. They must be kept a surprise to be of full entertainment value.

Beautifully the lobby is decorated for the holiday occasion. Shocks of corn and an old rail fence give the place that ancient New England atmosphere which blends so beautifully with the Thanksgiving spirit. Among the many property bits that help give the lobby its barnyard effect, is a two-headed calf.

The Roth Quartet which appears in Bulkeley Auditorium this evening under the auspices of Connecticut College

The large stand pipe on the water tank of the Columbia Narrow Fabric Co. plant at Shannock, which furnishes water for the sprinkler system of the mills, in some manner broke a pipe and allowed the capacity of the tank to empty in 24 hours.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

Two first run all-talking pictures on one program: That is what the Palace theatre will present Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week. For the price of one show, the public will get two, a special holiday feature that is unequaled.

"Lucky in Love," starring that golden-voiced tenor, Morton Downey, is one of the features, while the other is "Headlines," an all-talking Vitaphone smash hit of newspaper life featuring Grant Withers, Marion Nixon and Pauline Garon. Either picture would be a complete show in itself. Shown together they make a superb show, something better than has ever been shown in Norwich before. Not only bigger but more entertaining.

"Lucky in Love" is noteworthy not only for the beauty of the theme and the vivid action and Morton Downey's glorious singing but also for its magnificent setting. Centered about an old Irish castle, the plot is one dealing with the struggle of the old traditional families to keep off the rush of modern civilization.

The golden-voiced tenor who has startled movie audiences of late, Morton Downey, is again heard in song and talk in "Lucky in Love," new Pathe singing-talking picture.

Believe it or not, the former stable boy is the instrument of destiny which saves the old castle and grounds from the march of commercialization. It is a beautiful story beautifully filmed, and it supplements well the swift, hard excitement of "Headlines."

Today for the last time the Palace presents that thrilling epic of American football and college life, "The Forward Pass," starring Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. and Loretta Young.

PROPER HARDWARE NECESSARY IN PLANNING HOME

Selections of suitable hardware for a new or modernized home is an element which calls for careful consideration and study. It is quite possible to ruin the effect of an otherwise attractive doorway or carefully planned interior by the selection of the wrong type of hardware.

Various hardware concerns have been doing much along this line in recent years to dress up homes with hardware which is consistent with individual requirements. This is particularly true now that architecture is inclined to favor the various colonial types. In this they have elected to adopt many styles which have come down from early New England builders who were compelled to look to the village smithy for virtually all of their hardware. Some of the old hinges, shutter holders, locks, door handles and fittings, are proving unusually attractive.

Exact reproductions of these ruggedly beautiful old pieces of hardware are not so difficult to secure. If one can get originals well and good, but it might be well to state that most of these originals already have been picked up, or else cannot be secured for love or money. Recognized firms can provide perfect reproductions scaled to match any needs.

The old wrought-iron fixtures are unusually effective. They are termed "old" because for the most part firms specializing in their reproduction are careful to give them every vestige of age. Such fixtures not only include the rough-finished fixtures, but virtually all of the exquisite old hand-wrought fixtures which were as beautiful from the standpoint of workmanship as on the score of colonial art.

No real hustler would give 2 cents for the things that come to those who wait.

SUB WITH SAFETY DEVICES IS AT THE GROTON BASE

The submarine S-22, in command of Lieut. Harold Walker arrived at the Groton submarine base last Friday to be stationed there for some time while extensive tests are made of safety devices which have been fitted on the boat while it was at the Portsmouth, N. H., navy yard.

With the safety devices now attached to the S-22 it is believed no such disaster could happen to her as took the lives of the crew of the S-4 off Provincetown last December.

The official list of safety devices which have been installed on or in the S-22 shows that several which might have saved at least six of the 40 men who were lost on the S-4, have been included. The eight devices are as follows:

Escape Lock

An escape lock over the torpedo room through which the crew in groups of five may make their escape from any depth of water up to at least 300 feet. The newly perfected "lung" is used in this operation, whereby the wearer can breathe under water with perfect ease for several minutes. The lung also acts as a life preserver when the wearer reaches the surface.

So Called Skirt

The so called skirt has been fitted to the motor room hatch, making it possible for imprisoned men to escape by floating up through the hatch after the compartment itself has been flooded from sea. The lung is used in this operation also. This feat may best be visualized by imagining a huge baking tin used for baking angel cake, inverted and then pushed below the surface of the water. Men standing with their heads in the air space, or "bubble" thus formed would be able to breathe and move about at will. When the time came to escape they would casually put on their lungs, duck under the skirt or our large baking tin (the part that makes the hole in the angel cake) and float up and out of the compartment to the surface of the water.

Bulkheads Revamped

The bulkheads in the submarine have been revamped and stiffened to withstand a pressure of 88 pounds per square inch from either side—a notable engineering achievement in view of the fact that less steel has been used to do this than was formerly used on bulkheads which would stand up against only 27 pounds per square inch. This was brought about largely by the use of welding instead of riveting.

Padeyes

Padeyes have been fitted to the outside of the hull in such a way that a total of eight pontoons may be quickly attached to the vessel in case she is disabled on the bottom. Then when the water is blown out of the pontoons a total emergency lift of over 600 tons may be applied to bring the submarine to the surface.

Marker Buoy

At each end of the submarine has been installed a marker buoy which can be released from inside the vessel by an entrapped crew. The buoy is painted yellow and carries a light which can be seen at a distance of several miles at sea. In addition a telephone head piece and transmitter is carried in the buoy in a small water tight compartment by means of which rescue units may talk with the personnel in the sunken submarine. The anchor cable on the buoy may be used as a descending line by a diver.

Supply Fresh Air

Valves have been fitted which will permit a diver from the rescue vessel to attach an air hose and blow the water out of the submarine's tanks one at a time or all together as desired. Others have been so fitted that a diver can supply fresh air at atmospheric pressure to men in the submarine no matter in which, or in how many, compartments they may be.

Quick-Closing Door

A new type of quick-closing door has been fitted on each bulkhead, making it possible for the crew to close and dog down any door tight against a sudden ingress of water, in a small fraction of the time required with the old type of door.

Where ventilation pipes pierce the bulkheads a quick-closing type of valve has been installed.

BANKING FOUNDATION WALLS

In the old days farmers invariably banked the foundation walls of their homes with leaves and evergreen boughs, held in place by low board barriers. In some rural communities the custom prevails today, and is found effective in helping to keep houses comfortable and warm. It would not be a bad idea for city dwellers to borrow the idea to some extent, especially for those portions of ground which are quite out beyond the foundation line. Front and back verandas and even pantries—in those homes where pantries have not been provided with breakfast nooks—usually are open to the weather on the under side, and this accounts for many of the icy drafts seeping into the house. A barrier of leaves or evergreen boughs, held in place exactly as those of the old-time farm houses, will shut out much of this cold air seepage, and also will serve as protection for various types of foundation planting.

ACADEMY TEAM COMES AT BROADWAY THEATRE

The Norwich Free Academy debating team decided against debating while cooking win over Bulkeley by default the Saturday evening performance of "The Virginian" at the Broadway theater, as the guests of Manager Fitz, who invited Coach Courtland Whitney and the team to attend, "win, lose or draw." Tired but happy, the Academy debaters turned out in force and enjoyed the performance to the limit.

Only a simple man tries to not unnecessarily strenuous.

Is Your City One of the 650?

The Chamber of Commerce of the United States sponsors a most effective and well organized activity in the prevention and control of fire. This is known as the National Fire Waste Council.

Six hundred and fifty cities are engaged in a nation-wide contest in the reduction of fire waste. Through the National Fire Waste Council the combined experience, advice and assistance of architects, credit men, boy scouts, educators, engineers, insurance men and many other groups are made available to any community.

Comprehensive Programs

This work involves modern and scientific fire-fighting apparatus and methods, salvage work, regular inspections, arson investigations, modernized building codes and ordinances, and actuarial facts.

The unusual facilities and information which the Stock Fire Insurance companies provide, have been extensively used in this work and are constantly available, without charge, to any organization, individual or community.

Fire Losses Affect the Community

Chambers of Commerce and similar bodies realize that the prevention of destruction by fire of an existing industrial plant is just as important as the winning of a new enterprise for the community.

When men are put out of work by fire they leave the city or become a community problem such as arises in any locality lacking employment opportunity.

Similar programs on the part of other municipalities and property owners will result in safeguarding life and property in an ever-increasing degree, with consequent effect upon the cost of fire insurance.

THE CHELSEA SAVINGS BANK
NORWICH, CONNECTICUT.
November 25, 1929
At a meeting of the Directors of The Chelsea Savings Bank, held November 25, 1929, the following minute was passed:
The Directors of The Chelsea Savings Bank desire to place upon its records an expression of their high appreciation of the life and character of Oliver L. Johnson, who served the bank as Vice President for ten years, and Director for twenty-one years, and who became associated with the bank on September 21, 1892.
During this long connection, Mr. Johnson gladly gave a great deal of time to its business and served the bank in every way possible in order that it might be of great usefulness in our community. To his sound judgment a great measure of its success can be attributed.
We mourn his departure from us not only because of his outstanding character as an officer of the bank, but because of his upright life, spotless integrity as a man, and his wide influence for good upon the lives of the people in this community. His convictions of duty were earnestly and seriously felt and his high courage enabled him to express them on all occasions.
We have adopted this minute and ordered that a copy be engrossed and forwarded to his bereaved family, and published in the daily newspapers.
Attest:
FRANK HEMPSTEAD,
Secretary.

NOTICE
On and after this date I will not be responsible for any bills contracted in my name by any other person than myself.
Signed—GEO. W. POTTER.

TRIBUTE
The following minute has been adopted by the Trustees of The Norwich Free Academy.
Oliver L. Johnson, whose death occurred November 22, 1929, was elected a Corporator of The Norwich Free Academy September 14, 1895, a Trustee September 28, 1907; Vice President of the Corporation October 24, 1921; and had served as a member of the Executive Committee since October 4, 1913.
He took a deep and practical interest in the affairs of the school and brought to their consideration that sound and constructive judgment which was shown in all his contacts. He endeared himself to his associates by his courtesy and kindliness.
His wise counsel will be greatly missed and the community as well as The Norwich Free Academy has suffered a severe loss. This minute is adopted by his associates on the Board of Trustees with a sense of personal bereavement.
Attest: GUY B. DOLBEARE,
Secretary.

POETRY

Falling Leaves

If all the autumns that the world has known
Were swept together into one windy blast
And strove their dead leaves from the time-shot past,
Russet and tawny myriads, tempest blown,
They could not show more splendor than is shown
Here where the trees, like living lanterns, cast
A yellow brilliance; and red lights, aghast,
Haunt, like torn ghosts, a fiery phantom zone.

Beauty dreams here, a beauty more profound
Than man can fathom. Could we read the fate
Of those doom-lighted woods, perhaps we'd sound
The secret of the stars; and earth and air,
The graveyard shadows and the sunrise glare
Would have no further riddles to propound.

—Stanton A. Cobiahm in New York Sun.

Those Good Old Pumpkin Pies

When the yellow's on the pumpkin
And the frost is on the vine,
When they've picked the yellow beauties
And have placed them all in line,
Then Mother takes the biggest one
And cuts it all up top,
And puts it in the kettle
Just to let it boil and stew.

And when it's gotten just so soft
And beaten smooth you see,
She pours it in those pie crusts
That are flakey as can be;
Then she puts them in the oven,
That's just hot enough to turn
Them to a nice brown color,
But not hot enough to burn.

Then she takes them from the oven,
And puts them on the shelf
And says to Dad and Sis and me,
Now go and help yourself.
O, the joy that we experienced
When a great big piece we'd take
Of those good old-fashioned pumpkin pies
That Mother used to make.

—The Pathfinder.

TWO INJURED MIDDLETOWN MEN ARE TAKEN TO NEW LONDON HOSPITAL

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 25—In an automobile accident this afternoon at Flanders, James Frayne and James Walsh, both of Middletown, were seriously injured and both are patients at Lawrence-Memorial hospital. Frayne is suffering from a possible fractured skull. Walsh received painful abrasions and bruises. The accident is being investigated by state police officers. The auto Frayne was driving and in which Walsh was a passenger, from some undetermined cause crashed against a tree. When his condition permits, Frayne will be arrested by the state police of Groton barracks on a charge of reckless driving.

THE RANANONAK BOY SLIGHTLY IMPROVED

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 25—At Lawrence-Memorial hospital tonight it was stated that James Rananonak, 115 West Main street, Norwich, who sustained a fractured skull Friday afternoon when the auto in which he was riding with his mother and which was driven by John Sak, also of Norwich, collided with a pole at Quaker Hill, was reported as being very slightly improved. The condition of the mother, who also sustained a fractured skull and crushed ribs, remained unchanged.

Rev. Inor Partington, of North Stonington, was tagged tonight by Automobile Patrol Officer Augustus Ray charged with violation of the city ordinance, prohibiting the parking of automobiles in certain sections of Church street. Rev. Mr. Partington furnished a bond of $2 for his appearance in the police court tomorrow.

Reckless Driving—Thigh Fractured

Arne Dahlgren, 21 Huntington street, is a patient at Lawrence Memorial hospital suffering with a fractured thigh sustained on the Military highway in Ledyard at 9 o'clock last night when his automobile left the highway and plunged into a ditch. As soon as Dahlgren's condition will permit he will be arrested on a charge of reckless driving.

Pays $25 And Costs

An automobile driven by Patrick J. Clifford, 159 Ocean avenue and an auto driven by W. N. Williams, U. S. Coast Guard, collided Saturday afternoon on the Military highway in Groton, both cars being damaged. Williams was arrested by State Police Officer Frederick H. Johnson, on a charge of reckless driving and in the town court of Groton today was fined $25 and costs.

JOHN F. MURRAY DEAD—PROMINENT IN CIVIC AFFAIRS

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 25.—John F. Murray, 76, successful business man and city official, died at 4:50 o'clock this morning at his home, 109 Blackball street. Death resulted from a complication of diseases that brought about a general collapse since the latter part of last summer. He is survived by three sons, Dr. Thomas J. Murray, Dr. William J. Murray and James H. Murray, and by three daughters, Mrs. T. J. Sullivan and Mrs. Charles J. O'Connor, all of New London, and Mrs. John C. Neenan, of New York, also by a brother, Edward D. Murray and three sisters, Mrs. Catherine Sheedy, Miss Maria E. Murray and Mrs. John Chapman, all of New London.

Mr. Murray was a native of New London, born July 24, 1849, the son of Thomas and Ann Dray Murray. He received his education in the public schools of the city and became an apprentice with the former firm of Newman & Cronin, plumbers. Mr. Murray and Andrew J. Maher, also an apprentice, formed a partnership after having served their apprenticeship and started business in the former Thatcher building, corner of Main and Masonic streets. The firm occupied several locations on Main street. On the death of Mr. Maher several years ago, Mr. Murray's son, James H. Murray entered the partnership, succeeding Mr. Maher, the business then, as is now, being conducted from 142 Main street.

Mr. Murray was active in politics, being a democrat and had served the city long and faithfully as a member of the city council. He served as alderman from the Third ward several terms and with the vanishing of the municipal form of government for the present council-manager form of government, Mr. Murray was elected to office and since then has served three additional terms.

During last summer Mr. Murray's health started to decline, and for several weeks past his condition had been such as to cause the members of his family much concern. He had several sinking periods, but always responded because of his strong constitution. The final sinking period occurred Friday night.

Mr. Murray was a member of New London lodge of Elks, Seaside council, No. 17, Knights of Columbus and Sprague lodge, No. 9, A. U. O. W. The members of the city council, together with Director of Law Thomas E. Troland and City Clerk Julian D. Moran will be the honorary bearers and members of the police department will act as active bearers at his funeral.

In May, 1883, Mr. Murray married Miss Elizabeth Bellew, and they had seven children. A daughter Ellen Q. Murray, died Nov. 29, 1916, and Mrs. Murray died Sept. 9, 1922.

SAILOR TAKES POISON FOR QUAKER HILL NURSE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 25.—Charles Gore, U. S. Coast Guard sailor, is probably living his last hours at Lawrence Memorial hospital, for the member of the crew of the destroyer McCall is suffering from self-administered bichloride poisoning, swallowed during a fit of depression over his love affair with Loretta Beebe, a Quaker Hill nurse. Gore has been a patient at the hospital several days and until today steadfastly denied that he had swallowed poison, although his organs indicated that he had taken some deadly foreign substance. This afternoon Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh brought Miss Beebe to the bedside of Gore and he then admitted taking the poison because Miss Beebe had not returned his affection. Miss Beebe also stated that about a week ago, Gore threw himself in front of the automobile she was driving on the New London-Norwich road and the car came dangerously close to running over Gore. Gore approached Traffic Officer Louis Pine last Wednesday afternoon and complained of feeling ill. Gore said he was suffering much pain and was taken to the office of a physician, but in the absence of a doctor, Pine caused Gore to be hurried to the hospital. When Gore's effects were searched at the hospital some scribbling on an envelope requested that Miss Beebe be notified of his predicament.

PALMERTOWN BANK CAR CAUSE OF COLLISION

Harry Seckinger of Palmertown, was arrested Sunday night by State Police Officer Michael Murphy, charged with parking an automobile beside the highway in Montville without lights. Autos driven by Frank E. Conklin, of Norwich and Luther A. Damon, 11 Brandegee avenue, Groton, collided, after both had sideswiped the parked car.

ST. ANNE'S SYRIAN CHURCH CORNER STONE LAID SUNDAY

With over 500 in attendance, the corner stone of St. Anne's Syrian church, corner of Connecticut avenue and West Colt street, was laid with impressive ceremonies yesterday afternoon by Rt. Rev. Msgr. Michael Henry May, of Norwich. Msgr. May delivered an eloquent sermon and the prayers were by Rev. Dr. Timothy M. Crowley. Other priests taking part in the ceremony were: Rev. Raymond J. O'Callaghan and Rev. Joseph Raniszewski, of this city and Rev. Anthony Aneed, who will be pastor of the new church. Visiting priests included Rev. William A. Keefe, Norwich; Rev. Edward J. Quinn, Norwich Town and Rev. Oliver T. Magnell, Groton. Rev. O'Callaghan read in Latin and later in English a document from Bishop Nilan which was placed in the cornerstone. Translations of the document were also read by Rev. J. M. Raniszewski of New London Polish church and Father Aneed of the Syrian church. Father O'Callaghan spoke briefly after which the ceremonies were concluded with a brief address by Monsignor May.

William Willoughby, of 67 Belden street; John Sullivan, 67 Connecticut avenue; Miss Margaret Hazelwood, Connecticut College for Women; Mrs. Paul Manavas and infant son, 5 Graham place; Mrs. Thomas Cahey and infant son, 53 Colman street; Miss Evelyn Strong, 37 Main street; Louis Scott, U. S. Coast Guard academy; Edward Soltz, Clark lane, Waterford patients at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, were discharged Sunday and today.

Maria B. Cheney, Morgan Chaney and Mary Chaney Ditler, the last named of New York, have granted a renewal of lease to Sol Ockooneff, proprietor of the store, 114 State street. The renewal date is May 1, 1931, and is for ten years. The annual rental will be $1,600.

Margaret More has sold a house and lot on Warren street to Michael J. and Mary W. Barry.

FUNERALS

Mrs. Magon Miller

The funeral of Mrs. Loretta C. Miller, of 32 Douglass street, widow of Magon Miller, was held this morning at 9 o'clock at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church. The high mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. Michael Keegan. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Wallace A. Beckwith

The funeral of Wallace A. Beckwith, former customs inspector, was held Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at his residence, 418 Williams street, and was attended by a large assemblage of mourners, including delegations from Nameaug Engine company and W. W. Perkins post, G. A. R. The services were conducted by Rev. J. Kenneth Dunfoth, pastor of the First Church of Christ. The bearers were Frank W. Woodworth, Henry deBelles, Morgan Haven, Timothy Murphy, James Walsh and Lawrence McGrath. Burial was in Jordan cemetery.

INFECTION FROM FISH CAUSES C. F. TAYLOR'S DEATH

Charles F. Taylor, 61, of 321 Benham road, Groton, superintendent of the Atlantic Coast Fisheries, Groton, died Saturday night at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, after a brief illness caused by an infection. He is survived by his wife and several children. Mr. Taylor was born in Harwich, Mass., Feb. 23, 1869. The infection which produced the poisoning and caused his death was contracted while handling fish several days ago. The poison could not be checked and rapidly passed through his system.

Mrs. Michael Minucci

Mrs. Maria Minucci, 31, wife of Michael Minucci, of 21 Walbach street, died at Home Memorial hospital Saturday. Besides her husband, Mrs. Minucci is survived by five children. The funeral was held this afternoon at 3 o'clock at the family home and burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Miss Grazias Petta

Miss Grazias Petta, 51, formerly of New London, died Saturday night at the Norwich State hospital, where she had been a patient but a comparatively short time. So far as is known, Miss Petta leaves no relatives.

BOY OF FIFTEEN MISSING WITH CASH, RING AND CAR

The police today were requested by Mrs. Nicholas Haleftris, 48 Reed street, to make a search for her son, Demo, who disappeared from his home Sunday night and took with him $50 and a diamond ring belonging to Mrs. Haleftris and an automobile owned by an employe of Mr. Haleftris. The boy is described as being 15, and about five feet one inch in height. It is believed that the runaway has gone to New York.

An automobile driven by Arthur Beckwith, 131 Lincoln avenue, hit Mitchell Parnell, colored, of 18 Shapley street, Saturday night on Bank street. Parnell was taken to Lawrence-Memorial hospital, where his injuries of bruises and scratches were cared for.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hunt, of North Adams, Mass., spent the week end as guests of Mrs. Hunt's sister, Mrs. Alfred W. Stoll.

TEETH IN THE LAW AT LAST—LAFEMINA PARTS WITH $600

Frank LaFemina, 154 Shaw street, was in the police court this morning charged with violation of the liquor law on two counts, possession and reputation. He pleaded guilty to both counts and was fined $200 and costs on each count, the severity of the penalty probably being because LaFemina had been arrested six times for violation of the liquor law. LaFemina was arrested Saturday afternoon when a raiding squad went to his home and seized 37 quarts of King George whiskey, four pints of whiskey, five quarts of gin and two one-gallon containers of alcohol.

Conway Fined $200 and Costs

L. Eugene Conway, 107 Main street, proprietor of the lunch room and club room, 109, was tried on two charges of violation of the liquor law, possession and reputation, and was fined $200 and costs. His presentation in court was his third time within a year for the same offense. James Liviana, Benjamin Roberts, John Harvey, James Ferris, George Nocery, Frank Moore, Sam Liviani, Rubin Cook, James Cavillaro, Joseph Kelly, William Sullivan, Joseph Joseph, Joseph Murphy, James Ruth and Frank Wood were charged with frequenting, but all of these cases were nolled. The police raided the lunch room, club room and residence of Conway shortly before Saturday midnight. Only two pints of liquor were found in the club room, but 60 cases of beer, eight pints of whiskey and two gallons of alcohol were found in the residence.

William S. Jasnk, 23, of 49 Adelaide street, charged with driving while under the influence of liquor, was fined $100 and costs. He was driving on Bank street Saturday evening and at the corner of Tilley street the auto crashed with a car owned by Robert Stevens, of Jefferson avenue.

J. E. Foran, a sailor, was charged with intoxication and breach of the peace. The latter charge was nolled and on the former count a fine of $5 and costs was imposed.

William Prevost, 107 Main street, charged with breach of the peace, was fined $1 and costs.

David Rolleri, 242 Harrold avenue, Bridgeport, was charged with failing to stop at an automatic traffic signal. As he failed to appear in court, his bond of $15 was declared forfeited.

Help City Treasury

Joseph S. Coparo, 223 Poquonoc road, Groton; Arthur F. Champney, Pleasant street, Groton, and James M. Donch, 6 Forsyth street, Mystic, charged with violation of the city's parking ordinances, failed to appear so their bonds of $2 each were forfeited.

A man, who has been arrested 21 times for intoxication, did not appear in court and forfeited his bond of $15.

LIQUOR CASES FILL WHOLE COURT DAY

thing about Arthur Simons so far.

Pauline Wilbur said she knew Simons but he never lived at her place. She said she had seen Williams at the Joubert place and he came to her place on Nov. 12 with her uncle, Delaware Howard. She denied she sold the bottle to Williams.

Delaware Howard admitted going to the Wilbur place with Williams but said they had no drinks.

Judge Libby made the sentence 60 days in jail for the Wilbur woman as a second offender, as she had been convicted about four years ago on a liquor charge. She has two children who are with Delaware Howard and her husband, Frank Wilbur, is serving a term in jail.

Nolle in Simons' Case

Judge Libby directed a nolle in the case of Arthur Simons.

Used Cream Bottle Method

In the case of John J. Donohue of 35 North Main street, Gray was the first witness. He testified that he knew Donohue only as "Curly." He said he was with Operator No. 11 when he went into the Donohue place on Nov. 5, and bought a bottle of beer and paid for four or five rounds of whiskey in the place. A French fellow and a man named McCloud came in. They shot dice on the top of the bar for some of the drinks and he also played rummy with McCloud, who got stuck several times.

The witness said he was wearing an overcoat with a widemouthed cream bottle in the pocket, fastened by a safety pin. He said he tried to get three drinks into the cream bottle, and gave it to Mr. Forest after they came out of the place. Later the drinks were put into another bottle.

On cross examination Gray said he didn't know Donohue when he went into the place, but talked about Curley's election in Boston and offered to buy a bottle of beer after coming out of the men's room. Gray said he had the bottle to use at 10 Railroad street, but they were too smart for him, to get anything out there. After he said he got into 10 Railroad street with McCloud, who was feeling pretty good after he left Donohue's place.

James Eustis, of 1418 Main street, Bridgeport, in the employ of Mr. Forest since July 1, was shown to be Operator No. 11 when he took the stand. He told of going into the Donohue place and watching Gray to see if he got any drinks into his pocket. Eustis said he saw Gray pour one in as Gray was standing in front of the bar. The witness said he bought three or four drinks of beer from Donohue.

Mr. Forest testified to being parked in sight of the Donohue place when Gray went in. The witness said he knew Gray had the cream bottle in the pocket. Gray was in the place about two hours and when he came out he passed the cream jar to Forest, who said the liquor contents of the jar were poured into another bottle.

The witness identified a bottle in the court room as being the one into which received the contents of the cream bottle.

The defense offered no testimony.

Judge Libby fined Donohue $200 and costs with 10 days in jail, bonds for appeal to be $500. Attorney Kelly gave notice of appeal for Donohue.

Fine And Suspended Sentence

In the case of Jerry LaFleur, of 14 North Thames street, Williams testified he went in there on Nov. 9, with Charlie Woods. They got drinks. The witness said he bought a half pint of liquor for $1 on Nov. 11. He was working with Operator No. 12 on that day.

The witness was cross-examined by Attorney Kelly, counsel for LaFleur.

Gray gave corroborative evidence like that in the other cases. On Nov. 12 the witness said they went to the place but couldn't get anything.

The defense offered no testimony.

On a plea for leniency by Attorney Kelly because of the serious illness of Mrs. LaFleur, Judge Libby sentenced LaFleur to a fine of $200 and costs and a 10-day suspended jail sentence.

Evidence In Cream Bottle

John Kornacki, 17, was presented on the charge of sale of liquor at 26 Sixth street, which was a bottling place.

Gray testified he went there first on Nov. 5 with Eustis. They got beer and a couple of shots of whiskey. He couldn't buy a bottle to take out. There was a bar in the place, the witness said. He went again on Nov. 12 with the cream jar arrangement in his overcoat pocket into which he said he put two or three drinks, getting them from a light haired boy.

Gray pointed out a man sitting among the spectators in the court room who he said was the one who sold him the liquor. Gray put his hand on the man's head, saying that "he nearly fooled me because he has his hair all slicked down now. He had it all fluffed up."

Gray was given a searching cross-examination by Attorney V. P. A. Quinn, counsel for Kornacki.

Eustis testified to accompanying Gray on this case and seeing him get the drinks into the cream bottle in his pocket.

Forest identified a labelled bottle with a small quantity of liquor in it as the one into which he poured the liquor from the cream bottle.

Kornacki was put on the stand by his attorney. He said that his name was Alexander and he denied that he ever had his hair fluffed up, that he had home brew or sold it at the place or that he had seen Gray or Eustis there and sold Gray homebrew and two shots of whiskey. He also denied that a Chrysler car was at the place on Nov. 12.

He was sharply questioned by Attorney Cassidy as to why he turned his head away when Gray was walking around the court room to identify the men whom he saw at 26 Sixth street.

Prosecuting Attorney Cassidy opposed Attorney Quinn's request for a continuance, and after Judge Libby had called the attorneys into his office for a conference, he announced that he found Kornicki guilty, fined him $200 and costs with 10 days in jail.

An appeal was taken and a bond of $500 provided.

Simple Pleasant Way

To Lose Fat

How would you like to lose 15 pounds of fat in a month and at the same time increase your energy and improve your health?

How would you like to lose a load of unhealthy fat that you don't need and don't want and at the same time feel better than you have for years?

How would you like to lose your double chin and your too prominnt abdomen and at the same time make your skin so clean and clear that it will compel admiration?

How would you like to get your weight down to normal and at the same time develop that urge for activity that makes work a pleasure and also gain in ambition and keenness of mind?

Get on the scales today and see how much you weigh—then get an 85 cent bottle of Kruschen Salts which will last you for 4 weeks. Take one half teaspoonful in a glass of hot water every morning and when you have finished the contents of this first bottle weigh yourself again.

Now you can laugh at the people who pay hundreds of dollars to lose a few pounds of fat—now you will know the pleasant way to lose unsightly fat and you'll also know that the 6 vitalizing salts of Kruschen (Salts that your blood, nerves and glands must have to function properly)—have presented you with glorious health.

After that you'll want to walk around and say to your friends,—"One 85 cent bottle of Kruschen Salts is worth one hundred dollars of any fat person's money."

Leading druggists America over sell Kruschen Salts—you can always get it at Lee & Osgood Co.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

A Frank Discussion of a Personal Subject No Longer Evaded . .

TO be sure, it's still embarrassing, this question of fetid breath, pimply skin (which usually attends it), yellow-tinged eyes. But people now are common-sense about it. They look facts in the face and recognize that they are suffering from constipation. Even the healthiest system may be subject to it at times.

Harsh purgative waters and salts or griping physics irritate an already inflamed and upset digestive tract. But a purely vegetable laxative, like Beecham's Pills, has a gentle, corrective action. Relieves constipation as if by magic. Never cramps or overacts. Won't torture you with griping pains. Restores normal, regular action.

Beecham's Pills in the new 50¢ size (glass bottle) are sugar coated—the modern remedy. Even a tiny children take them with benefit. Good for all the family. Get a package today and see for yourself. 50¢ at all druggists. Trial size 25¢.

GREENEVILLE

ST. MARY'S HARVEST FESTIVAL BIG SUCCESS

An audience of close to 800 attended the annual harvest festival of St. Mary's parish held Monday evening in the parish hall. The affair was pronounced a success in every way.

The entertainment features of the evening were furnished by the St. Mary's Girls Glee club, assisted by Edward T. Connelly, tenor, and under the direction of Mrs. Michael J. Farrell. This was the first public appearance of the club and it was readily apparent to the large number present that the work of Mrs. Farrell as director has been crowned with success. The numbers of the club were greeted with prolonged applause.

Bridge and pinochle followed. Committees assisting during the evening were as follows: Ticket office, John T. Sullivan; door, Napoleon B. Lanoie; hat room, William Krauss, Philip Belliveau, Joseph A. Donnelly, Francis D. Armittie. The children of the parish also helped greatly in the success of the festival.

The general charge of the evening's entertainment was in the hands of Rev. William A. Keefe, pastor and Frederick M. Coholan, priests of the parish.

FUNERAL

Mrs. William B. Barwell

The funeral of Mrs. Emma L. Hudson, wife of William B. Barwell was held from her late residence, 363 Central avenue Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock, followed with church services, held at St. Andrew's Episcopal church at 2:15 o'clock, Rev. E. J. Norris, the rector, being in charge. Two pleasing hymns were rendered by Mrs. John Evans. Burial was in the family plot in Maplewood cemetery, where Rev. Mr. Norris conducted the committal service. The bearers were William McClimon, Frederick Bailey, Anthony Bernard, Walter Bethel, Henry Ritzie and Johnson Banfield, Jr. Among the large attendance were mourners from New London, Mystic, Hartford, Fall River and Springfield. The floral tributes were both numerous and beautiful speaking a mute testimony of the high esteem in which Mrs. Barwell was held by her many friends and acquaintances. Church and Allen were in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Troop No. 21, Boy Scouts met in the chapel of the Third Baptist church for their weekly meeting with fourteen present. Earle Christiansen completed his tests for second class scout and Teddy Donovan passed in semaphore signalling. There was singing by the boys, first aid instructions and games. Patrol Leader Woodrow Sebastian had charge of the games. The troop expects to go on a hike next Saturday.

Two barrels are placed at the Greeneville school, as has been the custom for the past number of years, for the purpose of receiving the articles donated by the children to help provide a dinner for the needy of this city for Thanksgiving.

The Ladies' Aid society of the Third Baptist church met at the home of Mrs. Harry Conklin of Prospect street Wednesday evening, with nine members present. The evening was devoted to sewing on aprons, after which a social time was held. The ladies are planning to hold a meat pie supper and Christmas sale. At the close of the meeting the hostess served a dainty luncheon of assorted sandwiches, fancy cakes and coffee.

The Ladies' Mission circle of the Third Baptist church met in the chapel on Thursday afternoon, with the president, Mrs. Herbert Peckham, presiding. After the devotional exercises a "quiz" from November "Missions," magazine was conducted by Mrs. Gallun. A short business session followed when the secretary and treasurer gave a very good report. She also reported all of the 1930 calendars disposed of and enough clothing brought in for the barrel and with some to spare which will be shipped to "Mather School" in South Carolina. At 5:30 a supper of baked beans, brown bread, potato salad, cabbage relish, pickles, rolls, cake and coffee was served to about sixty members and friends of the society by the ladies. Mrs. H. I. Peckham was chairman of the supper committee.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Conklin and daughter, Dorothy, of Prospect street, spent Sunday with relatives in North Grosvenordale.

Mrs. Merton Darrow of Niantic spent Friday as the guest of her sister, Mrs. George A. Howard of Central avenue.

There will be no service held in the Third Baptist church on Thursday evening as they are joining in the union service held at Park Congregational church for Thanksgiving evening.

Joseph Hoffman has resigned his position with a Greeneville grocer and is now employed at the W. W. Backus hospital.

NORWICH MAN TELLS OF SCENIC BEAUTY SPOTS IN EASTERN CONNECTICUT

The weekly meeting of the Contact club had such a large attendance Monday noon that it was necessary to hold the session in the large dining hall at the Wauregan hotel instead of in the Dutch room as planned. President Ernest O. Rodier presided and Alex Pasnik was the song leader, Frederick Geer presiding at the piano.

In the membership and attendance contest, the Reds, under John P. Lyston, are leading with a standing of 805, over the Blues, Francis T. Digans, leader, standing, 665. The Reds, so far this month, have gained 15 members and the Blues, ten members. The losing team is to provide a banquet for the winning team.

John P. Lyston was given the prize for securing the largest number of new members, five, the prize being a smoking stand given by Schwartz Bros. Abner Schwartz and Mr. Fitzgerald secured four members each, and James Crawford and Alexander Pasnik secured two members each. Mr. McKinnon, Charles Eaton, Mr. Johnson, Mr. Digans, L. M. Crandall and Frank H. Murdy each secured one member. Ten members were perfect in attendance the past month, and J. B. Caron won the attendance prize, a large box of candy.

Arthur L. Peale, of this city, member of the state park and forest commission, gave an interesting talk on "Attractive Roads, Parks and Historic Places in Eastern Connecticut. Mr. Peale spoke of the recent meeting held at Boston for the advancement of the interests of New England, a part of the program having been devoted to a discussion of recreational needs. Since the coming of the automobile and good roads, said the speaker, millions of tourists are annually visiting the recreational and historical sections of our country. What has eastern Connecticut to offer to our own people and to the visiting tourists? Public spirited citizens of Norwich have provided us with beautiful Mohegan park, Lowthorpe Meadows and the Lucas Memorial Forest.

New London invites us to Ocean beach and Riverview park, and the tourists camp Woodstock, through the courtesy of the Bowen family extend the privileges of Roseland park, the state of Connecticut through the Connecticut state park and forest commission have five state forests, Mesamanee, Mehantec, Nipmuck, Machaug and Pachaug which are open for recreational purpose, the last named having within its territorial limits several ponds and brooks well stocked with fish. Nearby are the following state parks, Hurd park, Selden Neck, Great Hill, Mashamacut Brook, Sapiree Run, Bolton Notch, Buttonball Brook, Nathaniel Lyon Memorial, Quinebaug Pines, Wolf Den, Minnie Island, Devil's Hop Yard and Fort Shantok. Mr. Peale with the aid of a state highway map pointed out to the members of the club the location of many of the parks and forests and referred to many of their scenic attractions and historical associations. He then referred to the monuments under the care of the state, the Nathan Hale, Maj. John Mason, Gen. Israel Putnam, Nathaniel Lyon and under a state commission, Groton Monument and Fort Griswold.

Mr. Peale referred to the many memorials and interesting places in the local towns and villages in eastern Connecticut.

New London has the old mill, the Nathan Hale school, the Shaw mansion and the Huguenot house; Groton, the Monument, Fort Griswold and the site of the Pequot fortress on Fort Hill; Mystic, the Major John Mason monument on Pequot hill, Porters rocks and the Captain Charles Eldredge museum; Stonington was the scene of the execution of Canonchet and of many activities during the Revolutionary and War of 1812; North Stonington has a reservation of Pequot Indians; Ledyard has a reservation of Pequot Indians; Fort Decatur, marked by the Children of the American Revolution and the headquarters of the Yale and Harvard crews; Montville has Fort Shantok, the old Mohegan fort on the hill, the site of the Samson Occom house, Cochegun Rock and includes the site of the old Mohegan reservation.

Norwich, the monuments to Uncas, Sachem of the Mohegans and Miantonomo, Sachem of the Narragansetts, monument to Major John Mason and the founders of Norwich, former home and tomb of Governor Samuel Huntington, signer of the Declaration of Independence, French soldiers' graves, site of Benedict Arnold home, Norwich Falls, memorial marking site of Battle of the Great Plains, the old inns, school houses, and scores of old colonial homes. At Franklin is the Dragon's Den and Bailey's ravine; Lebanon has the old green where the French soldiers camped during the Revolutionary war, the war office of Governor Trumbull and nearby is the tomb of this famous man, also the final resting place of William Williams, signer of the Declaration of Independence.

Columbia was the site of the Moore Indian Charity school, and the home of Eleazer Wheelock, the first president of Dartmouth college is still in a good state of preservation. Windham has the beautiful old green and not far distant is the "Frog Pond" marked by a memorial. Coventry with beautiful Lake Wangumbaug has the Nathan Hale monument and the old home of the Hale family. Mansfield was the town where the silk industry made its start; Ashford on the route of the old Connecticut path was the home of the Knowlton's; Eastford is very proud of the Nathaniel Lyon monument and has a state park named after this great hero; Pomfret is the beautiful hill town of Windham county. Woodstock offers Roseland park and nearby are Elliot and Pulpit rocks. Brooklyn has many attractions, the Israel Putnam monument, the old churches, and the inn; the Mortlake House, kept by Miss Thompson and Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt. Killingly has within its borders Alexander's lake (the lake of the Nipmuck legend). Plainfield stands on the hill with its beautiful old church surrounded by many old homes. Putnam the gateway of eastern Connecticut is named after the old general, and has nearby the Quinebaug Pines state park; Canterbury was the former home of Prudence Crandall, and in the old cemetery is the memorial boulder to Moses Cleveland, founder of Cleveland, Ohio.

At Packerville is the home of George Weston, the well known writer. East Haddam is proud of the school taught by Nathan Hale, and near the Devil's Hop Yard is the old Three Rivers academy; Hadlyme, the home of William Gillette; Lyme and East Lyme attract visitors to the memorial at Bride Brook, while Saybrook, across the river, is a mecca for antiquarians as here was the first site of Yale college, the Lay Fenwick tomb, and the site of the fort of colonial times.

The speaker said there were many other places like Squaw Rock, Spy Rock and many others which should be visited to be appreciated. In fact almost every town and locality in this vicinity could be visited with profit by the tourist. He advised the marking of historic highways, similar to the plan adopted by the state of Virginia, and also marking the location of the old Brewster Trading post where trade was carried on with the Indians.

SAW OHIO WESLEYAN PLAY WEST POINT

District Superintendent and Mrs. Myron E. Genter accepted the invitation of Rev. and Mrs. D. E. LaFollette, Methodist minister, and wife, of Sterling, to motor Saturday to see the Army-Ohio Wesleyan game at West Point. Miss Ruth Genter accompanied them.

Mr. LaFollette is a graduate of Ohio Wesleyan where Paul C. Genter is a freshman and he had come on with about 500 of his college mates to see the game.

This was the first occasion for Ohio Wesleyan in play outside intercollegiate circles and there was high tension when the Battling Bishops scored with a touchdown on the Army.

Paul Genter plans to spend the Christmas holiday period in Norwich.

CROWDED CONDITIONS IN SCHOOLS UNDER CONSIDERATION

Crowded conditions at the Norwich Free Academy and in the grammar schools of the town were under consideration Monday evening at a conference held between the town school board and Principal H. A. Tirrell, Shepard B. Palmer, president and Guy B. Dolbeare, treasurer of the board of trustees of the Academy.

It was brought out that the Academy is overcrowded and the officials of the school are trying to work out some plan to relieve this condition.

Among the means by which this might be corrected the establishment of a junior high school has been suggested, this providing for six grades in the grammar school, three grades in the junior high and three at the Academy.

At the same time it was brought out that the congested conditions in the grammar schools will have to be relieved and the school board is to give this situation much serious thought and attention.

Engagement Announced

At a Thanksgiving party given Sunday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Elkin Smith on Canterbury turnpike, the engagement of Mrs. Elizabeth C. Darby, of Norwich and late of Farmington, to Walter B. Brash, of West Hartford, was announced. Guests at the party were Mr. and Mrs. John Bryce, James H. Brash, Walter A. Brash, of West Hartford; Miss Gertrude Bonime, of New York; Mrs. Elizabeth C. Darby and Walter B. Brash.

NINETIETH BIRTHDAY OF MRS. CATHRINE LANG

Mrs. Cathrine Lang, mother of Mrs. Henry Liepold of 78 Chestnut street, celebrated her 90th birthday on Sunday.

Mrs. Lang received many gifts among which were potted plants and cut flowers, which were put on the altar during services at the German Lutheran church of which she is a member.

She received relatives and friends all through Sunday morning and in the afternoon about twenty-five friends surprised her. Mrs. Liepold served supper to the many guests. Assisting her were Mrs. Chris Liepold, Mrs. George Liepold. The dining room was decorated in pink and green, in the center of the table was a large birthday cake presented to Mrs. Lang by her great grandson, Gilbert Liepold. Mrs. Lang is able to be about the home and enjoys exceptionally good health.

NORWICH TOWN

M. E. CHURCH RENOVATION TO BE MEMORIAL GIFT

Sunday morning at a meeting of the officials of the Methodist Episcopal church, the pastor, Rev. George Warren Potter, announced a most generous gift which the church is to receive. The gift is to be presented by Frank B. Bushnell in memory of his brother, Frederick H. Bushnell, for over 45 years an official and loyal worker in the Norwich Town church. It will include the complete redecoration of the interior of the church and vestibule. The ceiling, walls, floor, pews and pulpit furniture will all be refinished and a new communion table with a suitable tablet upon it will be included in the gift. During the time of the redecorating all services will be held in the vestry, beginning Sunday next. When the work is completed a special reopening service will be held.

"Thanksgiving" was the theme of the sermon at the Congregational church, Sunday morning, by the pastor, Rev. Gurdon P. Bailey, who used for his text Psalm 116:17, I will offer to Thee the sacrifices of thanksgiving and will call upon the name of the Lord. Envelopes are in circulation for the annual thank offering for the League of Service of this parish. A request was made during the morning service that each person contributing places his or her envelope on the church plate as soon as convenient. A further request was made that anyone having a Christmas gift for Miss Ruth Beebe of her school at Athens, Ala., send the same to Mrs. Clyde M. Beebe, East Town street, early this week.

The topic of the Young People's C. E. service Sunday evening was "Thanksgiving and Thanks Living." Miss Louise Sterry was leader. Henry T. Frasier presided at the session of the Congregational church school Sunday noon, in the absence of Supt. Dwight W. Avery. The following were appointed committee for the Christmas festival of the church school: Misses Rose Durr, Eleanor Smith, Louise Sterry and Louise Avery.

The Intermediate and Junior C. E. societies will meet in the Congregational chapel this (Tuesday) afternoon at 3:45. The Juniors will have as their topic, Thanksgiving, a Study of the Puritans. This will be the November business meeting with reports of the Intermediates, during which an offering will be taken, followed by a short Thanksgiving service. The First Congregational church people will join in the union Thanksgiving service at Park Congregational church, Thursday evening, at 7:30.

The notice was read at the Congregational church Sunday of the Woman's Crusade debate to be given by two prominent New York lawyers Sunday, Dec. 1, at 7:30 p. m., at the Central Baptist church.

Mr. and Mrs. John Olsen, of Town street, entertained Sunday, Mrs. Olsen's relatives from Providence. Mr. and Mrs. Val Lake and Carleton Apply, the last named niece and nephew, respectively, of Mrs. Olsen. Now! THE TIME of all TIMES to BUY YOUR SILVER Radio

· EXTRAORDINARY ·

Now—when the public has rendered its judgment on radio values—when some highly-advertised radios have fallen suddenly in price—due plainly to lack of public enthusiasm in buying them—SILVER RADIO stands out for the incomparable value that it is.

No price cut will be made on SILVER RADIO, because it has always been priced right. SILVER RADIO, using 4 screen-grid tubes, is by laboratory measurements from 12 to 38 times more sensitive than others. That, of course, is why SILVER RADIO needs no aerial.

If such tremendous superiority in any one radio seems hard to believe, ask any radio man whom you know personally. He will tell you what a bomb-shell Silver-Marshall dropped into this year's radio market with a $160 receiver that tops the performance of $400 sets.

Remember, before you buy your radio, that no set is a bargain if you regret buying it before you have completed paying for it!

Any SILVER dealer will show you in three minutes' time the "Four Amazing Tests" which lay before your own eyes and ears the absolute proof of SILVER superiority.

4 screen-grid tubes—needs no aerial for local or distance reception. Clear, humless reception, extreme distance-range and selectivity result from the exclusive combination of screen-grid power detection, band-selectortuning, and the famous Overtone Switch, minimizing static interference.

SILVER RADIO is available in an ample variety of cabinets. The Concert Grand (illustrated) is priced, without tubes, at $173

Other models $160 and $195

PUBLIC UTILITY MAGNATES INVITED TO WHITE HOUSE

Last of President Hoover's Business Conferences Will Be Held at 10 a. m. Today—Owen D. Young, Samuel Insull, George B. Contelyor and 28 Other Public Utilities Leaders Have Been Invited to the Conference.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26—(AP)—Thirty-one public utility magnates will gather at the white house tomorrow morning for the last of the business conferences called by President Hoover to promote business progress.

The list invited, which includes Owen D. Young and Samuel Insull, represents the officials of electric railway, light and gas concerns. They will meet with Mr. Hoover at ten o'clock.

After tomorrow's meeting, the president intends to turn the practical working out of his ideas over to constituted organizations such as the chamber of commerce of the United States and kindred trade and industrial agencies. The task of coordinating the work purely governmental in nature will be assigned to Secretary Lamont who is expected to seek cooperation from the states.

As a definite step to carry forward Mr. Hoover's wishes, the chamber of commerce has called a special meeting December 5 in Washington at which 200 or more prominent business men of the country are expected to be present. The first session of the conference will be addressed by President Hoover.

Tomorrow's conference at the white house will be the sixth of such meetings called by the president. The utility officials have been holding a convention in New York and are expected to be able to inform Mr. Hoover what the utilities will be able to do to participate in his program.

Those invited to the utility conference in addition to Young and Insull are: S. Z. Mitchell of the Electric Bond & Share company, New York; Charles L. Edgar, Edison Electric Illuminating company, Boston; F. L. Dame, North American company, New York; W. A. Jones, Cities Service company, New York;: B. C. Cobb, Allied Power and Light company, New York; Thomas H. McCarter, Public Service Electric & Gas company, Newark, N. J.; C. E. WASHINGTON PAID FINAL TRIBUTE TO SEN. WARREN

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26—(AP)—In a hushed senate chamber where he had labored for nearly two score years, Senator Francis E. Warren, of Wyoming, was honored in death today by President Hoover, and high officials of the government.

The chief executive, his cabinet, members of the supreme court, senate and house, and representatives of foreign governments, paid final tribute at a simple state service for the beloved dean of the senate who had served his country in war and peace and helped to shape the destiny of the pioneer west.

The chamber and galleries were crowded during the twenty minute service. The words of Tennyson's poem "Crossing the Bar," passages of scripture from the Episcopalian service, and prayer by the Rev. Z. B. Phillips, chaplain of the senate, who had charge of the service, marked the passing of the man who as a drummer boy in the Civil war won the Congressional Medal of Honor.

While no eulogy was given today, not so many weeks ago, senators on both sides of the chamber, republicans and democrats alike, praised Senator Warren in words that brought tears to his eye and left his voice a whisper when he arose to reply. It was his 85th birthday.

TREASURY BILLS ARE TO BE SOLD AT A DISCOUNT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26—(AP)—General rules governing the sale and issue of treasury bills, which soon are expected to be put into use as a new method of government financing, were announced today by Secretary Mellon.

The plan is to sell the bills at a discount instead of selling treasury certificates bearing interest as means of taking care of the government's temporary financial needs. It was approved by congress last June.

The issuance of the regulations was accepted as indicating the treasury would use this method, at least in part, in its December financing. At that time two issues of treasury certificates are due and will total approximately $750,000,000. Because of this officials believe the total treasury offering for the winter financing might approximate $500,000,000.

The fourth quarter's income tax payments are due on December 15 and are expected to aggregate $400,000,000, which amount with the sale of the certificates or bills would provide for the government financial needs until next March.

N. H. ROAD INCREASES DIVIDEND RATE TO $6

NEW YORK, Nov. 26—(AP)—Headed by the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, the directors of which increased the annual dividend rate from $5 to $6, a review of today's business news showed a long list of favorable dividend declarations, either in the form of extra, increased or initial payments.

The increase in the New Haven common rate was a duplication of the directors' action at their last quarterly meeting when they increased the rate from $4 to $5, the former rate having been in effect since the middle of last year. The road's position has improved consistently during the last five years and today's increase as well as that of three months ago had been anticipated in business circles.

PRESIDENT-ELECT RUBIO OF MEXICO TO VISIT WASHINGTON

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 26—(AP)—President-elect Pascual Ortiz Rubio will go to Washington to pay a call to President Hoover if plans now under consideration materialize. It was learned from a reliable source today that he desires to leave in about a fortnight and besides visiting Washington and New York would rest from the arduous campaign which ended in his election on November 17 at some clinic, probably that of the Mayo brothers in Rochester, Minn.

REDUCTION REPORTED IN REV. FREIGHT LOADINGS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26—(AP)—Revenue freight loadings for the week ended November 16 were reported today by the American Railway association to have totaled 283,323 cars.

This was a reduction of 66,152 cars under the preceding week, and a reduction of 72,797 cars under loadings for the corresponding week a year ago.

NIGHT RIDERS TO BE PROSECUTED FOR MURDER

MOUNTAINVIEW, Ark., Nov. 26—(AP)—A band of intoxicated night riders who terrorized this community in efforts to prevent the marriage of a mentally deficient youth of 20 and a girl of the St. James community, today was blamed by Sheriff Sam Johnson for the mutilation and burning alive of Connie Franklin, farm hand, and prospective bridegroom.

Preliminary legal steps were taken today for the trial December 16 or five men under first degree murder indictments in which Prosecuting Attorney Hugh Williamson will oppose his young brother, Ben B. Williamson, former state senator, employed as chief defense counsel.

The accused men are: Bill Younger, father of five children, and Hubert Hester, both in jail at Newport; Herman Greenway and Joe White, in jail at Batesville, and Alex Fulks, in jail here. Greenway, who also is married, and Hester, in addition to first degree murder indictments, face statutory charges in connection with an alleged attack on Franklin's 16 year old bride to be.

GOLD MEDAL AWARDED DR. HUGO ECKENER

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26—(AP)—Dr. Hugo Eckener was awarded a gold medal today by the National Geographic society for piloting around the world an aircraft of the type he so bitterly attacked as a newspaper editor at the time Count Zeppelin was making his first dirigible experiments.

Notifications of the award was sent to Dr. Eckener through the German embassy at Washington. He plans to come here in March and that at that time the medal will be presented formally by members of the society in the same manner as was a similar honor conferred upon Commander Richard E. Byrd for a flight to the north pole, and Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh for flying from New York to Paris.

HELD FOR VIOLATION OF IMMIGRATION LAWS

ST. ALBANS, Vt., Nov. 26—(AP)—Anthony Truskaushas, of Torrington, Conn., was released in $750 bonds by U. S. Commissioner C. D. Watson today, for appearance before the U. S. district court next month on charges of violating the immigration laws.

Truskaushas was charged with attempting to smuggle aliens into this country. Joseph Matusevcius and his wife was held in $500 for attempting to mania, were arrested with Truskaushas. The man was ordered deported, but his wife was sheld in $500 for attempting to enter the country under an assumed name, having pose das Truskaushas' wife when questioned by officers of the border patrol.

EXPERTS ON INSANITY ENTER M'CORMICK CASE

SANTA BARBARA, Cal., Nov. 26—(AP)—Medical experts on insanity were called to the witness stand today in the contest over the guardianship of Stanley McCormick incompetent multi-millionaire, in an attempt to refute assertions of his wife that treatment provided by his brother and sister had not improved his mental state.

Mrs. McCormick, who instigated the hearing, alleged that her husband's guardians, Harold McCormick and Anita McCormick Blaine, were dissipating his $50,000,000 fortune and asked that his welfare be transferred to her protection.

LADY MARY HEATH FAINTED AS SHE ANSWERED PHONE

RENO, Nev., Nov. 26—(AP)—Lady Mary Heath, British aviatrix, was reported by her nurse to have fainted today when she answered the telephone here and was questioned about the outcome of a suit in London in which the court held her liable for a $1,200 dressmaker's bill.

The call was from the New York correspondent of a London newspaper who inquired whether Lady Heath intended to pay the bill.

China Appeals To League Of Nations

Calls Upon Kellogg Pact Governments to Halt and Punish Russian Invaders.

(By the Associated Press)

Her armed forces in western Manchuria scattered in panic before invading Russian troops, China has appealed both to the league of nations and to governments which signed the Kellogg anti-war pact to halt and punish the invaders.

Simultaneously China apparently was trying to come to terms with the Kuominchun "peoples army" leaders, who for several weeks have led their troops in several provinces in revolt against the Nationalist government. The fact that fighting between the Kuominchun and Nationalists had ceased in central China was cited as corroborative of reports that President Chiang Kai-Shek and other officials were endeavoring to unite all factions of China against the foreign foe.

But in south China the rebels of Kwangsi province continued active and upon the border city of Wuchow a Nationalist airplane squadron dropped bombs killing many persons, terrorizing the inhabitants and causing heavy property damage.

The rich Manchurian area of 362,700 square miles, often the prize for which opposing nations fought, today was again a great battle ground with Russia and China striving for control and operation of the Chinese Eastern railway. This artery of traffic, crossing Manchuria from east to west and from north to south, has off-shoots that not only carry the commerce of Manchuria but connect the Trans-Siberia railroad at Chita with Vladivostok, Russian ocean port and serve Japan in Korea and at the southern tip of Manchuria.

Driving inward 10 miles or more from Siberia, the Russian troops sent the Chinese soldiers before them in wild flight. Without pausing to give serious battle, the Chinese fled through the Hinkan mountains, many reaching Pachatu where they attempted to take trains for the south. Others in leaderless bands roamed the country-side, levying food and shelter from the inhabitants.

For the city of Khailar, evacuated by the Chinese without fight, was reported today still unoccupied by Russian troops.

DETECTIVE CASEY AND MRS. BINGHAM WERE POISONED

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 26—(AP)—That Supt. of Detectives James J. Casey, 56, and Mrs. Dora Bingham, 51, whose bodies were found at his summer camp at Brooks pond, Spencer, Monday morning, were poisoned by some substance yet unknown, was the assertion of both Chief of Police Thomas F. Foley and State Detective Edward J. McCarthy tonight upon the completion of the preliminary analysis of the vital organs of the victims and of the bottles out of which they drank liquor.

Police investigating the double death started tonight to trace through drug stores sale of a poison to either Supt. Casey or to Mrs. Bingham. That the case seemed one of murder and then suicide seemed to them probable.

TESTIMONY FOR DEFENSE OF TEXTILE WORKERS ORGANIZER

MARION, N. C., Nov. 26—(AP)—Sixteen year old Miss Mouser English, bobbed brown-eyed mill worker who was on the union picket line August 30, at the Clinchfield mill, here, when an alleged riot took place, testified today in defense of Alfred Hoffman, United Textile Worker organizer, and three of his associates.

Hoffman, Del Lewis, Wes Fowler and Lawrence Hogan, are charged with rioting and resisting officers.

Miss English said that the "pickets were to persuade people to join the union" and nothing was done to prevent people from entering the mill property. She also testified that Hogan had instructed the pickets and their sympathizers "to keep on the law's side and not do anything to cause trouble."

REP. GRIEST SHOWING UNEXPECTED VITALITY

MT. CLEMENS, Mich., Nov. 26—(AP)—Showing a vitality unexpected by his physician, Congressman W. W. Griest, 71 year old Pennsylvania representative, continued late today to wage a battle against death from pneumonia with which he was stricken some two weeks ago.

Reports from the hotel here, where he has been for the last five months, were that the aged congressman was conscious late today, but that his condition continued to be critical. Hope that he would recover was given up yesterday by Representative Griest's physician.

Administering of oxygen and heart stimulants was continued today.

FORMER DANCING PARTNER OF RUDOLPH VALENTINO SUED

HAMILTON, Ohio, Nov. 26—(AP)—Mrs. Joan Sawyer Rentschler, former dancing partner of the late Rudolph Valentino, was sued today for $100,000 for alleged alienation of affections by Paul Wiegand, 28, an executive of the Hamilton Coke and Iron company.

Wiegand charged the dancer alienated the affections of his wife Martha Wiegand, 20.

The defendant's husband is George A. Rentschler, president of the Hoover-Owens and Rentschler company, of Hamilton, manufacturers of marine engines.

FISHING CASE BEFORE CIVIL SUPERIOR COURT

MIDDLETOWN, Nov. 26—(AP)—Whether a person who fishes from a public bridge across a private stream is guilty of trespass, was the question which confronted a jury in civil superior court here, today.

The East Haddam Fish and Game club brought the action against Frederick B. Pace, of East Haddam. Pace was found fishing in a stream leased by the club and arrested, but as he was on a public bridge, the charge was thrown out. Then, to test the club's property rights, the civil action was begun.

DIAMOND INDUSTRY IN ANTWERP TO SUSPEND

ANTWERP, Nov. 26—(AP)—Employers in the diamond industry here decided here tonight to close their works from December 7 to December 21 because of the continuing slump in trade conditions. The 12,000 workers affected will receive unemployment pay from a fund to which both employers and men contribute.

Talking Movies Used As Court Evidence

Confession of Burglar Was Made Before Voice and Picture Recording Apparatus.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 26—(AP)—For the first time in the history of jurisprudence in this country, it is believed, a talking motion picture was introduced as evidence in court here today at the trial of Harold Roller, who confessed recently before voice and picture recording apparatus that he had robbed 25 homes here.

Judge James J. Gordon, Jr., before whom Roller is being tried, overruled objections by defense counsel against showing the "talkie."

"I see no difference between allowing a photograph to be entered as evidence, after identification by competent testimony, and the projection of a series of photographs, the court said.

A screen was erected in the court room and in six minutes the confession had been reeled off.

"I have been made no promises, nor have I been beaten or forced to make this confession," the talking pictures of Roller said. He is shown sitting between a detective and a woman stenographer.

The confession then related Roller's story of how he had robbed the homes while employed as a milk wagon driver.

ONE DEFENDANT FREED IN L. I. RUM RING CASE

NEW YORK, Nov. 26—(AP)—One defendant was freed, two charges were dropped against the others, and the defense brought its testimony to a close today in federal court in the trial of eight men, charged with operating a rum ring off Long Island, South Carolina and Florida.

Bernard Molitor, hotel owner of Long Beach, Fla., was dismissed as a defendant when the government conceded that the evidence it held against him, did not warrant his connection with the alleged ring.

Lack of evidence also caused two counts in the indictment against the other seven defendants to be erased and the only charge now against them is conspiracy to violate the prohibition and customs laws, specifically to import illegally.

Rudolph Wylk, alleged leader, and Karl Lolunberg, Michael Gillo, Fred Rohrer, Ernest Whitehead, Peter Böhm and Otto Diercks, are the remaining defendants.

J. V. THOMPSON HELD IN BAIL FOR EMBEZZLEMENT

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Nov. 26—(AP)—J. V. Thompson, 75, once a multi-millionaire banker and coal land owner, was freed today on $20,000 bond on a charge of embezzling $200,000 from the estate of John Niccolls, of Uniontown, father of the Princess of Thurn and Taxis. The charge was preferred by the princess, the former Lydia Niccolls of Uniontown.

Thompson also was given temporary freedom on a charge of contempt of court, resulting from his failure to pay $125,000 he owed the estate of Emma Messmore of Uniontown. He was paroled in the custody of his attorney until December 21.

TWO MEN KIDNAPED A BAKER AT MOMENCE, ILL.

MOMENCE, Ill., Nov. 26—(AP)—Two men tonight kidnaped Henry W. Conrad, operator of one of the largest bakeries in northern Illinois, and fled with him in an automobile into Indiana, after holding seven employes at bay with revolvers in the bakery just as Conrad was closing up the day's business.

The employes told police that Conrad, who was in competition with Chicago bakeries, had received threatening letters. Sheriff Edward Hoennicke followed the kidnapers in an automobile but lost the trail at Crown Point, Ind.

THREW ACID IN FACE OF HIS ESTRANGED WIFE

NEW YORK, Nov. 26—(AP)—A 25-year old woman was taken to a hospital tonight in a critical condition from sulphuric acid burns on the face and chest and her estranged husband was arrested on a charge of felonious assault in the church where they were married five months ago.

Police said the man, Frank Van Derkuylen, 29, admitted throwing the acid on his wife, Annabelle, after she would not listen to his pleas for reconciliation.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 26—(AP)—Embezzlements aggregating $200,000, to which H. E. Anthony, manager of one of the Bank of Italy's branch banks in San Diego, was said to have confessed, were revealed here today by the head office of the Bank of Italy.

CONN. PLANS TO COOPERATE WITH PRESIDENT HOOVER

Gov. Trumbull and Mayors of Cities Pledge Expenditure of More Than $25,000,000 During 1930 in Construction of Public Buildings and Works—Gov. Trumbull Has Assured the President of State's Full Cooperation in His Desire to Relieve Unemployment and Stimulate Industrial Activity.

(By The Associated Press)

Connecticut's part in President Hoover's endeavor to stimulate construction of public buildings and works, involving the expenditure of upwards of $25,000,000 during 1930, was announced yesterday in statements issued by Gov. John H. Trumbull and mayors of cities.

Assuring the president of this state's full co-operation in his desire to relieve unemployment and generally advance industrial activity, Gov. Trumbull called his attention to a program entailing construction costs of $15,000,000 by the state. In addition $8,000,000 available for highways will be expended along with another half million for surveying new routes.

Buildings planned for state institutions, the chief executive of Connecticut said, will cost $6,161,000. Those now under construction total $850,000. In December contracts are to be awarded for new construction amounting to $450,000. In February $2,250,000 worth of contracts are to be let; $1,250,000,000 in March and April and $550,000 in June.

The city of Hartford, according to Mayor Batterson, "is a pioneer in accepting as sound the Hoover idea," and is engaged in a program of construction costing in excess of $2,000,000. Other projects are planned.

Mayor Anson F. Keeler, of Norwalk, announced that municipal construction totalling nearly $2,000,000, including a $1,000,000 sewage disposal plant, will be rushed through in accordance with Hoover's wishes. The mayor plans to consult with the president on the new federal building which has been promised the city.

New Britain has under consideration a program involving $125,000. The waters of willow brook will be dammed, an approach to municipal World war memorial shaft constructed and an obsolete bridge at Black Rock replaced.

Torrington will begin work on a $70,000 trunk line sewer as quickly as possible, Mayor Ernest E. Novello said. Several other projects are already under way.

The town highway committee of Manchester, decided, after a report that there was little or no unemployment in the town, not to undertake any extraordinary program at this time. In Stamford, Mayor W. W. Graves said little could be done because of the approach of winter, preventing contemplated road construction.

$333,00,000 NEW CONSTRUCTION CONTEMPLATED BY CALIFORNIA

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 26—(AP)—Contemplated expenditures of $333,000,000 in new construction in the next five years, $65,000,000 of it in 1930 was announced here today by the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph company.

H. D. Pillsbury, president of the company, referred to the plans as the company's response to President Hoover's prosperity budget plan.

Expeditions on the five year budget in northern California and Nevada will total $189,000,000; in Washington, Oregon and Western Idaho $35,000,000. In Southern California $99,000,000.

The contemplated expenditures for 1930 and the four years succeeding will break all records for new telephone construction the announcement said.

TESTIMONY OF GRAFT IN BASEBALL POOL CASE

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—(AP)—William F. Buchanan, Albany county democratic politician, testified today in the perjury trial of James J. Otto, former partner in the Albany baseball pool, that $16,000 protection money collected from James W. Wright, originator of the pool, was split five ways among himself, Otto, Ed and Dan O'Connell, Albany democratic leaders, and a "Mr. Corning."

The $16,000, Buchanan testified, was collected from Wright in addition to a toll of 2 1-2 per cent of the pool's profits levied by the O'Connells. Buchanan told Federal Judge Alfred C. Coxe and a jury that the O'Connells, with himself acting as intermediary, informed Wright that he must pay, "or there wouldn't be no pool."

Buchanan also testified that Wright had told him he paid $2,000 to former Assemblyman John A. Boyle of Albany.

The $16,000 which he said was split five ways was paid, Buchanan testified, after the O'Connells had collected their 2 1-2 per cent.

$1,000,000 CASH IN HOUSE OF DAVID "DIAMOND HOUSE"

BENTON HARBOR, Mich., Nov. 26—(AP)—Nearly $1,000,000 in cash is sealed in the "diamond house," one of the chief buildings of the House of David, in which still lies the mummified body of "King" Ben Burnell, according to a petition filed today in the circuit court at St. Joseph. "Queen" Mary Purnell, consort of the late cult leader, filed the bill.

EXPANSION PLANNED BY NORTH GERMAN LLOYD LINE

BREMEN, Germany, Nov. 26—(AP)—The North German Lloyd line has decided to expand its freight service after January, 1930, by increasing the number of sailings and the freight capacity of ships.

The company will place eleven vessels in commission on the Bremerhaven-New York route in January, eight in February, and ten in March.

BRADFORD BOX FACTORY AT BRADFORD, R. I., BURNED

BRADFORD, R. I., Nov. 26—(AP)—The Bradford Box Manufacturing company's factory, a small frame structure, and 30,000 to 40,000 feet of lumber, were destroyed tonight by fire. The damage was estimated at $22,500.

The factory, the property of Howard B. Perkins, of Westerly, employs about 15 men.

LITTLE GIRL KILLED BY HIT AND RUN DRIVER

BRANFORD, Nov. 26—(AP)—Janet B. Buell, 5, was killed today by a hit and run driver. Her body was found in the center of the Indian Neck road by Charles Bond, of Bridgeport, driver of a baker's delivery truck.

The girl had delivered a jar of jelly to her grandmother and was returning to her home when the accident occurred.

RUN ON THE WOONSOCKET INSTITUTION FOR SAVINGS

WOONSOCKET, R. I., Nov. 26—(AP)—Rumors that the Woonsocket Institution for Savings had suffered losses in the recent stock market decline started a run on the institution here today although officials of the bank denied the rumors and the state bank commissioner said the bank was sound financially, the run continued up to the closing time. Bank officials said they would have plenty of money on hand to meet the demands.

POINCARE HAS RECOVERED FROM TWO OPERATIONS

PARIS, Nov. 26—(AP)—Former Premier Poincare has completely recovered from the strain of his two operations for a postate disorder. A bulletin issued by his physicians today said that the disorder was not likely to give him trouble in the future.

M. Poincare will leave Paris early in December for the Riviera, where he expects to spend the winter restoring his strength.

RESERVE BOARD SUMMARY OF BUSINESS CONDITIONS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Industrial activity in October continued at a higher level than for the same month last year, the Federal Reserve board reported today, in a summary of business conditions. Industrial production declined, however, as compared with September and there was a like decrease in factory employment.

Distribution of commodities was sustained during the month, the board said.

"Bank credit outstanding increased rapidly in the latter part of October, when security prices declined abruptly and there was a large liquidation of brokers' loans by non-banking lenders," the summary said. "In the first three weeks of November further liquidation of brokers' loans was reflected in reduction of security loans of member banks.

"Production in the basic industries, which has declined for several months from the high level reached in midsummer, showed a further reduction in October. The decline in production reflected chiefly decreases in output of steel and automobiles. Daily average output of shoes, leather and flour also declined.

"Preliminary reports for the first half of November indicate further reduction in output of steel and automobiles and a decrease in cotton textile."

NO PROGRESS MADE IN M'MANUS MURDER TRIAL

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—(AP)—The trial of George A. McManus for the murder of Arnold Rothstein continued today with the status of the case at the close of the four-hour session exactly where it was last Thursday afternoon.

Most of the morning was spent in selecting a juror to replace Eugene A. Riker, who was excused by Judge Charles C. Nott, Jr., yesterday because of illness. After the questioning of 16 talesmen of a special panel of 64 called, Edmund Shotwell, a heavy-set, ruddy-faced automobile salesman, was picked to fill the empty seat in the jury box. A mistrial previously had been declared but a new one immediately started and the remaining 11 jurors were accepted.

Then started the business of reading to Mr. Shotwell and the rest of the jury, which had already heard it once the opening remarks of the state last Thursday and the testimony of the seven state witnesses who appeared that day and the next.

It is expected that at least all of the morning session tomorrow and part of the afternoon tomorrow, will be consumed in this way before any new witness can be called.

PERNICIOUS ANEMIA SUCCESSFULLY TREATED

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Success in treatment of pernicious anemia by administrations of liver obtained from unborn calves was revealed today by the department of agriculture.

The report was made on authority of Dr. R. P. Steddom, chief of the meat inspection service which supplied the Ohio State university hospital at Columbus, Ohio, with five pounds of foetal livers from healthy cows to be used as a last chance for saving the life of a young man suffering from aplastic anemia.

After administration of the livers in a pharmaceutical form, the patient's blood count mounted to 4,750,000 red corpuscles and the hemaglobin, or color, to 99 per cent of normal, Dr. Steddom recalled from statements forwarded by the parents at Westerville, Ohio. Several weeks later, during which no further administrations were made, the patient was released from the hospital.

OBITUARY

Newton Walker

BLOOMSBURG, Pa., Nov. 26—(AP)—Newton Walker, 88, who as a reporter for the New York Tribune, "covered" the Greeley presidential campaign in 1872, died today. Mr. Walker, who was a Civil war veteran, became court stenographer here, having devised his own short hand system.

MERCHANTS PLAN FOR CHRISTMAS BUYING

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 26.—An early start has been gained by the Retail Merchants' bureau of the chamber of commerce in laying plans for co-operative features during the Christmas season. The directors have recommended that the stores be kept open until 9 o'clock each evening beginning Thursday, Dec. 19, to and inclusive of Christmas eve. Evening shopping will then be available Thursday, Friday, Saturday, Monday and Tuesday evenings.

Christmas tree decorations throughout the business district will again be in vogue. This has been done jointly in the past by the merchants and the city government. Every effort will be made to again arouse the high praises which the Christmas decorations in Willimantic have elicited in the past. All merchants, clerks and office holders in the business district are being requested to refrain from parking their automobiles on business streets during the shopping days, this in the hope of providing all possible parking space to the buying public. It is planned to continue this request in the hope of making it effective throughout the year. During the holiday season it is planned to check on the members of the Merchants' bureau who fail to heed the request.

The bureau has voted full co-operation to the annual exhibit of the Windham County Poultry, Pigeon and Small Stock association to be held in the state armory in January. Committees of these two organizations and one representing the chamber of commerce will confer on plans to make the exhibit one long to be remembered for general interest and instructiveness. The poultry department of Connecticut Agricultural college is to play a major part in the arrangements.

MEETING OF ASSESSORS HERE ON NEXT MONDAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 26.—The assessors of the 49 towns in New London, Tolland and Windham counties will gather at a conference to be held in the town building auditorium here next Monday afternoon at 1 o'clock with William H. Blodgett, state tax commissioner, presiding. The conference, which will be the second of a series, will be in the nature of a round-table discussion of assessors' problems, each assessor being asked to present any problem encountered relative to tax ratings. It is hoped through this tri-county session to acquire much valuable information and assist newly elected assessors in their work. Tax Commissioner Blodgett has invited the boards of selectmen of the eastern Connecticut towns to attend this conference. It is expected that considerable information will be sought by visiting officials relative to the recent revaluation of property in the town of Windham which has brought about a revision of the grand list and provided for permanent records of properties.

The program of observance of Thanksgiving in Willimantic is along quiet lines, the one public event scheduled to date for the holiday being the carnival and Thanksgiving afternoon dance under the auspices of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. The carnival will run Thanksgiving eve and on the afternoon and evening of the holiday. There will be the usual mid-week dance at the Al-Pierre Tabarin.

Business in general will be suspended for the day, including manufacturing plants, banking institutions and schools. Mail deliveries by city, rural or star route carriers will be suspended for the day, although the collection of mail will be at the usual hours.

Wednesday evening the Protestant churches of the city will join in a union Thanksgiving service at the Methodist church at 7:30 o'clock with a sermon address by Rev. F. C. Williams of St. Paul's Episcopal church. There will be the usual morning service at St. Joseph's and St. Mary's R. C. churches.

A city-wide appeal is being made for timely assistance to the Welfare bureau, which is recognized as one of the most active public welfare organizations. The appeal is without solicitation and is planned to bring about material aid to this worthy cause which does not benefit from a community chest fund as is operated in many other cities. In addition to giving much in actual welfare the bureau has established numerous contacts in social work. The bulk of this work, which is done by Miss Elizabeth P. Anderson, is found difficult owing to the lack of funds. Miss Anderson at once qualifies in her connections with the bureau as secretary, janitor, visitor, investigator and press agent. An untold number of people in Willimantic are in dire need of food, clothing and social guidance and many of the sufferers are babies or young children. The bureau is strictly non-sectarian and does not discriminate in nationalities. At this time the bureau is engaged in the distribution of a number of Thanksgiving baskets among the needy.

Superintendent of Detectives James J. Casey, 56, of Worcester, Mass., who, in company with a woman, was found dead at his hunting lodge in North Brookfield, Mass., Monday, is quite well known among court officials here. Detective Casey was one of the officers who brought about the arrest and conviction of the Worcester "ice box" bandits in the Windham county superior court here in October, 1928.

DIST. GOV. HODGES PAYS VISIT TO ROTARY CLUB

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 26.—Vernon H. Hodges of New Haven, governor of the 30th Rotary district, conducted his annual visit to the Willimantic Rotary club at the noon meeting held in the Nathan Hale hotel with a luncheon today. President Louis H. Arnold was in charge of the session and introduced Governor Hodges. Other guests were: Rotarians Edward H. Hellman, John L. Sullman and M. Frank Leonard of the Norwich club, Dr. Charles J. Probaska of Hartford, member of the state board of education, and Dow Ahern of this city.

William A. Dawson announced plans well underway for the annual Football night to be held in the hotel next Tuesday evening with members of the Windham high school football squad, Coach Thomas A. Callaghan and Principal Egbert A. Case as guests. Justice George E. Hinman made announcements relative to the Ladies' night to be held in the hotel Monday evening, Dec. 9.

Governor Hodges, who was visiting the 37th of the 45 clubs in the district, was accompanied by Mrs. Tessa Hodges, who was presented with a floral bouquet at the close of the evening. Governor Hodges congratulated the club on the splendid meeting quarters provided by the hotel. He was also congratulatory of the club's attendance during the past months. In connection with the extension and general growth of Rotary, which will celebrate its 25th birthday next Feb. 23, he said that there were 150,000 members affiliated with 3,135 clubs in virtually every country of the world. He gave the quota of the local club for the year as four new members. A general conference of the officers, directors and committee chairmen and vice-chairmen was held with the governor at the close of the regular session.

A fine of $100 and costs, with one-half of the fine remitted, was imposed in the Mansfield town court Monday afternoon in the case of George Kenfield of this city, charged with driving a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor. Kenfield, who pleaded guilty as charged, was arrested Sunday by State Policeman Terrill Cousens of the Stafford Springs barracks, who had received a complaint that the man was driving through Mansfield Hollow and that he was apparently intoxicated. The total assessment of $63.10 was paid. Justice of the Peace Byron Houston presided at court and Walter Storrs, grand juror, prosecuted.

E. A. Mansure, Chicago and Philadelphia manufacturer, who maintains a summer home in Chaplin, has presented his annual donation of $100 to St. Joseph's hospital, it was announced this afternoon.

The manufacturing plants of the Rossie Velvet Co., Holland Silk and Windham Silk companies will close Wednesday evening for the balance of the week, it was stated today. The American Thread Co. will resume operations Friday morning with the exception of two departments. The Willimantic Silk, Inc., and Kobo Silk Co. will close during the holiday only.

The lucky candidate in the city election, Dec. 2, will become Willimantic's 11th mayor. The city was incorporated in 1893 and until 1906, when the late Mayor Daniel P. Dunn entered office to serve for 12 consecutive years, the election was annual. Under the biennial system the "rubber" will be played off in the coming election as each party has nine victories to its credit. Owing to repeated tenure of office on the part of Mayor Charles A. Gates, who now completes his fourth term, the democrats have elected three mayors and the republicans six.

The Exchange club entertained the Lions club at an enjoyable joint meeting held in St. Paul's parish house this evening with an attendance of 85, including guests. Attorney E. Frank Bugbee, president of the Exchange club, welcomed the visiting organization. The response was made on behalf of Lions by Vice-President Dr. E. E. Gorton acting in the absence of President John H. Wilcox. A delicious chicken pie supper was served by the ladies of the church. Music was by Norman Fletcher, piano, and Hadley Williams, cornet. Robert G. Remington, chairman of the evening, introduced as the speaker Dr. George Alan Works, president of Connecticut Agricultural college, Storrs, who was heard in an interesting discourse relating to the public school system of the country and entitled The Greater Experiment.

Students of the Willimantic State Normal school today took up humanitarian work and distributed eight Thanksgiving baskets to families in town. They returned to enjoy a dinner at the dormitory.

Cars driven by Rev. Arthur S. Wheelock and Principal Harry T. Viner of the Natchaug grammar school figured in a slight collision near the high school building on Prospect street Monday afternoon.

The roll call of prisoners at the county jail in Brooklyn is growing larger as the mercury lowers, driving the unemployed and the genuine tramps under cover for the winter. While the registration prior to Nov. 1 was as low as 25, Sheriff Charles A. Gates stated today that there are now 41 prisoners at the jail.

Mrs. J. C. Randall has been entertaining her granddaughter, Miss Grace Randall, employed at the Y. W. C. A. in Hartford.

Mrs. Wells S. Wilcox has returned from Stamford where she was called last week and by the sudden death of her brother, Leo A. Gordon. The deceased leaves his wife and two children.

Mrs. Carl Oman has returned from spending a week with relatives in Easthampton, Mass.

William Little, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Little, with his wife and sons, Parker and Louis F. Little, has moved from Stratford to Fairmont, W. Va., where they joined Mrs. Jennie Church, mother of Mrs. Little.

Mrs. P. P. Langmaid left today to spend the holiday with relatives in Beverly, Mass.

Mrs. Ralph W. E. Carpenter is reported as resting comfortably in a Boston, Mass., hospital, where she underwent an operation.

A number of members of Natchaug lodge, No. 22, Knights of Pythias, will journey to Colchester Wednesday evening to meet with that lodge and witness the exemplification of the first and second degrees.

Following their return from a wedding trip to New York city, the couple will reside on Charter Oak avenue, Hartford, the groom being employed as a machinist.

Bradford Cragin Buys Farm

Deeds were passed Saturday, transferring the ownership of the 190-acre farm on the Colchester-Norwich turnpike from Edwin R. Sherman of Colchester, to Bradford Cragin, of New York. It is reported that the Sherman family, who have lived on the farm for a long period of years, will move into the village. The new owner is a son of the late Dr. Edwin B. Cragin, a former prominent resident of Colchester.

A Strong Team

The students of Bacon academy, under the able instruction of Coach Goodrich, had their first basketball practice of the season in New Park hall, Tuesday afternoon. An unusually strong team is expected and negotiations are being made with several of the leading high schools in Eastern Connecticut for games during the coming weeks.

Bacon academy students are to hold special Thanksgiving exercises in the pre-Day hall, this (Wednesday) afternoon.

Schools close today, (Wednesday), until Monday for the Thanksgiving vacation.

Thursday, Thanksgiving day, a number of the places of business will be closed. There will be no delivery of mail by the rural or village carriers and the postoffice is expected to observe the usual holiday hours with one incoming and one outgoing mail during the day.

Stafford Springs

CALIFORNIA GIRL BRIDE OF EDWARD M'QUAID

Miss Elinor Bartelere, daughter of Mrs. Joseph Galassi of Modesto, California, and Edward McQuaid, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank McQuaid of Orcuttville, were united in marriage at St. Edward's church Monday morning at eight o'clock, by Rev. Felix J. O'Neill. They were attended by Miss Mary McQuaid, of Stafford Springs, sister of the groom, and Emmanuel Peretti, of Jersey City, N. J. The bride wore a gown of white satin trimmed with rhinestones and a veil of tulle with a coronet fashioned cap. She carried a bridal bouquet of white roses and lilies-of-the-valley. The bridesmaid's gown was of yellow georgette. She wore a black picture hat and carried an arm bouquet of yellow roses. Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank McQuaid, in Orcuttville. Late in the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. McQuaid left for a wedding trip to New York. Upon their return they will reside in Orcuttville. Guests were present from Fort Royal, Virginia, Springfield, Mass., New London and Hartford.

The public schools of Stafford will close today (Wednesday) at noon for the Thanksgiving recess until Monday.

About 25 people who have been employed for several years by George J. Gary and later by the Gary estate have been discharged and the business has been discontinued. Harold Andrews and George W. Benton will assist in winding up some small matters connected with the business. The Gary business has been taken over by the C. H. Moore company.

There will be a Union Thanksgiving service in the Congregational church this (Wednesday) evening at 7:30. Rev. T. Arthur Moseley of the Methodist church will deliver a Thanksgiving message and there will be special music.

George C. Lane of Noank visited Stafford Springs friends Tuesday.

Miss Helen Smith of the Scudder Secretarial school, New York, is spending the holidays with her parents Mr. and Mrs Robert W. Smith.

Pupils and teachers of West Stafford school are raising funds for the purpose of purchasing a radio. About $25 has already been collected. The teachers in the building are Mrs. Edith Sullivan and Mrs. Doris Devera.

JEWETT CITY

FIVE BOOTLEGGERS, MEN AND WOMAN, TRIED

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, Nov. 26.—The Griswold town court established a record Tuesday morning when eight liquor cases were presented by Prosecuting Attorney Richard Dudkowski, Judge John T. Barry being on the bench. The cases against Steven Nofis, Lucien Marcourelle and Charles Morrisy were continued to December 19th.

Among the many specials this week at Dearnley's are: Largest Florida oranges, 49c doz. Largest grape fruit, 3 for 25c; tangerines, 3 dozen 29c; new crop dates, 2 lbs., 35c. Open Wednesday, Friday and Saturday evenings.—adv.

Mike Kargul pleaded not guilty and was defended by Attorney Thomas M. Shields, of Norwich. James Eustis, of Bridgeport, and Herbert J. Gray, of Boston, secured the evidence in these cases. The exhibit produced was a half bottle of beer which Gray had purchased at Kargul's place in the presence of Eustis. County Detective William Lewis showed a statement from the professor of chemistry at Connecticut Agricultural college, Storrs, declaring the alcoholic content to be 1.31 per cent. The purchase was made late in October. Officer Veigard testified that at the time of the raid, Nov. 22 two bottles of home brew were found in Kargul's house. Gray testified that he paid 45 cents per bottle, bought on several occasions. Officer Harvey Maynard testified that it was said that Kargul was selling beer. Kargul was fined $50 on reputation, $50 for keeping with intent to sell and $150 for actual sale. An appeal was taken, bonds $500 being fixed at.

Finn's delicious Downyflake doughnuts. Special holiday pkgs., contain 3 sugared, 3 spiced, 3 choc., 3 plain.—adv.

Albert Strakna, also represented by Attorney Shields, pleaded not guilty. Gray testified that he had visited Strakna's pool room several times and had purchased a half pint of alleged liquor on three occasions. The evidence was presented, and his testimony, corroborated by Eustis and William Forrest of Bridgeport, under whose direction the two sleuths gained evidence here during a period of close to a month. Gray testified that each time he bought liquor of Strakna, he (Strakna) took the price, 75 cents, and went out somewhere and returned with the booze. Attorney Shields contended that Strakna didn't sell it, but went out and bought it, hence was only a purchaser. A fine of $200 for actual sale was imposed. This case, too, was appealed. Bonds, $500.

Bunch of keys lost. Reward if returned to Jerry Bonney.—adv.

Nellie Walenda, who at the time of the raid last Friday, gave her name as Rosie, told the court that Rosie was her middle name. She was defended by Attorney Charles L. Stewart and pleaded not guilty. The evidence in this case was a pint of white liquor, which Gray, who had made the purchase, testified was "strong stuff." During the Friday raid, the officers, as testified by Deputy Sheriff McGuire, found a still and a quantity of mash on the upper floor, which Mrs. Wolanda said was for their home Thanksgiving beer. Gray's records showed that he, in company with Eustis, had made the purchase of a pint of liquor there Oct. 31, at about 8:30 p. m. Under oath, Mrs. Wolanda, her son Peter, and her husband Stanley, testified that Gray and Eustis were never at their house and that they had never seen them until the day of the raid, Nov. 22. Judge Barry bound Nellie over to the next term of the superior court, under bonds of $1,000.

Frank Bransbaw, defended by Attorney J. M. Smith of Moosup, pleaded not guilty. Operator Gray testified that he had bought beer there on three occasions. Operator Eustis said he had visited the place six or eight times and had bought beer. A bottle was produced by Detective Lewis, with the attached test from the Storrs chemist, stating that the alcoholic content was two and four-tenths per cent. Bransbaw handled no hard liquor. The operators paid 15 cents a bottle for beer. His fine was $150 for actual sale. Judge Barry said that Bransbaw is not an old offender and sold only home brew. At the time of the raid, Nov. 22, at the Bransbaw house, Officer William Blake testified, two cases of beer were seized.

Alexander Bechnke, of Mechanic street, represented by Attorney Edmond W. Perkins of Norwich, also pleaded not guilty. The evidence in this case was part of a bottle of liquor which had been purchased by Gray in company with Eustis, for $1 for a pint. Detectives Lewis and Forrest, of Bridgeport, corroborated the testimony of Gray and Eustis. Rev. J. W. Carter, who lives near the Bechnke place, was called and testified to the very bad reputation of the Bechnke store, and told of what he had seen to justify the report, that liquor was being sold there. Under oath, Bechnke testified that he never had sold liquor, and had never seen the operators in his place.

Judge Barry, in giving judgment, characterized Bechnke as an old offender, with the record of several arrests for liquor law violations. Fine $100 on reputation, $200 and 15 days in jail on actual sale. An appeal was taken. Bonds, $700. Court was in session nearly five hours and the room was packed to the doors.

Operator Gray, under questioning by Attorney Perkins, declared that the amount of his and Gray's compensation, depended in no way upon the amount of their purchases, which were used as evidence.

The Community club of Pachaug is to hold its meeting Friday evening. Included in the program will be two humorous sketches and music by an orchestra.

Thanksgiving day there will be the usual closing of places of business. A devotional service is to be held at 5 p. m. at the Baptist church, at which Rev. John W. Carter will be the speaker. The post office will be closed after 9 a. m., with no window delivery.

Miss Nellie Franklin returned Tuesday after spending two weeks at Lawrence Memorial hospital, New London.

Mrs. W. A. Richardson has returned from Orange City, Florida.

Miss Ruby Thornton is at home, after spending several weeks in Westerly.

Death Of Infant Son

Richard, the ten weeks old son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanton Brown, of Pachaug, died Tuesday afternoon after several days' illness.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Smith, of Phoenix, R. I., are visiting relatives in the borough.

Once Weymouth, N. J., was a prosperous town, but it was off the beaten track. One by one families moved to larger cities until only a few old settlers remained. The town became deserted and for several years no rent has been charged the few residents willing to stay in the old town. Now a water company has run a line into the town and a service fee of 10 cents a month has been placed on every house and the tenants are required to pay the fee.

HANOVER

Mr. and Mrs. James Howard of Ashaway, R. I., Mr. and Mrs. Harold White and son, Mrs. Elsie Dorflinger and daughter Hilda, all of Meriden were visitors Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gilli.

A sore throat may be eased by gargling just once, with quarter of a glass of water in which you have dissolved two tablets of Bayer Aspirin. You may have to repeat the treatment for a deep-seated inflammation like tonsilitis, but Bayer Aspirin is the one thing that reduces the infection.

Don't forget this most sensible of all treatments for sore throat. The one the nurses all know; the one which all doctors concede to be effective. And remember its quick relief of neuralgia, neuritis, rheumatism, lumbago and the like. Use it to break-up any cold, or to dispel a headache. It does not depress the heart. Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer manufacture of monoaceticacidester of salicylicacid.

Physicians Favor Use of Cascara

Doctors who warn against the use of violent, habit-forming purgatives will tell you that cascara is one of the gentlest and most beneficial laxatives known to science. Cascarets are nothing but pure cascara, sweetened with cane sugar and flavored with licorice. You can take them any time that Nature needs a little help with the process of elimination—and never experience any discomfort, nausea or unpleasant after effects.

You can easily tell when you are suffering from faulty elimination. You feel listless, out of sorts, perhaps your tongue is coated or you have a bilious, headachy feeling. Cascarets will clear up this sluggish feeling every time and soon have your system functioning as it should. You needn't hesitate to give them to children or old folks either.

Cascarets always act, and they always act the same way; gentle but thorough. They don't stir up the stomach or upset the system, but they cleanse the entire thirty feet of bowels in one comfortable, thorough action that leaves the system sweet and clean. You'll wake up feeling like a new person; tongue uncoated, breath sweetened, eyes bright, appetite on edge, life worth living again!

Take a delicious, candy Cascaret the next time you have that sluggish feeling—or give them to the children when they are out of sorts. Full medical endorsement proves the principle of Cascarets is right.

DANIELSON

WILLIMANTIC MAN FOUND GUILTY OF NEGLIGENCE

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Nov. 26.—In a finding made today, Coroner Arthur G. Bill finds Walter M. Neff of Willimantic guilty of criminal negligence in causing the death of Mrs. Jennie Miller of Woodsville, N. H., in an automobile accident on Oct. 13, and has communicated the import of the finding to Walter S. Storrs, a grand juror of the town of Mansfield. The text of the finding is as follows:

The undersigned, coroner within and for the county of Windham, having received notice that Mrs. Jennie Miller of Woodsville, New Hampshire, had died in St. Joseph's hospital in the city of Willimantic on Oct. 13, 1929, I viewed the body of said deceased and on the 14th day of October I held an inquest as to the cause and manner of said death at the police station in said city of Willimantic, and on the 10th and 11th days of November at St. Joseph's hospital in said city of Willimantic. From the testimony taken at said inquest I find that said Jennie Miller died in St. Joseph's hospital in Willimantic on the 13th day of October, 1929, from a fractured pelvis and other injuries received when the automobile in which she was riding was struck by an automobile driven by Walter M. Neff of said city of Willimantic, at Perkins Corner, so-called, in the town of Mansfield, in the county of Tolland on the 12th day of October, 1929. I further find that said death was caused by the criminal act and negligence of said Walter M Neff. I delivered the body of said decease to her relatives for burial. I file with this finding a copy of the testimony taken at said inquest. I also communicated the import of this finding to Walter S. Storrs, a grand juror of the town of Mansfield.

LECLAIR BOUND OVER ON MANSLAUGHTER CHARGE

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Nov. 26.—Earl LeClair, youthful Moosup resident, was bound over to the superior court under bonds of $3,000 this morning on a charge of manslaughter after a hearing before Judge W. Fenner Woodward in the town court.

LeClair's plight grows out of the fact that he was the operator of a small open car in which Mr. and Mrs Edward K. Ewart of Wauregan were riding with him on the night of Aug. 25 last, near Attawaugan, when the machine was in collision with another car operated by a Putnam man, Charles Tracy, and owned by his father, Ralph Tracy. Mr. Ewart was thrown out of the car and died almost instantly of a fractured skull.

At the inquest Tracy was absolved of any responsibility for the accident, but LeClair was held by order of the coroner, Attorney Arthur G. Bill. LeClair has since been at liberty under bond.

This morning Attorney Harry E. Back, counsel for LeClair, demurred to the complaint, but the demurrer was overruled by the court and probable cause found for holding LeClair for trial in the superior court. LeClair's bond was continued and he remains at liberty. It is held that he was operating recklessly and in violation of the rules of the road at the time the accident occurred.

Harry Stevens and Rudolph Lapointe, East Killingly men, who are both married, each the father of small children and joint occupants of a house on the Pratt place near the Chase reservoir, went to the county jail at Brooklyn this morning to serve six months each for thieving.

It was charged against them, and they were found guilty, that within the past few days they stripped a sawmill engine owned by Jonathan Smith of East Killingly of brass fittings, bearings, valves and babbitting, utterly disabling the machine. The value of the materials they took away was fixed at $225.

An investigation of the case by local state officers led to the arrests. Lapointe is the father of six children and Stevens the father of three children, all of them small.

The third liquor case to come before Judge W. Fenner Woodward in the town court this week was disposed of this morning when Ernest Paquin was found guilty with keeping with intent to sell. He was sentenced to serve 30 days in jail and fined $15 and costs, a total of $23.50. Execution of the jail sentence was suspended. The unfortunate circumstances of life against which Paquin is struggling account for the leniency in this case. Paquin was ordered into court by state officers after they made a stop at his place, on the road leading north from Dark Lantern hill, on a business errand and observed a quantity of beer about the house. Paquin readily admitted he had been selling the home brew.

This morning the continued case of Dr. J. C. Maslen, in which indecent assaults on two minor female children is alleged in the complaint, was taken up before Judge Woodward in the town court. Through his counsel, Attorney Harry E. Back, Dr. Maslen demurred to the complaint, but the demurrer was overruled and the dentist ordered held for trial in the superior court for this county. Since his arrest on the current chages the past week, Dr. Maslen has been at liberty under bonds of $10,000. This morning at the request of Attorney Back bail was reduced to $5,000. Harry W. Clarke is the bondsman. Several weeks ago, in another similar case, Dr. Maslen was bound over to the superior court, bonds at that time being fixed at $2,000. It is regarded as possible that the charges against Dr. Maslen will be heard at the next term of the Windham county superior court having criminal jurisdiction.

Max Bretschneider, graduate of Killingly high school and of Northeastern university of Boston, and now with the engineering department of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific, is visiting with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arndt Bretschneider, of Mechanic street.

Town Clerk and Mrs. Frank T. Pres-ton have been entertaining Mr. and Mrs. Earl Young and daughter, of Providence, and their son, Raymond A. Preston, of New York.

Miss Katherine D. Aylward was in New Haven today attending a meeting of chief operators and managers from various parts of the state at the general offices of the Southern New England Telephone Co.

A union Thanksgiving service that will be attended by representatives of various churches will be held at the Methodist Episcopal church Thursday morning at 6 o'clock.

The schools of the town of Killingly will close Wednesday afternoon at the usual hour for the Thanksgiving recess, which will extend to next Monday, when sessions will be resumed.

At the postoffice Thanksgiving day the lobby will be open that mail may be obtained, but no clerks will be on duty excepting for distribution and despatching of mail. The city and rural carrier service will be suspended for the day.

Mrs. Marjorie J. Waller, who was chairman of the Roll Call workers here during Armistice week, has received a letter of congratulation from the national headquarters of the American Red Cross congratulating Danielson chapter on being the first chapter in the state to reach its quota and also first to report on the result of the Roll Call.

Mrs. George J. Heneault of L'Homme street was hostess to the members of the Entre Nous club at a bridge party. The winners were Mrs. L. A. Woisard, Mrs. Earl Wood and Mrs. Lucien Lambert. The club members presented Mrs. Heneault with a gift for her new home. Refreshments were served.

Material to be used in the special holiday illumination of Danielson's business section is now being prepared in Hartford and will be put in place in early December. The holiday colored electric lights will extend from Academy through Main to Water street and aso from Main to the Pellett building.

It will be possible for those who love to dance to do so in Danielson from early Thanksgiving eve right through to the near sunrise period of Thanksgiving morning, for one dance will get underway at midnight about the time another one closes.

Having failed to obtain the $150 and costs, penalties imposed upon him when he was before the town court here Monday for violation of the liquor laws, Henry Barry has been taken to the county jail at Brooklyn. Unless he meanwhile secures the required amount he will remain in jail about five months.

It is said that the state contemplates improving that stretch of state highway running out of Wauregan into the town of Brooklyn and connecting in the latter place with the Hartford-Providence trunk line and also the new route into Pomfret. The work may be undertaken next year.

A few here hold tickets for the Army-Notre Dame football classic scheduled to be played Saturday in New York. On Thanksgiving day a considerable delegation of Danielson people will be in Providence for the Brown-Colgate game.

Attorney and Mrs. Arthur G. Bill will have as their guests over Thanksgiving, Mrs. Marjorie Woodbury and daughter, Katherine, of Norfolk.

Henry C. Loeber is to spend the holiday visiting with relatives in Cambridge, Mass.

Members of the Westcott and Willcox Old People's Home, Inc., met this evening at the office of the secretary, Frank T. Preston, to pass on matters pertaining to the property owned by the corporation at the corner of North Main street and Westcott road.

PUTNAM

LOCAL INSTITUTIONS TO HAVE TURKEY DINNERS

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 26—The generosity of the people of Putnam towards the city's institutions will be the means of bringing the Thanksgiving day spirit to inmates of the Windham County Temporary home in Sawyer district, the Day Kimball hospital and the Haven home for aged and invalids in Abington. King Turkey, the most noble of all holiday birds will reign supreme in the hospital here and in Abington, while at the county home 119 youngsters will eat their fill of chicken, prepared under the personal supervision of Mrs. Addie H. (Mother) Parks, matron of the institution. The kiddies will delight when the dessert consisting of minced and pumpkin pie, and a generous shares of nuts and candy is set before them to complete their holiday dish.

The response of the public to the annual Thanksgiving day appeal of the Day Kimball hospital has surpassed all past years, Miss Nellie M Bloxham, superintendent, said today, both in the donations of food and money. A turkey dinner with all of its relishing side-dishes will be served to about 65 patients and nurses on Thanksgiving day, Miss Bloxham said. The turkeys are the gifts of Mrs. William F. Rafferty of Grove street, Mr. and Mrs. Cortland D. Arnold of South Main street, Mrs. C. O. Thompson, and Charles Swain of Pomfret. In commenting on the Thanksgiving day joy anticipated at the hospital this year, Miss Bloxham said that it would be wholly impossible, if it were not for the thoughtfulness of the general public hereabouts. Miss Bloxham added that the womans' board, which supervised the Thanksgiving day appeal are highly elated by the returns to their efforts both for the abundance of foodstuffs and money contributions which will be expended to defray the expenses of Thursday's programme.

Mrs. T. Morris Murray of Abington (Gwen Carex farm) and Boston will donate turkey dinners for the aged and crippled inmates and nursing staff of the Haven home in Abington. Mrs Susan G. Griggs, matron of the institution said today. Mrs. Murray in addition to supplying the birds will also furnish all the embellishments.

Transportation of the public by means of a taxi cab has come to be regarded as an industry since the public utilities commission of the state assumed the directing of taxi-organizations some months ago. Since the commission established its taxi-cab division, several rules and regulations concerning the operation of a cab service have come into existence and in order to familiarize drivers and cab company officials with the code of laws, A. S. Gates, superintendent of the taxi department has issued a call to all holders of "taxi" certificates to gather at Hartford at the capitol building on December 7, to attend an informal conference of hackney drivers and utility commission officials. Many interesting discussions concerning the operation of the new "industry" are expected to take place and in view of this, many local cab operators are planning on attending the session.

It was revealed today that an option on a tract of land on Oak hill now in possession of the city is to be returned to its former holder, the Putnam savings bank in exchange for another option on a smaller strip of land sought by the water commissioners as a site on which to erect the one and a quarter million gallon steel standpipe. This development in the water situation took place last Friday evening at a special meeting of the common council. Mayor Richard and members of the special water committee of the council conferred with the officials of the savings institution some days ago relative to the exchange of the options. When found possible to consummate the deal the mayor ordered the extra session and a vote was taken on the matter. The finance commission by a vote of the council was authorized to carry out the plans and make the financial negotiations with the savings bank. The option on the smaller tract will be taken at a price of $500.

According to terms of the first document the city would have to assume ownership of the large area on Oak hill adjoining the property owned by the city at the present and site of the 450,000 gallon standpipe, although they would occupy but a small portion in the rear of the present storage supply. The action of the council, a direct movement of Mayor Richard is a plan of economy in every true sense of the word and will be favorably looked upon by the citizens. As soon as the legal status concerning the exchange is performed the city will come into possession of the property which it has been seeking for many months in order to complete technical details of the reconstruction of the water supply system.

The interpretation of state laws regarding the transporting of pasteurized milk from Massachusetts to Connecticut for delivery, by the state department of health this week resulted in the discontinuance of delivery of 500 quarts of pasteurized milk daily in the village of North Grosvenordale by a Webster dairy concern. The action has affected several residents of that community, including a vast number of employes of the Grosvernordale company who were daily consumers of the Massachusetts product. It was understood, tonight that unless some satisfactory agreement is reached between the state authorities and residents of the village a protest will be entered. This however, if carried out will prove of no material value since the state laws applying to this industry have been in existence for several months and the North Grosvernordale incident is not the first to occur hereabouts. The statute prohibiting the sale of Massachusetts pasteurized milk is a protective measure to safeguard the health of the community. Despite this fact the action of the state department was in no way favorably received.

Financial reports published this week indicate the volume of business in freight being done by the New Haven railroad, but actual examples of the company's tremendous scale of freight hauling are seen here daily. This afternoon a freight train passing over the Midland division of the line was being hauled by two locomotives coupled together. The engines were of the gigantic class and despite their size were exerting much of their steam power in order to keep the lengthy chain of cars in motion.

The costly institutional building, a gift of Mrs. T. Morris Murray of Gwen Carex farm, Abington and of Boston to the Haven home in Abington is nearing completion and is expected to be ready for occupancy on or about December 15, according to a statement made today by Mrs. Susan G. Griggs, superintendent of the Haven. The structure is a spacious block constructed for hospital use. It is built of fireproof brick and the interior is finished off in fire proof material of the most modern design. With the completion of the annex, Mrs. Murray has made another donation for the renovation of the adjoining wooden structure of the home, which is likewise a gift of the philanthropic Abington resident. While this work is in progress the patients and aged inmates will occupy the new hospital building.

Another item of interest concerning the Abington institution is the fact that an artesian well 504 feet deep on the premises of the Haven home has been an oasis in a literal Sahara for farmers in that section who have been forced to carry water over long distances during the drought of the summer and fall. The well has a pumping capacity of 160 gallons of water a minute. The privilege of drawing water from the well was extended to those in need early in the summer and the continued dryness forced them to demand upon the supply until early this month, Mrs. Susan Griggs matron, asserted today that thousands of gallons have been consummated by the farmers for the relief of their cattle and poultry.

The annual meeting of Putnam grange was held last evening in Odd Fellows hall on Pomfret street with a large attendance of the membership. The following officers were elected to serve during the ensuing year: Mrs. Victoria Durand, master; Byron Howard, overseer; Irene Howard, lecturer; Clarence Myers, steward; John Myers, assistant steward; Josie Warren, chaplain; William Converse, treasurer; Helen Woodis, secretary; Walter Davis, gate keeper; Marguerite Sherrock, Ceres; Marion Spencer, Pomona; Dorothy Woodis, Flora; Lillian Shaw, lady assistant steward.

The Thanksgiving service at St. Philip's Episcopal church will be held at 9 o'clock instead of 10 o'clock as announced earlier in the week.

PLAINFIELD

FUNERAL OF J. B. GOSSELIN—SERVICES AT ST. JOHN'S CHURCH

The funeral of John B. Gosselin was held from the home of his daughter, Mrs. Alfred Bucher, Saturday morning with services at St. John's church at 9 o'clock. Rev. John Landry was celebrant of the high mass of requiem. Burial was in St. John's cemetery. The bearers were George, Delphise, Roger and Jules, sons of Mr. Gosselin, Romeo Lambert and Ouesleine Houle. Mr. Gosselin was born in St. Thomas, P. Q., about 83 years ago. For several years he lived in Danielson. Almost 20 years ago he moved, with his family, to Plainfield. Besides his four sons he is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Alfred Bucher, of 187 Community avenue, with whom he lived, and Mrs. William Fuest, of Danielson.

WEDDING

Coffey—Bergeron

Monday morning, Nov. 25, at 8 o'clock at St. John's church, Miss Lillian Bergeron, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bergeron, of 125 Plainfield street, was united in marriage with Simon G. Coffey, of Church street. The solemn nuptial mass was celebrated by Rev. John Landry with Rev. Henri Chagnon, of Moosup, deacon, and Rev. Ludovic Paradis, of Occum, sub-deacon. The bride wore a gown of white satin. Her veil was in cap shape caught with orange blossoms and she carried calla lilies. The bridesmaid, Miss Juliette Bergeron, of New York, sister of the bride, wore yellow satin and tulle. Her bouquet was yellow chrysanthemums. The bridal party was preceded to the altar by two members of the Children of Mary society, Miss Arline Bergeron and Miss Angelina Hebus, who were very attractive in pale violet. The best man was Thomas Foy, nephew of the groom. Following the ceremony, a breakfast was served to 50 guests at Lawton Inn. Mr. and Mrs. Coffey left for New York and upon their return will reside with Mr. Coffey's mother on Church street.

WAUREGAN

The pulpit of the Congregational church was occupied by Edwin Hill of Danielson Sunday morning. The sermon on the "Developing of Christian Character," was listened to with rapt attention.

Miss Doris Hope, a clerk at the state house, Providence, is spending a week's vacation at her home on the Danielson road.

J. Tait Hope, who is employed at Webster, Mass., was a week end visitor in town.

Leon Rockwell and Arthur Mott attended the Brown-New Hampshire game last Saturday.

A children's social was held at the chapel Monday evening, the chief attraction being the packing of a Thanksgiving hamper for the Little Wanderers' Home, Boston.

Two tons of cheese is the record completed in two years by Mrs. Lilla B. Morrill, of Norway, Me., whose industry is indicated by the additional fact that she made 30,000 pounds of butter and $240 worth of pastry last season.

MULTI-RANGE CHRYSLER

NEW CHRYSLER "70" ROYAL SEDAN, $1145 (Special equipment extra)

This IS Performance!

The new Multi-Range Chryslers have brought into existence a new kind of thrilling performance—faster car speed at SLOWER engine speed; amazing acceleration and smoothness; new ease and swiftness in hill-climbing—the result of many basic engineering improvements, including Down-Draft carburetion and the exclusive Multi-Range 4-speed transmission and gear-shift.

Never before have you known such ease of gear-shifting. Never before have you known such responsive performance.

These new Chryslers radiate quality—both in outward design and interior trim. Bodies are longer and wider. Headroom is greater. And fitments by Cartier, famous New York and Paris jewelers, give a final touch of elegance. Truly, these are cars of and for today.

BACKING THE PRESIDENT

From every group that has been called upon by President Hoover to lend its cooperation in offsetting any inclination to a decrease in business activity there has come a gratifying response. There is recognition of the fact that the president is putting his shoulder to the wheel and there is a desire to participate in the good work of overcoming a state of mind and saving the country the effects of a business and industrial slump when there is no excuse for it.

It is generally agreed that conditions are fundamentally sound and that there is an opportunity for sidetracking developments that might come from tolerating a pessimistic attitude. The president has stressed the point that there is a chance for all the various great agencies to contribute their help at this time and no sooner has he directed attention to it and presented his views concerning it than there is an agreement with his ideas. States, cities, government departments, industries, railroads, corporations, business men have expressed their willingness to participate.

Through the plan of starting construction projects of various kinds it not only means employment for those directly involved but for all those who may be concerned in producing the material that enters into it, and it has a far-reaching effect upon business in general. It is the purpose of the president that there should be an energetic pursuit of public works but he also declares that it should, at the same time, be prudent. He doesn't mean to encourage any unjustified projects or those of doubtful value. And while he wants only prudent use of of public funds, it is with the same viewpoint that he urges the employment of corporation funds.

There are many propositions which are hanging fire to be undertaken when the spirit moves. Inasmuch as they are eventually going to be undertaken, there cannot fail to be appreciation of the beneficial effect that would accrue from getting them under way at the present time. It is no secret that the federal government cannot meet such a situation alone, but it is through the right kind of leadership and a general cooperation on the part of the public therewith that great things can be accomplished. Mr. Hoover is doing a great job in getting a start made in the right direction.

AUTOS VS. RAILS

After a study of the figures showing the passengers carried by the large railroads of the country, Examiner Flynn has reported to the interstate commerce commission that "private automobiles and motor busses have made heavy inroads on railroad passenger revenues, particularly since 1920." Certainly there was no other conclusion to reach. It has been apparent even to the casual observer and to former patrons of railroads.

On certain branch lines where passenger trains were frequently operated prior to 1920 there are very few, if any, today. Main lines get the benefit of the long distance travel but the motor vehicle has had its effects upon that in spite of the increase in population in the last decade.

Trains have been taken off because it was possible for the roads to show that there was insufficient patronage to meet expenses. This indicated as clearly as one could want that there was an attraction in motor vehicle traffic which was not provided by the railroads. It was possible to go and come as one pleased when he had his own machine and even with the schedules maintained by both railroads and bus lines the latter got the preference. It has, in fact, been the experience of those communities which have lost railroad service that the roads themselves have appreciated the attitude of the public and have provided busses with which to serve their former patrons.

It is a case today of covering short distances on rubber tires and highways rather than on steel rails, and the trolleys as well as the steam roads are fully aware of the change that has come over the public mind. The motor vehicle is, in fact, not only carrying the passengers but it is also engaged in transporting a considerable amount of the freight that was formerly the business of railroads.

THE VOTELESS DISTRICT

From time to time there is agitation in behalf of giving the ballot to the residents of the District of Columbia. It hasn't as yet accomplished its object but it is serving to call to attention the position in which residents of the district stand in contrast to those of other parts of the country.

There are today in the district a half million people who are entitled to vote, quite the same as they are expected to pay taxes and support the government. Because they never have had the vote and because they are at the present time denied the vote doesn't mean that they ought not to have it. It is realized that many who spend most of their time in the district maintain voting rights in some other cities but for those who have no other home provision ought to be made to give them the right to vote.

In speaking to a Washington gathering concerning this matter and urging that a campaign be conducted to secure the right, Senator Capper of Kansas declared that "In waging this commendable war against a form of autocracy peculiarly repugnant to patriotic Americans you will find that our greatest enemy is indifference. . . . If anything ever was worth fighting for it is national representation for the District of Columbia. And I am confident that finally your campaign will be victorious, as it well deserves to be."

It is unquestionably true that if the people of the district are going to obtain what they ought to have they must organize and put forth their demands in such a manner as to indicate that they mean business. They should marshal their arguments and present their position in such a manner that there could be no sound reason for opposing it.

It is recognized that it means a change that must be authorized by the necessary amount of legislation, but until the people in general and the legislators are made to see the injustice of the position which they occupy there will be nothing done. It is a natural inference that if there is no substantial kick over existing conditions it is expected that satisfaction prevails. The district ought not to have much difficulty in enlisting the aid of the rest of the country in its behalf.

RUSSIA AND CHINA

While allowance is made for any exaggeration that may accompany the reports concerning the invasion of Manchuria by the Russians, it is undoubtedly so that soviet forces have moved into that territory and are taking possession as rapidly as possible of the Chinese Eastern railway.

Call it war, an invasion or an attempt to regain property, it all amounts to the same thing, and from the character of the reports it becomes apparent that the Chinese are not able to prevent the advance of the Russians. The only reason for a distinction perhaps is that there has been an understanding that there would be no war. Calling it by any other name and seeking control of the railroad, with casualty lists being reported, it is clear that it is more than an outing on which the Russians are engaged, and the outcome causes concern to more than China.

Ever since the disturbance in that region was precipitated it has been recognized that China was the poorer prepared of the two countries in the event of war. China lacks the organized and trained forces and it lacks the means of supporting them. In addition to that there is a situation in China which makes it impossible for that government to present a united front. Civil war is causing it enough concern without being required to give an attention to any armed invasion.

The trouble between China and Russia is such that it ought to be adjusted without any bloodshed. It had been hoped that such an arrangement had been concluded between the two countries as the result of the pressure brought by other countries under the terms of the Kellogg treaty, but to date that is not so. The move that has been made by Russia is enough, however, to bring on a renewal of efforts by other countries to obtain a settlement through arbitration. It cannot be expected that the trouble will be allowed to drift on indefinitely. Under the circumstances it might be expected that Russia would be the aggressor at this time and certainly it can be expected to menace China just as long as nothing is done to settle the differences.

REFORMING THE COURTS

At various times conditions have developed in the attempt to administer justice in the state of Illinois which indicated that all was not well. It is not a condition which is peculiar to that state alone but it is one which aroused enough citizens to set an inquiry in motion in an endeavor to find out what the trouble is and to correct it.

By vote of the state legislature a commission is at work on the matter, making inquiry as to what conditions prevail and how similar matters are handled elsewhere. In the course of the investigation the commission took a trip over into Canada and there it learned from a judge of long and recognized standing that the trouble probably lies with the judicial system. It found out, for instance, that instead of spending days and weeks getting a jury to try a case the Canadian judge in his long experience never heard of but one case that required more than 30 minutes for the selection of a jury.

There were other revelations which were enlightening to the commission. They might have gone farther and found out what the practice is over in England, where trials occupy far less time than they do in this country and where there are no such delays in bringing cases to trial.

It is not surprising that the Canadian jurists were inclined to criticize certain methods that are followed in this country or to clearly indicate to the investigators where much of the trouble rests in Illinois' system. Just how much attention will be given to the Canadian methods in the recommendations which the commission will make to the Illinois legislature will be awaited with interest, but it has a chance to give that state and others something to think about, whether it is able to convince it that radical reforms are necessary.

EDITORIAL NOTES

It must be a big relief to Washington to have the senate adjourned if it feels the same way as the country does about it.

The man on the corner says: Thanksgiving preparations wouldn't be complete without those contributions for the evening fires.

Even if a western judge rates a person as a felon for not telling of drinking parties, is the requirement met by wasting three years before telling of it, as Senator Brookhart did?

Real cause for sympathy and assistance is furnished by the conditions created on the southern Newfoundland coast by the earthquake. Conditions there are such as to deserve no such treatment.

THE GOOD FOR NOTHING

It was the regular weekly meeting of the Saturday Afternoon Ladies' Bridge and Bunko society, held today at Mrs. Pomeroy's house on the drive, and Mrs. Austrian and Mrs. Van Alstice, who had arrived early, were talking things over.

"Have you heard," inquired Mrs. Austrian with a hint of pardonable pride in her voice, "that my son Edward has won the junior class English award at high school?"

"No, I hadn't heard it," replied Mrs. Van Alstice sweetlighly. "Isn't that nice? My son James was always very good in English.

"Edward's teacher," went on Mrs. Austrian, "has been exceedingly complimentary, if I do say so myself. He has encouraged Edward to try for the senior class award, which means a scholarship for him when he enters college."

"James," said Mrs. Van Alstice, "won the senior English award the year he graduated from the Lawrenceville prep school."

"Edward's father and I are very proud," said Mrs. Austrian. "We think Edward has a fine future—we expect him to take up law or train for the consular service."

"James is in law school, you know," said Mrs. Van Alstice. "He's down at Kingston university in the east—in his third year undergraduate."

"Oh, I didn't know James was at Kingston," said Mrs. Austrian. "Edward is planning to enter Kingston."

"Not really," said Mrs. Van Alstice, raising her lorgnette. "I had no idea."

"Oh, yes," said Mrs. Austrian. "we have been planning it for Edward ever since he was a little boy. And now, with the splendid record he's made in high school, we are confident he will shine in college."

"My dear," my deared Mrs. Van Alstice, "don't tell me you are permitting Edward to attend public high school if he is planning to enter Kingston!"

"We are doing all we can for Edward," said Mrs. Austrian, "but we do expect him to attend high school right here at home, so that we can afford to send him to an expensive college for four years."

"I am so afraid," said Mrs. Van Alstice, "that you are making a dreadful mistake. James, you know, went to Lawrenceville prep—we always thought the best was none too good for our only boy, and we made our little sacrifices. But we were happy doing it. For I must say James made a splendid showing. There are certain things—aire, you might say, a boy acquires in a fashionable prep school which are necessary for Kingston. My dear, pardon me for being so frank, but I really think my experience in bringing up James should guide you in selecting the proper school for Edward."

By this time Mrs. Austrian was very much agitated indeed.

"Do you really think," she asked weakly, "that we are making a mistake and holding Edward back? I had no idea about the—the airs, as you say. But I dare say you are right. I must talk to his father."

"I am confident," said Mrs. Van Alstice, complacently. "Take my advice, my dear, James has always had the best. We are expecting big things of James. He has his father's brains and his mother's family stock—if I do say so myself, a boy with these hereditary advantages should go a long way."

Mrs. Austrian was so worried by the remarks of Mrs. Van Alstice that she called one of the ladies who came over to greet her by the name of another and went to sit at the bunko table, when she had looked forward so eagerly to playing bridge. But, then, Edward's future engrossed her. After all, she hadn't given the matter serious enough attention. Edward was different. He should have had all the advantages that Mrs. Van Alstice had given her son.

"I am sure," Mrs. Austrian told herself out of a turmoiled mind, "Edward is every bit as bright as that Van Alstice boy. I must take the matter up with his father at once."

Mrs. Austrian's mind had been so full of her own perplexities that she had not noticed a slight commotion at the opposite side of the room. When she did come to, and heard excited whisperings going on, she asked, quite innocently:

"Do tell me, has something happened?"

"My dear," whispered her table mate, "it's too exciting. Mrs. Van Alstice fainted and was carried upstairs unconscious."

"What on earth was the matter?" gasped Mrs. Austrian.

"She just received a telegram," said her informant, "from the dean at Kingston university. You know her son James, she's always talking about? My dear, the dean wired that he eloped last night with the gardener's daughter!"—Chicago News.

YOUR HEALTH

Why Smother Him?

By Edward Lyman Cornell, M. D.
Chicago
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

Most mothers are perplexed about dressing the baby to take out-of-doors. They look at the thermometer reading and wonder, "Shall I or shall I not bundle him up?" They then proceed to wrap the protesting baby until it looks like an eskimo child.

The baby's clothing is gradually becoming sensible in design and weight. He is not over-burdened with clothing as he once used to be.

European homes and the homes of our pioneer fathers were poorly heated and babies had to have woolen clothes of all kinds to keep them warm. But with modern central heating plants the houses and apartments are kept at summer temperature. Therefore the baby does not need heavy clothing any more than do the adult members of the family.

Mothers who persist in clothing the babies with woolen shirts, long petticoats, "belly bands," heavy dresses, flannel diapers and hood cause the little one to sweat. Whenever the baby needs changing, his body is exposed in a perspiring condition and he "picks up" a cold. Any adult would do the same. Imagine yourself bundled up as most babies are, and then compelled to undress six or seven times a day. Wouldn't you "pick up" a cold too? In high school parlance "I'll say you would."

If your home or apartment is well heated, dress your baby or young child in light clothing. Put on just enough to keep him comfortable. Children never tire of exercise and perspire easily. When you take them out of doors put on enough clothing to keep them comfortable and no more.

Many mothers put the buggy top all the way down and also put a heavy veil on the baby's face. All this prevents the little one from getting the fresh air he needs so much. There is no hotter place than the tonneau of the modern baby carriage with the top pulled down and the windshield tightly adjusted. The idea of taking the baby out in cold weather is to get fresh air and to give him the benefit of the stimulation.

A good bit of advice to remember when in doubt is the following: "If you are cold, the baby is cold; if you are warm the baby is warm."

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26—Speaking of the new naval conference, Uncle Joe Daniels recalled to the Bystander's mind the other day that the first legislative suggestion for a move of that sort was written way back in 1916.

"And you'll find it in the strangest place possible for such a suggestion," chuckled that able seaman of democratic politics. "It is in the big navy bill, the navy-second-to-none bill of 1916."

That is the fact. When the Wilson administration launched its preparedness program there was included in the naval appropriation bill, authorizing a huge five-year building project, this clause:

"It is hereby declared to be the policy of the United States to adjust and settle its international disputes by mediation or arbitration, to the end that war may be honorably avoided.

"I looks with apprehension and disfavor upon a general increase of armament throughout the world, but it realizes that no single nation can disarm, and that without a common agreement upon the subject every considerable power must maintain a relative standing in military strength."

Invitation Provided.

There followed, coupled with an appropriation of $200,000, a request that the president "not later than the end of the war in Europe," invite "all great governments" to a conference for formulation of a court of arbitration or other tribunal.

The president also was empowered to suspend any part of the naval building program inconsistent with the results of such a conference.

That is a rather remarkable 13-year-old provision of the biggest naval building project ever undertaken by the United States.

And it was to this provision of law, continued in substance year after year in navy bills, that President Harding turned for specific authority to call the Washington naval conference of 1921.

Yet Uncle Joe Daniels recalls an even earlier move. Back in 1913, he told the Bystander, when the question of a naval building holiday was being agitated by Winston Churchill, then first lord of the admiralty, Uncle Joe suggested to President Wilson that it might be possible to call a general arms limitation conference.

Mr. Wilson thought well of it, as did the late William Jennings Bryan, then secretary of state.

Conciliation Move On.

Mr. Bryan already was engaged in negotiation of the bi-lateral conciliation treaties. They are the same treaties which Secretary Kellogg was to take up for renewal more than a decade later, with the Root arbitration treaties as part of the Kellogg peace program.

"Bryan told me," said Daniels, "that to launch a simultaneous arms reduction project might complicate matters. So it was dropped for the time."

Then the world war was on. And the quoted language of the naval act of 1916, written less than a year before the United States entered the struggle, is the next picture on the ever-changing screen of events leading up to the new London naval conference.

Mr. Daniels evidently is working up additional data of his days as naval secretary. He was delving in navy department records while in Washington. But he did not fail to keep an eye on politics. Jouett Shouse, democratic chieftain, was his next caller.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

How Unc' Billy Got Home.

By Thornton W. Burgess.

No gift is there, however great,
To equal freedom's opening gate.
Unc' Billy Possum.

Unc' Billy Poseum had been disturbed. He was more angry than frightened, although it was enough to frighten any one to be jumped on while asleep. You will remember that Black Pussy had made a serious mistake. She had found Unc' Billy curled up in the hay in the corner of Farmer Brown's haymow, and not knowing that it was Unc' Billy, had jumped on him. Her claws had pricked him. He had been frightened, but Black Pussy had been much worse frightened and had run away as fast as her legs could take her.

This experience had put Unc' Billy out of sorts—very much out of sorts. He no longer felt like taking a nap. He muttered and grumbled to himself and finally decided to poke around a little and see what more he could find in that barn. Perhaps he could find more eggs. He didn't need any more eggs just then, but it would be nice to know that there were more handy when he did want them.

Now, Farmer Brown's Boy knew that Black Pussy had come down from up in the haymow. He had seen her come down. So he suspected that whatever had frightened her was up there. He went up to see. If Unc' Billy had remained curled up in the hay, he probably wouldn't have been seen. But he was poking around and Farmer Brown's Boy caught sight of him.

"So, it is you!" exclaimed Farmer Brown's Boy. "How under the sun did you get up here? I though Flip chased you under the barn. Well, now that I have found you, what am I going to do with you?"

He made a move toward Unc' Billy and Unc' Billy started to run. But Unc' Billy isn't a fast runner. Farmer Brown's Boy caught him by the tail and at once Unc' Billy tried the old trick for which he is famous—the trick of playing dead. Of course, it didn't fool Farmer Brown's Boy, for Farmer Brown's Boy knows Unc' Billy so well.

"Unc' Billy," said Farmer Brown's Boy severely, "you are out of place up here. You don't belong in a barn or around a barnyard. You belong over in the Green Forest and that's just where I'm going to take you. I wouldn't hurt you for the world, but I can't have you getting into mischief up here. You are altogether too fond of eggs and chickens. I hope you have learned a lesson and won't venture up here again."

So Farmer Brown's Boy called Flip and Bowser the Hound and, with Unc' Billy carried by the tail, started for the Green Forest. He didn't know just where Unc' Billy lived, but he intended to take him far enough away so that Unc' Billy wouldn't be likely to come back in a hurry. Flip was quite excited, he kept jumping up and sniffing at Unc' Billy, which you may be sure didn't make Unc' Billy feel at all comfortable. But he didn't offer to bite for he knew that Farmer Brown's Boy wouldn't let him do that.

When at last they were far enough into the Green Forest, Farmer Brown's Boy laid Unc' Billy down at the foot of a tree and walked away a short distance. Bowser and Flip sniffed Unc' Billy all over. Unc' Billy didn't move a hair. He couldn't have looked more dead if he had been dead. Finally Farmer Brown's Boy called Flip and Bowser to him and they started off home. Not until they were out of sight did Unc' Billy move. Then he grinned, rolled over onto his feet and began to climb that tree. It was the very tree in which his home was, although Farmer Brown's Boy didn't know it. And this is how Unc' Billy Possum got home.

IN DAY'S NEWS

Industry and Aviation Spur Mapping Projects.

The surveyor's transit and rod and the airplane are supplanting the covered wagon and the pick and shovel of the early pioneer in present day opening up of the unsettled areas of North and South America, according to Dr. William Bowie, of Washington, D. C., speaking in Melco City at the opening session of the Pan-American Institute of Geography and History.

Dr. Bowie, one of three delegates from the United States to the first meeting of the newly organized institute, was designated by the National Geographic society. He is chief of the division of geodesy of the U. S. coast and geodetic survey and a world famous authority on isostasy.

Maps which give precise locations, elevations and other topographic information constitute the framework of further surveys of forest, mineral, plant, animal, water power and other forms of potential wealth, the speaker explained.

"Therefore the engineers and other leaders in industry are making their wants known in regard to topographic mapping," he continued. "It has truly been said that only a rich nation can afford to develop its natural resources and its industries without previously having executed the topographic surveying and mapping. Thus are avoided wasteful mistakes of the past in road building and railway construction by routes which are circuitous and in areas which have not the latent resources or are too far from markets to be profitable.

A major program of the institute is the coordination of topographic surveys already made independently; and stimulation of map making programs of the governments themselves.

Another imperative demand for mapping of hitherto unexplored areas arises from the commercial airplane lines, Dr. Bowie said, for airplanes now are using routes over tracts which know neither the highway nor the steel rail.

"We have heard much in recent decades of the application of scientific principles to agriculture and other great industries in exchange of goods and in communication," Dr. Bowie said. "But science can only go a certain distance towards bettering the condition of humanity and making civilization nobler without having geographic facts. It is here that the geographer must supplement the work of the physicist, the chemist, and the engineer. For without geographical information and background the other sciences cannot be efficiently employed in the utilization of the resources which nature has given abundantly to the nations of the world.

"The officials of the National Geographic society have expressed frequently, and do on this occasion through me, their opinion that civilization will be greatly advanced by an early completion of the mapping of the world.

"We all should like to see the day when there is an adequate topographical map covering the area of each of the countries in the western hemisphere. Much mapping has been done in my country but only 12 per cent of the United States has as yet been topographically surveyed and many of the map sheets are inadequate to meet the modern needs of agriculture, mining, development of hydro-electric power and extension of transportation and communication systems."

Dr. Bowie concluded with a resume of the expeditions sent out for the past quarter of a century by the National Geographic society, showing how the society's numerous explorations have added a remarkable variety of data to our knowledge of the world in which we live.

A church needing a new pastor, through its board, had communicated with a minister living in a distant state. A questionnaire was sent the man, asking many things as to his work, his family, his success, the last of which was: "Do you use tobacco?"

To the last query the reply was: "No, but if it is necessary, I can learn."

HAD TO WORK TOO HARD

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Gave Her Strength

Mt. Carmel, Pa.—"After my second baby was born I had to work too hard and be on my feet too soon because my husband was ill. After his death I was in such a weakened and run-down condition that nothing seemed to help me. I am starting the fourth bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and feel a great deal better. I am much stronger and don't get so tired out when I wash or work hard. I do housekeeping and dressmaking and I highly recommend the Vegetable Compound. "The worst cough I ever had —stopped OVERNIGHT"

"I don't remember ever having coughed so often as that morning I was caught in a snow storm—six miles from nowhere. By the time I got home I was sure I was in for a long indoor spell. Days taken away from my business—a pleasant prospect! No such thing happened—thanks to Smith Brothers'. I took the syrup faithfully and when I awoke the next morning my cough had completely quieted down." FRANK MULLEN

Altamura-Tomaino

A pretty wedding took place at 9 o'clock Monday morning at St. Patrick's church, when Miss Eleanor Tomaino, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Tomaino of No. 36 School street was united in marriage with Marco Altamura, son of Mr. and Mrs. Berardino Altamura of No. 14 St. Edwards street, Brooklyn, N. Y. The ceremony was performed by Rt. Rev. Msgr. Michael H. May, rector, in the presence of a large number of guests from Harrison, Brooklyn, Staten Island, N. Y., Torrington and Niantic.

The bride, who was charming in white satin and wore a lace veil, cap shaped, carried a bouquet of white lilies and lilies of the valley. The matron of honor, Mrs. Marie Hildebrande, sister of the bride, was dressed in a peach satin period gown and carried a bouquet of Ophelia roses. Attilio Deparlor of Staten Island attended the bridegroom as best man. Lorraine Tomaino, sister of the bride, was flower girl, and Mary Altamura of Brooklyn, sister of the bridegroom, was ring bearer.

Following the ceremony a reception was held and a breakfast served at Germania hall with covers being laid for 100 guests. The entertainment included songs and dances by Thomas Patone of Harrison and music furnished by Paul Malerba and John Lamparelli, Jr., on the mandolin and guitar. In the evening music for dancing was given by Bob Kerkup's six-piece orchestra.

Later in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Altamura left for a wedding trip, which will take them to Atlantic City, and upon their return they will be at home to their many friends in a newly furnished apartment at 82 North Portland avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The bride, who received many beautiful and useful gifts, has been employed at the plant of United States Finishing company and the bridegroom is proprietor of a shoe repairing shop in Brooklyn.

AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENTS BRING SUITS FOR BIG DAMAGES IN SUPERIOR COURT

Seven different suits in which damages aggregating over $72,000 are sought because of automobile accidents are in the new business for the superior court in this county, which were filed Tuesday with Clerk John H. Walker of the superior court and are returnable in December.

Stephen Awezec of Montville sues Frank W. Woodworth of New London for $25,000 on the claim that on Sept. 28, 1929, he was a passenger in an automobile owned and driven by Alfred Valliere along the New London-Norwich highway, when at a point near Gallows lane, Valliere gave a signal to Woodworth that he was about to pass him, Woodworth, according to the complaint, turned sharply to the left instead of to the right, causing the cars to come together. Awezec received a fractured skull.

A suit for $360 damages to his car is also brought by Valliere against Woodworth, this suit being returnable to the court of common pleas.

Gales Ferry Plaintiff

Damages of $10,000 are sought by Ida Mulkey of Gales Ferry, against Ursula Rymsza of this city, as the result of an automobile accident on Oct. 14, 1929. She alleges that she was riding in a coupe owned by her husband, George C. Mulkey, when a machine owned by the defendant and driven by her husband Chester Rymsza, figured in a collision about 10:30 p. m. on the military highway between this city and New London at a point near Babies' Haven.

George C. Mulkey also sues the same defendant for $600 damages for injuries to his car, this suit being returnable to the court of common pleas.

Norwich Man Asks $10,000

Paul J. Dumont of this city seeks $10,000 damages for injuries received in an automobile accident May 14, 1929. The defendant is the Eastern Connecticut Sales Corp., whose salesman, Nelson D. Theroux, was driving the machine that is alleged to have collided with the Dumont car. The accident occurred on the road leading from Taftville to Norwich.

Jennie T. Dumont sues for $5,000 for personal injuries received in the same accident, she being a passenger in the Dumont car.

Suit for Muench Death

Suit for $10,000 has been brought against Malcolm Austin of Montville, formerly of this city, for the death of Charles Muench when he was struck and fatally injured on Sept. 21 on West Thames street by Austin's automobile. The suit is brought by Alfred Muench, administrator of the estate of Charles Muench.

The complaint alleges that Austin was driving his car in a dangerous manner and at reckless speed at the time it hit Muench who was crossing the highway in order to take a trolley car, at a point about 500 feet northerly from the new entrance of the Norwich golf club.

Austin is under a manslaughter charge in the criminal superior court on account of this accident.

For Willimantic Road Accident

Florence Graham and Florence Friedland, both of New York city, formerly of New London, are the two plaintiffs in a suit against Joseph and Michael Wisneski of this city, the former for $10,000 damages and the latter for $2,000.

Florence Graham in her complaint alleges that she was a passenger in an automobile owned by Florence Friedland, which was being operated on Nov. 19, 1928, along the highway leading from Willimantic to Norwich. On that date, the defendant, Joseph Wisneski, acting for himself and as the agent and servant of the defendant, Michael Wisneski, was operating an auto on and along the highway at a high and dangerous rate of speed and negligently and carelessly operated and drove his auto onto his left side of the roadway into and against the Friedland auto, in which Florence Graham was riding.

Florence Graham alleges that she received severe and permanent bodily injuries, great shock to her nervous system which have and will result in her incurring large expenses of medical care and attendance, Florence Friedland sues for damages to her car.

CLEMENCEAU IN NORWICH MORE THAN 44 YEARS AGO

Georges Eugene Clemenceau, former prime minister of France, who died Saturday morning, was for some time previous to 1885 a resident of Norwich, where he studied the English language and for a time dealt in real estate. He lived in this city when he was a young man, later taught school and was married in Stamford. The Tiger, as he was effectionately called, was known by a number of local old time residents.

An item in The Norwich Bulletin of Saturday, Oct. 10, 1885, has this to say in regard to M. Clemenceau: "The Hartford Courant of Thursday publishes the following paragraph of local interest: 'Moses Pierce of Norwich informs us that M. Clemenceau, who is coming to the front so rapidly in French politics as a radical leader, was a refuge in this country some years ago and spent some time in Norwich, where he studied the English language. He became a great admirer of the oratory of Wendell Phillips, and a few years ago referred in glowing terms to the great American radical in a speech in the French assembly.'"

DIVORCE IN WORCESTER FROM KILLINGLY MAN

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 26.—Judge Harry H. Atwood in probate court here yesterday granted Miriam G. Wilbur of Hubbardston a divorce from Otis E. Wilbur of Killingly, Conn., son of Roscoe W. Wilbur, a Killingly manufacturer, for alleged misconduct during the summer of 1928 at Greenfield, N. H. Phyllis Fletcher was named as co-respondent.

Counsel introduced a record from the court of Hillsboro county, New Hampshire, showing the appearance of the husband and this woman on misconduct charges. They were fined $75 each and given suspended sentences of six months in the house of correction, the record showed. Mrs. Wilbur testified that her husband had brought this woman to her home at least three times since the separation, two years ago.

Judge Atwood granted the wife the custody of their two minor children and the husband agreed to pay $5 weekly toward the support of the children. It was explained to the court that Wilbur is an automobile mechanic and does not earn a large salary.

The marriage of the couple was at Valley Falls, N. Y., Sept. 23, 1922, and they lived together at Webster, Mass., and Putnam, Thompson and East Thompson, Conn. The husband did not contest the case, but was represented by counsel on the question of alimony only.

ATTENDED MEETING FOR MENTAL HYGIENE REPORT

In attendance Tuesday at New Haven at a meeting of the board of directors of the Connecticut Society for Mental Hygiene, when Dr. S. W. Hamilton made a report on the mental hygiene resources of the state were Mrs. John P. Huntington and Mrs. Charles B. Gilbert of this city, Dr. Frank E. Morris of New London, Dr. Charles T. La Moure of Mansfield, and others.

Dr. Hamilton emphasized especially the lack of facilities for the care of the defective and the defective delinquent. He spoke highly both of the work of the Connecticut Society for Mental Hygiene and the division of mental hygiene of the state department of health, but he feels that here, too, there is much more need than the staffs of the organizations are able to meet. There are not nearly enough clinics in the state to do the preventive work that should be done with the beginnings of delinquency and mental maladjustment. Especially, he said, are the juvenile courts and the children under the care of the bureau of child welfare in need of this service.

JUDGMENT FOR FRISBIE IN SUIT ON NOTES

By a decision handed down by Judge Charles B Waller in the court of common pleas William R. Frisbie is granted judgments in two suits brought against Jacob Zimmerman of this city. In one case Mr. Frisbie is awarded judgment of $387 and in the other case, $312.53. Both suits were based on notes given by Mr. Zimmerman to Mr. Frisbie following the purchase of a truck from the latter. Zimmerman claimed the truck was not as represented.

Addressed Child Study Group

Mrs. Charlotte Perkins Gilman lectured to the child study group and other members of the Women's City club Tuesday afternoon at 4 p. m. in the clubrooms. Her lecture on This Business Of Being A Mother, was intensely interesting and had many helpful suggestions.

BRADFORD BOX FACTORY BURNED TUESDAY EVENING

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Nov. 26.—A fire, shortly after 6 p. m. Tuesday, entirely destroyed the plant of the Bradford Box and Shook company at Bradford, owned by H. B. Perkins. The burning of the building, contents and woodworking machinery with many thousand feet of lumber on the grounds, represents the loss of many thousand dollars while 16 men are thrown out of employment.

The plant is located just north of the Bradford waiting station of the New Haven railroad. Mr. Perkins was out of town and returned only after the frame of the plant had fallen. Constable Elmer Lanphere, having the Main street railroad crossing gates closed, directed their raising to permit Mr. Perkins to go through to the yard.

Foreman Everett Morgan reported everything apparently all right when he locked up the plant at 5:30 and it was but a short time after 6 that Towerman George Shawn discovered the blaze. At the same time it was noticed by many others and the news telephoned the Westerly fire department. An out of district alarm, No. 33, was sounded and Fire Chief George Egger, with motor pumper and men on their arrival found the plant on fire from end to end, so saving adjoining buildings was the work left for the firemen.

The large barn of Mrs. Edith W. Vars caught fire and 14 holes were burned in the roof by falling embers and intense heat. These threatening fires were kept down by pails of water until 1400 feet of hose was laid from the hydrant of the Bradford Dyeing association, corner of Bowling lane and Main street and this danger was removed. Later, a shift of wind threatened the stone-cutting shed of John Curry, also his home and barn. Four hundred more feet of hose were laid. The pumper took water from the Pawtucket river to put out fires on adjoining property, also the coal shed of Victor Gervasini.

The Bradford Box factory property is owned by D. Alva Crandall of Hopkinton and the loss is partically covered by insurance.

BOYS' TURKEY DINNER AS GUESTS OF LIONS

Fifty poor boys of the city were guests of the Norwich Lions club at a roast turkey dinner Tuesday noon at the Waurekan hotel. It was the annual Thanksgiving dinner of the club. Present at the gathering were Mayor Lee Roy Robbins and Selectman William S Murray, President Charles W. Cassidy was in charge of the meeting, which opened with the singing of America, and Louis M. Crandall asked the blessing. Nicholas J. Spellman presided at the piano, and Dr. Kostant K. Markoff assisted Mr. Crandall in leading the singing. By request of the boys, one number was The Sidewalks of New York. Three cheers were given for Mayor Robbins and Selectman Murray.

John Lauporell of the Broadway school entertained with an Irish jig and about 15 boys from the same school sang Sweet Genevieve and all joined in the singing of Sunshine Hall. Hail the Gang's All Here was sung by a quartette of boys. Mayor Robbins and Selectman Murray gave brief talks and President Cassidy extended a greeting to the boys, in behalf of the club. The gathering came to a close with the singing of the Star Spangled Banner and the Lions' roar.

SUES TO GET DEED TO OLD LYME PROPERTY

Henrietta De Leon of Ol Lyme is the plaintiff in a suit brought in the superior court against Howard Brook of that place in order to compel Brook to give her a deed to certain real estate, where she has erected a $5,000 home that she is occupying.

The plaintiff alleges that prior to and on Aug. 1, 1925, she was a resident of New York city and the defendant resided in Old Lyme. She claims that she desired to make her home in Old Lyme and asked Brook to procure for her suitable premises upon which she could erect a home.

She claims that he wrote to her that a parcel of land could be bought for $270 and advised her to buy it. She states that she wrote on to Brook and sent him the money, asking him to buy the land. She alleges that he bought it in his own name but agreed to transfer it to her name or to the name of anyone to whom she might wish to sell. However, she claims that she erected a $5,000 home there and has lived in it since, but that Brook refuses to transfer the land to her name.

NEW SUITS BROUGHT IN COMMON PLEAS COURT

New suits brought in the common pleas court for this county are the following:

The borough of Groton seeks $200 damages against Isabel Dobson of Groton, claiming that on Oct. 30, 1929, she was indebted to the borough in the sum of $164.93.

The borough of Groton also seeks damages of $150 against Paul and Emily A. Vincent of Groton, alleging that the defendants owed the plaintiff $112.77 on Oct. 30, last.

On the common counts, Clark H. Brown of Groton seeks damages of $1,000 against the Almac Yacht Corporation of Stonington, alleging that on Sept. 26 last, the yacht concern owed the plaintiff $641.84.

GETS JUDGMENT AGAINST TWO WINDOW WASHERS

Judgment for $400 against Dymtro Galysh and Harry Kovalanka of this city is awarded Mike Zagray of this city, in a decision handed down by Judge Charles B Waller of the court of common pleas. The plaintiff brought suit for $1,500 against Galysh, Kovalanga and Paul Gulak, members of a window washing firm, alleging that on June 14, 1929, while walking along North Main street, he was assaulted and beaten by the three men and claimed he was seriously injured. The court, however, finds that Gulak did not take any part in the alleged assault. The attack was the result of the window-washers war in this city last June.

Stop Bad Breath

Thousands of people afflicted with bad breath find quick relief through Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets. These pleasant, sugar-coated tablets are taken for bad breath by all who know.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets act gently but firmly on the bowels and liver, stimulating them to natural action, clearing the blood and gently purifying the entire system. They do that which dangerous calomel does without any of the bad after effects.

Olive Tablets bring no griping pain or any disagreeable effects.

Dr. F. M. Edwards discovered the formula after 20 years of practice among patients afflicted with bowel and liver complaint with the attendant bad breath.

Olive Tablets are purely a vegetable compound; you will know them by their olive color. Take nightly for a week and note the effect. 15c, 30c, 60c.

PLAINFIELD PROS FACE STRONG CLUB IN HOBOKEN GERMANS THIS EVENING

Tonight's Lineups

Hoboken Germans		Plainfield
B. Johnson	rf	McElwain
Katz	lf	Williams
Stephen	c	Conway
C. Johnson	rg	Bernot
Magna	lg	Dissinger

Real basketball in every sense of the word is anticipated when the Hoboken Germans and the Plainfield Pros meet this evening at the Plainfield Community house in the Thanksgiving eve game. The visitors constitute one of the fastest basketball aggregations that has ever played on the Plainfield floor. Without doubt the Plainfield Pros are facing tonight a team that is second to none in the country.

The Hoboken club comes to Plainfield with an impressive record of wins over some of the strongest teams in the east. Numbered in the victims are such clubs as the Original Celtics, Renaissance, Paterson Legionnaires, Cleveland, and a number of other members of the American basketball league. Every man on the German lineup is a star and their team work is one of the outstanding factors in their success. Bill Johnson is one of the fastest men and best shots in basketball. At present he is at the top of the Hudson County league in scoring. Katz, who teams with him in the forward line, is a player who has a good reputation, having been chosen on the all-state team. Charlie Johnson, brother of Bill and a member of the famous Johnson Bros. team, is a beautiful guard and in the Hudson league has held his man to one basket per game.

With this array of talent facing them the Pros are in for a busy evening. However, Manager Salisbury received good news yesterday when he received a telegram from Bill McElwain that he would positively be at Plainfield to play tonight. McElwain is playing a bang-up good game with the New York Celtics this season. McElwain and Williams will hold down the forward berths with Brusso and Kasper in reserve. Jerry Conway will jump center and Whitey Bernot and Roy Dissinger will be at the guard positions, rounding out a team that compares favorably with the visitors.

The Plainfield Buddies meet a fast eastern Connecticut team in the preliminary game which is scheduled for 8 o'clock. The main game goes on at 9 o'clock after which dancing will follow.

There are only 100 reserved seats for this game, the rest being thrown open as rush seats. This gives the early arrivals some of the best seats in the house.

CARD COMPLETE FOR SHYMA CLUB BOXING SHOW

Matchmaker Leo P. Flynn has completed his card for the Shyma club boxing show to be held in Parish hall on Friday, Dec. 6th. The card looks like the best card ever put on in eastern Connecticut if action is what the fans want. There doesn't seem to be one tame bout on the card starting with the first bout and going through the three eight-round star bouts.

The final star bout was signed early this week and brings together Joe Russo of Westerly and Dynamite Lou Brouillard of Danielson at 150 pounds. This bout is bound to be a slugging match as both boys are noted for the hitting. Brouillard has won 38 of his 37 fights and 25 of them have been by knockouts. Brouillard has never been knocked from his feet. Russo has won 19 out of 21 fights and a large percentage have been kayoes.

Vic Darr of Norwich meets Billy Muir of Worcester in a six round preliminary and Young Lizzio of Westerly goes against Johnny Villa of Worcester in the opener. These are two snappy bouts if past performances mean anything.

As has been announced Al Koziol meets Lee LeDoux in an eight-round star bout and Johnny Kop boxes a return match with Alex Tourain in the other star attraction. A card like this would be hard to beat even in Madison Square Garden. There is bound to be real fighting every minute of the 34 rounds, if the bouts go that long. From having seen all but two of the boxers in action it is safe to say that some of the bouts, if not all, will terminate with one of the boys taking the count.

At Montreal —Les Canadiens, of Montreal, 9; Pittsburgh, 2.

At Detroit—Ottawa, 4; Detroit, 3, (overtime).

KILLINGLY-PUTNAM GAME TO BE PLAYED AT ADAMS FIELD

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 26.—It was definitely agreed upon by officials of Killingly and Putnam high schools to have the football elevens of both institutions meet in their annual Thanksgiving day clash at Adams field, Main street, in this city, according to a statement tonight by Coach L. E. Nopes. The Adams field is being used by a local semi-pro grid team and is in a fair condition, although it is in a sharp contrast with the school campus, presently undergoing repairs. The Putnam-Killingly game, by far, will be one of the biggest tilts played here this season. Keen rivlary exists between both teams and the spirit of the student bodies in Danielson and Putnam for their respective teams runs high.

Killingly will come to Putnam, escorted by its school band and a gala celebration will be staged at the high school preceding the game, it was said tonight. Stuart Sabin, halfback, and Reynolds, quarterback, Putnam veterans, who have been on the injured list for the past three weeks, took part in today's workout with indications that they will appear in the lineup Thursday. This fact places Putnam a slight favorite to win, despite Killingly's better seasonal record.

COLGATE LEAVES FOR GAME WITH BROWN

HAMILTON, N. Y., Nov. 26.—(AP)—Twenty-five members of the Colgate football squad left here tonight for the Brown game after completing its training season with a light two hour workout devoted almost entirely to defensive work.

The Colgate squad is at full strength, having been bolstered by the return of Huntington and Doyle from the ranks of the injured yesterday. Coach Andy Kerr indicated that he would probably start "Ox" Macaulso, 205-pound fullback against Brown at Providence Thanksgiving day in the stead of Johnny Litster, a sophomore, who has been starting choice in the last four games. Colgate's squad is scheduled to arrive in Providence in time for a short workout Wednesday afternoon.

Those making the trip: Stramiello, Orsi, Sullivan, Abruzzino, Huntington, Haines, Crane, Schiebel, Doyle, Gilson, Franklin, Lockwood, Cox, Rice, Yablok, Hart, Dowler, Macaluso, Terry, Conroy, Reynolds, Litster, Viregin, Stollwerck, and Gutguld.

CANADIENS RUN UP BIG SCORE TO TRIM PITTSBURGH TEAM

MONTREAL, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Montreal Canadiens found the way through the Pittsburgh defense in the last period tonight to run up the second largest score of the National Hockey league season. The flying Frenchmen scored five times in the final frame for a 9 to 2 triumph. The best score was Pittsburgh's ten goals.

The two right wingers for the Canadiens, Wasnie and Larochelle, led the scoring, the former with three goals and Larochelle with two. This position was considered the weak spot in the French lineup in the pre-season calculations. The Pirates made a good showing only in the latter part of the second period and at the start of the third and then Goalie Hainsworth stopped their attacks.

DOUBLE ATTRACTION AT Y. M. C. A. THURSDAY NIGHT

There will be a double basketball attraction at the Y. M. C. A. Thanksgiving night when the Y. M. C. A. team plays a double-header. This is the first double-header ever played at the Y. M. C. A. court. In the first game the Y. M. C. A. meets the fast New Britain club and in the second game takes on the famous Heller Brothers Five of Willimantic.

The Hellers are no strangers to local fans who know them for one of the fastest brothers team in the country. All the Hellers are college basketball players, three of them playing with Brown, one with Columbia and the other with Boston University. In 1928 this team played 31 games, winning 26 and losing five, meeting some of the fastest teams in New England.

Putnam Named Hockey Leader.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 26.—(AP)—Eliot T. Putnam, Jr., of Milton, Harvard halfback, was elected captain of the Crimson varsity hockey team here today, when the ice squad reported for preliminary training. Putnam, a defense player, succeeds Bobby Gibbons, who was forced to relinquish the captaincy when he became involved in scholastic difficulties.

'BIFF' JONES CONFIDENT AS GAME WITH NOTRE DAME AT NEW YORK APPROACHES

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 26.—(AP)—The Army football team as it goes about its preparations for the game with Notre Dame, in the Yankee stadium Saturday, has at least one thing in common with its famous rival. Notre Dame is undefeated, untied and unafraid. Army is only unafraid. It has been defeated by Yale and Illinois and tied by Harvard.

The corps of Cadets, the real West Point, likes its football straight through the season, but the Notre Dame game is different. For the boys who wear the gray but not the gold of the football uniforms, it will be the last game of the season. Their standard bearers will invade the west to play Stanford but in that December game the team will have only the moral support of the boys left behind. In New York Saturday the support will be vocal.

No one can tell a Cadet that "The Army hasn't a chance" to stop Notre Dame. Military regulations do not permit interviews or statements from students but looks speak louder than words at the mere suggestion that Army's chance is "only outside."

Coach Biff Jones does not discriminate between the two games remaining on the Army schedule. "We take them as they come, we have to," he said when asked if he and his team would rather win from Notre Dame in November than Stanford in December.

Captain Jones has faith in the last Army team he will coach, although he does not disguise the fact that it still has something to learn about football. "Naturally we are hopeful," said Big Biff, "but we know the calibre of our opposition, and one would be foolish to show any lack of respect for Notre Dame. Rockne has a far better team than he had last year. We have had our disappointments this season but winning this game would cause us to forget a lot of them. We have improved as we have gone along and on the whole we are in good shape."

The coach was reminded that last year his team was the favorite and lost. This time Notre Dame is regarded as an odds-on choice.

"We would just as soon have it that way," commented the coach.

"There may be a little psychology there."

Captain Jones is one of the minor casualties. He has a crick in his neck as an aftermath of a squash match but it will cause him no annoyance in the game as he has no plans to turn his head anyway. All his interest will be in front of him.

The team will go to New York Friday but will do only light work at Travers Island. No visits will be made to the Yankee stadium until Saturday.

The Army starting line-up remained in abeyance today as to two positions. There was no doubt, however, that the coach will send in the team he regards as his very best that day. The second line of defense was permitted to play half of the game against Ohio Wesleyan but next Saturday is another day and another team.

Miller and Lazar are disputing center and Carver, Bowman and Gibner are striving mightily for quarter. Red Carver, a former neighbor of Bud Sprague, Army captain last year, and product of the same Dallas, Texas, high school, may have a slight edge. The rest of the line-up will be that regarded as the "first" team, Captain Cagle, Murrel, Glattly, Ferry, Price, Hillsinger, Humber, Messinger and Carlmark. Glattly, a South Dakota boy, has been recently promoted. He can kick as well as run. O'Keefe, great defensive back, injured in practice, is not expected to start.

Susie Says

Didja read about the two that were married in an airplane and then started their honeymoon with a parachute jump?

That's what I call looking for trouble in the face and giving it a dirty laugh. For most people, getting married is enough excitement for one day.

I know when I was married I was so scared that I shook so the clergyman thought I was doing a dance and he says in a nice whisper that everybody could hear, "When you stop that shimmying I'll perform the ceremony."

In that marriage alone there was enough thrills to last the average person a life-time. Going up in an airplane and taking a parachute drop is bad enough but when you throw in a marriage with it that's kind of taking your troubles in big doses.

But anyway they avoided the rice throwing and the old shoes which is just as dangerous as parachute jumping. I heard of a feller once being crippled for life because somebody threw a shoe at him at a wedding. The trouble was the feller who threw the shoe forgot to take his foot out of it.

I wonder how one of these society reporters would have described the bride's gown. Probably something like this.

"The bride was charming in a neat suit of blue demin flying togs trimmed with a few grease spots. Her parachute of whitesilk was draped gracefully across her back. She carried her helmet and goggles on her arm. Her only ornament was the parachute ring that hung from her shoulders."

And now that they are married I'll bet that during their first quarrel one or the other is going to say, "It's too damned bad that parachute opened."

Well, this marriage business sure does make people do funny things.

VELVETMEN AND PLAINFIELD CLASH THANKSGIVING DAY

There is a treat in store for the soccer fans tomorrow Thanksgiving morning, at the J. B. Martin field when the Velvetmen clash with the fast-traveling Plainfield F. C., who are giving a good account of themselves this season, not having tasted defeat. They are coming to Taftville full of confidence, expecting to add the J. B.'s to their list of victims. The Velvetmen don't intend to be caught napping and have been training conscientiously this week and every man reports in tip-top shape and "Raring' to go." There is sure to be a hard-fought contest and it is hoped the fans will turn out and encourage the boys. The game will start at 11 o'clock a. m., and be over in good time for Thanksgiving dinner. Manager Laycock will probably use the following line-up:

F. Orcutt, goal; E. Eccleston, rfb; A. Bjork, lfb; A. Headon, rhb; S. Day, chb; H. Seidel, lhb; E. Erickson, orf; J. Houston, irf; F. Thompson (Capt.), cf; I. Archibald, ilf; B. Labenski, olf.

Referee—F. Knowles. Kick-off—11 a. m.

FOUR EUROPEAN MOTORBOAT RACERS TO CHALLENGE U. S.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Four European motorboat racers are preparing to invade the United States next year in an attempt to capture the Harmsworth trophy, J. Lee Barrett of Detroit announced today on returning from the Brussels conference of the International Motor Yachting union, at which he represented this country and Canada.

Sir Henry Segrave of England, holder of the world's straightaway automobile speed record, who has shifted his activities to the water; Miss Betty Carstairs, British sportswoman who challenged unsuccessfully on two previous occasions; and the Italian speed kings, Prince Carlo Russpoli, of Venice, and Marquis Dal Pozzo, of Milan, all expect to enter the race at Detroit next Aug. 29, 30 and Sept. 1, Mr. Barrett said.

Gar Wood of Detroit, present holder of the Harmsworth trophy, expects to have two boats for its defense—Miss America VIII which set the present world record of more than 93 miles per hour and a new Miss America which has not yet been built.

NEARLY 150 TROTTERS SOLD AT OLD GLORY AUCTION

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—(AP)—The rap of the auctioneer's gavel, echoing through the huge Squadron "A" armory today marked the change in ownership of 148 trotters and the inauguration of the 35th annual Old Glory horse sale.

Yearlings, which in another year will be vieing with each other for the rich harness purses of the Grand Circuit, went under the hammer for prices varying from $50 to $4,000. While the consignment to the historic Old Glory auction totals smaller number of horses than the big sale has catalogued in recent years, several records are expected to fall before the last of the 421 horses are sold Thursday night.

Already the famed Calumet breeding farm of Lexington, Ky., is on its way to a new record, having disposed of the first half of its consignment for an average of $630 a head. Thirty-two yearlings, from the second largest breeding farm in America, sold for $21,770. The remainder of the 61 yearlings and five two-year-olds will be auctioned off tomorrow.

OTTAWA SENATORS KEEP RECORD CLEAN, WINS 4 TO 3

DETROIT, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Ottawa's undefeated Senators maintained their standing here tonight, nosing out the tail-end Detroit Cougars, 4 to 3, in an overtime National league hockey game that saw all the action packed into the final minutes.

Plainly tired after a heavy schedule of games away from home, the Senators played a waiting and uneventful game for two periods, each team scoring once in the second period. In the third, Lamb and Touhey each scored but the Cougars fighting desperately to win their first game of the season, tied it up at three-all.

Frank Finnegan, Ottawa wing man, turned in the winning point in the middle of the overtime period, scoring an unassisted goal.

NEARLY TWO MILLION PAID TO SEE BIG TEN GAMES

CHICAGO, Nov. 26—(AP)—Big Ten football games during the 1929 season drew 1,900,000 spectators, who paid a total of $4,769,000, official attendance figures revealed today.

Michigan led all other schools in the conference with a total of 464,000 fans. Other attendance figures showing the total home crowds: Ohio State, 284,000; Northwestern, 238,000; Illinois, 197,000; Minnesota, 181,000; Chicago, 145,000; Wisconsin, 124,340; Iowa, 97,000; Indiana, 72,500, and Purdue, 69,000.

ACADEMY WILDCATS FACE SLATE OF 21 GAMES IN 1930 BASEBALL SEASON

The 1930 Academy baseball schedule announced Tuesday by Coach Earle R. Brigham, calls for 21 games, 16 of which will be played at the campus.

The Wildcats, who have won the Eastern Connecticut-Western Rhode Island league title for the past five years and the state title in 1927 and 1928, again face the leading schools in the state in addition to meeting practically every high school in this section. As usual, there are ten league games, five at home and five away.

Harding Again May 30

Aside from the two Bulkeley games, to be played here May 17 and in New London May 24, both Saturdays, the leading games on the schedule are with Warren Harding in the annual Memorial day clash at the campus; New Britain high, which expects to have one of the best teams in its history, the following day; Hillhouse of New Haven, the closing game on the schedule, June 7, and Weaver of Hartford and Gilbert of Winsted, the latter a newcomer to the schedule.

Gilbert high takes the date held by Deep River last year. The Winsted school has had a good team for the past few years and expects another one next spring. Deep River, without Linder, who has graduated, is not the attraction that Gilbert will be.

Season Opens April 5

The season opens Saturday, April 5, with the Richmond Radiator team of the Industrial league and the following Wednesday will come the classic of local baseball, the battle royal with the Norwich fire department, the nucleus of which team has been formed from Engine 3, the Academy's neighbor on Joseph Parkins road. This game, it is rumored, will be for a turkey supper. The annual Alumni game will come the Saturday of that week, April 12, and then the Wildcats launch into the scholastic end of the schedule the next Wednesday, meeting Killingly high.

Prospects for 1930 are very bright, a number of veterans holding over from the successful 1929 team, which won 17 games and lost three, and in addition much promising material has entered school this fall. Ralph C. (Chubby) Gibbs, veteran infielder, will captain the team.

Sat., April 5—Richmond (Dusty league) at home.
Wed., April 9—Norwich Fire Dept. (Engine 3) at home.
Sat., April 12—Alumni at home.
Wed., April 16—Killingly high at home.

Sat., June 7—Hillhouse high (New Haven) at home.

VINCENT ELECTED CAPTAIN OF YALE FOOTBALL TEAM

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Francis Vincent, of Torrington, regular right tackle on this year's football team, was unanimously elected captain of the 1930 Yale football team by 26 lettermen tonight at a banquet which officially brought to a close Yale's 1929 football activities.

Vincent, a junior, received his first Y in football this year. He was a substitute on last year's squad and captained the freshman football team two years ago. He is also a Y man in baseball.

The captain-elect, who prepared at Hotchkiss school, is 22 years old, and weighs 197 pounds, and is 5 feet, 11 inches tall.

John Holbrook, of New York, this year's assistant manager, will be the 1930 manager; while W. H. Abel, of Louisville, Ky., a sophomore, will be assistant manager.

NOTRE DAME TO DECIDE NEXT WEEK ON POST-SEASON GAME

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Nov. 26.—(AP)—The Rev. Michael Mulcaire, vice president of the University of Notre Dame, said today that the athletic faculty will determine next week whether the football team will play a post-season game this year.

The announcement followed published reports that Notre Dame already had decided to disband its squad after the game with Army in New York Saturday.

Rev. Mulcaire indicated that a post-season game, particularly at the tournament of Roses New Year's day at Pasadena, Calif., might be accepted if Notre Dame was invited.

TEN NOTRE DAME PLAYERS TO GRADUATE THIS YEAR

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Nov. 26—(AP)—Defense against the accurate passes of Cagle, Army back, was stressed by the Notre Dame coaches today as the Irish squad continued its preparation for the football game with the Cadets at New York Saturday. Regulars and shock troops were put on defense against Army formations in a shadow scrimmage.

Ten Notre Dame players will be lost through graduation this year, among them Tim Moynihan, centre, who was injured in the game with Northwestern last Saturday. Joe Nash, second stringer, will play the pivot position in the Army game.

SPARKEY ADAMS SOLD TO CARDS BY THE PIRATES

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 26.—(AP)—Earl ("Sparky") Adams, second baseman and shortstop for Pittsburgh of the National league, has been sold to the St. Louis Cardinals, the Pittsburgh club management announced today. The sum involved was not divulged.

Adams came to Pittsburgh with Outfielder Scott in the trade which sent Hazen Cuyler to the Cubs at the close of the 1927 season.

BRUINS, WITH SHORE OUT, TAKE FIRST TRIMMING

BOSTON, Nov. 26.—(AP)—The Boston Bruins, with their battered Eddie Shore on the sidelines, were soundly trounced, 6 to 1, here tonight by the speedy Montreal Maroons. The defeat was the first suffered by the world's champions this season.

MAPLE LEAFS WIN FIRST GAME, STOPPING RANGERS

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Toronto's Maple Leafs scored their first victory of the National Hockey league season tonight, defeating the New York Rangers 4 to 3 in a rough struggle. Red Horner, took the leading role in the Toronto victory, passing to teammates for three of the four Leaf goals. Day, Conacher and Bailey were on the receiving end of the passes with Pettinger contributing the fourth goal alone. The Cook brothers and Boucher led the Ranger attack.

The game was a close and hard-fought one although the Leafs led from the start to finish. The players made 25 trips to the penalty box, 12 coming in the second period.

NAVY HAS LETUP IN PREPARATION FOR DARTMOUTH

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 26.—(AP)—Navy had a letup in its preparations for Saturday's game with Dartmouth today holding a comparatively light practice after several days of hard work. A skeleton scrimmage in which the varsity took the offensive against Dartmouth's defense formations topped off a light signal and formation drill.

John Gannon, star of last year's team who has been out most of the present season with injuries, was back at quarterback. With Lou Kirn, find of the West Virginia Wesleyan game, still running at halfback, Whitey Hughes, center, one of the outstanding players of the Navy team, was back at his post after recovering from ankle injuries.

HORNSBY CONFIDENT OF PENNANT NEXT YEAR

CHICAGO, Nov. 26—(AP)—Rogers Hornsby, star second baseman and hitter of the Cubs, came to Chicago on crutches today for an examination of his sore heel.

The "Rajah" had a growth removed from his heel at St. Louis last week and the Cub physician pronounced the operation as satisfactory.

"Sure, we'll win the pennant next year," Hornsby said, "and we'll give our American league world series opponents a better fight too."

Basketball Challenge

The Cottrell basketball team again challenges any team in eastern Connecticut for games. The Cottrell team would like to hear from the Y. M. C. A. Seniors, C. F. C., Taftville, Baltic Independents, or the well known Plainfield Buddies.

The Westerly team is much faster than last season with new players from New Uork and New Hampshire and players from Stonington high school. The team is as follows:

Cruickshank and Esposito, forwards, George Cropper, center, Eddie Sawyer and A. Holt, guards, with Roever, Federicco, Stefanski and B. Holt substitutes.

For games write to George Winterbottom, 29 Prospect street or Halstead Cooke, Box 262, Westerly, R. I.

30 Hockey Candidates At Dartmouth.

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 26.—(AP)—A squad of 30 candidates for the Dartmouth varsity hockey team today reported to Coach "Brainy" Bower. Indications were that he would build his regular team about his four available veterans, Captain Hal Booms, Armstrong, Jeremiah and Johnson.

BROWN HAS TEN GAMES SCHEDULED FOR 1930

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 26.—(AP)—With the signing of a two-year contract with Holy Cross calling for home and home games in 1930 and 1931, the Brown varsity football schedule is complete, according to an announcement by Dr. Frederick W. Marvel, director of athletics, tonight. Brown will play ten games, six of which are major.

The schedule follows:

Sept. 28, Rhode Island; Oct. 4, W. P. I.; 11, Princeton at Princeton; 18, Yale at New Haven; 25, Holy Cross; Nov. 1, Syracuse at Syracuse; 8, Tufts; 15, Columbia; 22, New Hampshire; 27, Colgate.

BROWN TAPERS OFF FOR COLGATE GAME THURSDAY

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 26.—(AP)—Brown began the tapering off for the Colgate game today, when Coach McLaughry sent three teams through a lengthy signal and play drill, with Link Fogarty and Frank Gurll alternating at quarterback. Most of the final preparation for the final game was completed, and tomorrow the Bruin will give up the varsity field in the early part of the afternoon while Colgate runs through its final session, then the Bruin will take the gridiron late for an abbreviated drill for the final check-up.

McLaughry announced tonight that Fogarty, Rides, Captain Edwards and Rotelli would start in the backfield, with Munroe and Johnson on the ends; Mackesey and Schein, tackles; Hapgood and Munson, guards, and Horton, center. Gurll will be held in reserve.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Breed Theatre

An up-to-the-minute down-to-the-second romance of Annapolis and West Point. That's "Salute," featuring George O'Brien, Helen Chandler, William Janney, Stepin Fetchit and many other well known players, which comes to the Breed theatre beginning Thursday.

O'Brien plays the role of a West Point football hero, an All-American halfback, and Janney that of his younger brother, a midshipman at Annapolis. Janney realizes his love for Helen Chandler only after he appears to be about to lose her to his famous kinsman.

The climax is reached in an Army-Navy football game at the Pole Grounds, New York. Unusual production value is contained in this John Ford all talking Fox Movietone picture. Ford spent two months in the east, at the naval and military academies, filming the most important sequences. Tristram Tupper and John Stone wrote the original story.

George Jessel will be seen and heard in "Lucky Boy" for the last time today.

AVIATION Grade means this--The INITIAL BOILING POINT is under 100° Fahrenheit, its END or DRY POINT is 374° Fahrenheit, the last drop vaporizes at this temperature and complete vaporization is the whole thing in winter starting.

Ordinary gasolines have an end or dry point of 437° Fahrenheit and do not vaporize readily -- Such gasolines may be doped with chemicals for anti-knock purposes but possess no cold weather starting value.

The 63° Fahrenheit between end points of 374° and 437° not only slows down vaporization but charges the cylinder with raw unignited gasoline which passes the rings into the crank case diluting and ruining the lubricating oil--Choking only adds to the amount which passes the rings--Start right with NO-NOX--End worry and insure a safe return at night.

The Original Orange Gas from the Orange Pump--A pure petroleum product---no dope or chemicals.

WESTERLY

REV. B. U. HATFIELD PREACHER AT THANKSGIVING SERVICE

A union Thanksgiving service is to be held this (Wednesday) evening at Grace Methodist Episcopal church. The sermon will be preached by Rev. B. U. Hatfield, pastor of the First Baptist church. The services are being arranged by the Pastors' association of which Rev. Arnt L. Schoning, pastor of Broad street Christian church, is president.

The pastors of the local churches will assist in the services as follows: Scriptures, Rev. H. C. Suter of the Methodist church; prayer, Rev. Luther G. Coburn of the Pawcatuck Congregational church; the governor's Thanksgiving proclamation will be read by Rev. Lewis A. Walker of Calvary Baptist church, who will also announce the offering which will be turned over to the mission to be applied toward the Thanksgiving fund for the aid of needy families in Westerly.

Westerly police were informed by a local woman Monday that 11 fowl had been stolen from her premises sometime Sunday. The birds were mostly Rhode Island Reds.

Deborah chapter, No. 9, Order of Eastern Star, met Tuesday evening in Masonic hall, when in the absence of the matron, Mrs. Myrtle P. Campbell, Associate Matron Mrs. Jennie A. Mitchell presided. Degree work was exemplified by the chapter officers on a class. Following the work of the evening a luncheon was served in the armory banquet hall of Narragansett commandery, No. 27, K. T., chicken patties, peas, cakes and coffee being served at individual tables lighted with candles. Chaplain and Past Worthy Matron Mrs. Elizabeth D. Mayne was chairman of the committee in charge, assisted by her mother, Mrs. John Rowe, also Mrs. Inez Paine, Mrs. Robert E. Cole, Mrs. Arthur Campbell, Mrs. Howard D. McFarland, John Rowe, Howard D. McFarland and Robert E. Cole.

The case of a 14-year-old Westerly boy of well known ancestry, who has been held by the police pending investigation of reported thefts of boxes, baskets, bicycles and lastly an automobile which he drove off from in front of the Christian Advent church where it was parked Sunday night, to be apprehended by the Rhode Island state police at Hope Valley, came before Judge Oliver H. Williams in a session Monday of the juvenile side of the Third district court. The young man was reported as of keen intellect and advanced in school work for one of his age. The matter was referred to Probation Officer Elias Emmett of Providence. Before the case was turned over to the probation authorities the Westerly police made investigations which are to be followed up by the probation authorities, before the case is finally disposed of by the court.

How a Family Doctor made Millions of Friends

FIFTEEN years after his graduation, Dr. Caldwell became one of the best-known members of his profession. A single prescription made him famous. And for forty years it has continued to make friends.

As fast as people could tell others about the marvelous way this prescription corrects constipation and relieves other troubles caused by sluggish bowels, demand for it spread until Dr. Caldwell was forced to have it filled in quantities; bottled and distributed through drug stores.

Today, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, as it is called, is the world's most popular laxative. Millions of people would never think of using anything else when they're headachy, bilious, feverish, or weak; when breath is bad, tongue is coated or they are suffering from nausea, from gas, or lack of appetite, etc.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin as you buy it from your drug store is made in accordance with the original formula from only herbs and other pure ingredients. It is pleasant tasting; its action is thorough in the most obstinate cases; gently effective for women and children. Above all, it represents a doctor's choice of what is safe for the bowels.

OLD-TIME BUS DRIVER JOHN SHANK DIES AT FARM

(Special to The Bulletin)

MYSTIC, Nov. 26.—John Shank, 42, died at his home above Old Mystic, off the Wolf Neck road, about 5 o'clock Tuesday morning. He had been in poor health for some time, but Monday had rallied to such an extent that it was thought he might recover. Mr. Shank was born in Quincy, Ill., in April, 1877, the only son of William Shank and Jane MacCafferty. November 12, 1902, he was united in marriage with Abby Swan, of Preston City. They went to live in Noank, remaining three years, then came to Old Mystic, living on the Enoch Brown place for some years, then moving to the farm where they have since resided. For nearly 10 years, Mr. Shank drove a two-horse bus from Mystic to old Mystic, carrying passengers, express, etc. When the trolley line was built from Mystic to Old Mystic in 1911, Mr. Shank went out of the business and started farming. He was always joking with some one. He was able to get to the polls last month to cast his vote and although barely able to get about, had a smile and a ready answer for the workers. He is survived by his wife, four children, Mrs. Edna Steadman, Mrs. Maud Swan, John, Jr., and William Shank, all of Old Mystic. Mr. Shank was a member of the Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil war and of the I. O. O. F.

Scouts At Oral School

The deaf Boy Scouts of Troop No. 16 connected with Mystic Oral school, held a meeting Saturday night in a classroom, in charge of Supt. Walter Tucker, scoutmaster. He called on Scout Master Moon of New London Troop No. 8 to assist him. Scoutmaster Moon took the scouts to drill in first aid and in second class tests. Marchi Rosso and Henry Skeper passed all tenderfoot tests so now they have been given new class badges.

The former scoutmaster, Dennis La Varge, of Norwich, who taught in this troop last year, has visited the scouts recently. The new scout uniforms, insignia, red neckerchiefs and hand books were given by Scoutmaster Tucker to all the scouts. The scouts were free to get them themselves but they did not buy them, so they were grateful and thanked their scoutmaster. The three kinds of games were featured in the closing period.

The new successful stone circle of campfire, large wooden floors of tents and boxes were built by Patrol Leader Marchi Rosso and Assistant Patrol Leader Henry Skeper with the scouts at Camp Wauregan.

Three new poles for electric lamps will stand soon by the pond. Next winter they will be lighted for night skating.

FUNERAL

Mrs. Addie Campbell

Funeral services for Mrs. Addie Campbell were held in the First Groton Baptist church, Old Mystic, Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. E. S. Holloway, of Eastern Point conducted the services. Many relatives and friends were present and there were beautiful floral tributes. The bearers were neighbors and friends. Burial was in the Hillard cemetery, Road district, Stonington.

Everyman's Bible class of the Union Baptist church, met in the vestry Monday evening for the monthly supper and business session. The speaker was Rev. P. W. Bach, pastor of the Baptist church, Stonington, who proved very interesting. The supper was in charge of John Paton.

The Monday club met with Mrs. Charles H. Davis of Starr street. The subject discussed was, Our Southern Highlanders, and the program was in charge of Mrs. Louis P. Allyn.

Miss Doris Raynor, of Wallingford, spent the week end with her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Barnes.

WEDDING

Travena—Tanajewski

Monday morning at 8 o'clock at St. Patrick's church, Miss Helen Tanajewski, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Tanajewski, of Old Mystic, was united in marriage with Carl E. Travena, son of Mrs. Fanny Travena of Broadway, Mystic. Rev. John P. Kennedy solemnized the marriage.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Crouch and W. A. Phillips were in New London Tuesday.

Camels have made smoking a national pleasure!

With years of steady growth behind them, Camels continue to grow. They are smoked today by more millions than ever before.

The increasing popularity of smoking in the United States exactly parallels the growth of Camel Cigarettes. Camel has given smokers a cigarette of genuine quality . . . a marvelous blend of choicest tobaccos . . . mild, fragrant, satisfying. This is the quality that smokers depend upon, and they can rest assured it will never be sacrificed. Taste in smoking, as the real pleasure of smoking is experienced, leads directly to Camel quality.

when they learn the difference they flock to Camels

UNDER BEAR PRESSURE THE LEADING STOCKS CLOSED 2 TO 12 POINTS LOWER

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—(AP) — The stock exchange ended its open season on bears today, and these operators were quick to resume activity taking advantage of pre-holiday lightening of accounts to send prices substantially lower. Leading shares generally closed 2 to 12 points lower.

Trading continued to lag, however, only 2,634,110 shares changing hands, as compared to 3,130,000. Bears were still rather timid, and the short selling was not particularly aggressive, but added to the selling in preparation for the four-day recess beginning with tomorrow's close, it was sufficient to turn the market emphatically heavy.

Despite the sagging prices, the news of the day was unusually satisfactory. The action of the board of governors of the exchange in discontinuing the requirement of daily reports from members as to short positions, while encouraging the resumption of short selling, was interpreted as convincing evidence of the confidence of the officials of the exchange in the renewed stability of the market.

A substantial short interest in the market is regarded in normal times as an important stabilizing factor, and it was discouraged only at a time when morale was at such low ebb that any unnecessary pressure against the market was considered extremely dangerous. With a fair-sized short interest again in the market, an artificial aspect of the recent price level will be removed, and the market will be provided with a natural cushion of short covering which will tend to check further declines.

Nearly a dozen corporations announced favorable dividend actions during the day. New Haven Railroad and International Business Machines raised their annual rates from $5 to $6, American Home Products raised its from $3.50 to $4.20. Allied Chemical declared a 5 per cent stock dividend, and American Chicle and Blaw Knox were among companies declaring extras.

United Aircraft and Curtiss-Wright both reported decreased earnings for the third quarter, which had been anticipated in view of the slump in the industry. Reports from the steel trade areas said that steel ingot production had undergone further slight curtailment this week. Railway income statements for October continued to reflect the general let-up in the heavy freight movement, although a few showed further gains in net, including Union Pacific, Missouri Pacific, and Norfolk and Western.

Credit remained cheap and abundant. Pre-holiday currency demands made little impression on the money market. Call loans again held officially at 4 1-2 per cent, but were available at lower rates in the outside market. Time money was quoted at 4 1-2 to 4 3-4 per cent, the lowest in nearly two years. Commercial paper was easier at 5 1-4 to 5 1-2 for prime names.

General Electric and Western Union lost about 12 points each, Allied Chemical, American and Foreign Power, American Water Works, J. I. Case, Delaware and Hudson, Eastman Kodak, U. S. Freight, National Biscuit and Westinghouse Electric, about 6 to 10 points. U. S. Steel sagged more than 5 points to 162 1-4, and closed at 163 1-4. Radio lost about 2 points, Standard of N. J., one, and General Motors, 1-2 point. Leading copper shares were under further pressure, losing 2 to 4 points, and several investment rails sagged about 3 to 5 points.

The commodity markets were barely steady. Wheat futures sagged a little under bearish Argentine crop estimates and an increase in the Canadian visible supply. The December position closed 1-2 cent lower. Corn closed 1-4 to 1-2 cent higher on bullish Kansas reports. Cotton was under moderate pressure, closing 55 to 90 cents a bale lower.

Foreign exchanges were dull and fairly steady, with Sterling cables holding at $4.87 15-16.

THE CURB MARKET

CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—(AP)— Stocks were pressed for sale from the beginning to the end of today's curb market, final quotations showing a long list of net declines ranging from 1 to nearly 10 points in the active issues, and much more in a few specialties. Trading was extremely full for a five hour session, the day's sales falling below 1,000,000 shares.

Abandonment of the questionnaire disclosing "short" positions apparently led to a resumption of "bear" selling, particularly in the public utility and investment trust groups. Little attention was paid to a series of increased and extra dividends, but some uneasiness was created by a falling off in railroad earnings as shown in the October earnings statements now being published.

Some of the public utilities melted rather rapidly on the absence of organized buying support. Electric Bond & Share, American Gas & Electric, Pennsylvania Water & Power, American & Foreign Power Warrants and American Light & Traction fell 4 1-2 to 8 1-4 points, with losses of a point or two quite general among the others. Dixie Gas moved against the general trend on buying influenced by optimistic earnings estimates.

While the oil industry is steady showing improvement, Gulf, Vacuum and some of the other leaders in the oil group fell back with the rest of the list. Pipe Line Shares showed individual strength, Buckeye and Illinois recording good gains.

Atlas Portland Cement, which ran up sharply yesterday on the announcement of higher cement prices, broke 4 points on profit taking. Motor stocks also ran into fresh selling and aviation shares continued to lose ground, with Curtiss Flying Service and Fairey falling to new low levels for the year. Further declines of 1 to 3 points in the investment trust issues brought some of the recently offered stocks close to the year's low levels.

Among the specialties, Aluminum Co. of America dropped 24 points and Deere & Co., rallied 15 on a few sales. Deutsche Bank of Berlin fell more than 5 points to a new low at 34 1-8.

Treasury Balance

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26— (AP) — Treasury receipts for November 25 were $6,156,555.55; expenditures $6,012,494.50; balance $189,549,510.56.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26—(AP)— Steel ingot production generally is now below 65 per cent of rated capacity, Dow Jones & Co. reported today, as contrasted with better than 71 per cent in the preceding week and around 78 per cent two weeks ago. At this time last year, steel operations were coming up and rose about 3 per cent to an average of 83 per cent.

Stockholders of Servel, Inc., today voted an increase in the common stock from 1,000,000 to 2,000,000 shares, permitting the retirement of notes given last month to acquire the Swedish patent rights for a gas refrigeration system. Stockholders also approved the reduction of the $160 par preferred from 25,000 to 10,000 shares.

The Standard Gas & Electric company's 1930 budget calls for the expenditure of about $2,750,000 in new construction, additions and extensions in plants and equipment. Subsidiary companies of the standard organization operate in such cities as Pittsburgh, Louisville, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Oklahoma City, Seattle, Tacoma and San Francisco.

Stockholders of the Railway & Express company have voted to accept the offer of 1 1-4 shares of Adams Express company stock in exchange for one share of Railway & Express stock.

Net railway operating income of the Illinois Central system for October was $8,442,065, a decrease of $821,706 from the earnings of October 1928. Revenues showed an advance of only $42,000 to $17,418,854.

WILLIAM B. BARWELL AND FAMILY.

TRIBUTE

The following minute was adopted by the Executive committee of The William W. Backus hospital.

During nearly the entire history of the Hospital the name of Oliver L. Johnson, Jr., appears in connection therewith He was elected a member of the Executive Committee in 1893 and later served as Secretary for ten years and also Vice-President for eleven years. Feeling that on account of his health he could not give the time and energy which he felt the position required he resigned as Vice-President a month before his death, which occurred on November 22, 1929.

The Committee desires to place on record its appreciation felt for the service rendered to the community as well as to the Hospital by the able and willing counsel of Mr. Johnson. We truly recognize his fidelity to the interests of this institution and the wealth of business ability which he cheerfully gave. His was a service which is rarely equaled for any public organization and he leaves a heritage to stimulate his successors.

THE CHELSEA SAVINGS BANK
NORWICH, CONNECTICUT.
November 25, 1929

At a meeting of the Directors of The Chelsea Savings Bank, held November 25, 1929, the following minute was passed:

The Directors of The Chelsea Savings Bank desire to place upon its records an expression of their high appreciation of the life and character of Oliver L. Johnson, who served the bank as Vice President for ten years, and Director for twenty-one years, and who became associated with the bank on September 21, 1893.

During this long connection, Mr. Johnson gladly gave a great deal of time to its business and served the bank in every way possible in order that it might be of great usefulness in our community. To his sound judgment a great measure of its success can be attributed.

We mourn his departure from us not only because of his outstanding character as an officer of the bank, but because of his upright life, spotless integrity as a man, and his wide influence for good upon the lives of the people in this community. His convictions of duty were earnestly and seriously felt and his high courage enabled him to express them on all occasions.

We have adopted this minute and ordered that a copy be engrossed and forwarded to his bereaved family, and published in the daily newspapers.

Attest:
FRANK HEMPSTEAD,
Secretary.

TRIBUTE

The following minute has been adopted by the Trustees of The Norwich Free Academy.

Oliver L. Johnson, whose death occurred November 22, 1929, was elected a Corporator of The Norwich Free Academy September 14, 1893, a Trustee September 28, 1907; Vice President of the Corporation October 24, 1921, and had served as a member of the Executive Committee since October 4, 1913.

He took a deep and practical interest in the affairs of the school and brought to their consideration that sound and constructive judgment which was shown in all his contacts. He endeared himself to his associates by his courtesy and kindliness.

His wise counsel will be greatly missed and the community as well as The Norwich Free Academy has suffered a severe loss. This minute is adopted by his associates on the Board of Trustees with a sense of personal bereavement.

Attest:
GUY B. DOLBEARE,
Secretary.

LEGAL NOTICES

GRACE E. GRAY, vs. JOHN J. GRAY. Order of Notice.

State of Connecticut, County of New London, November 12th, 1929.

Upon the complaint of the said Grace E. Gray and asking a change of the plaintiff's name claiming for the reasons therein set forth a divorce, returnable on the first Tuesday of December, 1929, before the Superior Court in and for said County.

It appearing to and being found by the subscribing authority that the said defendant, John J. Gray, formerly of Norwich, Conn., is gone to parts unknown.

It is therefore ordered, that notice of the pendency of said complaint be given said defendant by publishing this order in the Norwich Evening Record, a newspaper printed in Norwich, Connecticut, two days successively, commencing on or before the 25th day of November, 1929.

WILLIAM H. SHIELDS, Jr.
Asst. Clerk of the Superior Court for New London County.

AT A COURT OF PROBATE HELD at Canterbury, within and for the District of Canterbury, on the 23rd day of November, 1929.

Present, A HALE BENNETT, Judge.

Estate of Charles H. Robbins, late of Canterbury, in said District, deceased.

Ordered, That six months from the date hereof be, and the same are limited and allowed for the creditors to bring in their claims against said estate, and the Executrix is directed to give public notice to the creditors of said estate to bring in their claims within said time allowed, by posting a copy of this order on the public sign-post nearest the place where the deceased last dwelt, within the same Town, and by publishing the same in some newspaper having a circulation in said Probate District, and return make to this Court of the notice given.

A. HALE BENNETT, Judge.

NOTICE.

All creditors of said deceased are hereby notified to present their claims against said estate to the undersigned at Canterbury, Conn., within the time limited in the above and foregoing order.

MRS. MITTIE B. ROBBINS,
Executrix.

AT A COURT OF PROBATE HELD at Norwich, within and for the District of Norwich, on the 26th day of November, A. D. 1929.

Present, NELSON J. AYLING, Judge.

Estate of Augusta P. Gillette, late of Norwich, in said District, deceased.

The Executrix exhibited her administration account with said estate to the Court for allowance; it is therefore Ordered, That the 1st day of December, A. D. 1929, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at the Probate Court Room in the City of Norwich, in said District, be, and the same is, appointed for hearing the same, and the said Executrix is directed to give notice thereof by publishing this order once in some newspaper having a circulation in said District, at least three days prior to the date of said hearing and make return to the Court.

NELSON J. AYLING, Judge.

The above and foregoing is a true copy of record.

Attest, HELEN M. DRESCHER, Clerk.

CORONER E. G. McKAY GETS STATEMENT FROM GORE AT NEW LONDON HOSPITAL

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 26.—There is no change today in the condition of Charles Gore, United States Coast Guard and a member of the crew of the destroyer McCall, at Lawrence Memorial hospital, suffering from bichloride poisoning, self-administered, except that Gore is somewhat weaker. His condition indicates that he can survive but a few days and with that belief prevailing among the physicians attending Gore, Coroner Edward G. McKay of Norwich, came to New London last night and obtained the sailor's ante-mortem statement. Gore, who until yesterday, denied having taken poison, now admits his attempt, which will prove successful to end his life and relates that it was because Miss Loretta Beebe, Quaker Hill nurse, spurned his love. Gore was on State street last Wednesday afternoon and after taking the poison he sought medical aid of Traffic Officer Louis Pine. When Gore was taken to the office of a physician and aid could not be obtained because of the absence of the doctor, Gore was taken to the hospital.

WEDDING

Miller—Parenteau

William A. Miller, of Arlington, N. J., and Miss Bertha Parenteau, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Parenteau, 149 Ocean avenue, were married at 7 o'clock last night at the rectory of St. Joseph's church by Rev. William C. Fitzsimons. Henry Haines, a student at Rutgers university, was best man and Miss Dorothy Parenteau, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. Mr. and Mrs. Miller will make their home in Arlington.

SCHOOL ENUMERATION SHOWS INCREASE OF 111

The enumeration of school children in New London has been concluded and today Frederick W. Edgerton, secretary of the board of school visitors, announced that the total number of boys and girls between the ages of four and 16, who are receiving instructions in the various schools is 6329, an increase of 111 over those who attended school during 1928.

Patrolman's Widow Appreciative

Mrs. John J. Duffy, wife of Patrolman Duffy, New York police department, who was killed by a Negro robber 10 days ago during a running street gun-fight between the officer and the robber and who was buried in St. Mary's cemetery last Wednesday, today tendered Captain of Police Charles A. Pinney her grateful appreciation of the tribute of respect paid the dead officer and extended the profound and sincere thanks of herself and her two daughters for the many acts of kindness extended by the members of the New London department to herself and to her children.

The police tonight received a report that an automobile carrying Connecticut registration L—7898 had been parked on Parker street for two days. Inquiry of the state motor vehicle department revealed that the owner of the auto is Herbert Hardy, 500 Thames street, Groton.

The annual Thanksgiving eve banquet and entertainment for members of Niagara Engine Co., No. 1, will take place at the quarters of the company, Bank street, tomorrow evening and elaborate preparations for the affair have been made. A turkey supper will be served as usual and an entertainment and music by the company orchestra will be provided. The feast is strictly a company affair, providing much enjoyment for the membership.

Big Audience At Roth Concert

A large number of students of Connecticut College for Women augmented the large assemblage that enjoyed the musical program by the Roth quartet at Bulkeley auditorium this evening. The students were brought and returned to the college by special trolley cars provided by the Connecticut company. The concert will be the last under the auspices of the college until after the holiday. Tomorrow the students will go to their homes for the week end and to spend the holiday with parents and friends.

Trio Forfeit Bonds

Otto Nelson, Brooklyn, N. Y., failed to present himself in the Groton town court this forenoon and as a result his bond of $200 was declared forfeited on the charge of driving while under the influence of liquor. Sven Erickson, also of Brooklyn, who was with Nelson when the former was arrested did not appear and answer to a charge of intoxication and his bond of $25 was also forfeited. Nelson and Erickson were arrested several nights ago when the car the pair occupied was being driven at a high rate of speed through the town of Groton. At Trail's corner, a danger spot and which was unfamiliar to Nelson, the car overturned. Although the auto righted itself, neither Nelson or Erickson sustained injuries more serious than bumps and bruises.

Severino Cruz, submarine base, charged with failing to return his registration to the state motor vehicle department after having been requested to do so, requested a continuance, which was granted for a week. Cruz informed the court that he had requested the agent who insured him to take care of the matter and the latter had promised to do so, but failed.

William L. Doyle and Charles F. Hall, submarine base, were jointly charged with failing to possess registration, the sailors being the owners of an automobile that was involved in an accident recently. Both Doyle and Hall were fined $3, with costs of $4.55.

Edward Baldini, of New London, was charged with failing to grant right of way, but the charge was nolled upon Baldini paying the costs of the court, $12.55. Baldini was arrested recently when his auto skidded on a slippery highway and collided with another auto.

Fred J. Barber, New London, was fined $5 and taxed the costs of the court, $11.55 on a charge of failing to carrying a reflection mirror, also failing to have the carrying capacity of the truck lettered on the body.

Harold Palmer, Pequonoc Bridge, was charged with reckless driving but the case was continued until Wednesday next.

The case of Joseph L. Miller, Jr., charged with reckless driving and failure to reveal financial responsibility, was continued a week.

In the cases of Mrs. Florence Frankford, Pequonoc Bridge and William E. Kelly, Ledyard avenue, charged with reckless driving, continuances were ordered until next week, pending the outcome of injuries sustained by persons struck by the cars driven by the man and woman.

OFFICIALS TO ATTEND FUNERAL OF JOHN F. MURRAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 26.—For the funeral of John F. Murray, former business man and member of the city council, tomorrow morning, at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church, the members of the council will assemble at the Murray residence at 9:30 and with Director of Law Thomas E. Troland and City Clerk Julian D. Moran will act as honorary bearers. Members of the police department will be the active bearers. The municipal building, on which the flag floats at half mast as a tribute of respect to Mr. Murray, will remain closed until 11 o'clock as a tribute of respect to the former city official.

Fishing boat Fish Hawk became disabled about 40 miles east of Nantucket yesterday afternoon and was taken in tow by the destroyer MacDougal and brought into port.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Mary Lloyd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Lloyd, 1 Griswold court, to Ralph J. Wagner, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph J. Wagner, Sr., of Hartford.

FUNERALS

Hugh E. McGovern

The funeral of Hugh E. McGovern, late of 993 Bank street, was held this morning at 9 o'clock at St. Joseph's church and was attended by a large assemblage of mourners. The high mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. William C. Fitzsimons. The bearers were Michael J. O'Connell, George Church, Palmer Carroll, John Moran, Louis Satti and John Morgan. Burial was in Jordan cemetery.

Charles F. Taylor

The funeral of Charles F. Taylor, of 381 Benham road, Groton, superintendent of the American Fisheries company, was held this morning at 9:45 o'clock at the Methodist Episcopal church, the services being conducted by Rev. Elmer Page. The bearers were Charles Yerring, George Bennett, George Zurn, William Buckley, James Cuff and Frank Schnard. The body was forwarded to New York, where burial was in Cypress Hill cemetery this afternoon.

Miss Lena Storniola, of 34 Shaw street; George Gilmore, 18 Hope street; Miss Maude Goodwin, 35 Bellevue place; Frank Jones, 7 Cross street; Miss Gladys Davis, 8 Williams street, patients at Lawrence Memorial hospital, were discharged today.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel today ordered the suspension of seven drivers' licenses, Harry Weinstein, 187 Shaw street, Fred Burnett and Harry H. Henderson, submarine base; Richard M. Rose 196 Bank street; Charles T. Phillips, 136 Cedar Grove avenue; William C. Mason, 95 Shaw street and Charles G. Wiesquist, U. S. S. Bushnell. Rose was the driver of an automobile that collided with another auto in Norwalk a week ago when his wife sustained injuries which caused her almost instantaneous death.

Harry S. Hope, 40 Reed street, today made complaint to the police that the pile of coal in the cellar of his house was rapidly diminishing and not by its use as fuel in the Hope household for he declared that a thief was stealing the coal. Hope said that no later than last night the thief was observed removing some of the fuel.

Adrian D. Murray, 21 Jefferson avenue, was in the police court today, charged with driving while under the influence of liquor, but the complaint was amended to reckless driving. Murray pleaded guilty and was fined $25 and costs.

Ivor Partington, North Stonington, was charged with violation of the city's parking ordinance in parking his car in restricted area on Church street. He failed to appear in court and his bond of $2 was declared forfeited.

John J. O'Malley, Norwich and New London was presented on a charge of being a common drunkard and was sentenced to 30 days in jail. O'Malley was presented for this offense for the 22nd time today.

William D. and Amelia A. Nelson have sold two dwelling houses on Vista street to Jean Kram.

Claims He Contributed to Wife

Carl E. Noren, 98 Green street, employed in the freight service of the New Haven railroad, was arrested this afternoon by Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh, charged with non-support. He will be in court tomorrow. Noren, although admitting being estranged from his wife, declares that he has continually contributed to his wife's keep and says that he has receipts to show many instances of his expending money on the complainant.

A certificate of incorporations was filed for record today at the office of the city clerk by the Capitol Cleaners & Dyers. The incorporators are Louis and Sarah Levy and Celia P. Hirsch. The capital stock authorized by the corporation is 50,000 shares, divided into 500 shares of common stock and of the par value of $100 per share. The corporation starts business with capital stock of $20,000.

Mrs. Spencer Brown, residing at the Crocker house, is a patient at Lawrence Memorial hospital. Mrs. Brown was rushed to the hospital last night, being taken suddenly ill in her apartment. When a physician arrived at the hotel, Mrs. Brown's condition was such that she required hospital treatment and the ambulance was summoned. It is believed that she will be able to return to her apartment the latter part of the week.

The residence of Daniel Santacroce, Poquonoc road, Groton, was damaged to the extent of several hundreds of dollars by fire last night and that greater damage did not result was due to the excellent work of the Groton fire department. When the fire was discovered it had gained considerable headway for the roof was blazing. An alarm was rung in and Pioneer Hose company responded. A stream of water directed on the blaze subdued the fire, but not until the firemen had fought it for 45 minutes. The fire originated from a defective chimney.

Mrs. Joseph A. McDonald of Groton is spending a few days in Boston.

Mrs. Henry T. Hodgkins of San Diego, Cal., is in New London to remain two weeks with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Battista Bottinelli, of Pequot avenue. Before returning to her home, Mrs. Hodgkins will visit her husband's parents in New York.

Miss Ethel Burdick, of Mystic; Lyman Watrous, 166 Ocean avenue; William Banks, Noank; Mrs. Frank Epps, 107 Pequot avenue; Mrs. Paul Shedlock, Quaker Hill and Mrs. Frank Harrison, Uncasville, patients at Home Memorial hospital, were discharged yesterday the week end and today.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theater

A lilting melody that will steal your heart away, a glimpse of lovely Irish countryside, a peasant in love with his lady, hounds and horses, castles, aristocracy rubbing elbows with the soil: That is the picture presented in "Lucky in Love," the all-talking, singing production which shares the current bill at the Palace theater along with "Headlines," a smashing drama of American newspaper life and love.

Disaster comes. The castle seems doomed to become the site of an ugly factory. It seems as if nothing can be done about it. In the meantime the representative of the factory syndicate who has come to close the deal with the lord of the castle falls in love with the girl. Out of this arises a quarrel and fight in which Michael knocks the dapper young businessman for a long, low loop and in consequence is forced to flee the country—to America.

On shipboard his voice and personality charm the passengers so greatly that he is taken from the steerage to the first class where, during a concert, he sings several numbers among which is that beautiful romantic hit, "Love Is a Dreamer." You may have heard many love songs but until you hear Morton Downey sing, "Love Is a Dreamer," you haven't heard the best. It is exquisite, as exquisite as the story itself—a beautiful love idyll, of Old Erin, beautifully directed, beautifully acted, beautifully filmed.

In "Headlines" we have a picture almost directly opposite in appeal. Here is action, the swift, dramatic action of the American press, whose motto is Get the Story and Get It Right. It is a treat and education to watch these metropolitan reporters and other newsgatherers at work, to see how they live, to learn the things they say, the things they do, what they think of each other and of the outside world. This is one of the finest of the many fine newspaper stories that have been brought to the talking screen.

Broadway Theatre

Opening today at the Broadway is a program reflecting all the joy and brightness of the Thanksgiving holidays, with the big all-talking, musical revue, "The Broadway Scandals," and a surrounding bill of all-talking featurettes selected for their entertainment value. In the "Broadway Scandals," which is now enjoying its New York premiere at $2.00 prices, Sally O'Neil, Jack Egan and Carmel Myers are the featured players, with a big beauty chorus and a cast of film favorites supporting them in this fast-moving and fascinating story of life backstage and on the road with the vaudeville troupers and tank-town revue companies. There is Mickey Mouse in "The Barn Dance," Tom Howard in "The Spy," a feature length comedy, Kraft and Lamont, vaudeville stars, in a western skit, "R'arin' to Go," Miller and Lyles, the colored stars of "Shuffle Along," in "They Know Their Groceries," and Red Nichols, the radio and honograph recording star with his Five Pennies, in a red-hot musical revue. The latest Fox Movietone news completes the long program. Tomorrow (Thanksgiving day) the program is continuous starting at 1:30. Beginning Saturday one of the biggest productions of the present season, "The M-G-M Hollywood Revue" will come to the Broadway screen, with its wealth of real Hollywood stars, tremendous chorus and wonderful scenic effects.

Thanksgiving Service

A Thanksgiving service is to be held at the Christian Science chapel Thursday morning at 10:45 o'clock.

Burton's Agency Sells Another.

Mr. Edwin H Chapman of Jewett City has sold to Mr. James T. Kramer of this city his property located on the Canterbury turnpike consisting of a six room cottage and about 3 acres of land. The new owner has bought the property for a home and will take possession at once. The sale was negotiated through the real estate agency of Mrs. Rosa E. Burton.

Winter Starting of Autos.

Motorists who have trouble in starting their cars on cold winter mornings probably do not know the why of such exasperating moments, says a local official of the Gulf Refining company. For a quick start there must be a quick and complete vaporization of the gasoline in the combustion chamber. All gasolines are not volatile to this extent, consequently much patience, much battery and considerable gasoline are all wasted. Gasoline in its liquid state will not explode and has no power to drive your car—it is the vapor from gasoline and air that is exploded by the ignition spark.

Initial boiling point and end or dry point governs the vaporization of gasoline—With 100 degree Fahrenheit initial, and 374 degrees Fahrenheit end or dry point, you get perfect vaporization and perfect winter gasoline such as Gulf No-Nox Motor Fuel. The ordinary gasolines have a much higher and a dry point of 437 degrees Fahrenheit. This 63 degrees Fahrenheit difference in ends is too heavy for vaporization—does not ignite but goes into the crank case washing the film from the cylinder walls o nits way down. The longer the motor is turned over, the more gasoline goes into the crank case. We therefore, are confident that the use of the high grade premium gasoline during the cold winter months is real economy in other words premium gasoline is cheaper than repair bills.

FOR THIS THANKSGIVING

IT'S all very well to sit back and enjoy your turkey, but it's quite another thing to have to prepare the dinner. For the fortunate woman who has a General Electric Refrigerator much of the drudgery is eliminated.

Entrees, salads, and desserts (all the trimmings that take so much time) can be prepared the day before. Then they will be chilled to new goodness and finer flavor .... readily achieved in a General Electric Refrigerator.

Quietly, automatically, this simplest and most trouble-free refrigerator guards your food from deterioration and spoilage, makes plenty of ice cubes and freezes the delicacies which are now accepted as part of every well-balanced and appetising menu.

Remember, too, that these are the only refrigerators which have an all-steel cabinet and an hermetically sealed mechanism mounted on top. They also have an accessible freezing regulator. Come in and see the various models. Our convenient payment plan will put a General Electric Refrigerator in your home today.

THIS RECORD STANDS ALONE

There are now more than 350,000 users of General Electric Refrigerators—and not one owner has ever had to spend a single dollar for repairs or service.

GREENEVILLE

MR. AND MRS. LOUIS OUILLET HAVE GOLDEN WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Ouillet of 31 Fifth street observed their 50th wedding anniversary at their home Monday. They were united in marriage at St. Thomas church, New Brunswick, Canada, Nov. 25, 1879 and have resided for the past 25 years in Greeneville. Twelve children were born to this union and ten of them are still living, namely, Mrs. Virginia Gould of Port Elgin, Canada; Mrs. William Gaudette of St. Joseph, Canada; Arthur, Philip, Ernest, Dominick and Raymond Ouillet, all of this city, Misses Imelda, Rose and Louise Ouillet, of New York city. All during the day Mr. and Mrs. Ouillet received many of their friends who extended their wishes for many more years of happy wedded life.

At the home at 7 o'clock a reception was held for the immediate members of the family with guests from Plainfield, Willimantic, Taftville and New London. Vocal and piano solos were rendered during the evening. Mr. and Mrs. Ouillet received many beautiful gifts in gold. The couple are very active for their years. Mr. Ouillet conducting a shoe repairing store in Greeneville while his wife is able to get about and do her own house work around the house.

WEDDING

Garabowsky-Domoleski

A very pretty wedding took place Monday morning at 9 o'clock at St. Joseph's church when Miss Lottie Secile Domoleski, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Domoleski of 85 Oakridge street, was united in marriage by Rev. Iclek, pastor with Joseph Stanley Garabowsky, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Garabowsky of Versailles. Miss Helen Narocky was maid of honor and the bridesmaids were Miss Nellie Domoleski, a cousin of the bride and Rose Kolinoski of Versailles, a cousin of the groom. Leo Garabowsky, cousin of the groom, acted as best man while the ushers at the church were Thomas Kolinoski and Walter Urin. The bride was beautifully attired in a white satin gown and wore a nun cap shaped veil of Spanish lace, caught up with orange blossoms and carried a shower with Spanish lace and carried a shower of the valley. Miss Narocky was handsomely gowned in orchid satin, wore a maline head band and carried pink carnations. Miss Domoleski was attired in pink satin while Miss Rose Kalinoski wore a gown of Nile green satin. The two bridesmaids carried an arm bouquet of pink carnations and wore maline head bands.

After the church ceremony a wedding breakfast was served to about 150 guests at the home of the bride's parents at 85 Oakridge street. Dancing was enjoyed during the remainder of the day.

Guests were present from New London, New Britain, New Haven, New Bedford, Vermont, Cleveland, Willimantic, Versailles, Bridgeport, Worcester, Hartford, Stafford Springs, Windsor Locks and Jersey City. Later in the day Mr. and Mrs. Garabowsky left on a ten day wedding trip, which will take them to New York city, Philadelphia, Chicago and Washington.

The groom's gift to the bride was a beautiful string of pearls while she in return presented him with a pair of diamond cuff links. The bride presented her maid of honor and bridesmaids with signet rings. The groom gave his attendants automatic cigarette lighters. Mr. and Mrs. Garabowski have a large circle of friends in this vicinity who extend to them their wishes for a happy and prosperous married life. Mrs. Garabowski's going-away costume was a tan traveling suit with fox fur neck piece. Upon their return the newly married couple will make their home in a newly furnished apartment at 85 Oakridge street.

BRINGS SUIT FOR DISSOLUTION OF COMPANY

On a claim for the dissolution of the O. C. Wolfe Co. Inc., Ford dealers in this city, Floyd R. Monroe of this city has brought suit in the superior court, alleging that the firm has unsecured outstanding liabilities in excess of $57,000 and that it cannot obtain sufficient cash to meet these. The plaintiff makes the claim that, although the concern is solvent, so much money is tied up in equipment and parts that creditors cannot be satisfied.

In his complaint Monroe states that he is the owner of 50 shares of the capital stock of the company, which is capitalized at $50,000, half of which has been subscribed. The par value of shares is $100.

SUGGESTIONS FOR TREE PLANTING IN CITY AND SPRING PLANT EXCHANGE

Presentation of the yard and garden prizes award by the Norwich chamber of commerce was held on Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 at the mayor's office. The function of awarding the prizes was very impressive. All the winners were on hand when Max Hanover, chairman of the yard and garden contest, called the gathering to order. Mr. Hanover thanked the citizens who did such splendid work in winning the prizes and introduced Arthur L. Peale, who the speaker said worked very hard to make it a fair and honest contest. Mr. Peale spoke in high praise of the work done by everyone who entered the yard and garden contest, saying that there was a very marked improvement in the numerous yards and gardens which he had visited and expressed the hope that the good work will be continued to beautify the city.

Mayor Lee Roy Robbins, in behalf of the Norwich chamber of commerce, awarded the prizes and said, in part: "I wish to say that I am greatly pleased to officiate in awarding the prizes to the citizens who feel a pride in their city and who have made their yards and gardens both beautiful and artistic." The prizes were as follows:

Class 1. First prize, M. J. McCarthy, 56 Oak street, $25; second, Earl B. Whitehead, 122 Fourth street, $15; third, Yolanda Costentino, 18 Mulberry street, $10; fourth, Mrs. Thomas Kean, 25 Oneco street, $7.50; fifth, Mrs. Harriet M. Steere, Fairmount street, $5; sixth, J. Manning, 95 Spring street, $2.50.

Certificates of award were given to the following: Class 2. First prize, Mrs. Albert H. Chase, 1 Sachem terrace; second prize, Mrs. E. D. Fuller, Broadway.

Class 3. First prize, Philip A. Johnson, 407 Washington street. Philip A. Johnson suggested that the yard and garden committee take up the matter of planting trees on the highways of Norwich, which could be done with very little money and only with a little community effort. Mrs. Albert H. Chase suggested that next spring the chamber of commerce ought to arrange for a place and designate a date where plants could be exchanged for the benefit of those who are interested in planting. The members present offered to donate plants for that day so that citizens interested in planting may secure valuable plants free of charge.

The suggestion of Mrs. Chase was that a public announcement ought to be made in the paper, inviting Norwich garden lovers to bring, in the morning of the designated plant day, the surplus plants which they may have so that the public may call for them before the day is over.

In answer to the suggestion, Mr. Hanover said that, while the ideas outlined by Mrs. Chase and Mr. Johnson were very worthy and while he believed that the chamber of commerce would be willing to help, it would be better to take up the matter with some civic organization such as the Woman's City club, as the chamber of commerce has a tremendous amount of work in hand of which a great number of Norwich citizens are not aware. The meeting closed with the chairman thanking the gathering for their enthusiasm and interest.

ASSESSORS INVITED TO CONFERENCE AT WILLIMANTIC

By a letter from the office of State Tax Commissioner William H. Blodgett, assessors of the 49 towns in New London, Windham and Tolland counties have been invited to an informal conference which is to be held at 1 o'clock, Monday afternoon, Dec. 2, at the town hall in Willimantic. Other town officials, particularly members of the board of relief and selectmen, will find the conference producing information of value to them and the tax commissioner hopes that they will attend.

This will be the second of a series of such sectional conferences which will be held at convenient places in various parts of the state.

The meeting will be conducted in the nature of a round-table discussion of assessors' problems. It is particularly desired that assessors come to ask questions, exchange views, etc., thereby gaining information profitable to them and of benefit to the communities they serve. A set program with prepared addresses is intentionally avoided.

Such a conference presents an opportunity to newly-elected assessors and other town officials, to acquire much-needed information, and for assessors of experience to help each other with the troublesome phases of their work.

ALLEGES FRAUD INTENT IN TRANSFERRING ASSETS

On the ground that certain motor trucks and other things which he considered as assets of the partnership of Abraham H. and William Hyman of this city when he loaned them money had been transferred by the Hymans to a corporation which they formed, with intent to defraud him, George Greeneberger of this city has brought suit for $3,500 damages in the superior court against I. Hyman and Sons, Inc., wholesale produce dealers of this city. Abraham Hyman, William Hyman, Mollie Hyman, all of this city, and Louis M. Langello of New Haven are made party defendants.

While the two Hymans were in business as the firm of I. Hyman and Sons, Greenberger claims he loaned the money at 12 per cent on notes, and endorsed an $800 note at the Uncas-Merchants National bank which he had to pay. The note at the bank was dated Oct. 29, 1928 and the other notes were as follows: $1,500 on Dec. 14, 1926; $800 on Dec. 29, 1926, and $1,000 on Jan. 7, 1928.

When these loans were made, Greenberger claims the Hymans represented to him that the motor trucks and other property which they owned, with their bills receivable, would cover their obligations. He further alleges that between March 7, 1929 and March 18, 1929, the defendants named formed the corporation with intent to defraud, hinder and delay Greenberger and that they transferred the partnership assets to the corporation in pursuance of their purpose to defraud him.

For Motor Law Violations

In the city court Monday morning, several cases of motor law violations were disposed of. Adolf Czikoswsky of this city paid a fine of $10 and costs, $20.50 in all, on a speeding charge. A nolle on payment of $5 was made in the case of James Geragotelis of this city on the charge of operating a machine with defective headlights. Jacob Katz, of Long Island City, N. Y., and Raymond W. Mayo, of Brookfield, Mass., each paid $5 fine on charges of failure to grant the right of way. Elmer Lathrop of Fitchville, paid $3 for violation of a city traffic ordinance.

RED ARROW BOOSTER CONTEST HOT RACE

Great interest is being manifested in the booster contest of the Red Arrow club of Norwich. While there are over a hundred contestants who have entered the booster game, there are about a dozen people who work very hard to win the prizes. The boosters who stand highest in the contest with the largest number of votes have their friends working for them by obtaining Red Arrow money in the Red Arrow stores and changing it for votes at the Reid & Hughes Co. The booster bulletin in the lobby of the Palace theatre is also attracting marked interest. On this board is marked the standing of the various boosters which is placed in a separate column every week as a new count is taken. The booster ballot box at the Palace theatre is being well supplied with votes by boosters interested in the contest.

The five booster prizes will be awarded at the December Red Arrow auction and consists of the following items: First prize, a diamond ring with platinum setting valued at $450; second prize, Kelvinator refrigerator, porcelain covered, with porcelain-lined interior, valued at $275; third prize, Hamilton gold watch valued at $172; fourth prize, Savage washing machine valued at $170; fifth prize, Rogers silver plate tableware, 57 pieces, valued at $87.

The standing of the boosters is as follows: Mrs. D. Louisa Atterbury, 602,050; Arthur Chartier, 497,420; Joseph Falcone, 410,955; Mrs. Ida Hough, 328,365; Mrs. Joseph Burke, 234,300; Mrs. Frank DiCarlo, 146,500; Mrs. Elfrieda Kalish, 105,340; Miss Fannie Longo, 93,560; Mrs. Amy E. Coles, 53,875; Eugene Manning, 41,805; Mrs. Georgianna Roessler, 10,200; Mrs. A. Wood, 8,220; Miss Catherine McVeigh, 6,400.

The $200 bag of gold to be awarded at the Red Arrow auction to be held next Friday is also attracting wide interest from a number of organizations that have been striving to be the highest bidders and win the gold. The contest closes today (Wednesday) and the bids may be deposited in the auction block of the Red Arrow stores until 5 p. m.

POST OFFICE HOURS THANKSGIVING DAY

The Norwich post office will be closed all day on Thursday. Outgoing mails will close as usual, except the last mail for Boston and New York which will close at 5:30 p. m. There will be a collection from the street letter boxes usually collected on Sundays at 3:00 p. m.

This being a national holiday no deliveries will be made by either city or rural carriers. Box holders will receive their mail as usual.

NEW YORK ATTORNEYS TO DEBATE PROHIBITION HERE

Two prominent New York attorneys, John Sergeant Wise, Jr., for the "wets," and Dr. Albert Levitt, for the "drys", have been secured as the debaters on the prohibition question next Sunday evening at the Central Baptist church under the auspices of the Woman's Crusade of the W. C. T. U. The subject is to be Resolved, that the eighteenth amendment is contrary to the spirit of the American constitution.

It is with some difficulty that a speaker for the affirmative has been secured. Judge Lucius Robinson of Hartford and Hon. Schuyler Merritt of Stamford, both known as outstanding anti-prohibitionists of this state, declined the invitation to participate. Arthur Garfield Hays, a New York attorney, who had accepted the challenge to debate, cancelled his acceptance last week, pleading overwork and necessary release from Sunday engagements. The place has now been filled by Attorney Wise, a member of the New York lawyers' committee against the eighteenth amendment.

Dr. Levitt has spoken before in this city and the crusade is well pleased at being able to obtain two such brilliant antagonists to debate the question.

RESULTS OF TRIALS IN LIQUOR LAW VIOLATIONS

Four women and two men went to jail, two men and one woman were discharged, one man was bound over to the superior court, two men and one woman took appeals on fines of $200 and jail sentences of 10 days which had been imposed upon them, and one man paid $208.50 as a result of the liquor law violation trials in the city court Monday morning.

The case against Nora Ouellet, of 248 Main street, on the charge of sale of liquor was brought before Judge A. F. Libby in chambers early Monday evening. Her counsel entered a demurrer which was overruled and she was fined $200 and costs with a ten-day jail sentence. She took an appeal to the common pleas court. It was at her rooming house where the spotter, Herbert Gray, had a room to which the bottles of "evidence" were taken as fast as they were secured.

There remain seven of the raid cases to be heard in the court this (Wednesday) morning. These are: Angelo Panagiotos, 27 Thames street; John Anton, 184 Franklin street; Carlo Depucchio, 284 Central avenue; Arnold Headon, 10 Railroad avenue; Dennis Sullivan, 10 Railroad avenue; Camille Frechette, Taftville; Nicholas Panagiotos, North Thames street.

JUDGMENT FOR $140.63 IN BUILDER'S SUIT

Judgment for $140.63 in favor of Henry Pukallus of this city against Mrs. Sarah H. Kane, also of this city, is given by Judge C. B. Waller of the common pleas court in a decision handed down Tuesday. The suit was brought by Pukallus on his claim for $125 due him on an oral contract for building a glassed-in porch at Mrs. Kane's cottage at Groton Long Point in 1927. She disputed the claim on the ground that the contract went ahead against her wishes and that the work did not follow the terms of the oral contract.

SONS OF REVOLUTION ADD NEW MEMBERS

Eleven new members were elected to the Connecticut society of Sons of the American Revolution when the board of managers met in Hartford Saturday afternoon. These included Marshall Bevin of East Hampton. The total additions during the year have been 42, which makes the membership now 1,323.

The transfer of Maurice Jack Hard of Southbury, from the California society was approved and two grave markers ordered placed at the graves of Revolutionary patriots.

Superior Courts Adjourned

Superior courts in the state were adjourned at 1 o'clock Tuesday afternoon by direction of Chief Justice Wheeler out of respect to the memory of the late Donald T. Warner, whose funeral was held Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at his home at Salisbury.

Judge Warner was a state referee at the time of his death, was a former judge of the superior court and had been president of the bar association and state attorney in Litchfield county.

SCHOOL CHILDREN'S CONTRIBUTIONS FILL 156 THANKSGIVING BASKETS

The school children of the city and town have played an important part in the collection of edibles to be used in filling the baskets to be distributed among the needy families of the city for their Thanksgiving dinner by the members of the United Workers. As in past years the children have done superbly, this year donating about 40 barrels chock full of canned goods, jellies, vegetables and other good things that are used in making up a fine dinner, bringing joy to a large number of needy families who otherwise would not be able to afford such a delicious holiday dinner.

The work of sorting and packing the edibles into baskets was done Tuesday by members of the family welfare department of the United Workers of Norwich under the direction of Miss Nancy Lucas, chairman of the committee, and Miss Julia Corcoran, social worker. The building formerly occupied by the Norwich Evening Record on Chestnut street and loaned through the courtesy of The Norwich Bulletin company was the headquarters, where the workers worked practically all day to finish their task. As a reward for the strenuous efforts a total of 156 baskets were packed with goodies and a large portion of pork for roasting.

Those who were working Tuesday include Miss Nancy E. Lucas, Miss Mary M. Lucas, Miss Martha Osgood, Mrs. Edmund W. Perkins, Miss Mary Porteous, Mrs. Emil M. Fox, Mrs. John Kukla, Mrs. Myles L. Standish, Mrs. Archibald Mitchell, 4th, Mrs. Robert Johnson, Mrs. John Hall, Miss Cecile Crowell, Mrs. William Wade, Mrs. Charles Tyler Bard, Mrs. Aurin O. Payson, Mrs. Arthur E. Payson, Miss Amy Burlingame, and Miss Marion L. Bishop.

The members of the motor squad who will deliver the baskets under the chairmanship of Mrs. Robert Snow, are the following: Mrs. Charles Osgood, Mrs. Myles E. Standish, Mrs. L. O. Smith, Miss Jane Bill, Mrs. Richard B. Snow, Mrs. Aurin O. Payson, Mrs. Arthur E. Payson, Miss Marion L. Bishop, Miss Amy Burlingame, Mrs. Emil M. Fox, Miss Nancy E. Lucas, Miss Mary Porteous and Mrs. Archibald Mitchell, 4th.

TAFTVILLE

Mr. and Mrs. John Nolan of Long Branch, N. J., and their son, Elton Nolan, officer at the state police barracks at Danielson, have been recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Duff and family of North A street.

The Ladies Benevolent society of the Taftville Congregational church have voted to take charge of the home cooking booth and the fancy work booth at the coming church fair. The officers and teachers of the church school are to have charge of the apron booth.

Tuesday evening was the last night of the carnival and bazaar being given by the both branches of the Children of Mary sodality at St. Therese's hall. There was a large attendance, all booths being well patronized, and prizes were awarded. The proceeds of the affair which has been continued for several nights, will be added to the fund being accumulated to extinguish the church debt.

James T. Kramer has purchased the house on the Old Canterbury turnpike formerly owned by Mrs. Lizzie M. Crowther.

The members of the Dramatic club held a business meeting and rehearsal at Ponemah hall Tuesday evening.

SUES NEW LONDON FOR FRACTURED LEG

The city of New London is made defendant in a suit for $10,000 damages brought in the superior court by Dolly Annette Hirsch because of a fall on a crosswalk at Williams street and Post Hill place on Dec. 13, 1928 and which she alleges was in a slippery condition.

She suffered a broken right leg and nervous shock to her system as a result of the accident, which she alleges was due to the negligence of the city in its care of the crosswalk.

HOOVER ENCOURAGED BY PUBLIC UTILITIES HEADS

Managers Tell of 1930 Budget For Extensions, Betterments and Maintenance Calling For About Two Billion Dollars—Regarding the Managers of Public Utilities as Close to the Public Pulse, President Hoover Was Particularly Pleased With the Tenor of the Reports—Conferees Expressed Confidence in the Future Despite Happenings in the Stock Market.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—(AP)—Public utility managers have such confidence in the immediate future that they are going ahead with a 1930 budget for extensions, betterments and maintenance approaching the two billion dollar mark and exceeding that for this year by more than one hundred million dollars.

They came to Washington some 30 strong today to lay this information before President Hoover and to report on the outlook. Among them were Owen D. Young, chairman of the board of the General Electric Co.; Samuel Insull, of Chicago, who has vast utility holdings throughout the country; Mathew S. Sloan, of New York, president of the National Electric Light association; B. J. Mullaney, of Chicago, president of the American Gas association, and John N. Shannahan, of Omaha, speaking for Paul Shoup, president of the Electric Railways association.

Since perhaps no other industry is in a position to keep its finger quite as close upon the public pulse as the utilities, the president was represented as being particularly pleased with the tenor of reports on conditions generally over the country, which the light and power, gas, and electric railway managers gave.

The programs outlined, it was explained, were sufficient not only to keep busy the many thousands employed in the industries, but also to provide enormous orders to be turned out by the many other thousands on the payrolls of the manufacturers of electrical, gas and street railway supplies.

Without exception those attending the conference of nearly two hours in the cabinet room at the white house executive offices, said there was no question of wage reductions, that such a thing had not been considered, and that a number of companies reported that the usual first of the year increases to employes would be forthcoming.

The reports made to the president were based on a survey made at Mr. Hoover's suggestion, as a part of his business progress movement, and were correlated at a conference the utilities managers held yesterday in New York. It had been expected they would submit their report informally, but a personal conference with the chief executive was obtained instead.

The general situation was summarized in this statement read to the president by Mr. Sloan, of the electric light association, who had been designated as general spokesman for the entire group:

"The electric light and power, manufactured and natural gas, and electric railway utilities contemplate the expenditure of $1,400,000,000 during 1930 for new construction and expansion of facilities, an increase over the corresponding expenditures for 1929 of $110,000,000.

"In addition to this amount, they will spend to maintain existing properties $410,000,000."

Speaking then only for the electric light and power companies, Sloan said the expenditures by them next year would be $865,000,000 for expansion of their facilities, an increase of $65,000,000 over this year, and exclusive of maintenance expenditures.

Reporting an outlay of $425,000,000 for 1930 extensions and betterments, Mr. Mullaney said an additional $50,000,000 would be laid out for maintenance of existing facilities.

For the street railways, Mr. Shannahan said a survey of this industry indicated that 1929 expenditures of approximately $1,000,000 a day would be maintained or exceeded in 1930.

Upon emerging from the cabinet room a number of the conferees expressed confidence in the future despite the happenings in the stock market, and they endorsed the president's program of having budgeted the expenditures of utilities, great manufacturing industries, states, cities and counties as well as of the federal government so as to maintain confidence in the country and particularly among the artisans and salaried men.

A further expansion of the federal program was announced today by the war department, which disclosed that orders had gone forward to accelerate the army housing and repair program by absorbing the nearly $20,000,000 balance of this fund in the treasury on Oct. 1. This will afford work for many additional men in several crafts.

Nations Move For Peace In Manchuria

United States Will Cooperate With Other Governments Considering Such Steps.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—(AP)—A full cooperation of the United States in any effort to bring peace between the Chinese and the soviet in Manchuria appeared assured tonight with word from London that the British government was considering such steps.

Only two efforts, so far as is known here, have been made to bring about a settlement of the troubles, which arose out of a series of incidents in the area and particularly from the taking over by the Chinese of the previously soviet-controlled Chinese Eastern railway. One was made by Secretary Stimson several months ago, when he took steps to have called to the attention of each government its obligations to avert an outbreak of warfare under the Kellogg pact for the renunciation of war, to which both China and the soviet have adhered.

The other effort was made by Germany in an effort to bring about some settlement of the dispute over the railway through suggestions to the emissaries of the two governments when negotiations were taking place in Berlin with a view to adjusting the problem.

Secretary Stimson has laid before the British, French, Japanese, Italian and German governments a proposal for a possible solution by conciliation. At that time, which was some months ago, Sir Esme Howard, the British ambassador, assured Mr. Stimson of the cooperation of his government in any step which the United States might take to bring about peace in the Manchurian situation.

Stock 'Change Slump Hurt Diamond Market

Amsterdam Diamond Association to [illegible] Working Days to [illegible] the Situation.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 27—(AP)—Because of the serious crisis in the Dutch diamond industry, attributed mainly to the stock exchange slump in the United States, the Amsterdam Diamond association voted today to reduce working days from six to three per week from December 8 to January 4. By that time it was hoped that normal conditions would be re-established and full production resumed.

Tuesday employers in the diamond industry in Antwerp decided to close their works from December 7 to December 21. Twelve thousand workers will be affected but will receive unemployment pay from a joint fund. The previous night, a general meeting of various syndicates representing the Belgian diamond industry had met in Brussels and decided to reduce working hours by half.

A Psalm of Thanksgiving

"O sing unto the Lord a new song,
For He hath done marvelous things."
With the sun, with the rain, and with lengthened days,
He had brought forth harvest of abundance,
From seed-time to the ripening
Hath He aided the husbandman.
His infinite care and providence hath been given for all His people.

A guide unfailing He pointed and blessed the way of our forefathers
When in His fear they came with high hearts to establish a free faith.
Pilgrims! Strangers! Finding here a home with God.
For this, sing and give thanks!
Sing with them their glad song of Thanksgiving!
With joyful voice of praise,
O show yourselves grateful before the Lord, the King!

Let all men who on earth do dwell their praises bring
For the day of peace which they vision.
When love of man to man shall rule all hearts and bring in Jehovah's kingdom on earth.
In this our day, let us give thanks.
For marvelous things hath He done!
O sing praises unto God-Jehovah!

QUIET THANKSGIVING AT THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27—(AP)—An atmosphere of quiet will pervade the white house tomorrow as the President and Mrs. Hoover observe Thanksgiving.

Officially the government still is in mourning for the late Secretary Good and therefore the hospitality which the presidential family extends so frequently will be curtailed. A few intimate friends will partake of the holiday feast at 8 o'clock in the evening.

In the morning, the President and Mrs. Hoover will attend services at the Metropolitan Methodist Episcopal church in which all of the Protestant churches of the city will participate. These union services are customary in the capital on Thanksgiving and Christmas.

The home-coming of one of their sons, Allan, from Cambridge, where he is attending the Harvard School of Business Administration, will add to the day's pleasure for Mr. and Mrs. Hoover.

91 ARRESTS FOR ALLEGED RUM RING IN IDAHO

WALLACE, Idaho, Nov. 27—(AP)—The "rum ring wrecking crew" of federal officers, armed with nearly 200 grand jury indictments today continued their arrests of 91 men indicted for alleged conspiracy.

The alleged rum conspiracy is said to center in Shoshone county. The principal towns involved are Wallace, Mullan and Kellogg.

Thirty-three accused have posted bonds on conspiracy charge stipulating $66,000.

At Wallace the mayor, the sheriff and the county assessor were arrested for conspiracy, as were the mayor, chief of police and most of the councilmen at Mullan. Some were charged with participating actively in a rum ring, others with knowing of it and doing nothing.

CLAIMS PRISON MUTINY WAS CONNIVED BY K. K. K.

DENVER, Nov. 27—(AP)—Charges that activities of the Ku Klux Klan and "penurious" policy of the state legislature contributed to the mutiny at the Colorado state penitentiary October 3 in which 13 lives were lost, were made today by Thomas Tynan, former warden of the prison. He testified at the concluding session of Governor W. H. Adams' commission investigating the mutiny.

Tynan charged that the klan, as a political maneuver, had established a branch inside the penitentiary to which both convicts and guards belonged.

"It resulted in a complete breakdown of discipline and had a lasting effect," the former warden said.

"MISS MEXICO" TO GO ON TRIAL TODAY FOR MURDER

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 27—(AP)—Maria Teresa De Landa, who was "Miss Mexico" at the 1928 Galveston beauty carnival, will go on trial tomorrow for the killing of General Moises Vidal in a rage when she learned he had committed bigamy in marrying her. The state will ask 12 years imprisonment.

Today was spent in selecting a jury for the trial. The woman fired all chambers in the general's own revolver into his body when he attempted to prevent her from committing suicide.

Today she said, "If I am acquitted, I will never remarry as I wish always to cherish my memory of Moises. If I am convicted, I prefer execution."

DEATH OF DR. WILLIAM S. HULBERT IN WINSTED

WINSTED, Nov. 27—(AP)—Dr. William S. Hulbert, for 45 years one of the leading citizens here, died this evening in the Hartford hospital at 8:30 o'clock, after a brief illness. He moved to Hartford after the death of his wife four years ago.

He was one of the founders and trustees of the Litchfield County hospital and was a member of its visiting staff for 20 years.

MIRACULOUS ESCAPE OF TWO FLIERS IN AIRPLANE CRASH

They Were Catapulted Out of the Plane Just Before the Final Crash—Fokker Monoplane F-32, the Largest Airplane Ever Built in This Country, Crashed on Roof of Two Story House Near Roosevelt Field and Burst Into Flame—The House on Which It Landed Was Destroyed by Fire.

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., Nov. 27.—(AP)—Faltering and floundering like some pre-historic winged monster wounded and about to die, the Fokker monoplane, F-32, largest airplane ever built in this country, crashed down into the tiny cross roads hamlet of Carle Place, adjoining Roosevelt field, today.

When the ship finally came to a stop, with its nose buried deep in the upper floor of a two-story frame house, it had narrowly missed crashing full tilt into a hangar on the field, had snapped a telephone pole in two, ripped the chimneys and radio aerials off two dwellings, and had torn part of the roof off a third.

With the crash the ship burst into flame, and burning gasoline from its 600-gallon tanks sprayed in every direction. The house in which it landed was destroyed by fire and the entire upper floor was burned off the house next door. Two hours later, firemen were unable to get within many feet of either building because of the scorching heat.

Miraculously neither of the two men aboard the Fokker was killed. The pilot, S. M. Boggs, engineering inspector for the department of commerce, was catapulted out of the ship just before the final crash. He landed unconscious in some shrubbery 600 feet away and was not found until ten minutes later. He is in Nassau hospital at Mineola with deep cuts on his head, both ankles sprained, and serious internal injuries.

Harry McDonald, a Fokker mechanic, was thrown clear before Boggs was. He escaped with a sprained ankle and a few cuts on his face.

Two hours earlier, James Pisani, 20, of Brooklyn, flying a small, light monoplane, crashed on top of a one-story real estate office in the heart of the business section of Westbury, a few miles from Carle Place. Pisani died shortly after he was taken to Nassau hospital.

A baby was sleeping on the second floor of the house next door to that which the F-32 hit. The mother heard the crash and rushed upstairs just in time to snatch the child out of its blazing crib.

The F-32, a 43-passenger monoplane, 70 feet long with a wing spread of more than 100 feet, was flown to Mitchel field from Teterboro airport, N. J., early this morning. It came over to Roosevelt field eventually, was taken aloft a couple of times, and stood for some time on the field, with two of her 425-horsepower motors idling.

Shortly before 2 o'clock, Boggs and McDonald went out and tried to start her two rear motors. They were unable to start her rear right motor, so they finally took off with only three motors running.

The ship finally rose to about 60 feet. First the hangar of the Columbia Aircraft corporation loomed in her path.

Boggs swerved his huge lumbering ship aside and managed to get out, with its tail dragging, between the hangar and the building next to it.

Captain Philip Watson, a pilot who was in the air, said the Fokker then wobbled out over a potato field and nosed down as if to land. Ahead, of it, however, was a steep railroad embankment, so Boggs pulled the ship's nose up and went on. The craft was not more than 60 feet in the air and settling.

About this time, Watson observed the right front motor died.

Staggering on toward Carle Place the ship next snapped a telephone pole in two. Then, one after the other, it struck the dwelling houses of Mrs. Cora Fagen and Guilio Fortoui.

It next hit the residence of Joseph Cenpori, and the impact tore off part of the right wing and part of Cenpori's roof.

Still a few feet in the air, the craft floundered across Jamaica boulevard, almost at the corner of Westbury avenue, one of the most heavily traveled boulevards in the district, and plowed into a two-story frame dwelling of Arthur Wicks.

Six tons of steel, it completely crushed the front of the Wicks house. The plane was almost as big as the building itself. Its nose went into the second floor, the tail and part of the fuselage remaining outside.

As they were taking him to the hospital, Boggs was semi-conscious.

"I hit a kid," he moaned over and over. "A little kid."

A search of the neighborhood, however, had revealed no missing, dead or injured children late this afternoon.

AN UNUSUAL ENDING OF MURDER CASE IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Nov. 27.—(AP)— One of the strangest procedures in Chicago's criminal history furnished the accompaniment today for the swan song to Frank J. Loesch's career as a politico-criminal prosecutor and resulted in the liberty of five policemen and two hoodlums, who stood charged with the murder of Octavius C. Granaday, Negro politician.

Loesch, the 77-year old crusader against political criminal alliances, a member of President Hoover's law enforcement commission and a special prosecutor, wrecked by his own hand the last vestiges of the state's case against the alleged election terrorists when he moved to dismiss the charges. Granaday was slain primary election day, 1928.

Loesch said he and his associates and the witnesses for the state had been abused by the judge, Joseph David, throughout the trial and that in view of the judge's oft-repeated declaration that he would set aside a verdict of guilty if it was returned, he felt it would be unfair to the jurors and taxpayers to continue.

Before he walked from the court room—the last time, he said, as society's representative against crooked elections—the veteran lawyer spoke his mind about the case and about the judge. He reviewed the evidence, the many witnesses who pointed at Lieutenant Philip Carroll and the others on trial as men who chased Granady from a polling place and shot at him.

For perhaps the first time court attaches witnessed the strange spectacle of a prosecutor dropping an important case and at the same time lauding its merits.

REP. DENISON HAS POSTED $500 BAIL ON LIQUOR CHARGES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27—(AP)—After posting $500 bail on liquor charges, Representative Edward E. Denison of Illinois said today he did not know when he would be brought to trial and the district attorney's office said the case would come up "in the natural course of events."

Denison had requested an early trial when informed at his home in Marion, Ill., of the indictment, growing out of the report of prohibition agents that a leaking suitcase and a trunk addressed to John Layne, his former secretary, in his care at 411 House office building, had been found to contain liquor.

He arrived in Washington today and issued a formal statement which said he had "nothing to say with reference to the misdemeanor with which I have recently been charged in connection with the prohibition act."

CONFIDENT OF REDUCTION IN ARMAMENTS OF WORLD

LONDON, Nov. 27.—(AP)—Admitting that numerous difficulties will confront the five-power naval conference when it opens here in January, Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald today expressed his belief that these would be overcome and that success would crown the efforts of those seeking reduction in the armaments of the world.

He spoke at a tea in the house of commons which was attended by representatives of various British peace organizations, Frank B. Kellogg, former United States secretary of state, and Mrs. Kellogg, Miss Ishbel MacDonald, Prof. Gilbert Murray and Norman Angell, author and lecturer.

TELLS OF POLITICAL GRAFT IN ALBANY BASEBALL POOL

NEW YORK, Nov. 27—(AP)—Additional testimony that "protection" money was paid to politicians in the operation of the Albany baseball pool was brought out in federal court today at the trial of James J. Otto for perjury.

August C. Meyer, who said he operated the Capital City pool which merged with the Albany baseball pool in the spring of 1924, testified that in the fall of that year Otto told him that since a Republican sheriff had been elected he would have to "divide the profits in some way with the republican organization."

That winter, Meyer testified, he paid to Otto and his associates 33 1-3 per cent of the profits of his stock market pool "for protection."

Otto told him, Meyer said, that he and his associates would have to have 50 per cent, but they compromised on 33 1-3 and the fixure eventually was reduced to 25 per cent.

Meyer said the profits for 1924 were divided between himself, Otto and Frank Donohue, Otto told him, Meyer added, that he would have to "pay something to Ed Easton." Meyer did not identify Easton.

KIDNAPERS THREATEN FRANCISCAN MISSIONARY

SHANGHAI, Nov. 27—(AP)—The Rev. Ulrich Kreutzen of Calumet, Mich., a Franciscan missionary stationed at Wuchang, Hupeh province, who was kidnaped by bandits early this month, has written to Wuchang stating that his health was good but that his captors were threatening death unless troops seeking to rescue him were withdrawn.

His whereabouts, said the letter, was being changed continually in the mountains south of Tayeh, Hupeh province.

The Wuchang mission said negotiations seeking his release were under way, the mission being willing to pay what Chinese term "wine and rice money" approximately 1,000 Mexican dollars ($500 gold) but not the ransom of 6,000 Mexican dollars demanded.

THREE YOUNG BROTHERS WERE BURNED TO DEATH

MILLVILLE, N. J., Nov. 27.—(AP)—Three brothers, sons of Mr. and Mrs. McKinley Lee, were burned to death today when fire of undetermined origin destroyed their home at Heislerville, ten miles south of here.

Martin, 5; McKinley, Jr., 4, and Warren John, 1, were found huddled beside a bed, their bodies charred in the wreckage.

Mrs. Lee had left the boys in the house while she visited a friend nearby.

Mr. Lee was at work in a field nearby.

CHINESE CAPITULATE TO THE SOVIET DEMANDS

MOSCOW, Nov. 27—(AP)—The Mukden government was officially reported tonight to have capitulated to the demand of the soviet government for reestablishment of the status quo on the Chinese Eastern railway in Manchuria before opening negotiations for peaceful settlement of the dispute.

Acting Commisar of Foreign Affairs Maxim Litvinoff tonight forwarded to the provincial government a telegram recommending reinstatement of M. Emshanov as manager and M. Esimont as assistant manager of the railway.

He appointed M. Simanovsky, foreign office agent at the border point Kharovskii as official representative of the soviet government to conduct further negotiations with Mukden.

OKLAHOMA BANK FAILINGS ARE DUE TO "FROZEN ASSETS"

OKLAHOMA CITY, Nov. 27.—(AP)—A dozen Oklahoma banks failed to open their doors today following upon the death last night of H. A. McCauley, 55, former mayor of Sapulpa and board member of thirteen banks in the state.

Graves Shull, Oikahoma bank commissioner, who placed the banks in charge of examiners, attributed their failure to "frozen assets." Their total deposits as of October 4 were $3,520,976, and their capital stock aggregated $210,000.

McCauley, who wore down his health struggling desperately to avert the failure of the institutions, which had been crippled in the deflation period of 1920, was in Tulsa yesterday attempting to float a loan with which to carry the Sapulpa State bank over the crisis. C. J. Alexander, assistant state bank commissioner in charge of this bank, said he was unsuccessful.

ILLEGAL TO RAID HOMES WITHOUT SEARCH WARRANT

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 27.—(AP)— Federal Judge J. W. Woodrough declared here today that protection of the inalienable rights of the American citizen is more important than "easy enforcement" of the prohibition law, in an opinion holding that federal agents cannot enter a home without a search warrant. The opinion will be filed tomorrow, the judge said.

The judge had dismissed indictments against two men charged with operation of a still. They were returned after federal agents testified they "smelled cooking mash, heard of the roar of the burners and saw part of the still through an open doorway." The agents raided the house without a search warrant.

BELIEVE CASEY AND MRS. BINGHAM WERE MURDERED

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 27.—(AP)—Chief of Police Louis Grandmont, of Spencer, today added zest to the police inquiry into the deaths of James J. Casey, superintendent of Worcesters police detectives, and Mrs. Dora Bingham, by expressing the opinion that the couple had been murdered.

Their bodies were found Monday in a summer camp of Casey's in Spencer. A bottle which had contained liquor and a small glass containing a quantity of a salty liquid were the only clues.

MAURETANIA COLLIDED WITH FLOAT IN N. Y. HARBOR

NEW YORK, Nov. 27—(AP)—The Cunard liner Mauretania, outward bound for Europe, collided tonight with a car float off Robbins Reef in New York harbor. The Cunard line offices announced the vessel was stopped off Quarantine to determine what damage had been done, if any.

A Coast Guard cutter prepared to take the car float in tow and a police launch was sent to the scene to give any assistance that might be necessary.

The Mauretania sailed at 11 o'clock tonight with an unusually large passenger list for this time of year. She carried 300 passengers in first class, 170 in second and 400 in third.

WESTERLY

EMBERS AT BRADFORD FIRE MENACE AS WIND CHANGES

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Nov. 27—Following the disastrous fire at Bradford Tuesday night when the plant of the Bradford Box and Shook Co. was destroyed, the frame building and piles of lumber stored outside being burned, a change of wind fanned the embers and stirred up sparks, so that adjoining property was again threatened. Although the pumper and firemen had returned to Westerly, they were re-called by telephone to Bradford by Raymond C. Vars, when the property of John Currie was again in danger. So brilliant was the sky illumination from the building of some 150 feet by 50 feet, which was a mass of flames from end to end that motorists approaching Westerly from Norwich reported seeing the blaze as far away as Hallville, but due to the peculiar atmospheric conditions as they came nearer to Westerly the fire seemed to be even more remote.

THANKSGIVING JAMBOREE HELD BY ALERT H. & L. CO.

A firemen's jamboree held Thanksgiving eve in the auditorium of Westerly town hall was largely attended. The Alert Hook and Ladder company, sponsors of the event, had originally planned to stage their party in the Dixon street armory and after the permission for its use had been obtained made arrangements to have the occasion one of the largest of its kind. But a short time ago the state department found that there had been a previous leasing by the South County Poultry and Pet Stock association for its annual exhibition and the firemen's permit to use the armory on this date was cancelled.

Nov. 26, John Rosso sold to John Giannoni and wife, Ida Giannoni, land on the north side of Cross street. Lot No. 37, plan of land of Susan A. Vose, deeded to grantor Sept. 26, 1925, by James O. Lynch.

About 10 o'clock Wednesday morning the fire whistle alarm of the Pawcatuck fire department was sounded for Box No. 62, Liberty street and Stillman avenue for a fire at the rear of the Liberty street lockup. George C. Clark and two men of the Pawcatuck highway department were engaged in heating some tar in drums when the tar spilled over into the fire and became ignited sending up great clouds of black smoke. As a matter of precaution from an explosion the fire alarm was sounded and the cities service truck of the Pawcatuck department was driven down the driveway between the Liberty street fire station and the lockup but its service was not needed. Workmen with the aid of shovels and sand from a large pile near the mixing machine were able to subdue the blaze without damage. The recall was sounded within fifteen minutes.

Pawcatuck lodge, No. 90, F. and A. M., Robert D. Vennard, worshipful master, held a special communication Wednesday evening in Masonic hall. Work in the Fellowcraft degree was conferred upon a class by Senior Warden Raymond E. Pendleton and lodge officers. The special communication in December will complete the work of the lodge year and the 67th annual communication of the lodge will be held later in December when officers will be installed by Past Master Harry Sutcliffe, assisted by M. W. Arthur N. Nash as grand marshal.

JOE WALSH WALKED HOME WHEN YALE LOST TO HARVARD

Lawrence Sullivan and Joe Walsh, well known sports, who take in all the college football games, had two pasteboards to the Yale-Harvard game in Massachusetts. Sullivan wanted to make a queer bet. He was pulling for John Harvard's forward pass boys to win, while Walsh was holding out for Eli Yale, with Little Boy Blue in the lineup. Sullivan said if Harvard lost he would wear a beard until the ground hog sees it shadow in February and would be like one of the cough drop twins. Walsh told his pal if Little Boy Blue Booth could not beat Harvard single-handed he would walk from Boston to Noank in his bare feet, with a sign on his back. Several fellows were there and heard the bets. Friday afternoon in Huck Taylor's big brown sedan with E. Hiscock in the back seat as a judge to see who was to pay the bet and Taylor at the wheel, they started for the big game, getting their places in Soldiers field Saturday afternoon. The first quarter both men were wearing a smile for both teams could not score. But in the next quarter Woods and Mays got going on the air line and soon put the Boys in Red ahead. Sullivan was kidding Walsh, but he said: "Wait until Booth goes in!" That good right foot of Woods soon put the pigskin over the bar for three points for a score of 10 to 0. Hiscock said, "What a headache for the Bull Dog!" In the third quarter Booth, small as Charles Ellis, the smallest fireman in Noank, was rushed in to play, tried a dropkick and failed. But he made a long run and with only one player between him and the promised land. But the Yale flash was stopped, and at the end of the great battle the score was Harvard 10, Yale 6. So Smiling Joe Walsh had to pay a bet. Taking off his No. 9's, throwing them in the auto and with a sign on his back which read: "I bet on Yale and lost," started on his way and the people on the sidewalks loaded with Saturday night packages had to stop and see the parade. Smiling along was the loser, his feet hard as iron on the cold ground with the home car behind. He was given a big cheer along the line. He looked like Tom Sawyer in Boyhood Days, getting into Providence at a late hour they stopped at the Union station where several special trains stopped. He was cheered by the Yale fans for several minutes. His corn was a little sore, so Sullivan said, "You can put on your shoes, Joe, now!" "No, I will pay the bet the way I made it!" "How is the ground?" Taylor said. "All right! But the November air tickles my toes."

STONINGTON

St. Mary's branch of the L. C. B. A. met in the Holy Ghost society home Wednesday evening.

Manager Jack Findlay of the United theater has invited the winning squad in the annual Thanksgiving football game between Stonington and Westerly High schools to the evening performance on Thursday. The invitation has been extended through Coach Leo Smith of Stonington and Coach D. Harold Rogers of Westerly, each accepting. In the event of a tie Mr. Findlay will entertain both teams.

COLDS MAY DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

CREOMULSION

FOR THE COUGH FROM COLDS THAT HANG ON

Getting a few hours sleep to make the final half, by morning he was going strong. "Boy, oh, boy!" Hiscock said. "He must be a sword-walker in a circus to stand it!" Reaching Stonington late in the afternoon, several people noticed a man walking in his bare feet and said, "Keep it up! It won't be long now!" "Gee!" a red-headed kid hollered, "I am sorry Yale lost." "So am I," Smiling Walsh came back with the answer, still making knots like a Scotsman treating his girl to a cheese sandwich, down the home stretch with his goal in sight and feet sore. It was around 8 o'clock by the clock at Sardine hall, and about 75 people greeted him and cheered and cheered as Smiling Walsh stopped at the hall. For his bet was all paid. Sullivan shook his hand and said, "You are a good sport to carry out the bet!" "Well," Walsh claims, "I will get even and get the laugh on you yet!" So bound for home where a rabbit supper was waiting for him, he took the rest with him and they claim it was a good week end spent. It happens to be Sullivan's birthday and Joe's sister Peggy made a large birthday cake with 23 candles. The good right hand of Huck Taylor cut it and they all sang "Good Bye, Joe and Good Luck." Walsh soaked his feet in pepper water so he would not get the November grip and went to bed, for the bet was paid until next year when Harvard and Yale meet again.

DANIELSON

MISAISZEK TO FACE MANSLAUGHTER CHARGE FRIDAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Nov. 27—Martin Misaiszek of Putnam will appear in the town court here Friday morning at 10 o'clock to face a charge of manslaughter. This charge grows out of the death of Thomas Moran, Sr., an aged Danielson man who died of injuries received when he was struck by the car of a hit and run driver near Danielson on a Saturday night in October.

Misaiszek was arrested shortly after the accident as he was driving his car through Grove street in Putnam by Sergeant George Laird of the Putnam police, was locked up at the police station and later turned over to the custody of the state police of the Danielson barracks. Putnam city and state officers have alleged that Misaiszek was intoxicated at the time. The accident happened on October 19. At a hearing wherein the complaint alleged driving while intoxicated and evading responsibility following an accident in the town court here a few days after the accident the proceedings came to an abrupt end, for the time being, when Attorney Irving H. Miron of Putnam, representing Misaiszek, demanded the production in court of a confession his client was alleged to have made to state officers on the night of the accident. The state officers who appeared as witnesses were unable to produce it, as it was in the custody of Lieut. Ross V. Urquhart, who at the time was temporarily absent from Danielson. The hearing was then adjourned and resumed on November 6. Failure of witnesses to put Misaiszek "on the spot" where the accident occurred led to Judge W. Fenner Woodward finding Misiaszek not guilty on the evading responsibility charge. The court found him guilty of driving while intoxicated and because of the aggravated circumstances surrounding the case bound him over to the superior court instead of imposing the usual fine of $100 and costs.

It was indicated today that Harry Stevens and Rudolph Lapointe, each of whom received a sentence of six months in jail in the Killingly town court Tuesday may appeal to the superior court. This word came through to court officials today from the men, now locked up at Brooklyn. The men, both residents of East Killingly, pleaded guilty to stripping a sawmill engine, owned by Jonothan Smith of East Killingly, of valves, brass fittings, bearings and babbitting, the material they stole having a value of about $225. Under the law in cases of theft of this magnitude they are liable to a maximum sentence of five years each in prison. Stevens and Lapointe sold the materials in Providence, from which city the bulk of the plunder has been recovered. They have 48 hours from the time they were sentenced to file an appeal to the superior court.

In many homes in Danielson today housewives were busy with their preparations for the entertainment of Thanksgiving guests, numbers of whom arrived here this afternoon and evening, in some instances to remain until Sunday. Danielson will have a typically old-fashioned Thanksgiving. There is to be a union sunrise service at the Methodist Episcopal church at 6 o'clock. Thereafter the day will be one of happy reunion around comfortable firesides, bountiful dinners and restful recreation. There will be little of frivolity in the observance here.

An informal questioning of heads of business houses here would tend to indicate that a majority of Danielson's business men still hesitate over the proposition to keep the stores open Wednesday evenings instead of Monday evenings, as has been the custom for many years. Yet there are those who do favor the change. The subject is one likely to receive consideration at the December meeting of the chamber of commerce.

This afternoon at the funeral home of A. F. Wood on Mechanic street funeral service for Mrs. Aurelia Horton of Central Village were conducted by Rev. George H. Reese, pastor of the Congregational church at that place. Among those attending the service was a delegation from Lucy Webb Hayes circle, Ladies of the G. A. R. and at its close conducted the ritualistic service of the organization, the members participating being Mrs. Mary Smith, Mrs. Jennie Ladd and Mrs. Mary Rowey. Burial was in Westfield cemetery. The bearers were George Pray, a nephew of Mrs. Horton's, Willis Torrey, Wilfred Lawson and John Fletcher.

Christmas seals will go on sale here next Monday, and will continue through until the holiday. As in other recent years, the sales management here will be under the auspices of the Civic federation, the splendid record of which organization is a matter of local pride. Mrs. Agnes H. Paine will direct th ework. The Civic federation will share in the proceeds from the sale of the stamps.

After considerable uncertainty as to where the annual football game between the teams of Killingly high and Putnam high should be played, the field at Putnam high being in unsuitable condition, it was announced this afternoon that the contest will take place at Adams field, Putnam, starting at 10 o'clock Thanksgiving morning.

Town Clerk and Mrs. Frank T. Preston are spending Thanksgiving with Mr. and Mrs. Earle Young in Providence.

Advance announcement is made that Miss Mary Garner of Pleasant Hill academy, Tennessee, will address the members of the Westfield Woman's association on December 17.

The fire department was called to extinguish a chimney fire at a house owned by Luther Pilling on Furnace street. The property sustained no damage.

Miss Jeanette B. Lacroix of Fall River is spending the Thanksgiving holiday with relatives and friends in Danielson.

Open weather is permitting of the continuance of work on the new state-aid highway from Brooklyn to Pomfret. The work is far advanced and traffic moves over it with few handicaps to drivers.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Witter of Broad street are to be dinner guests of Riley B. Witter and Mr. and Mrs. George Witter in Brooklyn Thanksgiving day.

Next week the annual effort to raise a fund to buy Christmas dinners for the needy and worthy will get underway in Danielson. This work has been done each Christmas time for years and has invariably appealed to many generous persons.

Miss Marion D. Chollar is spending Thanksgiving with relatives in New Haven.

Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Wood will have Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Thayer and members of their family of Putnam as Thanksgiving day guests.

Miss Georgia Burroughs of Bristol is spending the holiday with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. George M. Burroughs of Broad street.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Head and members of their family of Winsted are in Danielson to spend Thanksgiving with the Misses Head of Academy street.

There was dancing tonight until midnight at Rum-Along-Inn on the West side and dancing fro mmidnight until 4 a. m. Thanksgiving morning at the state armory.

Mr. and Mrs. John B. Bassett of Broad street will be among those from Danielson attending the Brown-Colgate game at Providence Thanksgiving day.

William Reynolds, foreman of the line crew of the S. N. E. Telephone company operating out of Danielson, was in New Haven today for a conference of holders of similar positions with the company throughout the state and executives of the organization.

The practice of sending Thanksgiving cards appears to have grown this year. Hundreds of such cards came to Danielson through the mails and hundreds more were sent from here.

Extra coaches were being used today to care for the overland tide of travel on the Providence-Hartford route through Danielson and on the Boston-New York bus line through here.

A number of teachers in Killingly's schools who are non-residents left here this afternoon to spend the holiday recess at their homes in various places in New England.

JEWETT CITY

CARRIER DELIVERY SERVICE FROM LOCAL OFFICE SOON

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, Nov. 27.—Postmaster William T. Crumb received today the final ratification of his plans for the establishment of city carrier delivery service for his office. The cases for use by the carriers are already here and bids are out for the placing of the letter boxes. These will be the regulation city type and will be for the reception of all properly stamped mail matter. Collections will be made twice each day by the carriers. These boxes will be placed at Ashland street near the mill, at David Hale Fanning park, at North Main street and Brown avenue, and East Main and Brown avenue, at Green avenue and Aspinook street, at Mechanic and Mathewson streets, and in South Main street, near Lisbon bridge. The two carriers are to be appointed from the qualified office force and will be Dennis Sullivan and Leo Gilbert. Ed Barry, now a certified government clerk, will fill the vacancy in the postoffice. An examination will become necessary to determine the eligibles from whom to select a substitute carrier and an uncertified clerk for emergency duty on the postoffice force. Mr. Crumb has set forth to the department the unavoidable delay that must occur in handling the increased volume of holiday parcel post mail, with the result that a room in the rear of the postoffice has been rented in the Finn block, for December. The two carrier routes will serve about 3,000 people twice each day, on what will amount to 306 days each year. Regulated by office revenue and population served, the local system will be classed as city service with the carrier remuneration.

The recently organized Hunters' and Trappers' Association of Connecticut held a largely attended meeting in the town hall Tuesday evening. Included in the assemblage of close to 40 members of the woodsmen's craft were those interested in promoting any measures that are of interest to the local sportsmen. Among other benefits that are to be sought, is the securing of legislation looking toward the establishment of fair and reasonable game laws. During the evening, there were brief addresses by several of the members. Several new members were taken in, with others expected locally and from Voluntown.

PUTNAM

MUCH NEW CONSTRUCTION WORK BEING DONE HERE

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 27.—This city has and will continue to contribute highly to Connecticut's part in President Hoover's endeavor to stimulate construction of public works and buildings involving the expenditure of upwards of $25,000,000 during 1930, as was announced this morning in press dispatches. On the completion of a few remaining details of a technical nature and the arrival of favorable weather the city will begin the task of reconstruction of the city water supply system, a municipal improvement which will require the expenditure of upwards of $23,000 at the present, to be followed by further improvement at a future date. It is expected that this project will afford employment for many local people.

Putnam conceived the Hoover idea months ago. During the summer months three building projects of importance were begun, namely: The Cargill Trust Co.'s bank building, the Beacon Oil Co.'s plant and the Miour block on lower Main street. A month ago work was launched on the razing of the old Central block to make room for the erection of two modern business structures on this site in the heart of the business section. The combined value of all buildings now under construction, when completed, will have involved the expenditure of thousands of dollars. Already scores of men have been given employment, necessitating more help as building programmes expand.

After January 1, employment will be given to about 100 people here with the opening of the silk manufacturing plant of M. Salzberg & Co., on Canal street, where machinery is now being installed.

At 4:45 o'clock Tuesday afternoon the signature of Mayor Charles A. Richard was affixed to a contract for the erection of the one million gallon steel tank, part of the programme for the reconstruction of the water system. The chief executive of the city signed the document in the presence of Ernest C. Morse, corporation counsel, and Ralph E. Thurston, chairman of the board of water commissioners. The contract will be awarded to the Chicago Bridge & Iron works, who will fulfill the provisions set forth within the paper at a cost of $22,500. An official of the Chicago firm was present at the signing. An additional contract for the building of the foundation will be awarded to Mauro & Angentiere of Providence. This incidental cost cannot be estimated at the present exactly. The price for labor is given at $4,182. Cement to be used is priced at $2.50 a barrel and extra excavation will cost $1.50 a cubic yard. The work must be finished in 35 working days from the date it is begun, according to terms of the contract.

Mayor Richard is insistent that work should be started as soon as possible and continue until the arrival of adverse weather conditions. It was suggested by several council members that the launching of construction in regards to the water project be delayed until spring.

Edward J. Carpenter, a lifelong resi-dent of this city, died this morning at his home on Killingly avenue. Mr. Carpenter was 75 years of age. A few hours before his sudden death, Mr. Carpenter had been active about the house. About 9 o'clock he went to the bath room and was stricken by a heart attack. He died a few minutes later. THANKSGIVING

We have once more reached that season of the year when we emulate our forefathers in enumerating and giving thanks for our blessings. Conditions on the first Thanksgiving day and today bear no resemblance. Each day has its own setting and we today must be governed by our surroundings quite the same as those early settlers but because great changes have taken place and because we today enjoy so many advantages doesn't mean that we should be remiss in our expressions of thankfulness.

It should be remembered, as has been well said, that "We give thanks for material blessings, for abundant harvests, for wide diffusion of comfort, for this thrilling age of rapid progress in science, in knowledge, in a better understanding of the universe, for the lines fallen unto us in pleasant places, for our goodly heritage. We give thanks for home, for friends, for memories that we hold precious; for all that flood of good things that have come to us as children of a favored land. But if we have an understanding heart we give thanks still more that, no matter what our station or achievement, we can exclaim with the great apostle that we count not ourselves to have apprehended, but this one thing we do, forgetting those things which are behind and reaching forth unto those things which are before us, we press forward."

Even as in the early days, we have reasons for expressing our thanks to an All-Wise Providence for the many things which we receive, many of which we are inclined to accept as a matter of course.

Well directed is the thought that there is not enough popularly observed Thanksgiving days during the year. There are so many occasions for the expression of our gratitude that many of them slip by without attention. Even as individuals we are prone to neglect our duty in this respect and yet we must not forget that "Gratitude is the open door through which we enter into true peace and happiness, and this must find its rightful expression in unselfishness and consideration for others. Into the thought filled with gratitude, envy, malice, hatred and jealousy can find no entrance."

Thus, true gratitude is a powerful factor in bringing peace and harmony to all mankind; a worthwhile thought for reflection on Thanksgiving day especially, but also on every day of the year.

SHOWS PUBLIC APPRECIATION

While due allowance must be made for the newness of the thing and the popular craze to be one of the first to get a look, it is, nevertheless, being fully demonstrated that the large structures which have been completed this year for the accommodation of the motoring public are more than likely to be successful from a financial standpoint.

Although these are not the only important highway bridges that have been finished this year, those across Lake Champlain, from Bristol to Newport, R. I., and from Detroit to Canada have come in for much attention for various reasons and the huge number using them thus far indicates the interest in the accommodations afforded.

At Detroit, tremendous traffic has been experienced, especially at week ends, so much so that progress has been slow in making the crossing and return, but it is apparent that it has opened up a route that is going to be more popular than crossings by vessels at that point.

The Rhode Island bridge was favored with such a jam at the time of opening that many who wanted to cross had to be turned onto other routes. Though they may have been sightseeing for the most part, there is no question but what that route is going to get an increased amount of traffic because of the elimination of the ferry with its delay and inconvenience.

For three months the Lake Champlain bridge has been doing business and it is reported that it has brought in tolls of $30,000 or twice what was anticipated for that period and the natural inference is that it meets the requirements of a large volume of motor travel and points to the wisdom of the decision that resulted in the construction of that quick means of crossing.

Inasmuch as the proof of the pudding lies in the testing, there is good reason for believing from the brief tests that have been made that no mistake was made in the building of these toll bridges. Certainly the public is not holding any resentment against them when it rushes in such numbers to participate in their advantages. The toll bridge of the present day invariably represents the replacement of slow and exasperating methods of getting from one side of a body of water to another by quick and easy crossing, and it is this accommodation which the motoring public welcomes and is more ready to pay for than the services of a slow and cramped ferry. It will not be surprising if the financial reports of these toll bridges make a showing in keeping therewith a year from now.

CONNECTICUT WILL HELP

That Connecticut is going to respond in the right way to the appeal of President Hoover for the expediting of public works is clearly set forth in the communication by Governor Trumbull. The governor finds the idea to his liking and hastens to disclose that it is the state's intention to get busy with such projects as it has in mind without delay.

That is the right sort of cooperation and it means that the state is going to be instrumental in undertaking construction that will result in the expenditure of more than $5,000,000. This will include the start on the new insane hospital at Newtown for the accommodation of the western part of the state and to which the state can be expected to give its attention in the way of new construction for such purposes for the immediate future, and there will also be the new state office building at Hartford. While these buildings have been contemplated and provided for, every effort will be made to have the work help to reduce any unemployment at the present time.

But, further than that, there will be the road construction programme, including maintenance and new construction, which will be advanced as rapidly as conditions will permit in view of weather conditions. This in itself will almost double the outlay that will be made for state buildings.

In addition to these projects the governor has interested himself in learning what may be expected from the cities of the state in the way of new construction and it is probable that it will not be small. The governor has acted promptly and in the manner that was to be expected and there are reasons to believe that Connecticut will do its part in meeting the present situation.

In this connection it is a pertinent statement which is made by President Trumbull of the Connecticut chamber of commerce. He is confident that "the business men, and particularly the industrial people, can offset" the impairment of the inclination to buy goods and declares that the volume of orders flowing into the state is normal. The need, he believes, is "to have business of every sort in the state to go forward steadily and actively" and in believing that can be accomplished he advises: "Advertising should not be curtailed. Sales programmes should be pushed vigorously. Plant and equipment programmes should go forward uninterruptedly. Curtailed spending at this time will reflect itself immediately in curtailed manufacturing. I urge, therefore, that we continue to buy and to spend and to advertise as usual to the end that business may go forward without interruption."

There is food for serious thought in that appeal and advice by a manufacturer that unquestionably hits the nail on the head. Connecticut can be relied upon to do its part.

CONSTRUCTION SAFEGUARDS

Perhaps you have watched the construction of buildings and the raising of material while the public in considerable numbers was running about underneath, quite as if nothing unusual was going on. And in observance of such conditions you may have wondered what would be the result if something happened and the load should fall.

Such things do happen and the results all depend upon just what is involved in the way of load and the uncertainty which guides it in case of trouble. Great weights have gone crashing through many floors, causing wreckage wherever the struck and causing death and injury to those who happened to be in the way.

Only a few days ago in New York a four-ton stone was being raised to the working floor of a new building. It was being lifted on the outside with the street below filled with people throughout the day. When it got to the 15th story the cable broke and the descent of that stone was faster than its ascent. It was not a promising outlook for those below and there was not much of an opportunity to warn the people and get them to a place of safety. The law of gravitation doesn't suspend operations for any such purposes. But when it got to the seventh floor for some unknown reason it turned in its drop and went into the building and shifted its menace from the public on the street below to the workmen in the building and the building itself.

Such accidents emphasize anew the peril surrounding construction work. Perhaps the wonder is that more accidents do not happen and that the provisions that are made to prevent them are so successful, and yet there is good reason for expecting that the proper margin of safety shall be maintained for those who pass below. Machinery, cables and chains undergo wear with use. They are no stronger than their weakest places and it is apparent that they should undergo frequent and thorough inspection. The test with that four-ton stone proved that the cable was not sufficient for the strain placed upon it, but that was not the place in which it should have been tested in any such manner. The alternative to safe hoisting apparatus is to keep the public away from any and all construction jobs.

EDITORIAL NOTES

May those who have been long anticipating the turkey be not disappointed.

There is no more popular day for the family gatherings than Thanksgiving.

Don't fail to do justice to that turkey, especially if it was a Connecticut product.

Thanksgiving day, but even though it is a great feast day bear in mind there are other days coming.

The man on the corner says: Many people are going to overlook the fact that Thanksgiving is a time for giving thanks.

Is Norwich planning to build an airport or an industrial building for the furtherance of the president's construction programme?

Thanksgiving is always a pertinent time for expressing your thanks by giving a bit of help and cheer to the less fortunate.

THE STORY OF THANKSGIVING DAY

Thanksgiving day is the oldest of American national festivities. Independence day, though coeval with and commemorative of our national natal day, boasts only a respectable antiquity of a century and a half, but another century and a half must be added to carry us backward to the historical origin of the day that we have nationally dedicated to prayer and thanksgiving—to the days of bluff Governor Bradford and to the first struggling colony of heroic pilgrims. It was in this cradle of our commonwealth that the observance of a day of thanks was first nurtured on our soil, though its inspiration was brought from lands across the seas and probably threaded human history back to the plains of Palestine when the psalmists of Israel praised the Lord in song for the bounties of earth.

First Thanksgiving.

Benjamin Franklin tells us that, in a time of great despondency among the first settlers of New England, it was proposed in one of their public meetings to proclaim a fast. An aged farmer arose and spoke of their provoking Heaven with their complaints and of the many mercies they had already received and of the many causes they had for thanksgiving. He then made a motion that instead of appointing a day of fasting, they should appoint a day of thanksgiving. To this the assembly agreed.

The first Thanksgiving day was kept amid circumstances most unpropitious and with gaunt famine hovering over the rude and cheerless dwellings of that little colony. The summer of 1621, following the landing at Plymouth, yielded but a scanty harvest and unless speedy supplies came from Europe the sturdy Colonists foresaw that they would be reduced to the point of starvation. Yet, amid such surroundings as these, we learn from the old chronicles that Governor Bradford, "the harvest being gotten in, sent four men out on fowling, so that we might, after a more special manner, rejoice together after we had gathered the fruits of our labors." And thus:

While sickness lurked and death assailed
And foes beset on every hand, the first governor of New England instituted the American arvest Home and celebrated the first New England Thanksgiving day.

Many "Thankful Days."

The old Colonial records also tell of the appointment of Thanksgiving days, for various causes, in Massachusetts Bay colony, in the years 1633, 1634, 1637, 1638, and 1639. In Plymouth colony similiar publicly declared observances took place in 1651, 1668 and in 1680, when the tenor of the proclamation seems to indicate that it had then become a settled yearly custom.

The Massachusetts Bay colony was the first to appoint an annual Thanksgiving day by the proclamation of the English governor. During the Revolution, Thanksgiving day became a national American institution, being annually recommended by congress, but after the general thanksgiving for peace in 1784, there was no national appointment until 1798, when Washington, by request of congress, recommended a day of thanksgiving for the adoption of the Constitution. Washington issued a second proclamation of thanksgiving in 1795, on account of the suppression of insurrection. President Madison, by request of congress, recommended a thanksgiving for peace in 1815, at the conclusion of the War of 1812. But the official recommendation of a day for the giving of thanks was mainly confined to New England, until 1817, after which date it was regularly appointed also by the governor of New York. The Dutch governors of the New Netherlands had proclaimed thanksgiving days in 1644, 1645, 1646, and 1664 and in 1755 and 1760 a day was similiarly designated by the English governor of New York.

Annual Proclamations

During the Civil war, in 1863 and 1864, President Lincoln issued proclamations recommending annual thanksgivings, and since then a proclamation has been issued annually by the president of the United States as well as by the governors of the several states and the mayors of American cities.

Custom has fixed the time for Thanksgiving day as the last Thursday in November, but up to 1864 there was no uniformity as to the date of the observance and presidents and governors followed no fixed rules in setting a day apart, each state deciding its own Thanksgiving day. Thanksgiving day was long in settling down to its present fixity of day and season. It is on record that one prudent municipality of the old time once postponed the celebration of the day for a week, "in order to get molasses with which to sweeten the pumpkin pies."

YOUR HEALTH

What About Candy?

By Samuel J. Crumbine, M. D.
Geperal Executive, American Child Health Association
New York
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

"Sugar produces energy," says a mother in defensive explanation of the candy her child is eating between meals. She is expounding eagerly the knowledge she has gained from the latest glowing advertisement, and goes on to her next proof: "My children are intensely active and spend their energy so violently. That's why I think good, pure candy is good for them. Besides, I think a craving for candy is natural."

"Of course, dear madam, your children are active and it's perfectly true that they spend more energy than you or most adults do. Your children wouldn't be normal if they didn't. But, nevertheless, you haven't come to the right conclusions about candy between meals."

"Do you really think it's bad for them to have candy? Wouldn't you give them any?"

"Yes," I tell her, "I'd give them a little now and then as a treat, just as parents have always given it, but not very much.

"You made three particular points in defense of candy. First you said that candy produces energy. Second you said that your active children spend a great deal of energy. And third, you said that a craving for sweets is natural. Well, the natural craving for sweets of which you speak is a craving for them as they are found in natural foods, in fruits, in the juices of many vegetables and in the sap of certain trees."

"But what is the difference between that kind of sweet and any other?"

"The difference is great and important. These juices of fruits and vegetables contain mineral elements and vitamins, and it is those contents that make the food valuable. Their sweetness is really just an added attractiveness."

"But what about the energy sugar produces? Why isn't that a good thing for children who spend so much energy?"

"Candy or sweet things spoil a child's appetite. You don't need me to tell you that, for you've certainly found it out by experiment. And you would not want to supply your growing children with energy at the expense of feeding them foods which build bones, teeth and muscles—in short all the tissues of the body. These are the foods which provide for growth and for the repair of the waste that is very great in normal active children.

"These building and repairing foods are called proteins, fats, carbohydrates, mineral elements, and vitamins. Every one of these is necessary and your children will actually suffer if there is a deficiency of any one of them. That is why it is dangerous for a mother to let her child eat too much sweets which destroy their appetites and take the place of more important needs."

"Well," says the mother, "how shall I satisfy my children's love of sweet things?"

"A moderate amount of jam will be good for them. They will like it and the fruit content will serve a valuable purpose in their diet. Ice cream is good for them. It is one way of feeding them extra milk which is by far the most important of the protective foods. As for sugar and candy, my advice to you is to use them with great care and to use them sparingly."

"Yes," says the mother, "I do know you are right. I wish you would tell this to the other mothers."

So, other mothers, I have given you a few of the important reasons why sweets cannot be given lavishly to children.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27—With two cabinet officers, three ambassadors and two senators composing the American delegation to the London naval conference, there will be no lack of official pomp and circumstance about the group.

Add to that one admiral and one rear admiral, retired, as chief naval advisers, and an abundance of naval gold braid or its political and diplomatic equivalent is indicated.

Ambassador Hugh Gibson, haled from Brussels for the job, is a veteran of veterans at armament conference work.

His experience goes back to the Washington original parley. He was a member of the technical advisory group named by President Harding.

Since then he has represented the United States at every league of nations arms pow-wow in Geneva; promoted the fruitless three-power naval conference there and headed the American delegation; laid the ground work for the Hoover-inspired London conference, and twice visited London to confer with Ambassador Dawes in working up to the Hoover-MacDonald meetings.

If there is value in experience, Gibson should be an important figure at London in January.

A Navy Veteran.

The other most veteran naval treaty conferee is Admiral Pratt. He also dates back to the Washington conference where, as a captain on duty with the general board, he shared honors with Admiral Coontz, now retired but then chief of naval operations, as expert advisers to Secretary Hughes and his delegation colleagues.

Pratt is not only a seasoned officer but of a studious turn of mind. And he can give the American group at London valuable background when the fuss about 10,000 ton "Washington treaty cruisers" comes up for solution. Pratt had a good deal to do with fixing the size and armament of this new type of ship, unless the Bystander's memory is at fault.

Addition to Rear Adm. (retired) Hilary Jones to the expert naval adviser contingent fills out gaps in Pratt's conference experience. Jones shared with Gibson all the subsequent doings at Geneva in relation to naval limitations problems.

Others Are New.

Other than that, the American delegation is new at naval conference work. Secretary Stimson, its chief, recognized that fact immediately after the Hoover-MacDonald conferences made definite plans for the London meeting.

He has been sitting at the feet of naval experts all his spare moments since then, boning up, as they would say at college. Not only that, Mr. Stimson recognized that his delegation colleagues would need much instruction in so technical a subject to be useful at London, so he set the state and navy departments to preparing handbooks for their use, complete in historical and technical data.

Addition of Secretary Adams to the delegation makes sure of parity in rank at London so far as civilian personnel is concerned; just as Pratt's four stars put him on rank equality with any other naval officer who may figure in the picture.

And in selection of Ambassador Morrow to round out the delegation, President Hoover may have considered experience in international banking an asset.

Or again, he may have had Morrow's undoubted achievement in smoothing out Mexican-American relations in mind. Either reason for the selection would be logical.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Lightfoot's Thanksgiving.

By Thornton W. Burgess.

You'll find it true that in some way
There's cause for thanks in every day.
—Lightfoot the Deer.

Lightfoot the Deer had fled from the Green Forest. Two strange dogs had wandered into the Green Forest and found his trail. They were hounds. Of course, they had the wonderful noses that hounds have. It was no trouble at all for them to follow Lightfoot's trail. He had made straight for the pond of Paddy the Beaver, which is as you know deep in the Green Forest. He plunged in and swam across. On the other side he hid in a thicket from which he could watch and see what would happen.

He didn't have to wait long. The two hounds, baying as only hounds can on the trail, burst out onto the shore of Paddy's pond. They were running with their noses to the ground. This brought them straight to where Lightfoot had entered the water.

The two dogs lifted their heads and looked across the pond. Lightfoot was nowhere to be seen. They began to run in a circle to see if they could pick up his trail anywhere. Of course, they couldn't. Then those two dogs separated, one starting around Paddy's pond one way, and in the opposite direction the other started around the pond. Of course, they kept their noses to the ground.

Lightfoot waited no longer. As quietly as possible he stole away and soon was running again. He was headed toward the Great Mountain. Meanwhile the dogs were running with their noses to the ground. They knew that sooner or later one of them would find Lightfoot's scent near where he had left the water. Sure enough, it wasn't long before the voice of one of those dogs went ringing through the Green Forest and the other hurried to join him. Then the two voices could be heard together, growing fainter and fainter, until as they reached the Great Mountain the sound could no longer be heard in the Green Forest.

Now, Lightfoot the Deer hadn't wanted to leave the Green Forest. He did it because he wanted to get those dogs away. He was afraid they might run across the trail of Mrs. Lightfoot and the twins. For this same reason, Lightfoot would not return to the Green Forest until he had led those dogs as far away as possible.

Those two dogs hung on. They were not easily discouraged. You see, they were the kind of dogs that would rather hunt than eat. Poor Lightfoot! He began to think that they would outlast him. He tried all the tricks of which he knew, but in vain. Each time one dog or the other would find his trail again and once more he would hear those voices rolling out behind him. All that day they chased him. 'Way into the night they chased him. Finally, in a little pond on the Great Mountain Lightfoot managed to break his trail.

He plunged in and swam across

When at last Lightfoot knew that the dogs had given up he crept into a thicket and there he lay panting, so tired that it seemed to him he never could get up again. For more than a week Lightfoot was on the Great Mountain and all that time hunters with terrible guns were looking for him. One of them had caught a glimpse of him and had shot at him, and the word had gone forth among the hunters that a deer with a wonderful head of antlers was on the Great Mountain. Lightfoot grew thin with worry. He never felt safe. How he did long to be back in the Green Forest! But every time he tried to work back that way, a hunter was sure to appear and Lightfoot would have to turn.

At last there came a moonlight night. Lightfoot traveled swiftly. Just as day was breaking he slipped into the familiar and dear Green Forest. Straight on he went to his favorite thicket and there he lay down. All day his heart was filled with thanksgiving. No hunter dared come into the Green Forest, for hunters were not allowed there. Several times far away in the distance Lightfoot heard the bang of terrible guns. Each time he was more thankful that he was back. And though he didn't know it, it was Thanksgiving day.

IN DAY'S NEWS

United States As World Prescription Counter

Uncle Sam on board ship in a gallon hat, stars and stripe suit, carrying a little black satchel in one hand and grasping a hypodermic needle in the other.

That is the picture that American medicinal export figures paint. Particularly is it the picture drawn by the biologicals, that is, the antitoxins, the serums and the vaccines, which have become the largest single item in the extensive ranks of the medicinals.

"American exports of biologicals are expected to top $2,000,000 in value for the first time in 1929," says a bulletin of the National Geographical society on the United States' role in fighting disease all around the world.

"Approximately one-tenth of the serums, antitoxins and vaccines for humans and animals produced in the United States now go to the near and far ends of the earth. Figures collected by the department of commerce will show during 1929 for the first time what proportion of the biologicals are for animals and what proportion for humans. Estimates for the first eight months indicate that four-fifths of the supplies go aboard to protect humans against typhoid fever, diphtheria, tetanus, (lock jaw), rabies, pneumonia, smallpox and the like. The remainder guard animals from the ravages of hog cholera, anthrax, black leg, foot and mouth disease and similar plagues.

"The intensive research work of the medical profession in the United States, the high standards of sanitation and precaution set by the Hygienic Laboratory of the U. S. Public Health Service and followed by the giant drug manufacturing companies, combine to make the United States a chief consultant when nations take sick with an epidemic disease.

Ground mummy dust from Egypt was a favorite drug of Europe until the eighteenth century and the absurdity of this remedy makes moderns smile. No more strange, but more seriously true, is the fact that the pulverized frozen spinal cords of rabbits, killed by virus in Cleveland or Indianapolis, will save the life of a Chinese bitten by a mad dog in Shanghai.

"Vaccine, serum and antitoxin production and distribution has sprung up in 25 years. Every agent of this medical group has been standardized since Pasteur's famous discovery of the vaccine to thwart rabies in 1894. Jenner, 100 years earlier, had proved that a mild case of cowpox would make a person immune from smallpox, but his application of the vaccination principle continued by rule of thumb until Pasteur made his experiments.

"While our forefathers were fighting in the Revolutionary war, 600,000 Europeans were dying annually of smallpox. Probably more American Indians died from that plague than from bullets. Everybody took it. Survivors, white or red, carried pox marks to their graves.

"A few hundred head of calves now annually save half a million Americans from death by smallpox. A few horses, standing patient in their super-sanitary stalls, contribute the serum that gives hope of blotting out the peril of diphtheria. The chances of recovery of a child or an adult taken sick with diphtheria 25 years ago were only 2 to 1; now, by virtue of the few horses a diphtheria patient's chances are 10 to 1. Medical authorities believe that proper cooperation by parents and doctors can reduce the diphtheria death rate to nil.

"Cattle, horses, snakes, rabbits and guinea pigs are the living machines of the United States biologicals industry. They manufacture precious products worth $20,000,000 annually.

"Guinea pigs deserve to be included in the list although they are rarely, if ever, producing units of the biologicals business. Guinea pigs are to biologicals what scales and chemical analyses are to other industries. New lots of serum and vaccine must be tested for quantity and quality on guinea pigs before they are released for use in human beings.

"One buys a pound of salt, a ten per cent solution of iodine and chemically certified milk, but one buys, it may be said, a guinea pig's worth of antitoxin. The antitoxin unit is defined as 'that amount of antitoxin which just suffices to protect a guinea pig of 250 grams weight against 100 times the minimal lethal dose of diphtheria toxin.'

"Vaccine, serum, and antitoxin are three confusing words. Vaccines contain limited numbers of disease-causing bacteria which are introduced into the body in such numbers that the body builds up a resistance against them and also against chance infection by similar disease bacteria. Antitoxins are antibodies contained in serum, which is lymph separated from red corpuscles of blood—usually blood from horses.

"Certain bacteria give off toxins which poison the body, as in diphtheria cases. Diphtheria, induced by man in horses, results in the creation within the horse's blood stream of antitoxins which offset the poisoning effect of the toxins. These antitoxins, drawn from a horse in serum and introducted into humans, help the human body resist the toxins originating in bacterica the body may harbor.

"The list of human ills now believed susceptible to the effects of vaccines and antitoxins lengthens yearly. It includes the familiar names already mentioned and scarlet fever, streptococcic infections, influenza, whooping cough, and others.

"At present new world countries buy most of the biologicals going into the foreign trade. The principal purchasers are Argentina, Cuba, Mexico, Spain, Canada and the United Kingdom. Other countries that look to the United States to help cure the ills of their people and their animals are: Portugal, British India, Colombia, Australia, China, Peru, Chile, Venezuela, the Philippine Islands and the Union of South Africa."

Stops That Tough Hang-On Cough That Racks Your Whole Body

For simple coughs any simple sweet sugary cough syrup will probably do.

But when you want to throw out of your system one of those old timers, that simply won't be conquered, but lingers on and on causing sleepless nights and days of torment then you've just got to have a real cough medicine.

Then you must ask your druggist for a bottle of Bronchuline Emulsion for the harder and tougher and tighter they come the more joy Bronchuline gets in knocking them out.

Bronchuline isn't a cheap cough conqueror, mind you, for first rate's are never cheap. But if you are one of the unlucky ones that a persistent, health destroying cough is pushing towards the grave, get a bottle today and notice how the first dose takes right hold and soothes the terrible soreness.

Often three or four doses bring blessed relief and half a bottle forces the most stubborn cough into submission.

"A bottle of magic" one old man calls Bronchuline Emulsion. He was all worn out and ready to give up when a friend brought him the good news about Bronchuline.

Don't let a cough hang on — it's dangerous company—Get rid of it quick. Ask Lee & Osgood Co. or any up to the times druggist for a bottle of Bronchuline Emulsion.

BALLAD OF THE BARRELS, WRITTEN BY MRS. WHITTEMORE

In connection with all that has been said about the ancient custom of barrel burning which is peculiar to Norwich, it is an interesting fact that back in November, 1896, the legend of the barrels was told in verse by Mrs. Frances Treadway Whittemore, of Elm avenue, Norwich Town. Mrs. Whittemore titled her verses "The Ballad of the Barrels."

This ballad recounts the history of the town, its picturesque location where the Yantic and Shetucket rivers meet to form the Thames, the traditions of Bean Hill, the Falls, Fast Day, and so on, until the recurrence of November, when by some mysterious process wooden barrels left anywhere except under lock and key begin to disappear. The rule of the Norwich urchins that a tarred keg must top the string of barrels on the stack, whether the pole holds six or 20, is recalled, and the festal air of the "Nine-Miles Square" on Thanksgiving night, when the crowds gather to watch the barrels ablaze on their tall poles.

PRIZE WINNERS IN SHOOT AT ARMORY

At the prize shoot at the state armory Wednesday night Harry Lathrop got first prize of a chicken with a perfect score of 54. J. Morgan was second with 46 and V. Welch who was tied with him took third on the shoot-off. H. L. Lathrop and Charles Leone were tied for low score with 5, Leone winning on the shoot-off.

Clarence Lucia won the pistol match with a score of 90, seven men competing in this.

Forty-two men shot in the rifle match.

CHARGED WITH THEFT OF HOUSE FURNISHINGS

Sebastian Stepanek, 58, was arrested Wednesday evening by the Jewett City police for the local police on a charge of theft. He was brought back to Norwich later in the evening by Sergt. Matthew Delaney and Officer Clifford Crary and locked up at police headquarters in default of bonds of $300.

Stepanek, it is said, boarded with Joseph Domdiski at No. 150 West Main street and over the last week end, while Domdiski was locked up at police headquarters on a minor charge, is said to have removed the latter's furniture from the house, after which he disappeared.

OBITUARY

Mrs. James T. Woods

The death of Mrs. Catherine E. Driscoll, wife of James T. Woods, occurred early Wednesday morning at her home, No. 10 Elmwood avenue. She was born in this city and was the daughter of John and Ellen Driscoll and had always made her home in Norwich. She was well known and highly respected by her many friends who extend their deep sympathy to the family.

Mrs. Woods was a member of St. Patrick's parish, and belonged to various organizations connected with the parish activities. Surviving are her husband, two daughters, Mrs. Richard C. Moran of Waterbury, Miss Mary G. Woods, a teacher at the Samuel Huntington school, one son, Raymond J. Woods, student at Georgetown college, Washington, D. C., and two grandchildren, Elizabeth and Robert Moran of Waterbury.

November 30th is the last day for payment on 1929 Chelsea Christmas club.—adv.

At Saybrook Point, Mrs. Charles Pease and Miss May Smith have been appointed on the Point route for the sale of Christmas seals.

The ranking Norwich druggist, Albert T. Utley, will end his business connection with the firm of Utley & Jones the coming Saturday night.

Dealers claim that there is going to be more lighting up of windows at Christmas time than ever before, judging by early sales of "Christmas tidings" electric candles.

Norwich florists have filled many orders for chrysanthemums, carnations, roses, cyclamen, begonias and Jerusalem cherry trees, for decorations and gifts.

There was just enough moisture Wednesday afternoon to leave the walks damp and sticky, yet of little account from the point of view of the needed rain.

Many reservations have been made at the Norwich hotels and restaurants for Thanksgiving dinners. Special feasts will be provided at each.

Ernest H. Woodworth, treasurer of South Coventry Men's Social club, was given a surprise party the other evening in Smith's hall in celebration of his birthday.

The old Toll House situated on the Center Groton road, Mystic, has been moved to the James Clark property across the street. The house was built all of 100 years ago.

Mrs. Anna P. Whitcomb has just celebrated her 88th birthday at the home of her niece, Miss Rosa O. Hall, in South Willington, receiving numerous calls and gifts.

With the vigilance of the United Workers, the church organizations and thoughful neighbors, it hardly seems possible that any family in Norwich can lack holiday cheer.

Mild weather has had the effect of starting many thousands of holiday tourists to shore and country resorts, so that train, bus and trolley travel was unexpectedly heavy Wednesday.

The freshman class golf team of Connecticut college won the interclass driving contest just finished at the college hockey field. The sophomores were second, juniors third and seniors fourth.

At Willimantic camp ground, Rev. W. H. Dunnack and Rev. Frank Chamberlin are busy repairing their cottages inside and out, to keep out the cold. This is their first experience of camping in winter weather.

Thanksgiving contributions for Norwich needy families have grown to great proportions, since the era when Mrs. Lester, then city missionary, asked each pupil to bring to school one potato, or one apple, or one of each.

On the 1930 color card, greens are outstanding in the blue and yellow tones. Also important are the darker mauve browns and new beige shades. Included in the latter are pie crust and beach sand. Yellows are featured for sports wear.

Stripe patterns in worsted suitings declined slightly, but continued to dominate with 58 per cent of the total, according to the analysis of men's wear suiting orders for October issued this week by the Wool Institute. Plain and small weaves led in woolens.

V. F. W. SECOND ANNUAL BENEFIT DANCE HELD

Two hundred couples attended the second annual benefit dance held Wednesday evening at the Wauregan hotel under the auspices of R. E. Hourigan post, No. 594, Veterans of Foreign Wars. The proceeds of the dance are for the benefit of the post's relief fund. The Ideal orchestra furnished music for the dancing. Visitors were present from New Haven, Bridgeport, Hartford and other cities.

Deputy Junior Vice-Commander Herbert F. Burdick was chairman of the committee, which comprised Commander Louis S. Hull, Jr., William Mueller, Harry Richman, Cornelius Hoelck, Ernest Mills, Jesse Peloquin and Martin Burns.

VERDICT FOR $930.46 GIVEN FOR BEAUDETTE

A verdict for $930.46 in favor of Philogene Beaudette of this city against the Connecticut Co. was returned by a jury in the superior court at New London before Judge Earnest C. Simpson shortly after 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon.

The suit was brought because of a crash between an auto bus owned by the plaintiff and a trolley car in Boswell avenue, Oct. 23, 1928. Brown and James were attorneys for the plaintiff.

PERSONALS

Percy Billings, of this city, left this week for a visit to Vermont.

Mrs. K. N. Bill returned to her home in Lyme Tuesday, after visiting Saybrook relatives.

Fred Langton, of Gay hill, Montville, has a rosebush in bloom the third time this season.

Mrs. Ida Williams of Willimantic is spending two weeks with her sister, Mrs. Josephine Miller of Montville.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel B. Hunt, of Centerbrook, were recent visitors with Mr. and Mrs. Claude Jette in Norwich.

Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Carrington, of Noank, will be Thanksgiving day guests of Leon Billings, of East Great Plain.

B. H. Brennan, of Prospect street, Norwich, was awarded a turkey Tuesday evening, when the Laurel Social club held a Thanksgiving party in compliment to Edgar Shear, at the latter's home at Mago Point, Waterford.

LEE AND STABBING VICTIM IN COURT

James Lee, 50, colored, of Palmer avenue, and Walter H. Savard, 30, of 333 Blackstone street, Providence, who was Lee's victim in a stabbing affray over a crap game at 28 High street on Oct. 15, were both in the city court Wednesday morning before Judge A. F. Libby.

Lee, who was arrested in Providence after he had fled there on the night of the stabbing, was bound over to the next term of the criminal superior court on the charge of assault with a dangerous weapon.

Savard, who has been in the hospital, was before the court on a liquor violation charge. The local police, while investigating the stabbing affray, found three gallons of alcohol in the High street place. It was at first thought that the alcohol was owned by Mrs. Viola Neville, but later evidence pointed to Savard as the owner.

Kate Harris, of No. 28 High street, where the alcohol was found, testified that Savard placed the alcohol in the house and she told the court that Savard had been supplying places in the city with liquor and that he had sold liquor to a New London man who later died from the effects of drinking. The price of the alcohol, the Harris woman told the court, was $4 a gallon. The liquor had been taken to the house on the morning of the day on which the stabbing took place.

Mrs. Neville, who is serving a jail term for a liquor law violation, testified that her husband, who is also serving a jail term for violation of the liquor laws, was an agent for Savard. She told the court that he was to get $3 for every ten gallons of the liquor he sold. Asked if she transported liquor, she said she had not this year nor last year.

As Savard had no money to pay a fine, he was given a 30-day jail sentence. Dr. R. R. Agnew later informed the court that because of Savard's condition it would be unsafe to send him to jail and Judge Libby stated that if Savard could pay $150 he would allow him his freedom.

Before the day was out Savard arranged to pay the $150.

RECOVERED WATCH FOB THROUGH TELEPHONE MAN

At a recent meeting of the New London district commercial conference board of the Southern New England Telephone company an interesting example of the use of the telephone and also the use of the new regional business directory was reported by Miss Etta A. McNaught of this city.

Roy H. Smith, a telephone man at Norwich, heard that a Mr. Gilman of this city had lost a very valuable watch fob and believed he had lost it at a gas filling station at North Adams, Mass. By referring to the business directory now issued to all business subscribers throughout the New England states, Mr. Smith located the Mohawk filling station at North Adams and gave the telephone number of the station to Mr. Gilman who called the station and has since received the watch fob.

INCIDENTS IN SOCIETY

Mr. and Mrs. George Houghton Gilman and Mr. and Mrs. Francis Gilman, of Lowthorpe, are to entertain twelve guests at Thanksgiving dinner, including H. Watson Kent and his sister, Miss Kent, Miss Helen MacGregor Clarke, Charles J. Dyer, Rev. Robert H. Parkes, Mrs. Parkes and children.

William H. Allen, of Huntington place, is in Rome, Georgia, visiting his cousins.

Mr. and Mrs. Gurdon L. Bidwell are to entertain at a family dinner party at Lighthouse Inn for Thanksgiving.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Crowell, of Elmwood avenue will be members of a family dinner party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick E. Crowell, of Perkins avenue.

Mrs. Lester Greenman, of Laurel Hill avenue, entertained a children's party Tuesday, from 4 to 6, on the ninth birthday of her daughter Helene. Prizes in the games were won by Janet Bailey, Nedda Burdsall, Betty Spencer and Richard Aubrey.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Denison Noyes of Lincoln avenue, are hosts to a family dinner party including their daughter-in-law from New York, Mrs. Frederick K. Noyes (Helen Rowland), who has joined Mr. Noyes for the holiday.

Miss Clara Palmer, from Wellesley college, is at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Shepard B. Palmer over the week end recess. S. B. Palmer, Jr., will arrive from Dartmouth college today (Thursday).

A dinner party of six relatives will be entertained at Lighthouse Inn by Mrs. Ralph H. Melcer, of Uncasville.

At the home of Dr. and Mrs. Harry E. Higgins, on Sachem terrace, a holiday dinner party of over thirty will include relatives from Hartford, New York, New Britain, South Coventry and Colchester.

Members of a family dinner party to be entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur L. Story will include Mrs. Story's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Ellis, of Hartford.

Mr. and Mrs. John B. Crary and two daughters have motored from Hollister, Mass., to pass the holiday with Mr. and Mrs. Herbert B. Cary.

Miss Priscilla Palmer, who was a passenger on the Hamburg-American liner Milwaukee, reached New York Tuesday and has joined her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George S. Palmer at Lighthouse Inn, following three months' tour of Europe.

Miss Gwendolyn Jones, of Bliss place, is in Pittsburgh, Penn. Miss Jones will be bridesmaid Saturday at the wedding of Miss Elenor Larimer who was graduated from Mt. Ida school, Newton, Mass, with Miss Jones, in the class of 1927.

LIQUOR CASES NOLLED WHEN TESTIMONY OF GETTING DRINKS IS ONLY EVIDENCE

Testimony by the spotters of the Forrest detective agency that they had bought drinks at the places but had secured no evidence that they could bring into court resulted in Judge A. F. Libby directing nolles in five liquor raid cases that were brought before him in the city court Wednesday in cleaning up the docket of the 21 arrests in liquor raids in the city on Nov. 12.

Nolles for this lack of evidence were directed in the cases of John Anton, 49, of 184 Franklin street; Carlo Depucchio and Rose Depucchio, 284 Central avenue; Dennis Sullivan, 64, of 10 Railroad avenue; Arnold Headon, 43, of 10 Railroad avenue.

Failed in Identification

After a partial trial Nicholas Panagiotos of No. 18 North Thames street, was ordered discharged. Mac Williams, one of the several spotters imported to unearth evidence, failed to identify Panagiotos as the man he claimed sold him liquor used as evidence. Williams picked out the wrong man.

He testified that he had gone into a place at North Thames street, November 12th and had purchased a half pint of liquor. He was asked if he could point out the person who sold him the liquor and replied that he could. Attorney Cassidy requested him to place his hand on the shoulder of the person who sold him the liquor. Williams walked into the audience and placed his hand on the shoulder of a man who proved to be Frank Geness, instead of Panagiotos. Attorney Thomas M. Shields, counsel for Panagiotos, informed the court that Williams had picked the wrong man. Trial of the case was immediately stopped and Panagiotos' case was nolled by the court.

Frechette Takes Appeal

Camille Frechette, 42, of Taftville, was presented on a charge of actual sale to one of the spotters. He was found guilty, fined $200 and costs and given a ten day jail sentence. An appeal was taken to the court of common pleas and bonds were set at $500.

Gray, the spotter, testified that Frechette sold him a pint of liquor on October 3rd, for which he paid $2. Frechette denied ever having seen Gray and Gray testified that a Vic Sharkey of Taftville introduced him to Frechette in Jewett City. Frechette testified that he was home at No. 22 South A street the night he is alleged to have sold the liquor to Gray, and Frechette's daughters, Frances and Theresa, collaborated their father's statement. A Mr. Raymond testified that Frechette was not in the place when the alleged sale was said to have taken place.

Angelo Panagiotos, 45, club and pool room proprietor at No. 27 Thames street, was found guilty of actual sale, and was fined $200 and costs and given ten days in jail. He appealed to the court of common pleas.

Williams testified that on November 12 he purchased a half pint of liquor for a dollar. He also testified that he bought on the previous day two drinks which were disposed of in the place. It was learned during the trial that Panagiotos is president, secretary and treasurer of the club. According to one of the witnesses in the case, members of the club pay half a dollar assessments to the club proprietor.

From the financial standpoint there is a loss to the city by the prosecution as the sum of $660 was paid to the detective agency to secure the evidence and the return to the city court treasury was one fine of $200 with costs of $8.50.

SCOUT LEADERS CHOP DOWN TREE IN TRAINING COURSE

Had a stranger walked along the corridor of the second floor of the Thayer building Wednesday night at about 8:15, he would have been surprised to hear the steady chop chop of an axe. One of the activities which occupied the attention of the scout leaders was the felling of a tree, and for the purpose a two-by-four had been set in a base. After much discussion Cecil Wetherbee and John Hill succeeded in felling the tree in the proper direction. With pen-knifes and similar instruments each leader cut out a wooden envelope opener or other wooden object. Merit Badge Counselor William Wyman made a candle stick holder which he proudly displayed until someone called attention to the fact that the only candle the stick could hold would be a baby cake candle.

Assistant Scoutmaster Cecil Wetherbee of Troop One led the men in an interesting opening ceremony which included falling in, salute, repetition of scout oath and law, pledge of allegiance to flag and payment of dues. Scout Commissioner A. L. Peale gave an interesting talk on the different hikes. Mr. Peale listed about twenty ranging from the tracking hike to the starvation and night hike.

Scout Executive John L. Sullman led a short practice in semaphore signalling using the alternate method with comparisons made of the cart-wheel method. William Wyman and William Collins became team captains for a compass trail which included judging of distance. The men became quite adept at using the instruments and were enthusiastic in their praise of the work.

Because of the Thanksgiving holidays a number of the men enrolled were excused. Those attending were William A. Collins, Franklin Robinson, John W. Hill Jr., Cecil Wetherbee, William W. Wyman, Jean Kieffer, John P. Boldrighini, Carl W. Brend, A. L. Peale and John L. Sullman.

Patrol Leaders for next time selected are William A. Collins, Jean Kieffer, and William Wyman. These men will try to have 100 per cent attendance.

The next session will be held Wednesday, Dec. 4, at 7:30. The training course is being conducted by the Eastern Connecticut council for all scoutmasters, troop committeemen, assistant scoutmasters, and junior assistant scoutmasters, boys' work leaders and men interested in boys. Visitors are welcome to attend the sessions at any time.

EXPECT MORE THAN 200 BOYS IN TREASURE HUNT

Something over 200 boys are expected to participate in the Thanksgiving morning treasure hunt, meeting at the Y. M. C. A. at 9 o'clock to start their search in the woods around Norwich for the 35 or more prizes that have been contributed by Norwich business houses.

These prizes will consist of flashlights, jack-knives, sweat shirts, beds, theatre passes, neckties, belts, shirts, watches, candy, Rook games, pencils, and Y. M. C. A. memberships.

Donors of the prizes include: Henschel Tire & Rubber Co., Boston Candy store, Williams Tire & Supply Co., J. C. Macpherson, H. M. Lerou, Buckley's Office Supply store, Disco Bros., Ailing Rubber Co., Jerry's, J. A. Ferguson, Boston store, Smith's Shoe store, Morley's Hat store, Plaut-Cadden Co., Eldridge's Hardware, Porteous & Mitchell, Geo. W. Kies Co., Cranston Co., Perkins' Candy store, Jack's Sport Shop, Lee Clegg, Franklin Hardware, Eaton-Chase Co., Palace theatre, Savard Bros. and Y. M. C. A.

FORTY TABLES PLAYED IN BENEFIT CARD PARTY

Forty tables of bridge, pinochle and whist were in play Tuesday evening in T. A. B. hall at a card party for the benefit of the Academy of the Holy Family at Baltic which was in charge of Miss Loretta E. Ward, assisted by Miss Mary McNally and Mrs. John Conway, of Baltic.

Prizes in bridge were taken by Mrs. John A. Service, Miss Sadie Kilroy, Sam Hussey and A. H. Disco. Winners in whist included Miss Hilda Rondeau, Mrs. Nellie O'Neil, F. Rochette and H. Collins. In pinochle the prizes went to Mrs. William J. Mallon, Mrs. Fred Shea, Albert Matthews and John Barry.

ELEVEN PATIENTS ARE HOME FOR THANKSGIVING

There were eleven patients dismissed Wednesday at the Backus hospital, enabling them to spend Thanksgiving at their homes, as follows:

Mrs. Wallace Bennett and infant son, Yantic; Mrs. Rose Allard, R. F. D. 4, Norwich; Mrs. Emma Rokowski, Maennerchor avenue, Taftville; Roland Tetreault, Wauregan; Mrs. Alfred Chaput and twin son and daughter, Taftville; James Leary, High street, Baltic; Mrs. James Bushnell, Laurel Hill avenue; Louis Kennison, High street; Mrs. Lena Ladd, Voluntown; Mrs. Carrie Webster, Willimantic; Mrs. Eugene Lambert, Jewett City.

The nearer you get to the butt end of revenge the sweeter it isn't.

THANKSGIVING DINNERS IN LOCAL INSTITUTIONS

According to the annual custom, Thanksgiving day will be an occasion for special dinners in the various local institutions. In each the spirit of the day will be emphasized through the appeal to the dinner man that is made by a well filled board and the good things that the capable kitchen culinary staffs serve up for all to enjoy.

Norwich State Hospital.

At the Norwich State hospital, Dr. Elijah S. Burdsall, superintendent, has made arrangements for Thanksgiving dinners for the employes and patients. Each will have a special course. Most of the edibles used for the meal tomorrow come from the hospital's own farm. The menu for the 2,300 patients at the institution follows:

Chicken fricasee with dumplings, celery, white potatoes, sweet potatoes, mashed turnips, cranberry sauce, bread and butter, mince pie, apples, coffee.

The 420 employes will enjoy the following dinner:

Roast chicken, stuffed, giblet gravy, cranberry sauce, celery, mashed potatoes, sweet potatoes, mashed turnips, hot rolls, pumpkin pie, coffee.

Uncas-On-Thames.

Dinner at Uncas-On-Thames sanatorium will be served between 12 and 1 with roast turkey, stuffed, heading the menu, which will be enjoyed by 320 patients and 115 members of the staff. The menu follows:

Cream of Tomato soup, roast turkey, stuffed, celery, cranberry jelly, giblet gravy, mashed potatoes, mashed turnips, cold slaw, mince pie, salted nuts, coffee.

Rock Nook Home.

A full course turkey dinner with all the fixings will be served at the Rock Nook home, under the direction of Mrs. Jennie Murray, who has charge of the Norwich Town home. The 27 children with eight employes will partake of this menu, which also comprises mince, squash and apple pie, fruit and nuts. The turkeys this year were donated by a friend of the home.

W. W. Backus Hospital.

An excellent menu has been arranged by Miss Lucy G. Abbott, superintendent of the William W. Backus hospital. Sixty patients, about 30 nurses and a like number of employes will enjoy their turkey dinner.

The menu follows: Oranges grape fruit, grape juice cocktail, tomato bouillon, stuffed turkey, giblet gravy, mashed potatoes, escalloped cauliflower with mushrooms, squash, celery, ripe and green olives, cranberry jelly, mince pie and cheese, coffee with cream, nuts, candy, ice cream.

County Jail.

Jailor Oscar Main has arranged a special dinner for his "guests" who number 20 men and five women. The menu follows:

Roast pork, boiled onions, mashed potatoes, mashed turnips, mince and pumpkin pie, oranges, tobacco.

County Home.

Miss Jane Gibson, the matron at the county home on Smith avenue, will have a turkey dinner with all the fixings. The holiday was observed by a special Thanksgiving program Wednesday. Ice cream fruit and candy will also be served. Sixty-five children are at the home, while the five employes will also share the excellent menu.

Riverside Home.

Riverside home on Asylum street, conducted by the town of Norwich, with its aged residents, numbering 42 men and 16 women, will also have a special dinner. Superintendent Charles Ellis and Mrs. Ellis have arranged the following menu:

Roast spareribs, potatoes, turnips, onions, cranberry sauce, mince and squash pie, fruit, cake.

This year the home has been the recipient of two fine gifts, both of which were gratefully received by the patients and are now used with much satisfaction. One is a radio, donated by the Norwich lodge of Elks and the other a victrola given by Mrs. Holcrook, widow of former Town Clerk Charles S. Holbrook.

Sheltering Arms.

The "family" of 18 at the Sheltering Arms, corner of McKinley avenue and Rockwell street, will again this year enjoy a turkey dinner with all the side dishes. Mrs. Larrabee, the matron, will have charge of the dinner. Eight employes will also partake of the turkey dinner. The turkeys this year were donated by G. Wyman Carroll, Jr.

Lodge of Elks.

Norwich lodge of Elks in accordance with its annual custom, delivered 130 baskets to the poor and deserving of Norwich and vicinity. The contents of the baskets were loin of pork, potatoes, onions, turnips, butter, tea, coffee, crackers, bread, milk and sugar. The distribution of the baskets which was made possible through the courtesy of members of the lodge, was under the direction of the welfare committee, comprising William F. Murray, chairman, James T. Egan, Fred G. Thumm, William J. Fitzgerald, John H. Carney, Earl S. Hiscox, Dr. Charles W. Solomon, Dr. Kopland K. Markoff and James Ostan.

FIRST D. A. R. FILM TRAILERS USED BY NORWICH CHAPTER

Mrs. Albert M VanWagenen, regent of Faith Trumbull chapter, D. A. R, Inc., has issued the following notification:

"Perhaps it is not generally known that the National society, Daughters of the American Revolution has a committee of thirty-five women who are in Hollywood all the time; in groups of five they sit and view films each day of the week, in order to recommend the better films to the public through the D. A. R. magazine.

"Perhaps you have noticed recently in our papers from time to time the list of pictures recommended by this committee and published for that particular month and we are glad to say that many of the pictures recommended by the National Committee D. A. R. are shown here in our local theatres.

"These pictures cover a large range of subjects: Patriotic, educational, entertaining and amusing. One can rest assured that if the picture is in the recommended list, and is being shown at a local theatre, which is usually the case at some one of them, that it is worthwhile in its own particular line to be seen.

"Let us watch for and patronize the pictures recommended by the Daughters of the American Revolution better films committee."

The state D. A. R. has been presented a set of patriotic film flag trailers, arranged by Mrs. Frank W. Baker, state chairman, Better Films in Nebraska, hoping that these films will be used by the chapters throughout the state in their local theatres.

Mr. Hamilton, manager of the Palace theatre, has kindly consented to use the trailers and two have already been shown, one on Armistice day and the other Nov. 25th. The next one will be shown Dec. 20th. Faith Trumbull chapter of this city has been the first chapter in the state to use these trailers. Mrs. Ernest J. Jones, of Bliss place, is chairman of Better Films committee of Faith Trumbull chapter.

Eczema Caused Years of Intense Agony

"I have suffered intense agony from eczema on my leg and other parts of my body for years, and received only temporary relief from other preparations. It is only a month since I started to use Peterson's Ointment and there is no sign of eczema or itching. You can refer to me."—Geo. G. Talbot, Buffalo.

"I've got a hundred testimonials," says Peterson of Buffalo, just as sincere and honest as this one. Years ago, when I first started to put out Peterson's Ointment, I made up my mind to give a generous box for 25 cents, and I am still doing it, as every druggist in the country knows.

"I guarantee Peterson's Ointment because I know that its mighty healing power is marvelous. I say to every one who buys a box that it is rigidly guaranteed for eczema, old sores, ulcers, skin diseases, chafing, burns, scalds and sunburn, and if not satisfactory your money will be returned."

LEADING SHARES ADVANCE AS STOCK MARKET ENDED ITS THREE-DAY WEEK

NEW YORK, Nov. 27—(AP)—The stock market ended its three-day week today in an extraordinarily peaceful manner. The volume of trading ebbed to the lowest level since mid-June, and leading shares advanced moderately under the stimulus of short covering. Total sales were 2,422,330 shares, as reduced from 2,634,110 yesterday.

Lightening of accounts in preparation for the four day holiday beginning tomorrow appeared to have been largely completed yesterday. Further selling appeared at the opening, but was quickly absorbed, and shorts hurried to cover their commitments.

Some unsettlement was caused by a trickle of selling in the amusement stocks, inspired by the anti-trust action against Fox Film and Warner Brothers. Pennsylvania railroad sold off a couple of points on the offer of rights to increase the outstanding common stock by 12 1-2 per cent, but rallied a little in the final transactions.

The day's news was in general not of a character to inspire operations for the advance. Freight car loadings, as reported for the week ended Nov. 16, showed a sharp reduction from the like week of last year, but the figures are scarcely comparable, as that week this year included the Armistice day holiday. The first 37 railroads to report October net income showed an aggregate decline of 7.3 per cent from last year.

The weekly steel trade reviews reported further curtailment of production. Iron Age pointing to the retarded recovery of the automobile industry, approaching year end inventories, and the usual caution of buyers in a quiet market. Crude oil production for last week showed another increase, although with the progress already made in curtailing production, this was accepted rather nonchalantly. Several more extra dividends, largely by smaller companies, were announced.

The money market was a little firmer, but call loans again renewed at 4 1-2 per cent, which rate will carry over until Monday, and held officially a that figure during the day, while loans as low as 3 1-2 per cent were reported in the outside market.

The time money market remains dull, but quotations were a little higher at 4 3-4 to 5 per cent, against 4 1-2 to 4 3-4 yesterday. The Thanksgiving holiday currency demands are estimated about $76,000,000, and banks reported a considerable flow of funds to the interior. It was pointed out that these funds will not return to this center until after Christmas.

A shipment of about $6,000,000 in gold to France was reported, and with the French franc above the outgoing gold point, and several other currencies close to their gold points, there appeared little prospect of a reduction in the New York rediscount rate below 4 1-2 per cent for a time. Federal reserve officials are said to welcome a moderate outflow of gold, but they would undoubtedly seek to avoid a large movement.

General Electric closed more than 7 points higher, and such issues as American Can, American Telephone, American and Foreign Power, Atchison, Columbia Graphophone, Eastman Kodak, National Biscuit, Norfolk and Western and Westinghouse Electric closed 2 to 5 points higher. U. S. Steel, selling regular and extra dividends totalling 2 3-4, sold up to 163 3-4, and closed at 162 1-8, up 1 5-8, net. The recently depressed copper shares rallied a little. Anaconda and Cerro de Pasco closing about 2 points higher.

Fox Film A dropped 4 3-4 points on news of the anti-trust suit, but rebounded about a point from the bottom. Warner Brothers sold off 2 points, but regained all but 1-2 point of the decline. American Type Foundry, Nickel Plate, Studebaker and U. S. Industrial Alcohol lost about 2 to 3 points.

Commodity markets were irregular. Wheat futures advanced about one cent a bushel with better export buying, and corn was steady. The cotton market sagged in sympathy with a decline at Liverpool, and closed 55 to 80 cents a bale lower.

Foreign exchanges were dull. Sterling sagged 1-16 of a cent to $4.87 7-8.

JOHN F. MURRAY GOES TO FINAL REST SIGNALLY HONORED AT NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 27.—The funeral of John F. Murray, of 109 Blackhall street, prominent merchant and member of the city council, was held this morning at 10 o'clock at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church. The service was attended by a large assemblage of mourners, including a delegation of members of New London lodge of Elks and Seaside council, Knights of Columbus. In the solemn mass of requiem, Rev. George Clark was celebrant, Rev. Michael Reagan deacon, Rev. Raymond J. O'Callaghan sub-deacon and Rev. Timothy M. Crowley, D. D., master of ceremonies. Rt. Rev. Msgr. Michael H. May, of Norwich, was stated in the sanctuary. The honorary bearers were Mayor Cornelius D. Twomey, City Manager William A. Holt, Director of Law Thomas E. Troland, City Clerk Julian D. Moran, Councilors James A. May, Alton T. Miner, Robert E. Chappell, Malcolm M. Scott and William C. Fox, also former Councilor Lucius E. Whiton. The active bearers were members of the New London police department, Lieut. James C. Sullivan, Sergeant Patrick Murphy, Automobile Patrol Officer William Corcoran, Traffic Officer Dennis Cavanaugh and Patrolmen John Clifford and William Graham. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery, where the committal service was conducted by Monsignor May, Rev. Father Clark and Rev. Father O'Callaghan assisting in the responses. A squad of police and members of the fire department acted as an escort of the cortege from the church to Broad street and Connecticut avenue.

POISON PROVES FATAL TO LOVE-DESPONDENT TAR

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 27.—Charles L. Gore, a member of the crew of U. S. Coast Guard destroyer McCall, who became so despondent when his love was not returned by Miss Loretta Beebe, of Quaker Hill, that he swallowed a quantity of bichloride of mercury a week ago, died at Lawrence-Memorial hospital late last night. His condition had been so critical for several days that his demise was hourly anticipated. The body was removed to an undertaking establishment and this evening was taken to the union station where, at 10:47 o'clock tonight, it was placed aboard the Federal express for Gore's home, Fredericksburg, Va. A brother of Gore arrived in New London last night and reached the hospital five minutes after the sailor had passed away.

Gore, 38, became infatuated with Miss Beebe several weeks ago and after forming an acquaintance with the young woman informed her of his love for her. Miss Beebe discouraged Gore's attentions and this so preyed on Gore's mind that he decided to end his mental suffering by death. About two weeks ago, while Miss Beebe was driving her automobile on the New London-Norwich highway, Gore hurled himself in front of the auto and came near being run over. Failing at death, Gore then decided on poisoning as the method to rid him of his heartaches and trouble. When Gore's clothing was searched at the hospital a message written on an envelope requested that his brother and Miss Beebe be informed of the sailor being a patient at the hospital, and this was done.

Margaret F. Sullivan has sold a house and lot on School street to Michael DiBiasi.

Bessie M. Ockford has sold a house and lot on Addison street to Thomas T. Wetmore and Thomas T. Wetmore, Jr.

The Sunrise Route, through John English and Edwin H. Snyder, which operates a steamer between this port and Sag Harbor, has filed a certificate at the office of the city clerk adopting the Sunrise Route as a trade name. The owners have also filed a certificate adopting the name of Sunrise Ferry.

A deed transferring title in a house and lot on Belden street from Michael Shea to John Levkevicki, has been filed for record in the office of the city clerk. The house was recently sold at public auction by James A. May, a committee of the superior court.

Conrad Devlin, 70 Maple avenue, was arrested this afternoon by Patrolman William Manice, charged with driving without a license and passing an automatic danger signal. Devlin will be in court tomorrow.

A Stubborn Stump

City employes are experiencing great difficulty in removing a stump of the tree, which was recently cut down on Masonic street, in front of the fire headquarters of Nameaug Engine company. The stump contains a large amount of earth and even bricks and stone. An effort was made today to haul the stump to the street surface, but it could not be taken from the excavation by the combined power of a steam roller and tractor. It is probable that blasting will be resorted to in order to remove the stump.

OBITUARY

Philip O'Brien

Philip O'Brien, 5, son of Dr. and Mrs. John O'Brien, died this morning at the residence of his parents, Seaside sanitarium, Crescent beach. The boy had been an invalid since birth.

Harry Twiss, inspector in the employ of the Connecticut company, is spending a week with his daughter, Mrs. J. J. Riley, at Jersey City, N. J.

Announcement is made of the marriage at Yonkers, N. Y., Sunday last, of Joseph Giardiana, formerly of New London and Miss Margaret Humphries, of Yonkers. Thomas Giardiana, Bank street, brother of the groom, was best man and Mrs. Jackson, sister of the bride, was matron of honor.

NORWICH STUDENT NURSE STRUCK BY LOCAL MACHINE

Miss Bernice Hopkins, 16 Julian street, Norwich, and a student nurse at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, was struck by an automobile driven by Francis Cooney, 37 Eastern avenue, this afternoon, when the young lady was attempting to cross State street near the trolley terminal. Miss Hopkins evidently escaped injury other than bruises for she refused to submit to an examination by Dr. J. M. Ganey who was passing the location of the accident when it occurred.

There was no session of the police court today. The only arrest made during yesterday was that of Carl Noren, 56 Green street, employed by the New Haven railroad, who was taken into custody by Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh on a warrant charging the railroad man with non-support of his wife and little daughter. The case was not tried.

GEORGE ROWLAND, 90, DEAD—FORMERLY OF CANTERBURY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, April 27.— George Rowland, 90, retired farmer, died today at the residence of his son, Charles F. Rowland, Poquonoc Bridge, Groton, death being caused by infirmities attending his advanced years. His decline started about six weeks ago. Besides his son, Mr. Rowland is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Harriet A. Stuart, of Springfield, Mass. and a son, Joseph W. Rowland, of Pelham Manor, N. Y. Mr. Rowland was born in England, but had resided in this country about 65 years. He came to the United States, later moving to Canterbury where he engaged in farming. He was a former master of Canterbury grange and was a deacon of the Canterbury Congregational church.

Harold Palmer, of Poquonoc Bridge, was tried at a special session of the Groton court today on a charge of driving while under the influence of liquor. He pleaded guilty and a fine of $100 and costs was imposed by Judge Cornelius C. Costello, but $75 of the fine was ordered remitted.

OBITUARY

Frederick Simpson

Frederick Simpson, 60, of Uncasville, and formerly proprietor of a grain store on Winthrop street, died at Hartford hospital today following operations for gall stones. Until Friday last every indication pointed to Mr. Simpson's recovery.

Many students of Connecticut College for Women boarded noon and afternoon trains for their homes today to spend the holiday with their parents. They will return to New London Sunday night next.

Refused To Produce License

Charles Sawicki, 28 Cape Ann court, was arrested tonight by Automobile Patrol Officer Carlos Stone, charged with refusing to display his operator's license, upon complaint of J. O. Belanger, submarine base. Sawicki will be in court tomorrow. The arrest of Sawicki was the result of the automobile he was driving colliding with Belanger's car; when the latter demanded to see Sawicki's license he refused to comply with the demand.

The New Haven railroad transported an immense number of passengers this afternoon and tonight, most of the patronage being those who were en route to their homes or to visit relatives over the holiday. So great was the traffic that some of the trains were run in two sections.

The annual Thanksgiving banquet of the Niagara Engine company this evening at the quarters on Bank street, was attended by a representative number of members of the fire-fighting company and a few guests. An elaborate turkey dinner was served at 9 o'clock. Besides the company, there were present members of the city council and press.

A large number of gridiron fans will witness the football game between Notre Dame and the Army, at the Yankee stadium in New York Saturday. Another group will go to Boston and watch the Holy Cross-Boston university game.

Miss Delia Moroney, executive secretary of the Diocesan Bureau of Social Service, is in New York to remain over Thanksgiving.

An inspiring talk on the subject, Who Is the Christ, was given by Rev. Patrick T. Quinlan of Bridgeport this week, at the Diocesan Bureau of Social Service, the second in the series of educational talks given under the auspices of the New London branch of the Connecticut council of Catholic women. Father Quinlan developed the topic beautifully, bringing out the fact that Christ was the master chemist, the master biologist, the master physician and the master psychologist of all time.

CHRISTMAS SEALS SALE TO BEGIN WHEN BELLS RING

The annual campaign for the sale of Christmas seals will be launched Friday when they will be offered the public for purchase. The committee in charge of the drive is headed by Mrs. Wellington, wife of Dr. H. W. Wellington and the proceeds from the sales will be donated to combat tuberculosis. The drive will open at 10 o'clock, at which time the bells will be rung in First Church of Christ, Second Congregational church, First Baptist church, St. James Episcopal church, Montauk avenue Baptist church, Methodist Episcopal church and Our Lady of Perpetual Help Roman Catholic church.

FUNERALS

Madeline Dunn

Madeline Dunn, five months old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sylvester Dunn, 57 High street, Groton, died last night at Lawrence Memorial hospital. The funeral was held this morning at 10 o'clock at the residence of the child's parents and burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Mrs. Lucretia M. Halstead

The funeral of Mrs. Lucretia M. Halstead, formerly of Lakes Pond, Waterford, who died at Ancram, N. Y., Monday, was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at 48 Shapley street. Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth, pastor of the First Church of Christ, conducting the services. Burial was in Cedar Grove cemetery.

Osprey lodge, D. of R., entertained members of Gates Rebekah lodge, of Niantic last evening, in Odd Fellows' hall. The initial nomination of officers was made and the initiatory degree conferred on a class. Besides the Niantic visitors, members of several lodges in the county attended.

Nellie Franklin, of Jewett City; William Long, 904 Bank street; Mrs. Fred Evitts, Shelton; Mrs. Padilie Green, Poquonoc Bridge, Groton; William Taylor, Waterford, Mrs. Gerald Wagner and infant son, 37 Franklin street, patients at Lawrence Memorial hospital, were discharged today.

Miss Ruth Phillips, 186 Cedar Grove avenue, a patient at Home Memorial hospital, was discharged today.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Breed Theatre

George O'Brien's first talking picture, "Salute," a stirring story of youth and love with West Point and Annapolis as its background, opens today at the Breed theatre. This all-talking Fox Movietone production shows the handsome and athletic actor as an All-American West Point halfback whose compelling personality brings fame and love of beautiful women. When his younger midshipman brother, played by William Janney, late of Broadway, fears he is about to lose his sweetheart, Helen Chandler, to O'Brien, trouble begins. The climax comes in a West Point-Annapolis football game at the Polo grounds, New York.

Broadway Theatre.

Wishing all its patrons a happy Thanksgiving with plenty of old fashioned New England turkey and fixin's, the Broadway offers today one of the most entertaining programs of the season, with a long list of talking features and featurettes, the program today opening at 1.30 and running continuously all day. The star attraction is "The Broadway Scandals," a spectacular singing and musical revue which opened in New York last Sunday. Sally O'Neil, diminutive but peppy, displays new talents as the singing and dancing star of the "Scandals," with Jack Egan, drafted from the Keith vaudeville time as her support, and Carmel Myers, another film star surprising her friends with a beautiful coloratura soprano voice. A snappy dancing chorus, numerous comedians, spectacular scenic sets and a dozen or more popular song hits, make up a sparkling musical comedy. The surrounding novelties are equally as classy, with Mickey House in "The Barn Dance," Kraft and Lamont in "R'arin' to Go," a breezy western skit, Miller and Lyles in a comedy singing and dancing bit, "They Know Their Groceries," Tom Howard in "The Spy," a riotous comedy of the World war, Red Nichols and His Five Pennies, a famous recording orchestra and the Fox movietone news. Saturday brings to the Broadway screen, the "ace" production of the season, "The Hollywood Revue," which fully lives up to its description, "More stars than there are in the Heavens."

Palace Theatre.

A matchless double feature program, with each of the big pictures a first-run film, has been brought to Norwich by the Palace theatre as a holiday treat for its patrons. The two big shows now running at the Palace are "Lucky in Love," a romance of Ireland, and "Headlines," a story of the whirl and romance of newspaper life in a big, modern city.

Morton Downey is the star of "Lucky in Love." Those who know his glorious tenor need hardly behold how good he is. In this film he has the role of the stable boy, Michael, who falls in love with the beautiful daughter of the lord of the castle where he works, a poor peasant. She in turn loves the lad, but the wide gulf between their fortunes makes it seem as if the romance were but an idle dream on the part of both. Yet each is happy, tremendously happy, he as he sings at his work, polishing saddles and bridles and currying the proud hunting charger, and she as she listens to his singing. At night he comes forth and sits on the terrace while one of his companions makes music and there he sings sweet melodies to her.

In "Headlines" we have swift, dramatic action, as swift as the pulse of the world which the great newspapers keep track of from day to day, always keenly on the alert for news of interest. It is the story of the loves, the hates, the passions, the loyalties that exist among members of the news-gathering profession? In its own way it is as thrilling as the picture with which it shares the program. Grant Withers, Marion Nixon and Pauline Garon are starred.

Beginning Saturday and lasting four days, "The Painted Angel," starring Billie Dove, will play at the Palace.

Mrs. Henry Bingham left Windham to spend Thanksgiving with relatives in Oriskany Falls, N. Y.

Mrs. H. C. Hatch, Misses Clara and Sara Johnson, Isaac H. Johnson and their sister, Mrs. Halsey W. Kelley of New York were in Norwich Sunday to attend the funeral of their brother, Oliver L. Johnson.

Halsey J. Kelley, of Roselle Park, N. J., and Burney Mumford, of New York spent Sunday at the Misses Johnsons' and attended the funeral of their uncle and cousin, respectively, O. L. Johnson of Norwich.

Mrs. Nettie W. Richmond of Willimantic formerly of Windham is recovering from a surgical operation in St. Joseph's hospital, Willimantic.

Rev. Edward F. Smiley preached a splended sermon Sunday on five things to be thankful for: Nature as expressed in the world in which we live; man's eminence in the world; the things he has accomplished, the future possibilities and Christianity. The offering duet was by Mr. and Mrs. Eden Cook, alto and tenor. The C. E. meeting was led by Rev. J. F. Cobb of South Windham. About 50 were present in the morning and twenty-five in the evening.

Leo H. Keeney of New York and Mrs. Charles Keeney of New Haven were week end guests of Mrs. George Keeney.

The beautiful chrysanthemums in the Congregational church were the gift of her children to Mrs. George Keeney, Sunday being her 75th birthday. At the birthday dinner at the home of her daughter, Mrs. H. C. Lathrop, four generations were present. Mrs. Keeney, Mrs. Lathrop, Mrs. Charlotte Lathrop Cook and eleven months old Constance Elderkin Cook.

Mrs. Daniel Trigger and Mrs. David Light and little son have returned from a week's visit in New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Thompson and little daughter Mary Lou are spending the Thanksgiving holiday at Mrs. Thompson's home in New York.

Helen Wood entertained several girl friends Saturday in honor of her 13th birthday. Her guests were Ruth and Marian Dean, Sophie Phillips, Myrtle Tomkins, Dorothy Wilson, Edith Rabinowitz. Sandwiches, cake, ice cream and fruit punch were served. On Saturday Robert Wood has invited eleven boy friends to help him celebrate his 12th birthday which falls on the 28th. Their father's birthday is to 25th, making three birthdays in the family in the same week.

Miss Smith of New York is the guest of her cousin, Mrs. E. J. Stalker.

BRITAIN ANXIOUS TO DETERMINE RIGHT KIND OF RADIO FOR SUNDAY

LONDON, Eng.,—(AP)—All is not well in the air above England on Sundays.

The British Broadcasting corporation, which has a monopoly on broadcasting in Britain, is custodian of the English ether on Sundays. Listeners cannot take their choice of several London stations. If they tune in on any British station they get a program controlled by the B. B. C.

Many listeners like that arrangement. They believe weekdays are full enough of jazz music and other diversions. Sunday on the air, they assert, should be restful and dignified.

But newspaper critics and fans who write letters are revolting, here and there, against what they call a one-sided policy. It is possible, they argue, to be deeply religious and still enjoy sprightly music on Sundays.

"DX" fans, while disclaiming any interest in the controversy, point out that part of the B. B. C. policy is to shut down completely for a few hours Sunday evening. That is just what they have been waiting for all week. It gives them a chance to search for distance without local interference.

The latest sharp comment on the situation has come from the B. B. C. itself.

Sir John Reith, director-general of the corporation, speaking at a diocesan conference at Leamington, declared that churchmen are not "playing the game" with radio authorities in the matter of Sunday broadcasts.

Many clergymen, he said, are "more concerned about the possible—in my view hypothetical—diminution in their own congregations than about the spread of a religious message to 15,000,000 people."

Nevertheless, the B. B. C. is continuing to broadcast strictly dignified programs on Sunday.

Ask Federal Road Aid.

LOS ANGELES—(AP)—Western automobile organizations have petitioned congress to increase federal aid road appropriations for $75,000,000 to $100,000,000 yearly.

KMOX TO BROADCAST PART OF MASONIC INITIATION

ST. LOUIS —(AP)— A description of a section of the Masonic initiation is to be broadcast.

KMOX, St. Louis, will act as the key station for such a program at midnight, central standard time, November 30, when the second section of the Shrine initiation will be sent to 75 stations in 32 states.

This is called one of the most comprehensive efforts to reach all parts of the country without the use of interconnecting wires between stations usually composing a network. Most of the rebroadcasting stations are independently operated. They will intercept the KMOX program and rebroadcast it from selective receivers.

SCHOOL GETS LESSON FROM KDKA IN TEST

PITTSBURGH —(AP)—. Pittsburgh public school authorities are experimenting with radio as an aid to instruction in the lower grades. If successful, it may be extended to the upper grades.

In the first broadcast a group of fifth grade pupils at the Frick Training School for Teachers listened in on an arithmetic lesson. The lesson was broadcast by Miss Dorothy Thomas, a teacher, who with a group of pupils, was at the microphone in the University of Pittsburgh studio of KDKA. Questions and answers, spoken by teacher and pupils, formed part of the instructions.

The experiment will be continued for a month on one day of each week.

EX-SLAVE'S LOAN REPAID AFTER 59-YEAR INTERIM

LITTLE ROCK, Ark.— (AP) —The bread on the waters has come back to John Rogers, 91, former slave.

In 1870 John gave $1 each to four sisters, members of a family which had owned him in slave days, who were leaving Georgia to go to Arkansas. Now John has $139.80, the sum earned by the $4 at compound interest, plus the original gift.

The refund was made by Harvey Couch, Arkansas utility magnate, whose mother was one of the girls. Mr. Couch took his mother back to her native state for a visit and at Griffin, Ga., found the aged Negro whom they had thought dead.

SOURCE OF LEPROSY DISCOVERED BY MEDICOS

BERKELEY, Cal.,—(AP)—A plausible explanation why leprosy once raged widely over the world and now has nearly disappeared from civilized areas is contained in discoveries of Dr. E. L. Walker of the University of California medical faculty.

His experiments indicate that leprosy organisms are widespread in the soil, and he says:

"Man probably becomes infected through soil contamination of wounds. Segregation and isolation of lepers should be less important for the control of leprosy than is the protection of the feet and body from soil infected wounds and the antiseptic treatment of contracted wounds."

The well-shod man of today seems to be better protected than those generations before good shoes became available to nearly everyone. Dr. Walker holds that leprosy is not primarily a contagious disease by transmissibility from person to person.

Dr. Walker's discovery is experimental proof of the exact nature of the organisms causing leprosy and the fact that it is identical with the agency causing leprosy in rats. Thus rats become potential spreaders of the disease through the soil. He finds evidence that possibly two out of three rats carry latent leprosy in their bodies, although his experiments so far indicate that only one in thousands develops the lesions which are the external sign of the disease.

His work carries forward discoveries made by other scientists. Rat leprosy long has been recognized, but attempts to cultivate it for study did not succeed. Dr. Walker found the key to this disease cycle and concludes that the leprosy organism is not a simple bacterium, but stands intermediate between true bacteria and fungi. He says it assumes a variety of forms and reactions to stains during its lifetime.

NEW ARTIFICIAL SUGAR HAS GRAPE PROPERTIES

BERLIN,—(AP)—German medical circles are keenly interested in the recently invented synthetic sugar, Sionon, produced by a chemist of the great I. G. company.

It is said to be a substitute for sugar in nutrition of diabetics. The synthetic product has a decided sweet taste and may be used for sweetening tea, coffee, soft drinks and various kinds of sweet table dishes. Its principal value, it is claimed, is that it contains virtually the same number of calories as grape sugar.

Sionon is said not to increase the sugar content of the blood.

Chalice Cup Blooms.

NEW YORK—(AP)—A West Indies chalice-cup vine flower, said to be the first produced in this country, bloomed this fall at the New York Botanical garden. The flower is shaped like a long tapering vase.

TRIBUTE

The following minute was adopted by the Executive committee of The William W. Backus hospital.

During nearly the entire history of the Hospital the name of Oliver L. Johnson, Jr., appears in connection therewith He was elected a member of the Executive Committee in 1893 and later served as Secretary for ten years and also Vice-President for eleven years. Feeling that on account of his health he could not give the time and energy which he felt the position required he resigned as Vice-President a month before his death, which occurred on November 23, 1929.

The Committee desires to place on record its appreciation felt for the service rendered to the community as well as to the Hospital by the able and willing counsel of Mr. Johnson. We truly recognize his fidelity to the interests of this institution and the wealth of business ability which he cheerfully gave. His was a service which is rarely equaled for any public organization and he leaves a heritage to stimulate his successors.

Attest: MARY C. LESTER,
Secretary.

POETRY

Thanksgiving.

Thanksgiving is New England's day,
Our history, our lore.
'Twas here the Pilgrims knelt to pray
In thankfulness for store.
Common and humble, brave and true,
Nothing of snobbish pride they knew.

They come to us just once a year,
That quaint New England band,
Who, not owning king, nor having fear,
Settled a savage land.
(Who among us now would go Off to a land he did not know?)

Those aping kings disgrace their stock
And make the Pilgrims cheap
Who turns the key and bolts the lock
This heritage to keep?
Bradford, Alden, Priscilla be
Ever among us verily.

Let lords and ladies segregate,
In countries o'er the sea
And lean upon the crumbling gate
Of their cheap ancestry.
Be ye a nobler race of men.
It should not be beyond your ken.

Though Daniel Dobbins fought and bled,
Was punctured in the shoe,
And Bengy Cressy oftimes said
He won the war, yet who
Has not some ancestors, as I,
Who rallied to some battle cry?

For Dobbins might have been a nut
And Cressy been a bum,
Or just some ordinary mut,
Inclined to chewing gum.
Howbeit, I am thankful for
Longevity's inherent law.

Be thankful for the U. S. A.,
Where every man is king;
And let tradition go its way,
So keep the bigger thing:
Freedom—to own a bit of sod!
Freedom—to think and worship God!
—F. A. R. in Springfield Union.

Thanksgiving.

To Thee, O God, we render thanks
For all Thy mercies sure;
Thy tender love environs us
And will through life endure.

Teach us to know Thy perfect will
And truly humble be;
May we in gladness praise Thy name
Throughout eternity.

Thou art our refuge and our strength
There is no other power;
When sudden danger threatens us,
We find in Thee a tower.

To Thee, O God, we render thanks
And call upon Thy name;
A psalm of praise to Thee we sing,
Thy wondrous love proclaim.
—Grenville Kleiser in Nautilus.

Archie's finances worried his old friends rather more than they did him. One day an acquaintance said to him:

The country doctor was annoyed by requests to pull teeth but consented to when a man came groaning to his door. He conducted him to the kitchen.
"Oh, doctor, will it hurt?"
"Well, if it don't I won't charge you anything," was the gruff answer.
After nearly yanking the patient's head off he was amazed to see him head for the door. "Well," he roared, "aren't you going to pay me?"
"You said if it didn't hurt you wouldn't charge me nawthin'."
"Well, didn't it hurt?"
"Never hurt a dam' bit," and the man went groaning off.—Boston Transcript.

CHOO-CHOOS IN HUES ENTER RAILROADING

WILMINGTON, Del.—(AP)—Railroad locomotives in reds, blues and greens are foreshadowed by requests for advice on colors received by the research department of the du Pont company.

There are few colored locomotives in the United States yet, but inquiries hint that the idea is popular. The locomotive of the Minute Man, a crack train of the Boston & Maine railroad, is painted "Minute Man blue," with a band of buff, edged with red.

R. W. Filler, general manager of the Hawaii Consolidated Railway company, writes that he has been experimenting with colored paints on boiler jackets, cabs and tenders of two locomotives of his line and that the results are so pleasing some color scheme will be applied to all the iron horses.

HARVARD'S DEATHS IN WAR TWICE AVERAGE OF NATION

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—(AP)—The loss of life of Harvard men in the world war was at a rate nearly double that of the country as a whole, says Prof. Harrison R. Hunt of Michigan State college in a report to the American Eugenics society.

Professor Hunt said he dug out those figures in several years study seeking to establish whether war takes a higher toll of the fit or the unfit.

His studies show that for the enlistments of the country as a whole the death rate was .55 per cent. For Harvard enlistments it was .96 per cent.

Norwich fans will be treated to two fast games of basketball tonight at the "Y" court when the "Y" outfit will meet the famous Heller Bros. Five and the Bearcats of New Britain, last year's city champs.

The Heller Bros., who reside in Willimantic, are all playing with some college team. Sam, Harry and Hy are with Brown university, Max, with Boston university, and Abe at Columbia. This team won 26 out of 28 games during 1928-29, and is the only attraction of its kind on the road since the Johnson Bros. of New Jersey disbanded.

The New Britain team will have Bill Davis, former Suffield star and Red Matulis of Temple university in their line-up.

Coach Demarest, of the local squad will send Mondi Normandin, Brown, Harris, Pingree and Eccleston against the Heller Bros. and will use the Junior Varsity against New Britain. The Junior Varsity lineup includes most of last year's Academy team with the addition of Ludlow at center and Leffingwell at forward. Tommy Lynch will play the other forward position and Barber and Stevens will play in the back court. Dickeman, Lambert and Golembeski will be held in reserve.

Manager Leffingwell has made accommodations for 500 people and everything is all set for a great Thanksgiving night's entertainment with Randy Whaples, a Central Broad referee, officiating in both games. First game with New Britain starts at 8 p. m.

JONES NOW HAS TWO FIRST STRING VARSITIES

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 27.—(AP)—Capt. Biff Jones created two first string elevens today, and sent each in turn against a strong plebe outfit in a long scrimmage, perhaps the hardest work of the week, in preparation for the Army's annual battle with Notre Dame at the Yankee stadium in New York Saturday. By inserting reserve players into the two first-string lineups, the Army coach was able to drill just that many more men in the style of attack he expects to employ against the Irish.

A dummy defensive scrimmage scheduled for tomorrow will end the season's work on the plains. The team will depart for New York on Friday to have a brief drill at the Travers Island field of the New York Athletic club, where the squad will make its headquarters until just prior to game-time. No work will be attempted in the Yankee stadium.

Some defensive practice was indulged here today, and this revealed that the Cadet line has some distance to travel before being ready for Saturday's game. Perry was virtually the only man who stood out on defence.

Both offensively and defensively, the second first-string line organized today seemed to have an edge over the real first line. The second combination stood its ground determinedly in guarding its forward passes.

The first line on the field was made up to Messinger, Perry, Hillsinger, Lazar, Humber, Price and Carlmark. The second included Malloy, Spengler, Grice, Miller, Suarez, Parham and Kenny. Carver, Glattly, Murrell and Cagle were the first backfield, and Gibner, Harris, Piper and Hutchinson, the second.

TROJANS PLAY BOYS' CLUB AT NEW LONDON TODAY

The Trojans, Norwich's only football team outside of the Academy, will take up the battle with New London today where the Academy left off last Saturday with Bulkeley and will tackle the Boys' club at Morgan park in the whaling city. The game starts at 10:30 a. m.

This is the third meeting of these teams this season, the first resulting in a 6-6 tie in Norwich and two weeks ago, the New Londoners won, 13 to 7, largely through a break of the game. The Trojans will be re-inforced by several Academy players, including Chet Berzhinzo, captain of the 1929 Wildcats, Hertz, Stevens, Cotter and Abugle. Several Bulkeley and Chapman Tech stars appear with the Boys' club.

The Trojans will take the field as follows: Berzhinzo le, Hertz lt, Michelson lg, Abugle c, Stevens rg, Rozik rt, Stockwell re, Frink qb, Cotter lhb, Economous rhb, Krohn fb and captain.

NOTED MARATHONERS READY FOR ANNUAL BERWICK RUN

BERWICK, Pa., Nov. 27.—(AP)—Middle distance runners of the United States and Canada arrived here tonight to participate in the twentieth annual Berwick marathon tomorrow.

Gus Moore of Pittsburgh, national senior cross country champion and Phil Silverman of Brooklyn, N. Y., the winner last year, Anderson of Finland, and Jimmy Henigan of Boston were among early arrivals.

The field of 37 is one of the largest ever entered. Marathon officials predicted that the course record of 47 minutes, 56 2-5 seconds set by Willie Kola, in 1922 would be broken unless rain that began tonight turns four miles of the course into a quagmire. Johnny Miles of Canada is the only star entered to be scratched.

NOTRE DAME CONFIDENT OF VICTORY OVER ARMY

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Nov. 27.—(AP)—Surcharged by a grim determination to fulfill their ailing coach's dream of an undefeated and untied football team, Notre Dame's championship-bound Ramblers tonight hustled through their final home workout for the Army.

Not since the practice sessions for the Southern California game were spirits as high as they appeared tonight among the ranks of the Ramblers. Their blocking was timely, their passes fast and precise and their defense against Army plays good.

"We are ready for anything the Army's got," said Coach Knute Rockne. "I haven't been able to watch my boys this week, but I have talked to most of them and they haven't slackened a bit despite their terrific schedule."

The team, 36 strong, will depart for New York tomorrow morning, followed by a special train carrying South Bend and Notre Dame rooters. They will be billeted at the Westchester Country club at Rye, N. Y. Friday night and will come to New York city only a few hours before game time.

Coach Rockne, slowly recovering from a blood clot in his right leg, will not accompany the team.

"I have learned my lesson," Notre Dame's sick general said, "and will stay at home. I expect my boys to have a tough fight, but believe they will bring back the Army's scalp."

Tom Lieb will direct the Notre Dame fortunes during the game. With the exception of Tim Moynihan, regular center, who fractured a bone in his leg in the Northwestern game last week, every member of the Notre Dame squad was in fine physical shape for the game. Moynihan will be replaced by Joe Nash, who might have received the call anyway because of his ability to break up the type of passing game the Army is expected to launch Saturday. Tom Yarr, half-breed Indian, and Yelland are other reserves for the pivot post.

Saturday's game will mark the end of the collegiate football careers of seven regulars—Johnny Colerick, left end; Ted Twomey, left tackle; Jack Cannon, left guard; Nash and Moynihan, centers; Capt. Johnny Law and Jack Elder, halfbacks. But no one should feel sorry for Rockne next season. He will have another powerful team, including such veterans as Savoldi, Brill, Carideo and others.

Most of this week's practice has been centered on the problem of solving a defense for the Army's ace, Red Cagle. Mike Koken, one of the second string halfbacks, adopted Cagle's role all week and was stopped consistently. Stopping "Red" in person is something else, the Notre Dame coaches admit despite their outward confidence.

ARMY-NOTRE DAME TICKETS BRINGING $100 A PAIR

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—(AP)—The demand for tickets at almost any price to the Army-Notre Dame football game this Saturday at the Yankee stdaium breaks all records for sporting events in New York, in the opinion of Broadway ticket brokers.

Speculators today asked and received fancy prices for pastboards of any description for the contest which will bring the eastern gridiron season to a climax and determine Notre Dame's national championship ranking. The prices ranged from $35 a pair for tickets of less desirable location to $100 a pair and upward for locations between the 20 yard lines.

The game has been a sell out for the last few years but authorities at West Point estimate that more than 200,000 requests have been received for the 75,000 seats available. Standing room probably will increase the attendance to about 80,000.

Pharmer is Married

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 27.—(AP)—Charles Arthur Pharmer, backfield star of the University of Minnesota football team, and Miss Mary Smith, Minneapolis, were married today. Pharmer's home is in Pittsfield, Mass. After a short wedding trip the couple will return to Minneapolis.

DARTMOUTH PERFECTS ITS DEFENSE AGAINST NAVY

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 27.—(AP)—Defense against the contemplated aerial attack of the Middies occupied the major part of Dartmouth's drill here today in preparation for the last game of the season against Navy at Philadelphia on Saturday.

The remainder of the workout consisted of signal drills, aerial offense and a mock scrimmage practice in which Navy line plays were used by the scrubs.

The big Green will be given a day of rest tomorrow and the entire squad will go to Philadelphia to witness the Penn-Cornell battle. They will return here tomorrow night for their final drill on Friday.

Coach Cannell declared today that all his men are in excellent condition, but refused to make any statements concerning the outlook for the coming game.

CHOCOLATE KAYOES O'DOWD IN THE SECOND ROUND

NEW YORK, Nov. 27—(AP)—Kid Chocolate, Cuba's dusky featherweight ace, knocked out Eddie O'Dowd of Columbus, Ohio, in the second round of their ten round bout at the St. Nicholas arena tonight. A fast right stopped O'Dowd after a minute and 37 seconds of fighting in the second frame.

After a tame first round in which Chocolate landed a few solid blows, the Kid cut loose in the second. He started off by slamming a right to O'Dowd's jaw then after boxing the Chioan into position he swung a quick right for the deciding blow.

Chocolate weighed 126 1-4 pounds, O'Dowd 124 1-2.

In a six round preliminary, Krucore Kimuro of Japan took an easy decision from Jimmy Logan of New York. Kimura weighed 122 3-4, Logan 128 1-4.

WALNUT HALL FARM SELLS 79 YEARLINGS

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—(AP)—While failing to equal its record average of last year, the Walnut Hall farm of Lexington, Ky., today showed the way to America's ranking harness horse breeding farms, when 79 of its yearling trotters went under the hammer at the Old Glory horse auction for an aggregate of $96,350.

Long considered the foremost breeding farm in America for harness horses, the Walnut Hall consignment to the famous 35-year old sale averaged $1,234 or more than twice the amount brought by the 65 future trotters sent to the sale by the Calumet farm, also of Lexington. Colts and fillies bearing the brand of the Calumet farm sold for $38,585, an average of $594 a head.

Susie Says

Thanksgiving Day.

And what does it mean to you? Are you really and truly thankful for the blessings of the year, if any?

Or do you just take things for granted with that feeling that it's your due, anyway, and nobody deserves any thanks.

Well, there's a lotta things I'm thankful for today and I don't mean maybe. And there's lots of things other people should be thankful about too.

Judge Libby and the reporters that covered those liquor cases ought to be thankful that it's over.

The city ought to be thankful those big city detectives aren't going to be here for a month or they'd own the city hall.

The fellow that Dapper MacWilliams pointed out as a bootlegger oughta be thankful that he was only a spectator.

And the fellow who was supposed to be pointed out oughta be thankful that Dapper Mac has a poor memory for faces.

And the taxpayers oughta be thankful that the appropriation for the city court has already been made.

And all us prohibitionists are thankful that the law has been vindicated and that the liquor traffic has got such a solid jolt on the chin, and Norwich is now a dry town.

Now there's a lotta things I could think of that certain people in town oughta be thankful for. And one is that I don't tell what they ought to be thankful for, if you get my meaning.

There's one feller in town who oughta be thankful he don't have to wade ashore from his boat every day when the water's as cold as it is now.

I'm thankful we can buy turkeys and don't have to go and shoot 'em like they did that first Thanksgiving. And I am thankful this column is finished.

ANDY MADE DRUM MAJOR OF ACADEMY BAND

Andy St. Germaine, the Academy's little baseball mascot, has been appointed drum major of the newly formed school band. The musicians, who number 30, have been practicing now for over a month and expect to make their first appearance at an indoor track meet in the state armory in January. The band was formed with money set aside from the balance of the 1929 baseball season. John M. Swahn, veteran band leader, is the leader and Paul Bradlaw, a member of the school faculty, treasurer.

ANDY ST. GERMAINE
To Be Drum Major of Wildcat Band

The personnel of the band follows: Drum major, Andy St. Germaine; trumpets, T. O'Neil, W. Austin, Zagraniski, E. Jordan, L. Deauville, I. Atkind; trombones, R. Johnson, R. Agnew, Mr. L. W. Walden; soprano saxaphones, G. Desjarlais, I. Sadinsky; alto saxaphones, M. Slosberg, W. Agnew; tenor saxaphones, Paul De Lio, S. Przyblysz; clarinets, S. Barber, W. Nowakowski, L. Libby; alto horns, D. Nichols, R. Cormier; baritone horn, E. Reid; bass horn, W. Sebastian; drums, W. Perkins, W. Leonard, J. Dunn, L. Zeller, K. Bailey; cymbals, S. Babcock; bass drum, G. Chappel.

BROWN-COLGATE GAME PROMISES PLENTY OF ACTION

PROVIDENCE, Nov. 27—(AP)—Brown and Colgate will meet here at 11 o'clock tomorrow in the closing football game on the schedules of both colleges and the 14th contest in their series, which began in 1908. The game will be broadcast over radio station WJAR.

Both team swent through their final drills this afternoon on the Brown practice gridiron. Coach Andy Kerr sent his 35 Colgate players through a half hour workout, and Brown followed with a somewhat longer drill.

The Maroon team has lost only one game, suffering a 13 to 6 defeat at the hands of Wisconsin early in the season, and it has not been scored on in the last four games. Brown has been beaten three times by a one-touchdown margin and once by one point.

POLLI, LEADING PITCHER IN A. A. SOLD TO YANKS

ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 27.—(AP)—Americus Polli, leading pitcher in the American Association last year, with 22 victories, has been sold to the New York American league baseball club. Polli is a right hander.

The announcement was made today by R. J. Connery, president of the Saints. The deal was made in the same trade that sent Eugene (Bubbles) Hargrave, Saints' manager, to the Yankees.

FIVE UNBEATEN TEAMS TAKE FIELD TODAY IN THANKSGIVING DAY GAMES

By ALAN GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Nov. 27—(AP)—Five of the foremost unbeaten college football teams hope to have their appetites for the Thanksgiving feast stimulated by victories tomorrow.

The chances are that at least three of the five will come through more or less unscathed. All the facts and figures, so far as they can be relied upon, point to decisive triumphs by Pittsburgh over Penn State, Tulane over Louisiana State and Utah over the Utah Aggies.

Tennessee also is a favorite to beat Kentucky and keep around the top of the Southern Conference heap but the memory of a scoreless tie with the Wildcats last year may haunt the volunteers when they dash on the gridiron at Lexington.

St. Mary's, the fifth unbeaten outfit, entertains the University of Oregon eleven at San Francisco in the outstanding holiday battle on the Pacific coast. St. Mary's has not even been scored on so far, being checked only by California in a scoreless tie, but figures to be pressed to gain any decided edge over the Webfooters from the north.

Here are the records these five undefeated teams seek to embellish:

	W.	T.	P.	O. P.
Tennessee	8	0	270	18
Tulane	8	0	258	45
Pittsburgh	3	0	257	36
Utah	6	0	183	16
St. Mary's	7	1	167	0

The games involving these teams are the most important, so far as the somewhat debatable claims to national championship honors are concerned but traditional contests occupy the major part of the Thanksgiving program and will attract equally as keen interest.

There is traditional rivalry as well as title interest in such a game as Pittsburgh-Penn State, which may draw close to 70,000 to the huge Pitt stadium but the flavor of a long-standing feud will attract about 75,000 to the Pennsylvania-Cornell contest at Franklin field. These two games are the high spots of an eastern holiday slate also including Colgate-Brown at Providence in the morning, Columbia-Syracuse at New York, New York university-Carnegie at the Yankee stadium and West Virginia-Washington & Jefferson at Morgantown, W. Va.

Penn beat Cornell 49 to 0 last Thanksgiving day but the Quakers may be fortunate to have any kind of a margin this year, so marked has been the improvement of the Ithacans. Colgate, Syracuse, New York and West Virginia are favorites of a varying sort in the other counters but that may not mean a thing when the final returns are posted.

Aside from the efforts of Tennessee and Tulane to continue their neck and neck race for the Southern Conference title, Dixie will witness a number of entertaining games, with Alabama and Georgia likely to wage one of the most thrilling. Florida figures to beat Washington & Lee, Vanderbilt to trim Swanenee and Georgia Tech to have little trouble with Auburn. Ancient rivalry prevails in the Virginia-North Carolina and Virginia Military-Virginia Poly encounters.

The Big Six championship will be settled in Nebraska's favor if the Huskers do the expected and beat Iowa State. Missouri and Oklahoma meanwhile clash at Columbia while the Kansan Aggies step out of the conference to tackle the rugged Marquette eleven at Milwaukee.

The big game of the week in the Southwestern Conference is slated for Saturday, between Texas Christian and Southern Methodist, but the holiday fare features Texas against A & M as well as Arkansas against the Oklahoma Aggies.

PUTNAM-KILLINGLY GAME TODAY IS A FEATURE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Nov. 27—The eyes of eastern Connecticut's sporting world will be focused on Adam's field Thursday when northern Windham county's two oldest rivals, Killingly high of Danielson and Putnam high clash in their 11th annual Thanksgiving day battle since 1918. The renewal of this feud Thursday has promises of being one of the best schoolboy classics to be played in the state on the gridiron season wind-up day.

Both teams are in excellent condition for the greatest test of the season. Coaches L. F. Noyes and C. N. Richardson carried airs of confidence today that their charges will come through to ring down the curtain of 1929 with a victory.

ROCKNE SAYS THERE WILL BE NO POST-SEASON GAME

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Nov. 27.—(AP)—Knute Rockne told The Associated Press today there was no possibility for a post-season game for Notre Dame's football team this fall or on New Year's day. This settled reports that Notre Dame might be one of the contestants in the Tournament of Roses game at Pasadena, Cal., New Year's day.

"As soon as my boys get back from the Army game we are going to have their pictures taken and then toss moth balls into their uniform," Coach Rockne said. "There will be no post-season game."

NOTRE DAME SETS NEW MARK FOR CROWDS

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Nov. 27.—(AP)—When Notre Dame's championship-bound Ramblers meet the Army in New York, Saturday, they will have shattered all records for football crowds in one season.

With 70,000 expected for the Army battle, the total estimated attendance for nine games will be 570,000.

The Southern California game at Soldiers' field, Chicago, drew the largest single day's throng—123,000.

H. N. S. vs. Mohegans

The H. N. S. will play the Mohegan football team at the Academy campus Thanksgiving day. The H. N. S. was organized this fall and this is its first football game out of town. The H. N. S. played the Speed Boys with a few outsiders and were beaten by the score of 14 to 9. Both teams have been practicing and a fast game is expected. The probable line-up for the H. N. S.:

Re, Bush; rt, Kusek; c, Bernal; lg, Beaulieu; lt, Vashon; le, Liberty; qb, Solenski; fb, Perry; rhb, Slonski; lhb, Wolkowski.

HIGH SCHOOL SPORTS

With the Bulkeley game over and the football season closed, the Academy will now sit back in an athletic way at least as far as basketball is concerned, and wait for the first baseball call in February. Without basketball at the school, it will seem like a throwback to years ago but by the winter of 1930-31, the school can again take up the sport with increased hope for success.

When Warren Harding took the field for its annual city title game with Central in Bridgeport last Saturday and which it won, 7 to 0, it had a donkey for a mascot. This is the first school in the state to adopt an animal, as per college style.

When the Academy signed Gilbert high of Winsted for a baseball game here next spring it made quite a story. Last winter when Winsted played N. F. A. in basketball and won handily, not to say very easily, its supporters claimed they had just as good a baseball team and could do things with the Academy's crack nine. We shall see what we shall see on April 26, the date of the clash.

Now that the Academy football season is over, we nominate West Hartford high as the best team the locals faced. This school, not rated very high in other games, sure made a wonderful impression in beating N. F. A., 25 to 0. Their interference was superb and the assortment of plays was something to marvel at.

Bulkeley high in New London is to take up basketball after a five-year lapse with inter-class teams. Coach Billy O'Brien, prominent court official and who coached the basketball teams at Stonington, will handle the reins for the Orange and Black. Bulkeley does not expect any great amount of success its first year but will use it to get the sport established. Games and practice will be at the Y. M. C. A.

By next winter, the Academy and Bulkeley can add basketball to their athletic rivalries. The Norton Memorial gym is going to give Academy court teams an advantage over most of the other schools in eastern Connecticut. None of the larger schools have their own playing quarters, Windham using the state armory, Chapman Tech, the Y. M. C. A. and Stonington a private hall.

Scholastic football takes its bow today with the Westerly-Stonington game at Stonington and the Killingly-Putnam game at Putnam. Westerly and Putnam should win, according to the dope, but in these old rivalries, the favorite oftentimes gets bumped.

The Academy football team may not have done much the past season but it put it all over New London, Chapman Tech and Bulkeley being two of the three victims claimed by the Wildcats. Stonington also fell, so that this ought to give the N. F. A. boys the New London county championship.

Here's what the eastern Connecticut largest schools have done so far this season on the gridiron:

	W.	L.	T.	Pct.	Pts.	Op. Pts.
Westerly	7	2	0	.778	99	33
Chapman T.	5	2	2	.714	109	41
Stonington	3	3	1	.500	34	39
Windham	2	3	2	.400	70	51
N. F. A.	3	5	1	.375	51	84
Putnam	2	6	0	.250	47	110
Bulkeley	0	6	3	.000	25	79

The annual Academy football banquet will be held Saturday, Dec. 7, in the school gymnasium.

AND—The Academy-Bulkeley and Chapman Tech hope to get together this week in a three-cornered swimming meet . . . New Britain and Hartford highs made $6,845 out of last Saturday's football game . . . Each receives half, or $3,422.50 . . . In Waterbury today, a large number of the faithful will turn out for the annual Crosby-Wilby grid tilt . . . Billy Schofield, who coached Killingly last year, has his Crosby team entering the fray a 5 to 2 favorite . . . Schofield, just a few years ago, led a Crosby team into this game when he captained the Old Ivy gridders . . . Basketball is beginning to crop up all about us . . . Bacon academy is the latest to start practice . . . Stafford Springs has been at it for a month . . . Coach Conway will have a squad of about 50 men to work with at Chapman Tech for basketball this year . . . West Hartford high has lost its star pitcher, and did not wish to meet the Academy next year in baseball . . . that Fire department game is going to be SOME game . . . ask any fireman . . . the All-team next week.

PLAINFIELD BEATS HOBOKEN GERMANS

(Special to The Bulletin)

PLAINFIELD, Nov. 27—Plainfield Pros continued on their winning streak by defeating the Hoboken Germans, 40 to 30, here tonight. Plainfield opened the scoring on a foul shot by Kasper, then Bernot dropped in three from the center of the floor before the other team had a chance to score.

In the second half the Hoboken Germans came back strong and tied Plainfield after five minutes of play. Then Plainfield slowly forged ahead on long shots by Bernot and Dissinger and held an eight-point lead until the closing minutes of play. The Germans were unable to do anything with the Plainfield passwork.

This was one of the roughest games ever played in Plainfield.

The Plainfield management were sorry because McElwain was unable to get here due to motor trouble. Next week Plainfield plays the Parkwood Pros of Springfield.

In the preliminary the Plainfield Buddies defeated Willimantic, 23 to 15. Eaton and Marriott starred for Plainfield while McSweeney was easily the star for the visitors.

N. Y. COMMISSION EASES OFF A BIT IN RULINGS

NEW YORK, Nov. 27—(AP)—Though the first real snow has yet to fall, the spirit of Christmas was in the air today as the New York State Athletic commissioners prepared a surprise gift package for the local boxing business.

Still a bit hesitant about details, the solons of sock announced that within a week or two official announcement would be made that in the future light champions would be permitted to box in New York state occasionally without having to defend their titles every time they step within a ring. For years one of the most rigid of all commission rules has been the edict that a champion must fight here only at title weight and with his crown in jeopardy.

In the past this rule of the commission has prevented champions of lower divisions stepping out of their classes to battle the rulers or contenders a step above them in weight. Because of this decree Jack Delaney and Tommy Loughran were forced to give up the light heavyweight championship before the commission would sanction their entries into the heavyweight ranks.

In recent months, with the steady increase of fine fight arenas in other major cities of the country, the battle of promoters for attractive cards has become more brisk. Fighting where no rules prevented such matches, Mickey Walker, the middleweight king, has battled the leaders of the light heavyweight division, including Tommy Loughran at Los Angeles. Sammy Mandell stepped into the welterweight class to lose to Jimmy McLarnin in Chicago. In every important division titleholders have appeared outside of New York in overweight matches.

Loss of the opportunity to bid for these lucrative drawing cards is believed to have caused local promoters to loose floods of pursuasive argument upon the boxing commissioners.

The commission is firm, however, in its determination to force champions to defend their titles against worthy challengers at least twice a year. The rule now in the making probably will force a champion to sign definitely for a title defense before the commission will sanction an engagement where the championship is not involved.

The commission decided today that the defeat of Maxey Rosenbloom by Jimmy Slattery in Buffalo last night removed the slapstick star from the ranks of the "big four" named to fight for the vacant 175 pound crown. Slattery now takes his place with Yale Okun, Lou Scozza, and George Courtney as the battlers who must fight it out for recognition here as the new light heavyweight champion.

GREENEVILLE

OBITUARY

Walter J. Konopka Jr.

After two weeks illness Walter J. Konopka, Jr., 23, passed away at his home on Oakridge street, Wednesday morning at 5:30 o'clock. He was born in this city, Nov. 19, 1906, the son of Walter and Julia Konopka. He spent all of his life in Greeneville, was a graduate of St. Joseph's school and was a devoted member of St. Joseph's church. Fraternally he was associated with the St. Joseph's club.

He was a carpenter by trade and was in the employment of the Peck-McWilliams Co. Mr. Konopka was an ardent baseball player and played ball with the Polish Citizen club this past season in the Industrial league.

Besides his parents the deceased is survived by two sisters, Stella and Blanche Konopka and one brother Frank Konopka, all of this city. He has a large circle of friends in this vicinity, who will be grieved upon learning of his death and will extend their heartfelt sympathy to the members of his immediate family in the time of their bereavement.

Thursday evening a shower for Miss Lottie Secile Domoleski, who was united in marriage Monday to Joseph Stanley Garabowsky, was given at her home, 95 Oakridge street. Arrangements were by Mrs. Fannie Belisle, Helen Narocky, Nellie Domoleski and Jennie Wischine. Many games were played during the evening and vocal and piano solos rendered. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Anthony Domoleski and Miss Agnes Domoleski. Miss Domoleski was the recipient of many beautiful and useful gifts.

Among those present were Mrs. Fannie Belisle, Helen Narocky, Nellie Domoleski, Jennie Wischine, Paulina Radzau, Stephea Radzau, Anna Baron, Margaret Kelly, Blanche Perkoff, Stella Perkoff, Mrs. Francis Reck, Josephine Lurick, Frances Lurick, Rose Conners and Dorothy Lurick.

Mr. and Mrs. John Szerlong and family are spending the holidays with Mrs. Szerlong's brother, August Kruchs at Groton.

Troop 21 held its regular meeting in the hall of the Third Baptist church on Monday. Patrol Leader Millard Mulkin had charge of the meeting. The evening's program included passing of two signalling tests, first aid instructions for second and first class scouts were given. Two games were played and the meeting closed by pledging allegiance to the flag. Some of the boys expect to attend an all city hike on Saturday.

SCHULER WINS SERIES IN WEST SIDE PINOCHLE

The West Side pinochle club concluded its first series Wednesday evening with Schuler, who has held first place since the opening night, the winner, having a total score of 48,450. He had a lead of only 380 points over his nearest opponent, Bailey, who captured second, coming up from fourth place, while third position was taken by Ellsworth. Bailey made high score for the evening with 7670, Boynton having low count, 5945. Play will be resumed next Wednesday evening in a new series.

The scores of Wednesday night follow: Schuler 6005, Ellsworth 6030, J. Jordan 6380, Bailey 7670, Pettis 6480, Lewis 6045, Boynton 5945, A. Jordan 1760, Peckham 7265, McNaught 6210, Underwood 6805, Parker 7075.

The final scores were Schuler 48,450; Bailey 48,070; Ellsworth 47,280, J. Jordan 47,205, Pettis 46,725, A. Jordan 46,140, Peckham 46,005, Lewis 45,925, Boynton 46,370, Underwood 45,055, McNaught 44,945, Parker 44,605.

HOSTESS PARTY HELD BY WEST END COMMUNITY

With 15 tables in play, a special hostess party was held by the West End Community association Monday evening at the Elizabeth street school, Mrs. Henry B. Davenport and Mrs. William Partridge being the hostesses. The prize winners were: Mrs. Frank Fields, Mrs. Etta Longever, and Mrs. Retkovske; F. Armstrong, C. B. Carpenter and E. Latimer. The mystery prize went to Russell Crowell. Refreshments of cake, ice cream and coffee were served.

SEEKS $25,000 DAMAGES IN SUIT OVER FALSE ACCUSATION OF THEFT

Suit for $25,000 damages on an allegation of false arrest for the alleged theft of a pocket book has been brought in the superior court by Samuel Siller of Bridgeport against two New London men, Sidney Sulman and Nat. H. Levy. The suit is one of several which was filed Thursday with Clerk John H. Walker of the superior court.

In the complaint it is stated that the plaintiff was for many years a resident of New London and is well known there, and the defendant, Sidney Sulman, is a manufacturer and merchant in New London and an officer of the New London Hebrew Benefit association of which the plaintiff is a member. The defendant, Nat. H. Levy is a servant of Sulman.

On July 2, 1929, Siller called at Sulman's office on Shapley street to inquire about his membership in the benefit association and was there about ten minutes and only in the presence of Sulman and his bookkeeper, the wife of the defendant Levy. On the same day, but some time after, he left Sulman's office and while he was in the store of one Goldie on Bank street, Siller claims that Levy came into the store and spoke to Siller and Goldie. He then went to the door and called in another man, unknown to this plaintiff, whereupon both men took Siller by the arms and forced him from the store into an automobile in which he was taken to the detective bureau of the New London police department. Here, according to Siller's claim, he was searched, even to the extent of removing part of his clothing. No warrant was shown or read to him, nor was he told in any way that he was under arrest.

Sulman was in the New London police station, according to the complaint, where taking the plaintiff by the arm he demanded "the pocketbook." Siller then was accused of taking a pocket-book belonging to Sulman, but was allowed to go by the detective in charge. Siller then went to his rooming house in Hempstead street, and was followed by the defendant and was again charged with the theft of the pocket-book and was held in a room in the rooming house until about midnight. The defendants were accompanied at that time by one other, to the plaintiff unknown, who claimed to be a "federal officer," and who threatened the plaintiff with "imprisonment in a federal jail for two years" unless he confessed to "stealing the pocket-book."

The plaintiff denies that he ever had the pocket-book of the defendant in his possession and claims that he knows nothing of it.

As a result of this experience, he claims to have suffered a nervous breakdown, that he will be unable to attend to his business for a long time and that his good name and reputation have been taken from him.

Suit Over Market Loss

Suit against J. Waterman Wilcox, of Stonington, has been brought by the brokerage firm of Pask and Walbridge of New York, for $750 on a claim that the Stonington man owes the brokerage house $568.02 which he refuses to pay. According to the complaint the amount represents a five point loss on a deal in F. W. Woolworth company stock.

The complaint states that the brokerage company bought 100 shares of Woolworth stock on Sept. 3, 1929, for the account of Wilcox, the price being 100 1-4, which with $25 commission amounted to $100.50. The stock certificate, with draft attached, was sent to the National Bank of Commerce of New London but Wilcox failed to pay the draft, whereupon the brokerage company, on Sept. 9, 1929, gave Wilcox notice to meet the payment at their office in three days or they would sell the stock in the market, which they did on Sept. 12, at the price of 95 1-4. With deduction of $20 commission and 40-cent tax the proceeds were $9,304.60, which was credited to the Wilcox account and left him owing the brokerage concern $568.02.

Foreclosure On Lien

Foreclosure of a mechanics lien for $1,418.65 against Cosmus DeFrancis and Malvina DeFranks, both of Waterford, and others, is sought by the Raymond and Alexander Lumber company of New London. The property is on the Great Neck road in the town of Waterford where the plaintiff furnished material and did labor between Sept. 10, 1928 and Sept. 4, 1929. It is claimed that the defendants have paid nothing on account of the debt. The Savings Band of of the debt, The Savings Bank of gage on the property.

To Get Property Back

Edward Krause, of Groton, who is 71, and claims he suffered a severe shock on Christmas day last year, has brought suit against Minnie McPhearson, alias Horniss, of Riverside, R. I., to get back from her two tracts of real estate on Buddington road, Groton, which she induced him to convey to her. He claims that he was mentally incompetent when he made the deed and he asks the court for a re-conveyance of the property to him.

The plaintiff claims that the transfer was made without consideration and that it has impoverished him and he asks for $4,000 damages.

SCOUTS TELL ROTARIANS OF ATTENDING JAMBOREE

Four members of the New London council of Boy Scouts were guests of the boys' work committee of the Norwich Rotary club at the luncheon held on Wednesday noon at the Wauregan hotel. The four, Scoutmaster Sidney Moon, Scout Allyn Nibbs, Scout Waters White and Scout Paul Tubbs, told the Rotarians of the international jamboree of the Boy Scouts at Arrow park in England which they attended last August.

Scoutmaster Moon told the Rotarians of the background of Boy Scouts and the objects of the jamboree. Scout Nibbs told of the jamboree and trips through England, while Scout White told of the trip to Holland and the trip to France was told by Scout Tubbs.

The scouts were given a hearty vote of appreciation.

At the business session President F. R. Murdy presided and Joseph C. Worth was song leader assisted by William G. Park. The usual contribution to the Red Cross was voted.

Arthur M. Brown, chairman of the program committee for December, announced his program as follows:

Dec. 4—M. T. Yamanoto, of Japan, speaker.

Dec. 11—Rev. Dr. T. M. Shipherd, speaker.

Dec. 18—Charles L. Stewart, speaker.

Dec. 24—Christmas meeting with special music.

The meeting closed with the singing of the Star Spangled Banner

CHRISTMAS SEAL SALES READY TO BEGIN IN CITY

Mrs. Richard B. Snow for the third consecutive year will again serve as chairman of the Christmas seal sale. For several weeks Mrs. Snow and her committee have been working out the details for the sale which starts Nov. 29 and will continue until Christmas day.

The money received from the sale will be used, as in other years, to help fight the dread disease of tuberculosis in Norwich. Eighty-five cents of every dollar contributed here remains in Norwich.

The purchase of seals last year made it possible to give remarkable service to many children of this city. These anemic and malnourished children were visited constantly by public health nurses, provided with milk or sent to the sanatoria, later to be returned to their homes healthy and happy children.

A goal of $5,000 has been set for this year that a greater good may be accomplished. It must be remembered by Norwich people that a successful seal sale is not an end in itself. It is simply the community's method of purchasing health protection and leadership in the future prevention of tuberculosis and the reduction of the death rate. Tuberculosis is both preventable and curable and deaths from a preventable and curable disease are a reflection upon the community in which they occur.

The National Tuberculosis association states that at the same instant from coast to coast church bells and school bells will be rung to announce the opening of the Christmas seal sale. This will be at 10 o'clock on Friday morning.

BENEFIT BRIDGE FOR BOZRAHVILLE SECTION

A very successful bridge party was held at the home of Mrs. Harry Libby, 28 Fanning avenue, Tuesday evening for the benefit of the Bozrahville section, National Council of Jewish Women. The proceeds will go towards the welfare work of the council.

Refreshments were served after the game by the hostesses, Mrs. Harry Libby, Mrs. Louis Pollack, Mrs. Mary Cohen. There were eight tables at play with a prize at each table.

Prizes were awarded to the following: Mrs. H. Cramer, Mrs. R. Herts, Mrs. E. Sears, Mrs. A. Savage, Mrs. C. Slosberg, Mrs. S. J. Sohn, Mrs. B. Cohen, Mrs. L. Pollack.

THANKSGIVING SERVICE FOR UNITED CHURCHES

The union Thanksgiving service, under the auspices of the Norwich Ministers association, will be held this (Thursday) evening at 7:30 at Park Congregational church, with the sermon preached by the pastor of the church, Rev. Theodore M. Shipherd, and the pastors of the First Congregational, A. M. E. Zion, Christ Episcopal, Trinity Methodist and Thrid Baptist churches participating in the conduct of the service.

Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey, president of the Ministers' association, will preside. The order of worship will be as follows: Hymn, Come Ye Thankful People, Come; reading of the governor's proclamation, Rev. E. W. Gantt; anthem, by Park church choir; reading of the Scripture, Rev. Thomas Richey; prayer, Rev. Joseph Cooper; offertory; hymn, We Plough The Fields and Scatter; sermon, Rev. Theodore M. Shipherd, D. D.; hymn, America; benediction, Rev. H. P. Brothwell.

The collection taken at the service will be devoted to the work of the Norwich Council of Religious Education. This work comprises the daily vacation Bible school for children during the summer; the Americanization program of weekly work devoted to children through the year, especially those children of alien parentage; support of the state council of religious education; the carrying on of institutes for religious education throughout the northern part of New London county; and other items of interest to the youth of our section. This is a work of inter-denominational character, belonging to the whole Protestant constituency. It is a united work, binding the churches together for the Kingdom. The budget this year calls for an expenditure of $2,500 for all purposes and needs the support of churches and individuals to make it effective.

NEW SHELTON INFIRMARY WILL TAKE 102 PATIENTS

The state tuberculosis commission has approved the final plans submitted for a new infirmary building at Laurel Heights, Shelton. The new building when completed will house 102 patients, and will provide an auditorium, four wards and a medical section. The legislature has approved an appropriation of $120,000 for this building, of which $100,000 has been set aside for construction.

The final plans for the new infirmary building at Undercliff, Meriden, have not yet been submitted. This building, when completed, will cost the state $125,000, an appropriation having been made by the last general assembly. The two buildings will add to the total of the work being considered by the state for immediate execution as part of the program to be outlined to President Hoover as the state's reply to the plea for cooperation in an effort to stabilize business conditions.

EXPECT $125,000 IN CHRISTMAS SEAL SALES

It is the expectation that total sales in the Christmas seal sales, for the benefit of the anti-tuberculosis work, will increase this year from $115,000 to $125,000. A quarter of a billion seals will be placed on sale in the campaign, in which last year this state was sixth in the seal sales, and Connecticut was the only state between one and two million of population which raised a sum in excess of $100,000.

Organization plans which have just been completed include the re-appointment by the state tuberculosis commission of all the former agencies, and the establishment of two new units in Ridgefield and Clinton.

Leaders representing the following organizations in charge of the work in various parts of the state are: Boxrah — Anti-Tuberculosis committee, Mrs. W. L. McManus; Griswold—Dorcas circle of King's Daughters, Miss M. Adelaide Burdick; Groton—The Entre Nous club, Miss Mary Cone; Danielson—The Civic federation, Mrs. James M. Paine; Montville—Visiting Nurse association, Mrs. Ralph H. Melcer; New London—Tuberculosis Seal committee, Mrs. H. W. Wellington; Norwich—Tuberculosis Seal committee—Mrs. Richard B. Snow; Old Lyme—Red Cross chapter, Mrs. E. L. Marsh; Plainfield—Moosup Nursing association, Thomas Hope; Putnam—Red Cross chapter, George W. Baker; Stafford—Current Events club, Mrs. George Siswick; Stonington—Visiting Nurse association of Mystic, John Rossie; Waterford—Red Cross chapter, Mrs. Frank Howard; Willimantic—Visiting Nurse association, Mrs. John Reilly; Vernon—Rockville Visiting Nurse association, Mrs. Carrie Kane.

CONSIDER NEXT MOVE AGAINST M'COOK ESTATE

Discussion of the renewal of condemnation proceedings against the Eliza McCook estate at Crescent beach where a portion of the property is desired for an addition to Seaside tuberculosis sanitarium occupied the attention of the state tuberculosis commission at its regular meeting in the state capitol at Hartford this week. The commission conferred with Attorney General Benjamin Alling in regard to the situation.

The original effort to secure a portion of the property ended last summer when the supreme court ruled that condemnation proceedings were illegal, as the act authorizing proceedings was not signed by the governor until after the time limit for signing bills had expired.

This decision caused a special session of the state legislature as some 1,500 acts also fell within the scope of the decision and it became necessary to repass these acts. Condemnation proceedings must again be started if the state wishes to obtain the land, and it was concerning the preliminary steps to be taken that the commission conferred with the attorney general.

An appropriation of $25,000 has already been made for the purchase of that part of the McCook estate needed and a further appropriation of $175,000 for the erection of a new building has been voted as well as a smaller sum for the installation of a new filter bed.

The site is regarded as exceptionally favorable for the treatment of tuberculosis by out-of-state authorities who have visited the sanitarium and resumption of proceedings has been discussed informally for some time in the state capital.

HOLCOMB, WAR GOVERNOR, OBSERVING 85TH BIRTHDAY

Marcus H. Holcomb, war governor of Connecticut, will observe his 85th birthday today (Thursday) at the old Holcomb homestead in New Hartford, surrounded by members of his family. He was born Nov. 28, 1844, in that town, the son of Carlos and Adah Holcomb.

Admitted to the bar in 1871, he located in Southington in 1872, became town counsel, drew the borough charter and was judge of probate there for 30 years. He was elected republican state senator in 1892 and two years later was chosen treasurer of Hartford county, which office he held for 15 years. He became a member of the republican state central committee and the first judge and clerk of Southington town court. He was elected to the house in 1905 and became its speaker. Elected in 1906 as attorney general of the state, he served nearly four years before resigning to take a place on the superior court bench. In 1914 he was elected governor and served for six years of a most trying period.

NORWICH TOWN

NEW LONDON MINSTRELS MADE BIG HIT MONDAY NIGHT

The Samuel Huntington school held an appreciative gathering Monday evening when in the large auditorium the Black and White Minstrel troup of New London provided an excellent program. The company of 40 or more came to Norwich Town as a special favor to the Sacred Heart parish, under whose auspices the minstrels were given. Among the members of the troup were several accomplished musicians. This orchestra not only accompanied the soloists, but later in the evening played for dancing. The chorus of mixed voices, special solo numbers, interpretative dancing, sketches, etc., were received with great favor and heartily applauded. Encore numbers were frequent. The men's committee which had general charge of the evening's event, included Thomas White, William A. Murphy, Timothy J. Fields and William Burns.

METHODIST C. E. PRESENTS NOTED READER, MISS MAYO

The C. E. society of the Methodist Episcopal church presented most excellent entertainment at the Samuel Huntington school Tuesday night. The principal entertainer was Miss Pauline Mayo of New York, a reader noted from one end of the country to the other for her presentations. Her numbers included impersonations, monologs and sketches in costume. All were well received by the audience as her work is not only interesting and appealing but of a high standard professionally. During the program music was furnished by the well known violinist Henry Ladd, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Lewis E. Aldrich. The music numbers which were heartily applauded, were "The Shepherd Boy," "Supposin," "Rose Marie," and "Danny Boy."

Miss Mayo's selections ranged from impersonating a two months' old baby to an 80-year old couple. Her reading of Ida Tarbell's "He Knew Lincoln" and "The Interrupted Elopement," by Joseph Lincoln were especially well received and heartily encored. Lewis E. Aldrich, president of the society introduced the reader and announced the program. Inez Edmiston and Ralph Smith assisted with the tickets.

William Burdick left Wednesday to spend the holiday and week end with his brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Burdick of North Stonington.

Boys' Heads Covered With Ringworms. Healed by Cuticura.

"My two boys had ringworms on their scalps which they contracted at school. In about two weeks their heads were covered with scaly, sore eruptions. The trouble caused their hair to fall out and lasted about three months.

"I sent for a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and after using it purchased more. In about eight days I could see that the eruptions were disappearing, and after using two cakes of Cuticura Soap and three boxes of Cuticura Ointment they were completely healed." MORE THAN $1,000,000 FIRE LOSS AT NANTASKET BEACH

Five Steamboats Were Destroyed—A Section of Paragon Park, a Railway Station and the State Bath Houses Were Consumed by the Flames—A Fifty Mile Gale Fanned the Fire and Swept the Sparks Inland.

HULL, Mass., Nov. 28.—(AP)—More than $1,000,000 damage was done and two men were injured tonight by a fire which threatened to destroy that section of Nantasket beach near the steamboat wharf.

Five steamboats known to thousands of excursionists, the wharf, coal houses and boiler room owned by the Nantasket Beach Steamboat company, were destroyed. A section of Paragon park, an amusement place, was destroyed as was the railway station and the state bath houses. Sparks set fire to the roofs of 12 houses on Atlantic hill nearby and St. Anne's Catholic church, but firemen managed to prevent the destruction of the buildings.

Fred L. Lane, general manager of the steamboat company, set the damage to his concern at more than $1,000,000 and Fire Chief Harry J. Stevens estimated that $50,000 damage had been done outside of the steamboat property.

Sergeant Thomas Kelleher of the metropolitan police department fell from the roof of the bath house, which houses the office of the police department and received a broken arm. William Hatch, a Hingham fireman, in going to Kelleher's aid, fell from the roof and was taken to a hospital with a serious back injury.

The steamers burned were the Old Colony, Nantasket, Betty Alden, Mary Chilton, and Rose Standish. Soon after the fire started the tug, Mars, was sent from Boston to tow the steamboats away from the burning wharf but it went aground on the way here. Captains James McNamara and John McFarlane, were on their boats when the fire attacked them but got to safety.

A 50-mile gale fanned the fire and swept the spars inland. Soon after the discovery of the blaze, which originated in the ticket office of the steamboat company from an undetermined cause, apparatus was sent from Weymouth, Hingham, Cohassett, Scituate, Braintree and Boston. A fire boat and two pumpers came from Boston.

THANKSGIVING DAY QUIET IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—(AP)—The annual Thanksgiving for the blessings of the year was observed in quiet dignity throughout Washington today with worship and rest.

Along with many officials of the government, President Hoover carried out the spirit of his Thanksgiving day proclamation by attending holiday services and remaining in seclusion at home.

In keeping with Mr. Hoover's proclamation statement, "that assurances of peace, at home and abroad, have been strengthened," the chief executive heard from the pulpit of the church he attended the plea that America lead the world into brotherly peace. The sermon was preached by Bishop William Frazer McDowell in the Metropolitan Memorial Methodist church at a union service by all churches of that denomination in Washington.

Without referring specifically to the forthcoming naval limitations conference in London, Bishop McDowell said the "supreme opportunity," for American world leadership to peaceful pursuits is at hand.

"We may be grateful for this," the bishop said, and "if we are successful we may blow trumpets, sing praises and be thankful forever. The United States has the men and the money to make a new mind in the world in this school of Christ concerning peace. We can destroy the old mind of hat and fear."

SAYS HOOVER CONFERENCES HAS PUT COUNTRY AT EASE

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 28. — (AP) — Commenting on the recent economic conferences in Washington, Secretary of the Interior Ray Lyman Wilbur declared today that they had put the country at ease and made the future look more hopeful.

With Mrs. Wilbur, the secretary came here today from Washington to attend the Pennsylvania-Cornell football game. They spent the night with the secretary's sister, Mrs. Frederick M. Pais, Jr., at her home in Wayne, a suburb.

Secretary Wilbur said the action of President Hoover in "welding the big business interests of the country into a vast reservoir committed to constructive economic programs" had so relieved suspense following the decline in the securities market that the economic trend was now definitely upward.

"Among the biggest things the president has accomplished," Mr. Wilbur declared, "have been the pledge of organized labor not to tolerate any nation-wide strikes or labor tie-ups, and the pledge of industrial leaders not to cut wages, thus insuring freedom from economic strife.

"In the place of uncertainty and doubt, plans have been perfected for business to go forward with vigor, the state and federal governments helping measureably with ambitious building programs."

300 AMERICANS CELEBRATED THANKSGIVING IN LONDON

LONDON, Nov. 28.—(AP)—Three hundred Americans, members of the American Society of London, celebrated Thanksgiving tonight with turkey, pumpkin pie and other trimmings that "go" in the United States as well as a few beverages that do not.

Ambassador Charles G. Dawes was guest of honor and made the principal address. The society had expected to entertain Ramsay MacDonald and Frank B. Kellogg, ex-secretary of state, but the prime minister had a previous engagement and Mr. Kellogg had to leave for Southampton to board the Leviathan on which he sailed for the United States at midnight.

THANKSGIVING IN AMERICAN COLONIES IN BERLIN

BERLIN, Nov. 28.—(AP)—The American colonies in Berlin and Frankfort-on-Main observed Thanksgiving day with banquets and dancing.

In Berlin Ambassador Jacob Gould Schurman was guest of honor at the banquet. He read the Thanksgiving proclamation of President Hoover at a morning service in the American church, the Scripture lesson being read by Consul General Randall.

BRITISH STEAMER ASHORE ON THE COAST OF IRELAND

WEXFORD, Irish Free State, Nov. 28—(AP)—The British steamer Joleta, 2,500 tons, went ashore in a fog today five miles off the Tuskar Rocks, but was reported to be in no danger tonight.

Several tugs were standing by and will attempt to tow her off tomorrow. The Wexford lifeboat, which went out to the steamer's assistance, returned to port, there being no further need for

WITNESSED EFFECTS OF TIDAL WAVE AT BURIN

HALIFAX, N. S., Nov. 28.—(AP) — Captain H. M. Brushett, of the S. S. Fernfield, the first ship to reach this province from the Burin, N. F., peninsula where the tidal wave which followed the earthquake of November 18, took a toll of 26 lives today corroborated earlier amounts of panic and terror among the stricken populace.

"We entered the harbor at 10 o'clock at night, shortly after the disaster," he said, "and our first intimation that anything was amiss came when we were in the midst of a succession of stores and a few dwelling houses passing out to sea.

"It just seemed as though the water in Burin harbor raised straight up from the ocean bed and then receded three times in succession, taking with it all stores and dwelling houses within its grasp. Pandemonium reigned along the waterfront and the terror stricken populace betook themselves to the hills.

"Five times during the night, while we were tide up in the harbor the watch reported that the sea had suddenly risen to a height of two feet. Then it would quickly recede."

At one time the Fernfield was believed to be missing, due to delayed communication from the stricken area. The steamer which plies between here and St. Pierre, Miq., and Burin had sailed from St. Pierre on the morning of the disaster.

DIVORCE GRANTED MRS. MARY NORMA GLECKLER

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 28.—(AP)—Another blasted romance of the screen and stage came to light today with the granting of a divorce to Mrs. Mary Norman Gleckler, who several years ago was a featured player of the films under the name of Norma Phillips, from Robert P. Gleckler.

Gleckler himself is an actor, having played the racketeer in the stage play "Broadway, and later appeared as Wick Snell, ne'er-do-well newspaperman in the stage play of "Gentlemen of the Press."

The decree was handed down by Judge Eli Frank in circuit court on Mrs. Gleckler's petition that her husband had deserted her in 1926 after six years of married life, telling her that he "did not want to live with her any longer."

Gleckler is living at Long Island, N. Y., according to the papers in the case, and Mrs. Gleckler, who has been in business as a play broker in New York, is living in Baltimore with her mother, Mrs. Victoria Phillips.

NEGRO WAS SLAIN AND ANOTHER NEGRO WOUNDED

NORTH HAVEN, Nov. 28.—(AP)—Archie Suggs, 35, a Negro, was slain and another Negro known as "Babe Ruth" Simpson, was slightly wounded today, when a third Negro entered the latter's shack at the workers' camp of the American Creosoting company in Montowese, and fired two bullets from a .38 caliber revolver. The police are seeking James B. Macelya, allast McLay as the assailant.

Police said that there appeared to be no provocation for the shooting.

About 10 employes of the creosoting concern were in the shack when Macelya entered it and fired the two shots after saying, "Who said I can't fire my gun in this shack?" A preliminary investigation, Deputy Coroner James J. Corrigan, said, revealed that Macelya appeared to be intoxicated.

Suggs died instantly, a bullet entering his heart. The second bullet grazed Simpson's right side.

THREE CHILDREN FELL THROUGH ICE AND DROWNED

AUGUSTA, Me., Nov. 28.—(AP)—Three small children were drowned as they fell through thin ice on Two Mile brook, near here today, and their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene H. Parlin nearly sacrificed their own lives in their frantic rescue attempts. The children were Beatrice, aged 5, Irene, 6, and Catherine, 8. Their bodies were recovered.

Mrs. Nellie Parlin, in a critical condition from shock and exposure, may not recover. She was dragged from the icy water by her 11 year old son, Leavitt, one of the nine Parlin children. The youngest of the nine Parlin children was born not three weeks ago.

BROTHERS ARRESTED IN CONNECTION WITH THEFTS

BRISTOL, Nov. 28.—(AP)—John and Joseph Janick, brothers, 22, and 20 years old, respectively, and Alphonse Pisarski, 16, were arrested today in connection with a series of house burglaries, which have been committed here during the past month. They are being held without bonds and will be arraigned tomorrow

GRANADA, Spain, Nov. 28.—(AP)—Washington Irving, whose writings spread the fame of Granada and the Alhambra in the then young United States, will be honored with a museum here.

VATICAN CITY, Nov. 28.—(AP)—Marguerite Gadum, the Swedish woman who on Sunday tried to shoot Mgr. Smit, former apostolic vicar of Norway, in St. Peter's cathedral steadfastly refused to explain her act to an examining magistrate.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—(AP)—For three hours coal owners discussed with the cabinet coal committee the government's legislative proposals with regard to mining. It was reported there was little possibility of the owners agreeing with the government's proposals.

JUNEAU, Alaska, Nov. 28.—(AP)—Russian fliers will join the search for Pilot Carl Ben Eielson and his mechanic, Earl Borland, in two planes brought to Providence Bay aboard the Soviet ice breaker Litke, a radio to Governor George W. Parks from J. H. Anderson, signal corps man in charge of the Teller radio station, said yesterday.

LUTHERAN MISSIONARY IN CHINA WAS KIDNAPED

HANKOW, Nov. 28.—(AP)—Bandits today kidnaped Mrs. Oscar Hellestad, an American Lutheran missionary at Synyeh southwest Honan province. Mrs. Hellestad has been a missionary in China 20 years.

The American consulate has demanded that the nationalist government take action to gain Mrs. Hellestad's release.

Besides Mrs. Hellestad, another American missionary—the Rev. Ulrich Kreutzen, of Calumet, Mich., was kidnaped by central China bandits this month.

Kreutzen, attached to the Franciscan mission at Wuchang, stated in a letter received Wednesday at Wuchang that he was being held in the mountains south of Teyeh, Hupeh province, for ransom of 6,000 Mexican dollars. His death was threatened by his captors, he said, if his rescue were attempted.

JAPANESE MINISTER TO CHINA COMMITTED SUICIDE

TOKYO, Nov. 28.—(AP)—(Friday)—Sadao Saburi, Japanese minister to China and former Japanese charge d'affaires at Washington, committed suicide early today at Miyanoshita, a fashionable mountain resort 46 miles southwest of Tokyo.

A telephone report from the resort said Saburi shot himself with a pistol at the Fujiya hotel, where he had been staying. He returned to Japan recently from Nanking to consult with government officials prior to undertaking new negotiations with China.

Saburi was considered among the most brilliant members of the Japanese foreign service with a distinguished career ahead. His friends were unable to give a motive for his act except that he had been despondent since his wife's death in 1926.

He was the Japanese charge de'affaires at Washington in 1924 and at London in 1928.

SEARCHING FOR BODIES IN WRECK OF MOLESEY

LONDON, Nov. 28—(AP)—Fishermen clad in oilskins and waders today searched the hull of the steamship Molesey off the Pembrokeshire coast for the bodies of victims of Monday's wreck, five of which are still missing.

Accompanied by coast guard officials they clambered aboard the wrecked steamship during a driving rain, while waves washed over the broken deck, and searched the cabins and some of the holds.

The Molesey has gradually settled since she struck the rocks and now only the mast, some shattered fittings and, occasionally, part of the deck, are visible from shore. While the search was progressing, coast guards, police and fisherfolk kept watch along the coast.

PARTIAL CURE DUE TO VISIT TO MALDEN SHRINE

GREENWICH, Nov. 28.—(AP)—Unable to walk for the past 17 years, Mrs. Charles W. Carvette, of this city, who visited the grave of Father Power in Malden, Mass., last Sunday, was reported today as having taken 15 steps without the aid of crutches.

Mrs Carvette has used crutches since she was stricken with spinal meningitis 17 years ago. Since her return from the shrine, whose reported curative powers attracted thousands to Malden, she has made frequent attempts to cast aside her crutches and today succeeded in walking 15 steps without them.

Mrs. Carvette said she was confident that her trip to the shrine would ultimately result in her complete recovery.

HEAVY RAINS IN LISBON, PORTUGAL CAUSE FLOODS

LISBON, Portugal, Nov. 28.—(AP) — Torrential rains, falling steadily for 24 hours, caused floods today in several sections of the Portguese capital.

The food market, near the Tagus river, was several feet under water. Street car service was suspended in many parts of the town.

In some streets the water rushed into basements, forcing many of the poor from their homes.

The city water supply's reservoir burst, flooding a large section of the capital.

British Labor Party On Verge Of Defeat

Absentee Liberals and Conservatives Enabled Labor Party to Defeat Amendment to Unemployment Insurance Bill.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—(AP)—The fact that many members were absent saved the labor party from defeat tonight when liberals and conservatives voted together for the first time on a liberal amendment to the unemployment insurance bill.

The government forces had a margin of 70 votes but observers agreed that if the absentees from the opposition parties had been in their seats, the cabinet would have been defeated.

A defeat on this amendment, however, would not have meant resignation of the government. Ramsay MacDonald, prime minister, has announced on several occasions that he would not send in the resignations of the cabinet unless defeat came on a major measure.

The liberal amendment, which was considered in committee of the whole, would have made unemployment benefits applicable to persons under 18 years of age provisional on their attendance at courses of instruction. Margaret Bondfield, minister of labor, opposed this as being unfair while the machinery for giving such courses was lacking.

The labor party benchers cheered loudly when the result of the vote was announced.

NO DESIRE IN ENGLAND FOR GENERAL ELECTION

LONDON, Nov. 28.—(AP) —Sir Herbert Samuel, chief organizer of the liberal party, told the City of London Liberal association today that there was evidently no desire in Great Britain for a general election at an early date.

He said he thought it unlikely that the labor government would suffer any serious embarrassment from the left wing of its own party, and predicted that the course of British politics in the near future would depend on the way in which the government dealt with three grave problems, finance, unemployment, and coal.

TO RE-ENACT LANDING OF PILGRIMS AT PLYMOUTH

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., Nov. 28. — (AP)—The landing of the Pilgrims at Plymouth Rock was re-enacted on the Warm Springs winter pool today by patients of the health resort, who were greeted by Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York, at the annual Thanksgiving pageant and celebration of founders day of the resort.

The exercises depicted in detail the historic landing of the Pilgrim fathers.

Today also was the first anniversary of the opening the glass enclosed pool, and the exercises included a water football game and other contests, in which the New York executive awarded prizes.

Governor Roosevelt was the principal speaker at the Thanksgiving dinner.

REV. CHARLES M. HALL DIED SUDDENLY IN BRIDGEPORT

BRIDGEPORT, Nov. 28.—(AP)—The Rev. Charles ercer Hall, 65, rector of Trinity Episcopal church, died suddenly at the rectory tonight, after an attack of acute indigestion. He was ordained to the priesthood in 1891, and served for 11 years, in a parish at Asheville, N. C., and for 18 years at Kingston, N. Y. He had been here for four years. He is survived by his widow Bertha Parker Hall, a daughter of the late Judge Alton B. Precautions Taken At Clinton Prison

Rumors Were Rife That an Attempt Would Be Made for a General Riot of Some 1,500 Convicts — State Troopers Called.

DANNEMORA, N. Y., Nov. 28.—(AP) —Persistent and widely circulated rumors that an attempt would be made today for a general riot of some 1,500 convicts in Clinton prison here caused Warden Harry M. Kaiser to send out a call for state troopers. Thirty-eight of the state policemen, under Lieutenant Lynch of Malone barracks, hurried to the prison. The riot did not materialize.

All guards, including those who had the day or part of the day off for the Thanksgiving holiday, were summoned back to their posts. Machine guns were placed in key positions on the walls and there was a general feeling of tension, not only at the institution, but throughout the village.

The rumors, flying about for two or three days, had reached the ears of about every person here. Remembering the bloody outbreak of July 22, this year, male residents ate their Thanksgiving dinner while they listened expectantly for the shrieking of the prison's siren.

As the day passed without untoward incidents within the walls the belief grew among the citizenry and guards that the convicts themselves, nettled by the failure of the previous attempt to get out, had started the reports through their grapevine telegraph, with the purpose of calling guards back from their day off.

An entertainment for the inmates, following their Thanksgiving day dinner of chicken and turkey, was permitted to continue under the watchful eyes of the men with the guns.

BELIEVES GAS CAUSED DEATHS IN SPENCER

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 28.—(AP) —The first definite opinion as to the cause of the death of Supt. of Detectives James J. Casey, and Mrs. Dora Bingham, whose bodies were found in Supt. Casey's summer cottage in Spencer last Monday, was expressed today by State Detective Edward J. McCarthy, who said he believed coal gas, generated by the one pipe furnace in the Spencer cottage, caused the deaths.

In substantiation of this theory, the first official expression given since the discovery of the bodies, McCarthy said the color of the bodies, when found, was of a pinkish hue, instead of the usual grayish purple tinge, common in violent deaths. A second circumstance that he recalled was the fire in the furnace had gone out, leaving the coal on the grate only partly consumed. There was insufficient draft to insure combustion.

Carbon monoxide poisoning, the lethal agency of coal gas, has not been eliminated as a possible cause of death. Medical Examiner Dr. Ernest L. Hunt said tonight and the organs will be examined for carbon monoxide content.

WOMAN PROTESTS RULING BY THE CENSUS BUREAU

BRIDGEPORT, Nov. 28.—(AP)—Miss Elsie Hill, wife of Prof. Albert Levitt, of Redding and acting vice president of the National Woman's Party in Connecticut, today added her protest to the ruling made by the census bureau which will list housewives as without occupation in the next census.

Miss Hill said that she agreed with Mrs. Florence Bayard Hilles, of Wilmington, Del., national vice chairman of the woman's party, who last night, speaking over a nation-wide radio hook-up, said that the bureau's ruling was "an indignity to which women who value themselves and their work should not submit."

FINED FOR VILLIFYING A FELLOW EDITOR

BERLIN, Nov. 28.—(AP)—Accusing a fellow editor of "abominable thoughtlessness and shocking untruthfulness" cost the editors of the Deutsche Richterzeitung fines of 300 marks ($72) each today. Both the defendants, Herren Reichert and Bewer, were formerly connected with the federal supreme court. Reichert was president of the court senate and Bewer was a former judge of the tribunal.

The man whom they were convicted of libelling was Leopold Schwarzschild, publisher of Montag Morgen.

WOMEN ENDURANCE FLIERS FORCED DOWN

MAN INJURED WHEN AUTO STRUCK TREE

MERIDEN, Nov. 28.—(AP)—Fred E. Beebe, secretary to Mayor Wales L. DeBussy, was severely injured here at 5 o'clock this morning when the automobile in which he was riding alone crashed into a tree. Mr. Beebe, who was taken to the Meriden hospital, suffered a possible fracture of the jaw and a cut on his chin which required the placing of seven stitches.

OBITUARY

Samuel J. Large

BRISTOL, Nov. 28.—(AP)—Samuel J. Large, former councilman and prominent in anti-tuberculosis work in this city for many years, died suddenly today while hunting with his son and two friends in Litchfield. He was 75 years old.

Mr. Large, who appeared in good health when he left his home, dropped to the ground suddenly and died before medical aid could reach him. He was president of the Employe Health Protective league and served a term on the first city council from 1911 to 1913, during which he was secretary of the park commission.

Mr. Large was foreman of the designing and die sinking department of the American Silver company. He came here 30 years ago from Wallingford, where he learned his trade at the Wallace company factory. His widow, two sons and three daughters survive him.

CHINA SENDS PROPOSALS TO SOVIET GOVERNMENT

Makes Overtures For Settlement of the Manchurian Armed Dispute—Statement Says That Rejection Will Indicate That Russia Has Warlike Ambitions Toward China and That China Will Be Prepared to Meet the Soviet Move Accordingly.

(By the Associated Press)

Couched in stern terms, China has presented proposals to soviet Russia looking to settlement of the Manchurian hostilities, with the warning that rejection of the proposals will indicate that "Russia entertains warlike ambitions toward China," which the nationalist government will be prepared to oppose.

China proposed an armistice and that a joint commission of Chinese and Russians investigate conditions in borders of Russia and China.

The drastic move of China's central government followed the independent action by Manchuria Wednesday for peaceable settlement of the Chinese Eastern Railway dispute which resulted in soviet troops invading Manchuria and scattering the Chinese soldiery with little opposition. Manchuria had agreed that Russian managers should be reinstated in operation of the railway, pending consideration of other terms imposed by Russia.

Disregarding Manchuria's action in making peace as that of unauthorized district officials, the nationalist government at Nanking proceeded with plans to request the league of nations to settle the controversy of China with Russia.

Concurrently, the United States suggested to the British, French, German, Japanese and Italian governments that the Kellogg-anti-war pact might serve in possible attempts by the powers to avert further armed clashes in Manchuria.

On its far southern border, the nationalist government was engaged with a serious revolt in Kwangtung and Kwangsi provinces. Rebel forces were about 150 miles from Canton, their objective, and observers expressed the opinion that the city would be captured unless nationalist reinforcements of troops and warships, already dispatched, arrived shortly.

For the time being, at least, the Kuominchun rebel forces were said to have ceased fighting in central China. Many reports asserted that the Kuominchun generals were bribed with large sums by the nationalist officials.

WAITING FOR INTERVENTION APPEAL FROM NANKING

GENEVA, Nov. 28.—(AP)—The secretariat of the league of nations waited all day today for signs of an appeal from Nanking for intervention in the Russo-Chinese dispute in Manchuria, but tonight had received no communication indicating the intentions of the nationalist government.

LINER MAURETANIA WAS ONLY SLIGHTLY DAMAGED

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—(AP)—A survey at the pier today disclosed that the liner Mauretania was only slightly damaged as the result of a collision with a railway car float in the harbor near the Statute of Liberty late last night.

The giant liner, outward bound, proceeded on to Quarantine shortly after the accident and remained anchored until daybreak. She then steamed to her pier under her own power and a force of about 50 men was put to work immediately repairing the damage to her port bow, above the water line.

The workmen were engaged at their task for eight hours. First they cut away the damaged plates with acetylene torches and made a template for a new piece, which was made up at a New York shipyard. The large plate was cut to size, the holes drilled and when put on the port bow of the ship it fitted perfectly.

Cunard Line officials said there had been only one cancellation of passage after the liner put back to her pier.

MILLIONAIRE AND WIFE FOUND SHOT TO DEATH

CHICAGO, Nov. 28.—(AP)—James C. Pauley, 56, reputed millionaire coal operator and his wife, Mrs. Elinor Ludlow Pauley, 50, were found shot to death in a room in the Ambassador hotel, here tonight.

Police said indications were Pauley had killed his wife and then ended his own life. Pauley was chairman of the board of the Miami Coal company, which operates mines in the vicinity of Terre Haute, Ind.

Police were told Pauley was a heavy loser in recent stock market declines, and in addition had been despondent because of ill health.

The bodies were found by a bellboy who was sent to the apartment by Pauley's chauffeur. The latter had driven his employer to the hotel and been instructed to wait. After a half hour, he sent the bellboy to inquire when Pauley would be ready. The boy received no response and called the manager, who opened the door and found the bodies. Mrs. Pauley's body, fully clothed, was in the living room, slumped in a chair, a magazine which she apparently had been reading lying at her feet. Pauley's body was found in the bathroom. Each had been shot once through the head.

WEDDING BOUND PARTY IN AUTO ACCIDENT

WATERBURY, Nov. 28.—(AP)—Three persons were taken to St. Mary's hospital here today following an automobile accident which prevented them from attending a wedding at which they were to have been witnesses.

The injured are: Clifford Lewis, 221 King street, Stratford; Mrs. Lewis, and Miss Nora Ford, 10 Colony street, Bridgeport. Mr. Lewis suffered a severe shock and possible internal injuries, Mrs. Lewis, a back injury and severe bruises and Miss Ford, a fractured leg.

The three had driven to Waterbury on their way to attend the wedding of Mr. Lewis brother, Harold C. Lewis, 785 Connecticut avenue, Bridgeport, and Miss Elizabeth Wiley, of Waterbury. A car owned by Mrs. Frederick J. Brown, of Waterbury, collided with their machine.

DEATH IN MIDDLETOWN OF J. GORDON BALDWIN

MIDDLETOWN, Nov. 28.—(AP)—J. Gordon Baldwin, office manager of the Middletown branch of the Connecticut Light and Power company and former member of the common council, died here today after an illness of several weeks. He was 58 years old.

Born in this city on October 10, 1871, Mr. Baldwin was graduated from Wesleyan university in 1894. He served as councilman for eight years, declining to seek re-election last year.

Mr. Baldwin is survived by his widow and two daughters. Funeral services will be held Saturday.

650 ARRESTS MADE TO SUPPRESS COMMUNISTS

KISHENEV, Rumania, Nov. 28—(AP)—Six hundred and fifty persons were arrested here today after police were compelled to use firearms in suppressing a demonstration by Bessarabian communists. Although the officers seemingly fired directly into the crowds, it was claimed by the authorities that no casualties resulted.

SEN. WARREN'S BODY IN ITS FINAL RESTING PLACE

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Nov. 28—(AP)—Wyoming's "Grand Old Man," Francis E. Warren, veteran of the United States senate, came home for the last time today and was borne to his final resting place in Lakeview cemetery.

The eerie notes of Taps and a major general's salute of 13 guns concluded the martial pomp reserved for the nation's greatest.

Snow and a leaden sky emphasized the mournful atmosphere as the lacquered casket on an artillery caisson moved to the place of interment to the dirge of a military funeral march.

The presence of General Pershing recalled what a panorama of history the eyes of Senator Warren beheld. Born in 1844 he took a heroic part in the nation's civil war; saw the United States become a world power through the defeat of Spain, and was chairman of the senate finance committee while his son-in-law, General Pershing, led the American troops to victory in the World war.

While the body was being enfolded forever in the bosom of the state Senator Warren loved so well and to which he gave such high service for a half century, 13 guns were fired at one minute intervals by artillery at Fort Russell—the formal major general's salute after the casket had been lowered, three salvos boomed the salute to the soldier dead, followed by another 13 gun salute.

Then taps sounded Wyoming's final tribute to its greatest citizen.

IN BAIL ON CHARGE OF TARRING AND FEATHERING

PENTICTON, B. C., Nov. 28—(AP)—Charles E. Oliver, son of former Canadian premier, John Oliver, was at liberty today on bail charged with tarring and feathering Dr. V. E. Latimer, formerly of Brandon, Man., against whom Oliver had brought many charges, the nature of which the police did not make public.

Police said Joseph Oliver, Vancouver lawyer, and brother of the accused man, had brought similar charges against Dr. Latimer and had been advised the police were powerless to act.

Dr. Latimer came into the provincial police station last night dripping tar and with the lower portion of his body covered with feathers and swore out a warrant for Oliver. He said he was telephoned early last night by a man giving the name of Harvey who wished to see the doctor in his office.

On reaching his office, Dr. Latimer said a man knocked him to the sidewalk and with the aid of two other men threw him into a car. He said he recognized the voice of Charles Oliver.

Dr. Latimer came into the provincial spot about 2 1-2 miles from Penticton his trousers and underwear were removed, his feet tied with a tong and tar and feathers applied to his body. The three men drove off and the doctor was forced to walk back to the police station with only his overcoat for covering. A physician found him suffering from shock and a badly swollen jaw.

Oliver did not plead to the charge and gave surety for $500 bail. Hearing was set for Monday.

WORKING ON SELECTION OF NEW BELGIAN CABINET

BRUSSELS, Belgium, Nov. 28—(AP)—King Albert today conferred with leaders of several political groups in an effort to find a solution for the rather serious political situation growing out of the resignation of the cabinet of Henri Jaspar.

The liberals are insisting on a complete solution of the dispute over use of French in some of the courses of Ghent university. On the other hand the Flemish extremists are willing to adopt a suggestion by the Catholic party for the barring of French from the university with postponement of the other aspects of the linguistic problem until after the budget and tax reduction bills have been passed by parliament.

The Flemish extremists threaten, unless the suggestion is adopted, to boycott the centennial festivities of next year and particularly the world fairs at Antwerp and Liege.

WILLIMANTIC ELECTS ITS ELEVENTH MAYOR MONDAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 28.—Who will be Willimantic's 11th mayor? That is the question that will become paramount in the minds of the voting public as hundreds file to the polls Monday, Dec. 2. While the personnel of the tickets will have its customary reaction on the vote for mayor, both parties have faith in their respective standard bearers. For the consideration of the electors, a biographical sketch of the two candidates heading the tickets is given below:

John Reilly, Democratic Candidate

John Reilly, 67, the secretary, treasurer and general manager of the Vanderman Manufacturing Co., was born in Franklin, Conn., June 10, 1862, the son of Patrick and Catherine Cassidy Reilly. He was reared in Woodstock, where he attended the district school. He entered the Eastman Business college, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., graduating in 1889. Prior to this time he had worked upon his father's farm and had been employed by John O. Fox, who conducted a lumber business in Putnam. Upon graduating from Eastman's he came to this city and entered the employ of William Vanderman. Later Mr. Vanderman organized the business now conducted under the name of the Vanderman Manufacturing Co. and Mr. Reilly became secretary and assistant manager. Mr. Vanderman died in 1914 and Mr. Reilly became the treasurer and general manager as well as secretary of the company.

Mr. Reilly was married Oct. 18, 1899, to Miss Eleanor A. Edington of Pomfret. One son was born to them, Walter E., a graduate of Harvard college and now affiliated with a law concern in Pittsfield, Mass. Walter was a soldier in the World war, enlisting in the Students' Army Training corps of Georgetown university, Washington, D. C.

Mr. Reilly is secretary of the board of directors of St. Joseph's hospital; charter member and trustee of Elks lodge No. 1311, and member of San Jose council, No. 14, Knights of Columbus. He is a director of the Willimantic Savings institute and the Natchaug Industrial Co. He is also a member of the Rotary club.

His political allegiance is given to the democratic party. He served one term as alderman of the second ward in 1906 and was elected alderman-at-large in the last election in 1927.

In 1924, upon the death of the late Mayor Hormisdas Dion, he succeeded to the deceased as a member of the Windham school committee, filling the unexpired term of Mr. Dion. He was elected to the committee in 1926 and upon the death of the late William L. Sweeney succeeded the latter as chairman of the board, being again chosen chairman for the remainder of his three-year term at the next election of committee officers.

Walter R. King, Republican Candidate

Walter Raymond King, secretary and treasurer of the Jordan Hardware Co., was born in Monson, Mass., Aug. 7, 1874, a son of William H. and Ella F. Moulton King. Reared in Monson, he was educated in the public schools there and attended Monson academy. During his four years at the academy he was also employed in the Monson country store and postoffice, there establishing his first contact with postoffice work. The family moved to Willimantic and he worked for his father in a market for about three years. He became a clerk in the local postoffice in 1899, being made chief clerk one year later and remaining continuously in that employ until 1918. In that year he resigned from the postoffice and accepted an appointment as assistant clerk in the office of the state treasurer at Hartford. On the following July he was appointed chief clerk in that office. He resigned this position to accept the postmastership in Willimantic, April, 1924. He remained until November, 1926, when he again resigned to accept the position of secretary and treasurer of the Jordan Hardware Co., having completed 27 years in postoffice work.

Mr. King was married July 5, 1897, to Grace R. Purinton, daughter of a pioneer business man of the city. Four sons were born of that union: Carleton P., Spencer, Maurice and George King. Carleton served 26 months overseas during the World war, having enlisted at Hartford upon leaving high school. George was in the U. S. Navy for four years immediately after the war. Mrs. King died in 1915 and in November, 1917, he married Harriet Paige of Westminster, Mass. One daughter, Harriet, was born through this union.

Mr. King is a trustee of the Connecticut State hospital at Middletown; director of the Willimantic Building and Loan association; trustee of the Willimantic Savings institute; member of Natchaug lodge No. 22, Knights of Pythias, and past grand chancellor for the state of Connecticut; member of Elks lodge No. 1311, and member of Eastern Star lodge No. 44, F. & A. M.

He is a republican in politics and in 1925-27 served as alderman of the fourth ward. He was elected member of the school board in 1926, re-elected in 1923, resigning in 1924 when he took over the postmastership. He was elected again to the board in 1927 and is now serving the three-year term.

C. A. C. STUDENT SECRETLY MARRIED TO ANDOVER GIRL

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 28. — The secret wedding of Nathan Koenig, prominent senior at the Connecticut Agricultural college and newspaperman, to Miss Rose Edith Rosenblum, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry I. Rosenblum of Andover, was revealed today as having taken place in Westerly, R. I., last Sunday evening at 6 o'clock. Rev. Philip Goldberg performed the ceremony, the single ring service being used. The young couple secured a marriage license in Westerly while en route to the Connecticut Aggie-Rhode Island football game in Kingston, R. I., Saturday of the previous week. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Koenig of Freehold, N. J. He graduated in 1926, majoring in agriculture with a view of entering agricultural journalism. He was Willimantic correspondent of the Hartford Courant for a time and is now editor of the agricultural page of the Bridgeport Herald. At the college he is a member of Phi Epsilon Pi, Pi Kappa Delta and Lambda Gamma Delta fraternities. The bride is a graduate of Windham high school and attended New York university. She is connected with the statistical department of the Connecticut General Life Insurance Co. of Hartford. They will reside in Andover until after the graduation of the 1930 class at the college in June.

WEDDINGS

Wednychowski—Brown

Miss Victoria Brown, daughter of Mrs. Mary Brown of this c—, became the bride of Alexander Wednychowski of Hartford at a pretty Thanksgiving wedding solemnized during a nuptial high mass at St. Joseph's church at 8 o'clock this morning. Rev. Francis A. Duch officiated and Mrs. E. R. Portelance presided at the organ. The maid of honor was Miss Tessie Rekoszka of Hartford and the bridesmaids were the Misses Anna Tabor, Ethel Lamote and Adele Rajchel of this city. The groom was attended by Andrew Szenkoyes of Hartford as best man. The ushers were Frank Latusek, Stanley Lesniewski and Vincent Latusek of this city and Matthew P. Misteska of Hartford.

The bride was charming in a gown of white satin trimmed with Spanish lace. Her veil of Spanish lace was caught up with orange blossoms and she carried white lilies. Her maid of honor wore silver rose taffeta with maline and hat of rose. She carried chrysanthemums. Miss Tabor wore satin orchid trimmed with maline. Miss Lamote wore blue satin with lace and maline trimming and Miss Rajchel wore yellow chiffon velvet and satin. The bridesmaids wore silver leaf head bands and carried chrysanthemums.

The reception, continuing into the evening hours, was held at the American Thread Co. hall with over 100 guests from various places in attendance. Music was by a four-piece orchestra from South Manchester. Mr. and Mrs. Wednychowski left later on a honeymoon to be spent at Niagara Falls and other points of interest. Upon their return they will reside in Hartford. The bride, who received many beautiful gifts, has been employed at the American Thread Co. plant and is well known here.

Franz—Koval

Miss Mary Koval, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Koval of Coventry and Edward Franz, son of Carl Franz, also of Coventry, were married this morning at St. Mary's church, South Coventry, in a ceremony performed at 9 o'clock this morning by the pastor, Rev. Dennis F. Moran, during a nuptial high mass. Miss Irene White of this city was maid of honor and Harvey Coutu of Perkins Corner was best man. The reception was held at the home of the bride with about 40 guests present from Manchester, Hartford, Long Island, Coventry, New York city and this city. Mr. and Mrs. Franz left on an unannounced wedding trip, upon returning from which they will reside in Groton where the groom is employed by the Chappell Boat Co. The bride is a graduate of Windham high school and has been employed as a bookkeeper at the Parker-Elliott Coal Co. here.

Thanksgiving dawned under a cloudy sky from which fell a mixture of snow and rain that made early travel conditions anything but favorable. Late forenoon brought sunshine and sharp breeze and by noon the highways were in good condition. The day was quietly observed. There were large congregations at the various church services and many family reunions. A union service of the Calvary Baptist and A. M. E. Zion churches was held at 11 o'clock in the edifice of the latter denomination on Spring street. Rev. C. P. Powell, Calvary Baptist pastor, preached a sermon on The Reason for Thanksgiving and selections were by the A. M. E. Zion quartet. Rev. J. W. Platt welcomed the visiting congregation.

It was a quiet day at police headquarters, Chief of Police Thomas F. Grady reporting but one local arrest, that of an intoxication. Edmund S. Bouffard, who came here to spend the day, was arrested on behalf of the Hartford police on a charge of non-support. There was no police court session. It was also a quiet day, up to late afternoon, at St. Joseph's hospital, where but one patient, a Willington woman, had been received. It was stated that Mrs. Henry L. Miller of Springfield, Mass., who was severely injured in an accident which cost the life of her mother, Mrs. Jennie Miller of Woodsville, N. H., Oct. 13, continued to make slow recovery. Coroner Arthur G. Bill has found Walter M. Neff of this city guilty of criminal negligence in causing the death of Mrs. Miller. His case will be taken up in the Mansfield town court next month.

The first annual carnival started at the town hall by the Gold Star post No. 1734, Veterans of Foreign Wars continued its extended two-day run as a decided success this evening and there was talk of continuing the carnival through the week end. The affair opened Wednesday evening, continuing with a twilight dance this afternoon and another dance tonight. The committee in charge comprised Florimond N. Normandin, chairman; Henry Belair, William O'Brien, Samuel Guilford, Joseph LeFleur, Charles Cyr, Charles A. Reynolds and Commander James J. Lee, ex-officio.

FUNERAL

Charles Chatey

The funeral services for Charles Chatey were held at the family home in Westford this afternoon at 2 o'clock with Rev. James Kerasotes of New Haven officiating. Burial was in the Westford Hill cemetery. Arrangements were by Killourey Brothers.

Edgar S. Butcher has resigned a position which he has held for the past 10 years as salesman for the Gulf Refining Co. here, to accept a similar position with the Shell Eastern Petroleum Products Co., stationed in this city. Charles J. Lewis, who has been collector for the Gulf Refining Co., has been promoted to the position made vacant by Mr. Butcher's resignation.

Mrs. John Reilly of the Visiting Nurse association has again been named chairman for the sale of Christmas seals in this city. The quota for Willimantic will be announced later.

One of the largest family Thanksgiving dinner parties in the city was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Rosebrooks of 240 South street today. Covers were laid for 28 guests coming from Hartford, New Haven, Waterbury, Scotland, Webster, Mass., and this city.

Mrs. Herbert T. Clark is making good recovery at St. Joseph's hospital where she underwent a minor operation a few days ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Tryon entertained a family party of 15 at dinner today. Out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. Worthington of Moodus.

Thanksgiving dinner guests to the number of 37 gathered at the home of Charles S. Pomeroy today, the party being in the nature of a family reunion. The guests came from Peabody and Wellesley, Mass., New Haven, Windsor, West Hartford and Westbrook.

DANIELSON

KILLINGLY REMEMBERS HER NEEDY ON THANKSGIVING

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Nov. 28.—The town of Killingly and the county of Windham did not forget today that this was Thanksgiving, and that in institutions here and hereabouts nearly 70 people were away from homes and friends but, nevertheless, conscious of the holiday and the age-old spirit that inspires it.

And having failed to forget, town and county officials, through those in charge of the Killingly town farm and the county jail at Brooklyn, saw to it that Thanksgiving feasts were in order. No punishment would have been involved in being assigned to dine today with the 49 persons being held at the county jail. Deputy Jailer Walter Tripp and Mrs. Tripp arranged a feast of roast pork, potatoes, squash, onions and other vegetables, mince pie, coffee and other things for those incarcerated in the institution. There was plenty—and more—for everyone. Getting a dinner like this on one's own account would have involved industry in earning, the expenditure of no little money and the necessary energy used in preparing and serving it. The prisoners, who were obligated only to be present and to eat, were appreciative.

At the town farm, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Bassett, respectively superintendent and matron, served a chicken dinner with all the fixings, and up at the town farm fixings means a whole lot more than it means in many a private home. There were 20 inmates who enjoyed today's holiday feast—13 men and seven women. All of these excepting four were able to sit about the groaning board. The exceptions had trays sent to their rooms. Of special interest is the fact that the great majority of things that entered into the serving of the dinner at this institution were grown on the town farm, including the chickens.

Not content with serving such a splendid dinner, Mr. and Mrs. Bassett arranged a special supper for their charges tonight. It was a real holiday at the farm.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Inez E. Billington

Mrs. Inez E. Billington, 62, died about 4 o'clock this afternoon in the Hartford hospital at Hartford. For many years she was a resident of this town but more recently has been living with her son, Louis Billington, in West Hartford. She was born in Lonsdale, R. I., and was a daughter of William and Laura Barstow Vallette.

Jesse Passmore

Jesse Passmore, 52, formerly of East Killingly, died today at a Norwich hospital. He was a native of the town of Killingly and was born May 8, 1877, a son of Edwin and Hannah Finney Passmore. Members of the family have been resident at East Killingly for many years. The body was brought here this afternoon in charge of Undertaker A. F. Wood. Mr. Passmore was unmarried. He leaves three sisters, Mrs. Vincent Adams of Attawaugan and Mrs. Job Dawley of East Killingly, Mrs. John Russell, Attawaugan, and four brothers, Frederick and Charles, both of East Killingly, and Edwin of Boston and William of New Orleans.

In a justice's court in the town of Brooklyn yesterday Stanley Petrill, a resident of that town, was fined $50 and costs for violation of laws pertaining to trapping. He was ordered into court by County Game Warden Thomas G. Daniels of Plainfield. Among the counts against him were those charging that he was trapping without a license to do so, that his name did not appear on the traps that he had set, that he had placed traps on the ground level, that he was using over-size traps and that he was trapping on land without written permission of the owners thereof. Petrill is one of a number of residents of eastern Windham county prosecuted and fined in courts of various towns within the past month for violations of the trapping laws through the activities of County Warden Daniels.

State Officer John Murphy of the Danielson barracks was the arresting officer in an accident case near Tunnel hill, below Jewett City, in which Aime Moreau of North Main street, Jewett City, was arrested on a charge of operating a motor vehicle while he was intoxicated and, yesterday, in Justice Palmer's court in Lisbon was fined $100 and costs. Moreau became involved in difficulty when the machine he was driving crashed about head-on into another car being operated by Mrs. Josephine Bissonnette of Taftville. Her car was forced through a fence and down a steep embankment. No one was injured in the accident. John Desjardins, riding with Moreau, was fined $10 and costs for having been intoxicated.

WEDDING

Gauthier—Billings

A wedding at St. Joseph's church in Dayville this morning at 8 o'clock was that of Miss Dolores Joan Billings, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Billings of Dayville, and Joseph Malcolm Gauthier, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Gauthier of Broad street, Danielson. Rev. Ignatius Kost, the pastor, performed the marriage ceremony and was celebrant of the nuptial mass, at which relatives and many friends were in attendance.

The bride wore a gown of ivory satin, a veil with silver lace border and silver slippers. Her bouquet was of calla lilies.

Her bridesmaid was Miss Anita Cournoyer of Putnam, whose gown was of nile green taffeta trimmed with tulle and her bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums. She wore a silver turban and silver slippers.

Arthur Billings, brother of the bride, was best man.

Following the marriage service there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents and many greeted the newly-married couple and wished them every success in life. Shortly after the noon hour a Thanksgiving dinner of turkey was served for all the guests.

During the day, Mr. and Mrs. Gauthier left for their wedding trip, after which they will make their home in Danielson, at 51 Broad street.

Up to late this afternoon the holiday period had produced no really serious accidents pertaining to motor vehicles in this territory, though two minor ones were reported as having occurred last night. Near Attawaugan just before 7 o'clock Thanksgiving eve Louis Auger of Putnam, a man 38 years of age, was knocked over by a car owned by Albert Trahan of Danielson and operated by Alfred Vevia. It appears that Auger's car had stalled for lack of gas north of the central part of Attawaugan and that he was walking along the highway, bound for a filling station, when he was struck and knocked down by the car Vevia, resident here, was operating. Auger declined to await the attention of a physician and roamed off by himself. He was not found for two hours later, when he arrived at the home of Frank Carr, meanwhile, evidently, having been roaming through woodland territory, while in sort of a daze and having practically no recollection of what had happened to him, other than to say that someone had hit him and knocked him down. He was regarded today as not having been seriously injured. There were no arrests.

In another minor accident on the West Side last night Charles Webb of Allen Hill was knocked off a bicycle he was riding by some passing motorist who was blinded by the headlights of a car coming from the opposite direction. Mr. Webb, who was riding a bicycle with a headlight, but with no tail light, was not seriously hurt. State officers of the Danielson barracks checked up both of these accidents.

Today Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Head, Sr., Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Head, and son, Junior, James Head, Joseph Head, the Misses Mary and Anna Head and Harold Wilson, all of Winsted and Hartford, were guests of the Misses Head of Academy street.

Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Kennedy were guests of relatives in Hartford for Thanksgiving.

Two smart snow squalls, one this morning and one just before 1 o'clock this afternoon, gave the traditional New England touch to the holiday weather. Bright sunshine followed both little disturbances.

This holiday in Danielson was as it was expected to be—a day of family reunions, bountiful feasts and good cheer. It was as quiet as a winter Sunday about town.

Miss Madelyn Cronin, student at Columbia university in New York, was with Mrs. Patrick Murray and members of the family for Thanksgiving.

Miss Gertrude Reynolds, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Reynolds of North Main street, and Miss Rose Heneault, daughter of Armand Heneault of Dayville, were at their homes for Thanksgiving. Both are students at Mt. St. Vincent's college on the Hudson.

Denton Gallup, Boston college student, is spending the holiday recess with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Gallup.

Next Tuesday evening at the annual meeting of the Danielson chamber of commerce, officers for 1930 will be elected and there will be discussion of various matters awaiting the attention of the members.

Mr. and Mrs. Edmond Hills and guests were at the Hills country place, from their homes in Providence, for the holiday.

Mr. and Mrs. A. V. Woodworth, Mr. and Mrs. Victor Anderson and Mr. and Mrs. Herbert J. Barnett will be in New York Saturday to attend the Army-Notre Dame football game at the Yankee stadium.

PUTNAM

PUTNAM HAS ENJOYABLE THANKSGIVING OBSERVANCE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Nov. 28.—The daily routine of business life fade dinto the background today as Putnam sat down to its Thanksgiving dinner satisfied that joy and happiness would reign supreme in every home and public institution. The city at large paused this morning for an hour of spiritual thanksgiving at services at the various churches. A mass of thanksgiving was celebrated at St. Mary's church at 8.30 o'clock and a union thanksgiving service of all Protestant churches was held at St. Philip's church at 10 o'clock.

Turkey and chicken constituted the foremost dish on menus served at the Day Kimball hospital, Windham County temporary home and at the Haven home in Abington, the city's three institutions. In many of the homes in the city family gatherings and re-unions of friends took place.

Throughout the city efforts to clothe the day in happiness were successful. Factories, stores, banks and offices were closed. The Killingly-Putnam high school football game in the morning and the holiday tilt of the Belding Bull Dog professional eleven took place in the afternoon. Special holiday bills were had at the local theatres and dances were held in surrounding communities with large attendances. Relief committees of various fraternal and social organizations supplied the indigent with dinners.

And from all indications tonight the 307th annual observance of Thanksgiving day was tossed to the ages a complete success—as far as Putnam was concerned.

WEDDING.

Danielson-Shaw.

Miss Beatrice Shaw, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carlton F. Shaw of Pomfret became the bride of Gilbert Parish Danielson, son of Mrs. Armanda Danielson of Hartford at a brilliant early evening ceremony which took place at 5 o'clock at the Methodist Episcopal church on Grove street. Tall urns with mixed flowers adorned the chancel and gleaming tapers were placed at each pew. The Rev. John E. Duxbury officiated at the ceremony at which the double ring service was used.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She was gowned in white satin combined with tulle. Her wedding veil was of tulle with a head dress of lace and she carried a bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Miss Evelyn Shaw, eldest sister of the bride was maid of honor. She wore a frock of yellow chiffon with a hat to match and carried an arm bouquet of chrysanthemums. Misses Lillian and Emily Shaw, sisters of the bride, attended as bridesmaids. They wore frocks of yellow chiffon with hats of matching horse hair.

Martha and Patricia Shaw, nieces of Miss Shaw, were flower girl and train bearer, respectively. They were attired in dainty little frocks of orchid. The ushers were Clayton Shaw, a brother of the bride and Wayne Hildreth, of Pomfret.

Mrs. Ellsworth Wilcox, church organist, played the wedding march from "Lohengrin" as the bridal party entered the church and for a recessional played the "Wedding March," by Mendelssohn. A wedding reception was held in the church parlors immediately after the ceremony and was attended by many friends and relatives of the nuptials. Following a wedding trip to New York state Mr. and Mrs. Danielson will reside in Hartford, where the groom is employed.

Mrs. Danielson is widely known here. She is a graduate of Putnam high school class of 1928 and since her graduation has been a member of the operating staff of the local telephone exchange.

According to a late report this afternoon the condition of Dr. Edward F. Perry, who is a patient at a Hartford hospital, was unchanged. Dr. Perry suffered a relapse early in the week, but had improved since then.

A committee consisting of Sidney F. Marland, chairman, Herbert H. Pepler, F. E. Storer, Leonard Morrison, Fred Bruce and J. Otis Fox has been appointed by Exalted Ruler Lionel H. Charron of the Putnam Lodge of Elks, to make arrangements for the annual New Year's party to be held December 31, in the Elks' lodge rooms on Main street.

All arrangements for the class in public speaking, which has been organized under the direction of Superintendent of Schools Leon M. Farrin, have been completed and the first meeting of the future orators will be held at Putnam high school next Tuesday evening. The lectures are to be given by a professor of oratory at Connecticut Agricultural college at Storrs. More than 25 have signified their intentions of becoming students. Superintendent Farrin said Wednesday that additional enrollments will be accepted during the next two weeks.

Meetings of the Putnam town Y. M. C. A. group which was re-organized last week will be held on Friday evenings at the Congregational church. Arthur F. Hughes, treasurer of the Putnam Savings bank has been appointed as leader of the boys' group and is being assisted by Minot Horne of the Cargill Trust company.

The Thanksgiving holiday brought many of Putnam's sons and daughters who are attending college, to their homes here today. Among the number who will remain for a three day recess are: Frank Donovan of St. John's prep at Danvers; George H. Gilpatric of Dartmouth; Charles Murphy of Connecticut Agricultural college; Miss Dorothy Keefe of Connecticut College for Women; Perry Barber of Clark college, Worcester; Misses Madelyn Houghton of Wellesley; Judith Sabin of Brown; Alice Perry of Willimantic normal; Ann McDonnell of St. Francis' hospital, of Hartford, Augustus Wilson and Kenneth Rawley of Suffield academy; Gerald Duffy of Mt. St. Charles' academy; Raymond Brousseau of Bryant Stratton, Providence; Gordon Winslow of Holy Cross and William E. Shann of Rutgers prep, New Brunswick.

Frank Cushman of Boston and Charles D. Cushman of Riverhead, N. Y., were the holiday guests of their mother, Mrs. William B. Taylor, of East Woodstock.

Leon T. Wilson of Providence spent Thursday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Leon T. Wilson of Laurel street.

Miss Stella Barker of Milford hospital is passing the holiday recess at the home of her parents, Rev. George D. Baker and Mrs. Baker of Pomfret.

Mrs. Gladys Alexander of Portland, Maine, and Ruth Alexander, of Portland, Maine, visited Thanksgiving day with Mr. and Mrs. B. N. Andrews of Farrows street.

Former State Bank Commissioner John B. Byrne of Hartford spent Thursday as the guest of his sisters, Misses Katherine and Elizabeth Byrne of Seward street.

Special coaches were coupled to the regular afternoon New York and Boston trains Wednesday for the student body of the Howe-Marot school in Thompson, which closed yesterday for the Thanksgiving recess.

BURGLARS GET $29 IN TWO BREAKS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Nov. 28.—It was discovered today that the Cloverdale store in Buckley square and the restaurant of Louis Miller on Livery street had been entered and small amounts of cash taken some time during Wednesday night. Entrance was gained in the restaurant through a window in the rear. It was reported by Mr. Miller that bills and change amounting to $20 was stolen. William Brunelle, manager of the Cloverdale store, discovered the break shortly before noon today. He said that $9 was stolen. Brunelle said that a bag containing several hundred dollars in cash which constituted Wednesday's receipts was hidden in the store. Mr. Brunelle thought that a search had been made for the money because of the articles thrown around the store.

Lieut. Ross V. Urquhart and Officer Henry Mayo of the Danielson state police barracks and Officer Joseph Page of the local police investigated and secured fingerprints from both places which are to be checked with a group of local suspects rounded up today.

it's the blend— and the fragrant tobacco

Camels have always welcomed comparison with any other cigarette because the true test of value is the pleasure to be found in smoking.

The most important thing for smokers to know is that genuine cigarette quality must begin with the selection of tobaccos. Nothing can take the place of quality tobacco. Thus the extraordinary goodness of Camels begins with the choicest tobaccos grown and these are blended with expert skill to achieve the mildness and surpassing fragrance of this great cigarette. It is this genuineness of quality which smokers appreciate when they have passed the experimental stage and know real smoking pleasure.

when they learn the difference they flock to Camels

COASTING IN STREETS

While we have had hardly enough snow this season to refresh our memory as to what it looks like, other parts of the country have been treated differently. In many states there have been deep snows and where there is snow it can be expected there will be sliding. It is eagerly anticipated by the children, who are willing to experience all kinds of discomforts to enjoy it.

Coasting is good fun which is enjoyed by the older people as well as the young but conditions in the highways today clearly demonstrate that sliding down hill on much-used streets, or on streets which intersect others, is bound to be accompanied by grave danger.

This week in the city of Augusta, Me., a six-year-old youngster was coasting along a street which took him into the path of an automobile, resulting in his being struck and receiving a broken rib which punctured his lung. It is expected that the boy will recover but it is declared in the report that no fault is attached to the auto driver.

Though the season is young this case cannot fail to serve as a warning against the practice of sliding in public highways. It will be most surprising if there are not many more cases of a similar character, and in all probability there will be fatalities. But the Maine case should serve as a reminder that preventive measures must be taken.

It is not fair to wait until someone has been killed before doing something that will safeguard others. It is thoroughly understood what peril is being created by the coaster who tries to claim part of the street that is being used by motor vehicles, or what a hazard exists where attempts are made to dash across intersecting highways where autos or electric cars can be expected. The situation was bad enough when only horse-drawn vehicles had to be considered but now, in the interest of safety and the protection of life and limb, it is necessary to establish restrictions.

It is taking a big chance when coasting and vehicular traffic are permitted on the same street. No one likes to interfere with the pleasure of the children, but their safety is far more important, and unless streets can be closed to vehicles sliding should be prohibited or carefully supervised.

GOOD TREE PLANTING

One of the strong reasons for engaging in more forestation work in this country is furnished by the threat that is now being made in Canada to boost the price of newsprint. Canada has almost a monopoly in this direction. We have so depleted our natural resources of wood that can be used for this purpose that we have to look elsewhere and none knows it better than Canada. Its supply isn't nearing exhaustion but it is determined to make the most of its near-monopoly.

This brings to attention the steps that have long been urged in behalf of tree planting and the response that has been made in that direction. Certain of the states are maintaining nurseries for the starting of young trees to be set out by the thousands when old enough, in New York, Massachusetts and even in this state, some fine examples have been set in the work of setting out new trees on cut-over or waste land.

Out in Michigan, a state which has experienced serious inroads from the sawmills, the state has a dozen forest nurseries on which new trees are being set out. During the present year a new planting record was established, with along toward 15,000 acres being set out to Norway, white and jack pine seedlings.

Michigan is preparing for the future. It is looking forward to the day when it is going to be able to get the benefit of those trees in the shape of lumber, as a protection to the land and a safeguard to the water supplies. It is doing more each year in this direction and, while those reforested acres will never be sufficient to make the state or the nation independent in the way of a lumber supply, the inspiration to greater effort in Michigan and other states cannot fail to be beneficial to all concerned. By such work it must soon be apparent that even greater efforts in this direction are necessary.

THE TOURIST SPENDERS

New England has been interested for the past several years in catering to the automobile tourists and it has been setting before them the many attractions which this part of the country has for them. New England has been advertising itself collectively and by states. There was reason enough for it and there are reasons for believing that it has thereby laid the foundation for tourist business that will net it thousands of dollars over a period of years.

The people once will come to complete the job. They will not only insist upon coming again but they will get their friends interested and those friends will become just as enthusiastic and continue to pass the good advice along about seeing New England.

According to the chairman of the touring board of the American Automobile association, the sum spent annually in this country reaches the impressive total of $3,500,000,000. That money is, of course, widely distributed. It is put out wherever the motorists go, through stores, hotels, boarding houses, restaurants, roadside stands, resorts, souvenir shops, special points of interest and a great variety of other ways which call for the spending of dollars.

Such a sum represents a large amount of money, but it is to be remembered that the number of tourists is large and while some spend much more than others it is impossible to cover much distance without spending money and it is surprising how easily it disappears.

In this part of the country the tourists make the most of the summer time or the early fall, but there are sections which make their bids at other periods so that there are many sections to which the tourists are going during the whole of the year. And wherever they go they are spending money in large amounts or small.

The motoring tourist isn't the only tourist but he represents a very large part of the millions who are seeing first one part and then another of America and as he sees he must spend the necessary cash to keep moving, to eat, sleep and be entertained. The ways of getting the tourists to part with their money are many and studied and the antique shops by no means have a monopoly on the traveler's purse. Everything considered, it is a capital method of distributing wealth and maintaining prosperity.

A TERRIBLE PRICE

Experience is regarded as a great and costly teacher and such it proves to be in most instances. With a New Jersey woman it was particularly costly but it failed to send home its lesson even though tragedy was involved.

This mother, like some other parents, was in the habit of starting her kitchen fire by the use of kerosene. Apparently she had resorted to this practice of getting quick results so long that she considered herself a complete master of the situation and put all thoughts of disastrous results behind her. But, like the pitcher that went to the well too often, she failed to take the precautions that she should and the result was a fire which caused the death of one daughter.

Therein was demonstration enough of the danger involved in her method of starting her kitchen fire. At least it would have been for the ordinary individual. Not so with the New Jersey mother. Either she was so hard-shelled that she could not see wherein she was to blame or else she was guided by the belief that lightning never struck twice in the same place, for she continued to feed kerosene to the kitchen stove. Whether she figured that on a second explosion she would know better how to deal with the situation because of her previous experience, or whether she was impervious to danger, she invited a repetition of the previous experience and she got it.

Not only did she cause a fire in her home but she caused the death of three of her children as the result. Four others were gotten out by neighbors and a fifth managed to jump from a second-story window.

Being responsible for the death of four children because of a stubborn insistence upon using a quick fire starter is a terrible thing. There have been lessons enough taught by other people doing the same thing to warn any parent against paying such a price, but when they were ignored and the lives of four were snuffed out there would appear to be a degree of carelessness bordering on the criminal from the very one in that household where it would least be expected.

TIME TO GET TOGETHER

China has followed the expected course in making its appeal to the league of nations and the countries which signed the Kellogg peace pact in its effort to turn back the Russian invasion. If it is convinced that it cannot check the advance of the invaders otherwise it is not surprising. It doesn't possess the control it should at home and it lacks the well-trained soldiers and the equipment possessed by Russia.

But regardless which is the stronger or which has the upper hand at the present time the Chinese-Russian situation presents an opportunity for demonstrating the effectiveness of the league of nations and the Kellogg peace pact. Both are for the purpose of preventing war and much importance attaches to the fact that both countries are signers of the Kellogg treaty. Thus there are obligations resting upon themselves to exercise every possible means of settling their dispute without resort to arms.

A study of the situation reveals that there is fault on both sides. If there is an agreement not to go to war, Russia should respect it. Just at present it is difficult to understand where there is any difference between the invasion it is making for the control of the Chinese Eastern railway and war. On the other hand, it is evident that the trouble was precipitated by the ousting of the Russian officials of the railroad when China took it over.

Nevertheless the trouble should be guided to an adjustment. There might have to be some concessions by both sides but that is to be expected and is preferable to reaching similar ends in bloodshed and devastation. It is thus well that it calls for aid in stopping further invasion but it is apparent that it is a situation where a willingness on the part of the two countries to hasten a settlement would be of great assistance.

SONATA

It was spring.

It was a time of development for Marcia. Marcia was becoming an artist with her violin.

"I will play Scriabin for you" she said to Farley, her sweetheart. "Or I'll play d'Indy, or Ollers, or Chausson. What do you like?"

Without waiting for him to answer, she played Chausson. Marcia was young and full of ideas, and she played something as vivacious as she felt—an allegro caprice. It was undisciplined music, with unfamiliar harmonies, with surprising tonalities. Marcia swayed with her violin, her mood at one with the dissonances, the harsh nesses, the virility of new harmonies. Marcia stopped, eager, waiting for his commendation.

"Wasn't it beautiful?" she said.

"You are beautiful," said Farley, "I love to watch you fiddle."

"Oh, Farley," she said, "you are disappointing." He hadn't heard the chilling nuances, nor felt the severe strength of the new music, nor even been listening. He had only been looking at her.

"Now play 'I Love You,'" said Farley. "Something nearer home, that we both can understand."

She felt that he would always be like that—he never would understand her music, nor herself.

"I'll play Chausson for others, then, who love it as I do," she said. "Then maybe some day I'll play again for you, when you are ready to listen." For, of course, it was spring, and the world was bursting with new things to be discovered, as it always seems when one is young.

It was summer.

It was a time of experimentation for Marcia. Marcia was now an artist with her violin.

"I will play Schumann for my audience," Marcia said one day. "And maybe I will play Liszt, and Mendelssohn and Brahms." And she wrote out her program of German classics. For Marcia was older now, and the maturing years had brought repose to her spirit.

Standing upon the platform in the large concert hall, Marcia gazed out over her stilling audience as she struck the A string and quickly pressed the others into perfect pitch. Raising her violin and placing the bow gently upon the strings, she began to play something as reposeful as she felt—an andante cantabile of Schumann. Her mood was one with the serenity, the calm assurance, the fine rich harmonies—yet, as cadence followed cadence in rising crescendo she felt—in the composer's idea, as in her own heart, both reaching out and upward, the poignance of unfulfillment—the longing that had been hers ever since she had become famous. Marcia swayed with her violin and gazed out over the audience.

She looked frantically but in vain to see one pair of interested eyes twinkling up to hers. Instead there were the society ladies in their boxes, placid in white kid gloves, and men who had unwillingly been dragged into culture, and children who were supposed to be learning and who twisted about uncomfortably, and poor young artists hoping to achieve for themselves the glory that was hers, and critics waiting to damp with faint praise—hosts of people with their private thoughts.

"Oh, people, you are disappointing," thought Marcia, taking her fifth bow.

"What can you know of me—how can you understand me?" For after all, it was summer and the world was experimenting; selecting and discarding, as it always seems when one is at the bloom of life.

It was autumn.

It was a time of fulfillment for Marcia. Marcia was a woman now, with the poise of experience and her own execution firmly made.

"I will play for you this afternoon," she said to Farley after journeying the long way home. "But first I want you to promise me something."

"I know what it is," he said. "You always said you wanted—

"I said I wanted you to understand. But Farley, you always have understood. It was I who experimented with music and life—and have come to find out what I really wanted. Guess what, dearest."

"You want me to ask for Chausson, indeed. I've even longed for that exotic music just to gaze at you again!"

"Silly, I want you to look at me with that capacious twinkle—the way you are looking now, and ask me to play something we both can understand—"

And raising her violin, Marcia began to play something in rhythm with her heart beats, the third and adagio movement of her sonata of living—"I Love You."—Exchange.

YOUR HEALTH

Jack Is Learning His Lesson.

By Howard Lilienthal, M. D.
New York, N. Y.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

He's been feeling a bit below par for a few weeks—headachy—poor appetite—no pain anywhere but disinclined to do his work—especially tired toward late afternoon. He probably ascribed the slight loss of weight to the diminished intake of food and his own diagnosis was spring fever or some such vague condition. But the days and weeks passed with no improvement, or even with increasing depression. "You seem a little seedy of late, old man," was his partner's morning greeting one day, and the suggestion came that he should see Doctor Jones. Well, why not? "Seeing the doctor" would surely do no harm.

The usual general inquisition followed, with the thumping of the chest; the listening to the slightly accelerated heart; inspection of the throat; the examination of the urine; and he was informed that he was slightly neurasthenic with half a degree of elevation of temperature, "but nothing physically wrong." His apprehension was relieved and he confidently assumed that the teaspoonful of tonic and the eggnog between meals would bring him back to normal. But ten days later his mother came for a visit. "Why Jack! You should have written me that you were ill. What's the trouble?" In vain he tried to allay the maternal alarm. Nothing would do but to get "another opinion." He compromised by consenting to see Bill Wilkins, a college classmate who had just gone into laboratory medicine and whose informal advice would not cost anything. Over the lunch table Wilkins listened to his story, interrupting now and then with a question. "Bowel action all right? Smoking a lot? No cough? Let's see—we graduated in '23; that makes you under 30. Jones is a good doctor and I'm willing to accept his findings. But has he gone far enough? If I were you I'd go back and ask for a blood examination and an X-ray look at, or into, your chest. No preparation needed and it takes but a few minutes. If nothing is found, so much the better. But you ought to know."

Mrs. J. P. MacDonald
Middletown,
Dear Madam:-

At your request this is written to tell you of the condition of your son, John, referred to us a month ago by Doctor Theophilus Jones. Although no physical signs were discovered the X-ray picture made by Doctor Thomas of your town, revealed early but rather wide-spread tuberculosis of the left lung. This was of the type unaccompanied by cough or expectoration, but fully accounting for the symptoms presented. The patient is responding very well to treatment by hygiene and rest. His fever has disappeared, his weight is increasing and our only difficulty is to persuade him that he is not perfectly well. Since you mention marriage, permit me to say that by 1932, after continued good health, I can see not the slightest objection. I will say that in this instance you may thank the X-ray for the favorable result. An earlier examination would of course have discovered the danger, and greatly decreased the period of recovery.

Very sincerely yours,
J. B. Masterson,
Physician-in-Chief.

A Washington Bystander

By ALFRED L. BUSHYHEAD
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25—There was no doubt from the start that efforts of Senator Allen of Kansas to cement the new subdivision in republican ranks in the senate into a more or less definite bloc via a dinner conference would arouse feelings of jealousy among some of the cementees.

It was not the first time the Kansan, among the freshest of senatorial freshmen in point of service, had indicated a desire to have an important finger in the republican senate leadership pie.

Perhaps "pi" would be a more suggestive way to spell it. That's what printers call scrambled type, and republican leadership in the senate seemed more than a bit scrambled during the tariff snarl.

At any rate, Allen sailed off his young guard (or young Turk or junior league, senate freshmen, or Hoover blue or whatever title you prefer) dinner. Just why, did not appear, but his action followed a call on President Hoover.

Most press gallery observers got the impression that Mr Hoover was hardly prepared to come to an open rupture with the veterans of the republican old guard leadership in the senate, nor yet to confer any formal title as Hoover spokesman on any senator.

A Bold Newcomer.

Allen's previous activities since he took the seat vacated by Vice President Curtis have several times called down upon him jibes from the democratic side.

It is still a bit unusual for senate newcomers to take a very prominent place in proceedings in the tariff debate particularly democratic floor champions like Harrison of Mississippi never tired of shooting across the aisle in attempts to make it appear that none of the republicans was able to speak authoritatively for the white house.

Naturally, the revolt of the young guard against old guard leadership, exemplified in the round robin insisting on night sessions as a counter to old guard plans to adjourn the tariff debate to the regular meeting of congress, gave the democrats more political material.

Viewed over the whole course of events from the time the tariff bill came from the house, the situation just before the end of the special farm relief session was somewhat peculiar.

The young guard idea in late November was based on retaining existing rates on other than agricultural commodities in schedules not then acted upon. The purpose was to insure some kind of senate action during the special session.

Narrow Vote in June.

Now back in June, Borah of Idaho attempted by resolution to limit senate revision of tariff to farm and related products. The resolution was beaten by one vote. Allen was paired for that plan.

A substantial number of the young guard round-robiners, however, voted against it. Yet presumably it would have accomplished virtually the sort of a tariff bill, as far as the senate was concerned, that the late November project had in mind.

What seems clear is that the full significance of that single vote failure of the Borah resolution could not have impressed itself on party leaders at the time.

One vote was a slender basis upon which to proceed toward revision of industrial as well as farm schedules, which the finance committee attempted.

IN DAY'S NEWS

It Took 100 Years to Make the Ohio Nine Feet Deep

President Hoover, on the banks of the Ohio, has been finishing what President John Quincy Adams started.

The first hundred years are the hardest—102 years to be exact—for the Ohio river, which U. S. army engineers have made nine feet deep from Pittsburgh to Cairo, Illinois.

The engineers have had a definite goal on the Ohio: 975 miles nine feet deep by 1929.

At Louisville, Kentucky, the rebuilt dam and locks at the falls, the final project in the $115,000,000 program, turns the Ohio from a river into a waterway. Building of the Ohio's 50 locks began under President Hayes in 1879, but the federal government's first efforts to improve the river date back to 1827.

A river parade of steamboats from Pittsburgh to Cairo has marked the celebration of the Ohio achievement.

"Four types of boats for the four chapters of the Ohio's dramatic story deserved positions in the flotilla," says a bulletin of the National Geographic society from its headquarters in Washington, D. C.

"Four kinds of boats—and the only thing they have in common is that they float. For 100 years after the Ohio's discovery by La Salle in 1670, the native Indian canoe reigned supreme. The flatboat succeeded the canoe for 50 years. Then boat building flowered in the floating palace steamboats of Mark Twain's boyhood. Today the Ohio river is chiefly a waterway for barges.

"The Ohio river's story falls easily into segments. First comes Monsieur Cavelon de Cleeville with a fleet of canoes carrying 300 Indians and soldiers of France. He turns his fleet to shore, draws up his 'army' in battle array, and hammers a plate with the arms of France to a tree.

"The stage of the next 'float' is about 40 feet long and 12 feet wide. It is the deck of a Kentucky 'broadhorn.' It has a roof over half its deck; if the roof covered the whole deck it would be a New Orleans broadhorn. A boat must be better made to go away down to New Orleans.

"Under the roof a woman feeds wood into a small clay fireplace. Other women passengers help prepare the evening meal. They work amid a clutter of chests and chairs destined for pioneer homes as yet unbuilt. The deck and the sides of a broadhorn provided floors for puncle cabins.

"One man is at the stern steering with a 40-foot oar. Another in the bow holds a 'pouger,' a short oar for use in swift water. In one hand he holds a horn which he blows to warn traffic ahead.

"The families aboard thousands of broadhorns took advantage of the Ohio's offer of free transportation to free land in the richest valley of the world.

"Passengers on the broadhorn 'float' have a song to sing; the song that the pioneers sang:

"O, the river is up, the channel is deep,
The wind blows steady and strong.
A'splashing their oars the mariners keep
As they row their boats along.
(tenor) Down the river
(bass) Down the river
(all) Down the O-Hi-O.

"The third boat of the Ohio's four cycles is the steamboat. Steamboats still ply the river but they cannot today make the impression that they made on Mark Twain and his contemporaries.

"The steamboats were finer than anything on shore," he wrote. 'Compared with superior dwelling houses and first class hotels in the valley they were palaces. They tallied with the citizen's dream of magnificence: chimney tops cut to counterfeit a spraying crown of plumes; pilothouse, hurricane deck, boiler deck, guards, all garnished with white wooden filigree work of fanciful patterns, gilt deer horns over the big bell, oil pictures on every stateroom door, big chandeliers every little way, each an April shower of glittering glass drops.'

"At Cincinnati, on the Ohio, Mark Twain embarked on his career as a river steamboat pilot. The Civil war, which wiped out the steamboat era, took his job, too. At one time two-thirds of the steamboat tonnage of the United States was on the middle west rivers. On the Ohio and other Mississippi tributaries there were more steamboats than in all the ports of Great Britain.

"The cargo barge is the last of the four boats that have figured in the Ohio's story. Few people see the modern cargo boat pageant which floats by every day. This parade passes at any one of the locks between Pittsburgh and Cairo; locks which are 110 feet wide (the width of Panama canal locks) and 600 feet long. Each lock is linked to the opposite bank by a 'house of cards' collapsible dam. A series of panels, usually four feet wide, propped up by heavy struts, breasts the current.

"When the river is in flood above the 9-foot level a barge releases the props. The panels fall flat to the river bottom. When the river drops the dam is pulled up into position again. The chief actor in the Ohio's modern pageant is a staunch tow boat steaming 'round the bend. Like a hen with too many chicks it approaches the lock dragging 12 barges, four abreast. They are loaded not with fur, nor with pioneers. They are not 'floating palaces.' They carry coal from Kanawha."

Stories That Recall Others

Puzzled.

Elizabeth had moved with her parents to a place where the family milk supply was obtained from a woman who kept a cow living at the edge of the village. It was the little girl's duty to go after the milk each evening. One evening when she came home she said to her mother: "The woman where I go for the milk always acts like I am two people, instead of one."

Mother did not understand what she meant until one evening when it was getting late, she went with Elizabeth. On knocking at the door they were greeted with: "Good evening, good evening, come in, come in."

One Not Counted.

The teacher who was conducting the physiology class asked of one little boy:

"How many bones have you in your body?"

"Two hundred and eight," was the reply.

"But doesn't the book say there are 207?" inquired the teacher.

"Yes, but I swallowed one at dinner today, teacher."

JAZZED UP MELODIES TO AWAKEN ANATOLIA

ANGORA, Turkey—(AP)—That music has charms to Americanize the Asiatic breast, is the theory on which the government of Mustapha Kemal is working as a part of its program for the Americanization of Turkey. The Fine Arts in general, and music in particular, are being drafted by the indefatigable Ghazi into an army of measures destined to attack the sluggish, fatalistic minds of 13,000,000 Anatolians and impregnate therein the spirit of America.

Under government orders, a commission of Turkish musicians has just made an extensive tour of Anatolia during which it has recorded an gramaphone records more than 300 folk-songs of the Asiatic Turks. These wailing, whining melodies are to be jazzed up by the commission, the well and the will are to be jerked into the compelling gaiety of Tin Pan Alley and then these Americanized versions of centuries-old melodies are to be re-distributed throughout Anatolia.

An army for spreading the new music is to be trained in a conservatory of music to be opened in Angora this winter.

"The students of Angora's first school of music will be memorable in history, for it is they who will spread the new voice of Turkey," writes one of Kemal's foremost spokesmen, the deputy Falih Rifki Bey, in the official newspaper, "Millett." This propagandist is the real leader in the government's Americanization campaign.

RED SAILS TO ASSIST CASTAWAYS IN BOATS

COPENHAGEN, (AP)—A little red dot in the ocean . . . it may mean life or death to victims of the sea's wrath.

So that all may know what the little red dot is, the Danish Shipowners association has started a campaign to force all shippers to fit their lifeboats with red sails.

Shipwreck survivors always say that their worst experience was seeing ships sail without noticing their frantic but futile attempts to attract attention. This is due, says the Minister of Shipping, to the white or blue sails which most life boats carry. The white sails from a distance look like foamy wave crests, while blue is the best camouflage color of the sea.

VARIOUS MATTERS

This is almanac day for December.

Light vehicle lamps at 4:50 this evening.

Choirs have begun rehearsing their Christmas programs.

Some unusually handsome baskets of fruit were prepared and sold for the holiday.

Saturday is St. Andrew's day and will be noted specially by the Episcopal churches.

There were mornings at the week end when it was not much above 14 degrees at points in the town of Saint.

At Montville the Raymond library is to be open today (Friday) having closed for Thanksgiving day.

Mr. and Mrs. James Potter of Thames View, Waterford, went to New York to spend Thanksgiving.

The patients at the public institutions about Norwich had many visitors during the afternoon of the holiday.

As the stars were shining early Thursday morning, the patchwork weather before noon was a surprise to humanity.

While in Salem one night recently Ed Swanson, of New London broke the season's record so far by getting three coons.

Men have been trucking big loads of cord and slab wood from the Preston section, while the highways are in good condition.

The coming Sunday the Children of Mary society of St. Patrick's church will receive December holy communion in a body at the 7:30 mass.

Mrs. Eva Dill has closed her home at Hampton for the winter and has left for Ridgewood, N. J., to be with her daughter, Mrs. Carl Jones.

While it lasted Thursday the soft snow covered roofs and walks in a near-arctic way that had all the effects of a stare snow-storm.

The boys in the Norwich Falls section kept up the tradition of this ancient town by having three poles of barrels to burn, Thanksgiving night.

The hunting season on birds is over for the year, all the sportsmen in the shore towns having about the same report—little game and no large bags to record.

Thursday afternoon the mercury had risen to 40 degrees, but the wind was raw and the clouds threatening. However, there was sun enough to let it pass for a pleasant day.

A correspondent mentions that Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Walker and daughter Clara of West Woodstock have been guests of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur N. Wood at South Coventry.

The snow flurries during Thursday morning might be taken as a compliment to city guests, always harking back to tales of "old-fashioned New England Thanksgivings."

Among the books purchased for the Fletcher Memorial library at Hampton this month is a Webster's New International Dictionary. New aviation maps of the world have also been added to the loose leaf atlas.

There are property owners who might have increased the attractiveness of the town had they made an effort to tidy walks, gutters and street for the holiday, instead of permitting papers and other litter to remain.

It has been announced in the Norwich churches that the Connecticut Council of Religious Education is to meet in Centre church, Hartford December 7. The theme is: "Character Education in the Christian Church."

PICKING DEFENDER'S KEEL FROM LEBANON OAK

An oak tree that has been felled in Lebanon in a wood lot owned by Charles J. Pitcher may be used for the keel for the American cup defender which will compete with the challenger of Sir Thomas Lipton in the international yacht races next year. That it will become a part of the defender is not certain as four other oak trees have been chopped down in a search for one that will meet the requirements of the keel, but all the others have developed flaws.

The Lebanon oak, which is considered an unusually fine specimen by those who have viewed it, was 65 feet high and four feet in diameter, from which a 37-foot log was cut. The tree was bought from Mr. Pitcher by Fred B. Clark of North Westchester, acting for James Watrous, Mystic lumberman, and was grounded by men under the direction of Francis J. Sherman, of Windham.

The log will be taken to Mystic, where it will be cut into the proper size for the keel and if found perfect will be laid down for the defender.

TO DELIVER ADDRESS AT ELKS' MEMORIAL SERVICE

Rev. Alexander H. Abbott, pastor of the United Congregational church, is to deliver the address at the annual memorial service of Norwich lodge of Elks, which will be held in the lodge room on the evening of Sunday, Dec. 1. FAMILY REUNION FOR IVES WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Thanksgiving this year was a day of more than usual pleasure for Mr. and Mrs. William W. Ives of 11 Champlin street for it brought together a family gathering to celebrate their 58th wedding anniversary, with all their children and families home.

Those with them for the day were their daughter, Mrs. Abel Reggio of Bay Shore, L. I., with Mr. Reggio, another daughter, Mrs. A. F. Armstrong of this city, with Mr. Armstrong, and a son, Howard S. Ives of Portland, this state, with his wife and two children, Shirley and Elaine.

Except for the first two years after they were married in New Haven on Nov. 29, 1871, they have lived all their married life in this city. Mr. Ives has had an active and busy life in a number of public offices. For four years he was chief clerk in the Connecticut bureau of labor statistics, he was a member of the West Chelsea board of education for nine years, serving as president for five years, he has been cashier of the water board, and is at present president of the Connecticut Fish and Game association. For several years he has been The Bulletin representative at the sessions of the state legislature.

WEDDINGS

Heroux-Shahan

The marriage of Mrs. Theresa Burns Shahan of Bristol, Conn., actively interested in social service, and George Heroux, connected with the Connecticut company of Norwich took place Thanksgiving morning at 9 o'clock at St. Joseph's church, Bristol. Rev. W. P. Laflin, the pastor, performed the ceremony and celebrated a nuptial high mass.

Miss Helen Zukusky, social worker at the Diocesan Bureau of Social Service at Hartford, was maid-of-honor. The bride's son, Thomas J. Shanan was best man. Mr. and Mrs. Heroux will make their home at the Shannon apartment building, in this city.

Shea—Brassill

Miss Mary Eileen Brassill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Brassill of No. 112 McKinley avenue, and Leroy G. Shea, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Shea, of Mystic, were united in marriage at a nuptial mass at 8 o'clock Thursday morning at St. Patrick's church. The officiating clergyman was Rt. Rev. Msgr. Michael H. May, rector. Guests were present from Bridgeport, New York, Westport, Conn., Westerly, Mystic and New London.

The bride, who was beautiful in imperial blue transparent velvet, carried a bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums. The maid of honor, Miss Alice Dion of Willimantic, was attractive in a gown of rose beige transparent velvet and carried a bouquet of orchid chrysanthemums. Both wore picture hats to correspond with their dresses. The bride's brother, Gerald F. Brassill of Danielson, was best man for the bridegroom and the ushers were James Brassill, the bride's brother, and William Mulaney of Mystic.

Following the ceremony a reception was held and a breakfast served at the home of the bride's parents, covers being laid for 30. Mr. and Mrs. Shea left later in the day for a wedding trip to New York and upon their return will reside in a newly furnished apartment on Park avenue, Bridgeport. For traveling the bride wore a brown ensemble.

The bride, who received many beautiful gifts, has been employed as a secretary at the plant of the Norwich Belt Manufacturing company and the bridegroom has a responsible position with a Bridgeport concern.

Mr. and Mrs. Warren F. Burt, of Groton, were members of a family dinner party at the home of their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Harold S. Burt, of Laurel Hill avenue.

Miss Julia E. Brewer, of Washington street, went to West Mystic to pass Thanksgiving with her sisters, Misses Fannie and Nellie Brewer.

Mrs. William H. Palmer, of Elm Hill, has as her guests her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Reynolds, of Greenwich, who motored to town and were members of the family dinner party at Mrs. Gardiner Greene's Thursday.

Miss Virginia Chase accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Elwell, Jr., to their home in New Haven Thursday evening. Mr. and Mrs. Albert H. Chase will motor to New Haven Saturday and will be accompanied home by their daughter Sunday.

Barberries and snowdrops are about all that are left to brighten up hedges and borders in grounds about town.

DECLARES BROTHERHOOD OF GOODWILL TODAY IS CAUSE FOR THANKFULNESS

That the urge for a great brotherhood of reason and good-will vibrates through the earth, with the brotherhood of man knocking at the doors of every heart, is a cause for thanksgiving in which the world can rejoice, declared Rev. Theodore M. Shipherd, pastor of Park Congregational church, in concluding his thoughtful sermon there Sunday evening at the union Thanksgiving service held under the auspices of the Norwich Ministers' association. A congregation of good numbers was in attendance at the service.

Speaking from the text, In everything give thanks, Rev. Mr. Shipherd made reference first to the remarkable influence that first Thanksgiving day in New England had exerted upon all subsequent American history and went on to speak in part as follows:

REV. THEODORE M. SHIPHERD

The thankful heart appears in most surprising places and at most unexpected times. Why should a handful of exiled Englishmen find cause for gratitude when thrown into the wilderness?

The most surprising thing about people is the power that germinating ideas exert through them. The squalor and ignorance of Merrie England 300 years ago produced revolt. Dreams of a better order of society were working in the minds of a few men and these dreams caught and fired other minds. These dream-convictions sent the English exiles to these shores. So wisdom and good morals were at work in men's minds in Europe. Some of them braved the seas and the wilderness to build a new order for human society. When they got here they were full of thanksgiving and deep purpose.

These ideas, these dreams, are deathless. For three centuries they have been working in the new world and in the old, until the world in which we live is utterly different. The world of things has changed. The world of the mind has deeply changed. The world is now a neighborhood.

We may best mark our gratitude today by giving thanks in this year of 1929 for an ancestry which had within itself a restless purpose for a better world. It is the aggressive progeny of an aggressive parentage that keeps the world of mankind from sinking into staleness and death. May we always think in gratitude of this birthright.

As long as we are earth-bound creatures, food and clothing and shelter and safety matter. These are primary concerns of human beings. This country has seen increase in food, clothing and shelter and safety until our problem is the problem of abundance. Wealth has taxed our wisdom even more than did poverty. Affluence is a starnest master than we have yet come to understand. It demands of us more wisdom, more humanity, more discipline of mind and heart. We have come to bounty and abundance; for this larger kingdom and its larger responsibilities we may well seek guidance and for existence in it make our thanksgiving vocal.

There have always been people who concern themselves chiefly with things. The fear of hunger pursues them, the joy of possession charms and fascinates them. But these are the children of time and space. They are quickly born and quickly die. They are the perennial children of this world. Here today and gone tomorrow. The hunger of the human mind is more than this, and its satisfactions go deeper. For a life that is timeless and without place in space are we most deeply thankful today.

These children of light have gone deep into the treasures of nature. They have explored the earth beneath and the heavens above and they come always bringing the tokens of beauty and wonder out of their explorations. A new sense of the integrity, beauty and the surpassing majesty of the universe sweeps over us with each new discovery and our enlarging understanding. For the laborious, patient and devout researches of the men of knowledge we bring our thanksgiving and our grateful tribute.

And again the fact that stirs one into gratitude is the increasing and urgent fact of neighborliness. In this country our people move with great readiness, from one state to another and from one side of the continent to the other. The people of different countries move with speed and new interest among each other. They meet face to face, eye to eye. International influences come on the wings of every morning. A new respect and deference is building. A new meaning has been added to every life in every town and village the world around. No longer does any man live apart by himself. Our homes are touched by the universal language of good music. The sentiments of the wisest men come to almost at will. The lift and urge of a great brotherhood of reason and good-will vibrates through the earth. The brotherhood of man is knocking at the doors of every heart. Learning provokes it, business requires it, commerce demands it and the heart of the world rejoices in it.

For this urgent brotherhood we are thankful.

Out of the mystery of history, nature and the struggle for human understanding there rises a more wonderful conception of God and His universe. For this supremacy of wisdom in all that man does not make, for the patience and wisdom that watches over us, we make our full-hearted thanksgiving.

Order of Worship

Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey of the First Congregational church, president of the Ministers' association, presided and the services opened with the hymn, Come Ye Thankful People, Come, which was sung by the congregation, led by the quartette of the church. Rev. W. E. Gannt of A. M. E. Zion church read the Thanksgiving proclamation by Governor Trumbull, and the church quartette rendered an anthem in fine harmony. Reading of the Scripture lesson by Rev. Thomas Richey of Christ Episcopal church was followed by prayer by Rev. Joseph Cooper of Trinity Methodist Episcopal church and the offering was taken which was for the Norwich Council of Religious Education. The offertory anthem by the quartette was followed by the hymn, We Plough the Fields and Scatter, in which the congregation united.

Following the sermon by Rev. Mr. Shipherd, the congregation sang America and the benediction was pronounced by Rev. H. P. Brothwell of the Third Baptist church, and the organ postlude concluded the service.

Early Thursday morning State Police Officers Arthur Whitmarsh and Murphy raided what is known as the "West" place off the Norwich Westerly highway, in the town of Preston. The officers, it is understood found nine frequenters in the place and seized a quantity of homebrew beer.

Condition Favorable

News received Thursday by Norwich friends from Mrs. Edson F. Gallaudet, of East Greenwich, R. I., formerly of this city, was to the effect that she is doing very well, at Jane Brown Memorial hospital, Providence, where she underwent an operation for appendicitis early in the week.

MOTOR TRIP FROM BEIRUT BY MISS SYBIL PALMER

A visit to old castles dating back many centuries, a monastery and an old church on a motor trip in the neighborhood of Beirut is described in an interesting way by Miss Sybil C. Palmer in a letter to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Palmer of 142 Broad street. Miss Palmer left here in the fall to take a position in the American University hospital at Beirut where she is a teacher in the nurses' training school.

The letter was written October 26th, taking about three weeks to get here. In it she says:

We left Beirut at noon on Saturday with John, K., Scottie, and our guide or chauffeur. The road toward Tripoli is a fair dirt macadam, built along the Mediterranean all the way—much like the Storm King highway—only not so well protected on the edge. Such curves and such abysses!

Our first stop was the old town of Jebel. Such a thrill to see the remains of that old castle, floors all dirt now, donkeys of the French soldiers sleeping in the reception hall—but even so, the spirit is still there. It was a small friendly castle, not as tremendous as the one we saw on Sunday and you could imagine the life of the knights and the court going on. It was a crusading castle of about 1100 A. D. Next to the castle the French are working excavating. Walls of another castle and another civilization are just beginning to appear. You will see the picture of K. and John standing near the old Assyrian god that they had recently unearthed. Imagine finding things over 3,000 years old.

Then we drove on about 30 miles up the coast to Tripoli—the next large city north after Beirut. There is little of old interest there—just like an eastern town—but they have little tram cars pulled by donkeys with bells that tinkle like sleigh bells. The same dirt, filth, slow, easy life as everywhere else.

Well, from Tripoli we went on about 20 miles, dirt hard-packed road, fairly smooth to a small tiny village called Tartouse. We entered the village about sunset and our purpose then was to see an old church built also about 1100 A. D., in the same period. We drove into the square courtyard of the old church and most of the inhabitants came down to see us, women in black with faces veiled, men in all kinds of colored costumes; they came with their children, their chickens, their donkeys and their camels. They tied two camels outside the old church and such a picture as they made. Then they sent down to the mayor to bring the key. After a while up he came with this huge iron key that looked as though the gate of heaven should open for it. By that time it was sunset and we went inside the church. I wish I could describe it—the sight, and the resulting feeling. The light came in from the door giving the old stone walls such a warm, rosy color. Nothing of decoration left in the church at all—but just its perfect shape—pure Gothic—with the tall impressive stone arches lifting you up and up and up. The floor was dirt—everything was dusty—but such impressive architecture. We climbed up the small old circular stairs to the roof and sat on the windows of the roof looking down into the dimly-lighted church. Such a sight!

We found the only hotel in the village which contained three rooms on a roof. We took the only three rooms and spent the night in Tartouse at 40 cents a night. Very seldom do tourists go there, which made the whole visit so very nice. We wandered through the narrow old streets by moonlight. Part of the old city wall still exists with some remains of the old castle walls. People now living in single dark rooms of part that used to be the castle, dirt floors and no hygiene of any sort. It doesn't seem possible! But that whole village was so romantic by moonlight even though there were smells and dirty sights. We stopped in one of the little window shops to watch a man roll pastry and make delicious cakes. What was our surprise when he began to talk to us in poor English. He had spent seven years in Cleveland—so Scotty and the native Arab began to compare notes. Our guide could speak Turkish, Armenian, Arabic and English, so we were well fixed most of the time.

The next day we drove on over cart paths and stones and hills and vales—no attempt at a road—we were in a new model Chevrolet—hereafter I admire them. The country was rather barren but in some spots beautiful green trees and the cedars of Lebanon could be seen. We would drive along about three miles—then suddenly come on a little stone village, about ten houses, either deserted or still in use, just stone huts—that's all. Our first big village was Safeta—another old castle town, way up on top of a hill—castle on top—and the wall enclosing the little village. All that remained of that castle was the chapel and that was still in use, Greek orthodox service had just been going on and the smell of incense was strong. There were some beautiful Byzantine paintings there.

We started out again and drove on through the wilds until we suddenly came upon a fairly modern appearing monastery way up in the hills. It was nearly noon—and we stopped to find out if we could go inside. It was originally built in time of Hadrian, 500 A. D., but the only old part remaining at present was the chapel. We walked in right to the chapel in time for the service. There was the Greek pastor all in black, black skull cap, beautiful black beard and long black hair in a knot. An intensely interesting and intelligent face. There were about 25 people inside—all holding candles and chanting around the old, old altar of the chapel. After the service the pastor went to his little receiving room off the court to receive all the villagers that come down for the service. We went in and our guide could talk to the pastor as he understood Turkish. We sat in this little room with the villagers all in their queer costumes, sitting quietly while the pastor would talk to each one in turn. All I could think of was a church pageant like the Christmas one when we wear old costumes. The pastor was so polite and when he heard John was a historian he took us back into the chapel into the sacred regions and showed us an old book with a beautiful gold encarved case that dated back to Hadrian's time. Then he insisted on serving us dinner. We went into the dining room—long white table, pastor at one end, our party next to him—then the villagers. We had delicious highly seasoned meat balls with labin, which is a form of thick soured milk—the only way in this country milk is served. Then we each had four brown round loaves of bread, nice with sauce. After the villagers had all eaten, the servants came bringing in this huge watermelon as a special treat for us. We had to eat it all or he would have been hurt—Heavens, how we stuffed. Throughout the meal five yellow cats wandered around under our feet—the pastor stopping between bites to feed them out of his hand, brown bread and sour milk. That was an experience. We saw the oven where they bake the bread—an open fire—with stone shelf around like a big fireplace. These loaves brown on one side, then are turned on the other. I'll send you later a picture of the pastor and our party. He was such a charming man—also looked as though he knew and understood and enjoyed the ways of the world.

From the monastery we looked across up on the highest hill to the last castle we visited, Krah de Chevalier. I shall not forget the ride up to that castle. Up and up, figure eight turns and reversing curves over a narrow dirt road, room only for one car no protection to one side when you could look down into depths—depths. When we reached the top we were nearly faint with sights, but the guide took it as a matter of course—an excellent driver. That huge old castle, so well preserved, outer and inner wall, the moat existing, people living in the castle even now, room for over 2,000 people in it—I just can't describe it

THANKSGIVING EVE CLASS INITIATED BY EAGLES

Norwich aerie, No. 367, Fraternal Order of Eagles, initiated a large class of candidates Wednesday evening at the Eagles home on Cliff street. It was one of the largest gathering of Eagles at the home this year, the out of town visitors including members from New London and other places.

The work was in charge of Worthy President Herbert L. McNeely, assisted by Past President William Hastedt, acting as worthy conductor, Past President Timothy Fields acting as worthy chaplain and Past President Edward J. Mullins in the past worthy president's chair. The work was put on in a very impressive manner.

After the initiation remarks were made by Worthy President Kane of New London Aerie, Past Presidents Timothy Fields and Edward J. Mullins who spoke on the merits of the organization. Another class will be initiated in the near future.

After the ceremonies of initiation were concluded about 125 sat down to a turkey supper which was enjoyed by all. After supper the members were entertained by a company of vaudeville artists. The aerie is in a very prosperous condition.

MAYOR'S PROCLAMATION ON CHRISTMAS SEALS

This is the season for the annual sale of Christmas seals. What pleasure it is to send out these little stamps bearing glad tidings of health and comfort and all else they portend.

People of great wealth have repeatedly emphasized the value of health by expressing their wish to be able to exchange one for the other. Too often, however, nothing which money may acquire will cure their sickness nor alleviate their suffering. Consequently when modern science has found the cure for tuberculosis and the way to prevent this disease, we should be particularly anxious to cure those suffering with it and to assist in preventing its spread to others.

Money wisely spent is curing and preventing tuberculosis.

Let us all buy Christmas seals again this year and keep the good work up! The keen satisfaction felt from the knowledge that we are thereby defeating this dreaded disease and giving comfort and cure to those afflicted with it will bring a full return of joy.

I sincerely trust that Norwich, as usual, will respond generously to this c use.

LEE R. ROBBINS,
Mayor.

Norwich, Nov. 16, 1929.

SCOUTS TO SEARCH FOR OLD FORT SHANTOCK SITE

The all-city hike to be conducted tomorrow (Saturday) will have as its goal the original site of Fort Shantock. The first plan included a longer hike to one of the ruggedest spots in Connecticut, but at the Scoutleaders training session it was decided to postpone the longer hike until another time. Some scouts will go to Fort Shantock in the morning under the leadership of their scoutmasters or assistant. The main body of scouts will leave Franklin square at 1:15. One of the novel activities of the day will be the finding of Ceasar Borzia's ring. This famous ring with its sharp point covered with "deadly poison" will be in the hands of some enemy scout who with the help of five or six other "bandits" try to prevent its capture. The only way the ring can be secured will be by a scout demanding of the suspected owner of the ring its possession in the following words, "In the name of the scout oath and law and the scout motto I demand that you hand over to me the dread ring of Ceasar Borzia." If the ring is properly discovered a suitable rize will be given to the scout gaining possession of the ring.

Many other novel features are planned for the hike. Meats and marshmallows will compose the bill of fare. A. L. Peale will give a short talk on the site of the old fort, should it be discovered.

MASS OF THANKSGIVING FOR ST. PATRICK'S PEOPLE

Rt. Rev. Msgr. M. H. May, rector of St. Patrick's church, read the mass of thanksgiving Thursday morning at 8 o'clock, a congregation of good proportions attending. Kyrie and Sanctus were sung by Roderick F. Sullivan and the organist, Henry J. LaFontaine, and at the offertory Mr. Sullivan sang Dr. Jules Jordan's beautiful setting of Ave Maria, in which Mr. Sullivan's voice is always so pleasing. Agnus Dei was a duet by Mr. Sullivan and Mr. LaFontaine. Many of the parish school children attended the mass and were in charge of their teachers, the Sisters of Mercy from the Perkins avenue convent.

SUES FOR $10,000 WHEN STRUCK BY CABLE

The Jordan Mills, Inc., of Waterford, the Bigelow company of New Haven and W. G. Meade and Son, Inc., of Springfield, are named defendants in a suit for $10,000 damages brought in the superior court by Louis Nixon of Waterford. The plaintiff alleges that he was struck by a cable and seriously injured while working in a flower garden in property adjoining the Jordan mills, which was having a boiler installed. The other two defendants named were doing the work in the course of which a cable snapped off and hit Nixon.

BOY SCOUTS TO DISTRIBUTE CHRISTMAS SEAL POSTERS

Almost 200 Christmas seal posters will be placed in the windows of stores on the principal streets of Norwich this (Friday) afternoon by a dozen Boy Scouts. So anxious are the scouts to do this kind of a good turn for the city that local scout headquarters sometimes finds it has more boys than posters.

For Parking Law Violations

Five automobile drivers whose machines were tagged for parking on the no-parking side of Willow street paid the usual $2 fine in the city court Thursday morning. They were Christopher Alexopoulos, Eugene Deahefy, both of this city; Leone F. Decelles, Taftville; Paul F. Herr, Brooklyn, this state, and William J. Rogers, Moosup.

THANKSGIVING BONFIRES MAKE THREE NIGHT FIRE CALLS IN CITY

The fire department was called out four times by telephone Thursday evening. All of the calls were inconsequential and there was little or no damage. Three of the calls were the result of Thanksgiving night bonfires. At 6:25 o'clock Thursday evening Squad A responded to a telephone call for a barrel fire in the rear of the Greenberger block, No. 330 Franklin street. The call was sent in by a neighbor who feared for the safety of nearby buildings.

Boys Burning Barrels

At 7:04 o'clock Engine Co. No. 2, North Main street fire station, responded to a telephone call from a resident in the neighborhood of St. Mary's Memorial church. Boys were burning barrels on the large lot in the rear of the church. They had received permission from the church sexton to have the fire on the lot but the person who sent in the call thought the bonfire was too close to a house.

About 8:50 o'clock, a telephone call was received for a small fire in Smith avenue. A shed on the sandbank, just east of the Eighth street bridge, caught fire and was burned to the ground. Engine No. 2, Squad A and Deputy Chief D. J. Brennan answered the call.

Threw Kerosene On Fire

During the early evening the department received a telephone call to the effect that boys were burning barrels near No. 2 Valley street, and that sparks were falling on the roof of a shed. The owner of the property who remonstrated with the boys for burning the barrels so close to the shed, picked up a nearby pail, which he supposed contained water, and threw the contents on the fire. The pail contained kerosene and the fire blazed up brighter than ever. Deputy Chief Brennan responded. There was no damage.

Soft, wavy hair!

The modern sculptured bobs do wonders to bring out your personality. But like other present-day modes of arranging the hair, they call attention to it. That's why it's so important nowadays to keep your hair soft, lustrous, abundant. The easiest and quickest way to give new lustre and color to hair, which has begun to look dull and lifeless, is with Danderine. And it makes the hair softer, easier to arrange; holds it in place.

Here's all you do. Each time you use your brush just put a little Danderine on it. It removes the oily film from your hair; brings out its natural color; gives it more gloss than brilliantine. Waves "set" with it stay in longer.

Danderine dissolves the crust of dandruff; puts the scalp in the pink of condition. It stops falling hair. A small bottle is enough to show its merit. Start on it tonight.

Weak After Operation

"About five months ago, following an operation for appendicitis I did not gain strength enough to be up and about. My mother and sister advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I have taken five bottles and it has helped me to get strong so I can do my own housework now. I have recommended it to several friends who have been weak and run down."—Mrs. Oscar Osmo, Box 474, Thief River Falls, Minn.

RUNS BY GENTLE AND MASTERS GIVE PENN. SPECTACULAR WIN OVER CORNELL

By ALAN J. GOULD
Associated Press Sports Editor

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 28.—(AP)—Pennsylvania's rapid fire running attack, set off by a 103 yard dash from kick off by Dick Gentle at the start of the third period, swept Cornell to defeat, 17 to 7, today before a Thanksgiving day throng of 70,000.

Gentle's run, one of the longest of the year on any gridiron, enabled Pennsylvania to tie the score in short order after the Quakers had been outplayed through the first half. Thereafter, Gentle and his versatile running mate, Walt. Masters, ran Cornell ragged.

Before the close of the third period, Penn had scored another touchdown, with Gentle taking the ball over on a short buck after Masters had raced 50 yards from fake punt formation to make the job fairly easy for his running mate. Masters topped off his all-around work by booting a field goal from placement at the start of the final period with the ball on Cornell's 18 yard line.

Cornell took the lead on the first play of the second period when Howard Johnson flipped a short pass to Miles Stevens, who stepped across the goal line after the Ithacans had marched 50 yards on straight off tackle rushes.

The Red forces hung to this advantage throughout the half, although they nearly lost it as Pennsylvania on a sudden lateral passing spurt, swept 70 yards and failed to get a touchdown only because of an offside penalty on a play which saw Masters circle end and dash 32 yards across the goal.

From the start of the final half, however, Cornell was unable to stop the wild dashes of Gentle and Masters. On Captain Sam Wakeman's kickoff, Gentle fumbled the ball at first, scooped it up a stride behind his own goal line and then started a six-scar dash for the touchdown. He hit sidelines, whirled and squirmed and was almost in the clear as he reached midfield. There it took a supreme lunge to avoid a desperate tackle by Howard Johnson, Cornell quarterback, but Gentle slid past, again reversed and sped across the goal.

It was Masters turn to do something for the Red and Blue shortly afterward and he accepted the responsibility by punting on fourth down, with the ball on his own 40 yard line and then racing 50 yards around Cornell's right end. He was prevented from scoring only by a tackle from behind by Hunt, Cornell lineman, who cut in and grabbed the Penn back after H. Johnson had been straight armed out of the play. Gentle took the ball over in three rushes and Masters again kicked the extra point. Minutes later Masters place-kicked a field goal from Cornell's 18-yard line at the start of the fourth period after a Cornell fumble had been recovered by Gervin, Pennsylvania end, on the Red 27 yard line. Gervin and his mate on the other end of the line, Biblette, did some spectacular tackling, especially in going down under Masters' punts. Cornell's safety man, Johnson, was never able to get loose and appeared to be somewhat crippled from the effects of the determined manner in which he was brought to earth time after time in the final half.

Penn registered nine first downs to eight for Cornell.

ROUSE HEADS FIELD IN BERKELEY OPEN

BERKELEY, Cal., Nov. 28.—(AP)—John "Benny" Rouse, 22-year-old pro of the Briar Gate club of Chicago, toured the Berkeley Country club course today in 68 to lead the field in the first round of the 72 hole Berkeley $5,000 open championship.

The youth's round, completed in two under par, was also two strokes lower than the cards turned in by his nearest rivals—John Black, California Country club, San Francisco; Dewey Longworth, Claremont Country club, Berkeley, and Chet Beer, Stockdale Country club, Bakersfield. The trio turned in 70's.

Horton Smith of Joplin, Mo., favorite, was forced to take a 74 while Tommy Armour, former national open titleholder, fell back to the 77 class. Abe Espinosa of Chicago, had a 71 for his opening round. William Burke, of Westport, Conn., was among the low scorers, going over the course in 71, also.

Eighteen holes will be played tomorrow with the 36 hole finals on Saturday.

MISSTEP WINS THANKSGIVING HANDICAP AT BOWIE

BOWIE, Md., Nov. 28.—(AP)—Misstep, of the Le Mar stock farm, today won the Thanksgiving handicap over the Bowie track.

Pitted against ten of the best routers in training, the four-year-old son of Upset was made the favorite despite his recent poor efforts on the Maryland tracks. Sonny Workman was in the saddle in place of Mack Garner and to his ride goes much of the credit for La Mar Stock farm colors' victory.

Misstep paid $5.10 to win, $4.20 to place and $2.30 to show. Dr. Freeland was worth $13.40 to place and $8.10 to show while Glen Wild paid $8.10 to run third.

PENN DISTANCE MEN WIN BERWICK MARATHON

BERWICK, Pa., Nov. 28.—(AP)—Pennsylvania collegians showed their winged heels to the fleetest and most enduring of middle distance runners of the east and Canada today, to finish first and second in the 20th annual Berwick marathon.

Gus Moore, University of Pittsburgh, star, a resident of Brooklyn, led the finishers with a time of 49 minutes 42 1-2 seconds, finishing 126 yards ahead of Richard Detwiler of Pennsylvania State college, who won second prize and the Pennsylvania prize as well. Billy Reynolds of Galt, Ont., in third place, was 13 seconds back of Detwiler while the veteran Jimmy Henigan, of Boston, twice winner of the event, was fourth. Phil Silverman, last year's winner was forced out on the second mile because of illness, rising up among the leaders when compelled to quit.

The leaders as they placed and their time are as follows:

Gus Moore, Pittsburgh, 49 minutes, 42 and one half seconds; Richard Detwiler, Penn State college, 50 minutes and one fifth second; Billy Reynolds, Galt, Ont., 50 minutes, 13 and one fifth second; James Henigan, Boston, 50 minutes, 35 and two fifths seconds; Willis McCluskey, Toronto, 50 minutes and 56 seconds; Captain Radtke, Pennsylvania State college, 51 minutes 4 2-5 seconds; William Ruckel, New York city, 51 minutes, 52 seconds; William Meyer, Philadelphia, 52 minutes, 46 seconds; Arthur Haroin, Portland, Maine, 52 minutes, 50 seconds; Fred Sargeant, Ontario, 53 minutes, 6 seconds; Charles Snell, Toronto, 53 minutes, 19 seconds; Bob Mitchell, Toronto, 53 minutes, 21 seconds; Allen Parr, Mifflinville, Pa., 54 minutes, 3 seconds; Clarence DaMar, Boston, 54 minutes, 8 seconds.

"BUSSY" STEVENS SEE MATES PLAY FROM THE BENCH

MILFORD, Nov. 28.—(AP)—Robert "Bussy" Stevens, Stratford high school football player who lost a leg as a result of an injury he received during practice on Oct. 7, was brought here today from the Bridgeport hospital to witness the football game between Stratford and Milford high schools. The game resulted in a scoreless tie.

When he arrived for the game, he was given a big ovation from his fellow school mates. An improvised bed was placed on the players' bench for him.

"Bussy" ate his Thanksgiving dinner with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Stevens, at his home following the game and tonight he was returned to the hospital where he is expected to be confined for another two weeks.

Yesterday at a meeting at which preparations for today's game were made, students of the Stratford high school presented their injured school mate with a $200 check. The money was raised by the students in various ways and will be used by "Bussy" to defray part of his hospital expenses.

When he received the check, "Bussy" said: "When I try to thank people for all they have done, I just can't say anything."

Thrombosis, which set in after he had received his injury necessitated the amputation of Stevens' leg. During his stay at the hospital, "Bussy" has received numerous letters from prominent football players, including Captain Cagle of West Point, and recently was visited by Albie Booth of the Yale squad.

SYRACUSE BEATS COLUMBIA IN LAST MINUTE MARCH

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—(AP)—A powerful but uncertain Syracuse eleven punched over a touchdown in the last five minutes of the final period to defeat Columbia by a 6-0 count before a holiday crowd of 25,000 at Baker field today.

The Orange and the Light Blue and White battled on virtually even terms throughout the first half and most of the second in a game that was in doubt until the Syracuse attack which was climaxed by a 45-yard drive and a touchdown that was enough to win.

Warren Stevens, a dark haithack, of Syracuse, carried the ball over for the final three yards on a whirling, twisting plunge off tackle which atoned for a series of sad mispleys in the first half when the ball slipped out of his chilled fingers several times in fumbles which might have been costly had Columbia possessed a sustained attack.

Gelber to Box Watts Dec. 5.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 28.—(AP)—Sammy Gelber, New York and Jimmy Watts, of this city, will meet in a return bout of eight rounds at the arena here Thursday night, December 5. Watts defeated the Gothamite here last month. Two other eights are carded in which Jack Red Knight, New Haven meets Joe Carpino, New York, and Eddie Elking, New York lightweight, faces Tommy Jarrett, New Haven.

PITTSBURGH KEEPS RECORD CLEAN BY RUNNING WILD AGAINST PENN. STATE

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 28.—(AP)—The Golden Panthers of Pittsburgh, gridiron champions of the east, gave thanks tonight for the might of burly Tom Parkinson and a season of uninterrupted victory he brought to a smashing climax today with an almost single-handed triumph over Penn State.

Raging from one end of the huge Pitt stadium to the other, crashing his way through the strongest eleven the Nittany Lion has brought here in ten years, the 200-pound fullback tore the Penn State line to pieces, scored three touchdowns, and kicked two goals afterward to count every Pittsburgh point in a 20 to 7 victory.

Toby Uansa, a hero all season and major All-American candidate, was just another football player today. Only once did Uansa break clear of Penn State's ends. Niel Stahley and Mayer Kaplan, and the Nittany tackles, Cal. Shawley and Ralph Ricker, for an important gain. In the final quarter, when the gallant State line had been battered under Parkinson's terrific lunges, Toby turned an end for 38 yards. Pug then took up the beaten again and in five plunges smashed through the Nittany guards for the last touchdown.

Pug Dale, throttling Uansa down the field on every kick and vulnerable only to Parkinson's smashes through the middle, drew a decided score into Pittsburgh's first half due to the brilliant play of Cooper French, quarterback, and Frank Diedrich, halfback.

For the first time since Bob Higgins took a pass behind his goal line and ran 100 yards for a touchdown in 1919 a Penn State team led the Panthers at half time, 7 to 6. It was the first time Pittsburgh had been behind in a season marked by major victories over Duke, Nebraska, West Virginia, Washington and Jefferson, Ohio State and Carnegie Tech.

After Parkinson battered his way for a touchdown after the opening kickoff on a drive that started on the Panther 41-yard line, French turned in his day's work for State in the second quarter. In four plays, after taking the ball from Pitt on downs on her own 48-yard line, Penn State scored her points.

French took a pass from Diedrich that covered 24 yards to Pitt's 38-yard line.

Two plunges took the leather to the 26-yard mark and on the next play French passed neatly to Stahley over the Pitt goal line.

Parkinson swung into action in the second half. Carrying the ball 11 out of 16 plays in a march that covered 84 yards, Parkinson smashed over for his second touchdown and with the aid of Uansa scored a third in the final quarter. Twice more he led husky marches but passes failed at critical moments.

Pitt outgained the Lions widely, scoring 23 first downs to 7 for State. The Lions completed five in 11 passes for 53 yards of gains while both of Pitts' tries failed.

With the season completed victoriously, Pittsburgh now waits invitations for post-season combat. Pitt officials said an invitation to represent the east against the pick of the west in the annual Tournament of Roses game in Pasadena, Cal., New Year's day would be welcomed. Thus far, no invitation has been received, they said.

Susie Says

Didja enjoy the turkey?

And speaking of turkey you remember the story about the turkey that drank the wine and lost his feathers?

Well here's a companion story that comes to me from New Jersey, brought by a Norwich man who vouches for its truth.

It semes that a family who live in a small New Jersey town are not in favor of prohibition and to show their independence they manufacture their own beverages. You remember New Jersey didn't ratify the 18th amendment.

Their little bottling works was located near the henhouse in the back yard. You notice I say it "was located." The members of the family had been very careful about concealing its location from curious eyes.

In the henhouse resided a very large and pompous rooster. You know one of those birds that crows like a foghorn in the morning, the real early morning. And this rooster was of a curious nature.

One day this pompous rooster strayed from the chicken yard and in the course of his wanderings with a lady friend came across some damp and crushed grain in the vicinity. "Mash," I believe, the prohibition agents call it.

Well, the mash tasted pretty good to the pompous rooster and his lady friend and, not being on a diet, they consumed a goodly quantity. In fact such a quantity that the feminine half of the party staggered under the load.

The rooster was a thoroughbred and carried his load like a gentleman. But it increased his pompousness to an astounding degree. He strutted, preened his feathers and decided that he was the original cock o' the walk. In fact he defied any fowl or beast to dispute it.

He ambled about the yard with his lady friend following with admiring glances, such as they were. Soon the rooster spotted the two family cats. He took a decided dislike to them as they did not pay him proper homage.

He started in to clean house, and how. Two cats were nothing in his young life but he just didn't like them. The cats after taking a few rans decided discretion was the better part of valor and took to the streets.

Proud of himself he strutted some more and continued his walk. The family dog was the next denizen of the yard to be encountered. The dog had chased the rooster up other days but not today. Remembering the insults heaped upon him by the dog the rooster decided now was the appointed time.

Instead of being chased the rooster put up a whale of a battle and the canine member of the household taken unawares came off second best. He high-tailed it into the garage and every time he ventured out the rooster was there to drive him back.

Seeing no others about to dispute his tyranic reign he looked for other worlds to conquer. Marching down the street with his lady friend following with her admiring glances he came to a neighbor's house.

Resting drowsily on the porch was a little pomeranian. The pom, who also had an exalted opinion of himself, set up a disputing and sneering bark as the rooster paraded along.

Well that attitude of contempt was the undoing of the pom. The rooster cocked one eye at the pom, flapped his wings a couple of times and went into battle. The pom stopped one spur with his ear and decided to flee to the protection of the house.

The rooster seeing his recent ridiculer disappearing into the house decided not to let him get away with it so he put chase. Into the house they went, pursued and pursuer and up the front stairs to the second floor.

The mistress of the house hearing the commotion investigated and found her pet pom getting the worst of the argument. She chased the rooster out and then telephoned for the state police.

The officer came and seeing the actions of the rooster began to wonder. He let the rooster wander about awhile and finally as the world began to look less rosy the rooster ambled home to his chicken yard.

The officer followed and it was only a few minutes before the cause of the rooster's belligerent attitude was discovered.

You now understand why I said "was located" instead of "is located."

ARMY HAS FINAL HOME DRILL FOR NOTRE DAME

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 28.—(AP)—Army's football team went into its final home drill before the Notre Dame game with a high spirited determination to add one more to the season's list of upsets.

Army showed a fighting spirit which indicated the peak of form and every Cadet player seemed ready to carry it into Saturday's battle with Rockne's Ramblers.

The coaches announced that the first string lineup probably would start Saturday but there still is some doubt about one of the backfield positions. O'Keefe, who has been out of the game for some time, will be back in his old place in the backfield and there is a question whether Bowman or Carver will drop out of the starting lineup.

The final practice this morning, preceding a big Thanksgiving dinner served at the regular training table, was little more, than a play session for the hard worked players. Trainer Frank Wandle took the squad in charge for setting up exercises and muscle limbering maneuvres.

UNIV. OF UTAH ENDS SEASON WITH VICTORY

DENVER, Nov. 28.—(AP)— Having previously clinched titular prowess in the Rocky Mountain conference, the University of Utah today crowned a brilliant season by defeating the Utah Aggies, 26 to 7. The University of Denver beat out a consolation prize here by taking the Colorado Aggies into camp, 16 to 6, thereby obtaining a tie with the University of Colorado for second place in the standing. Utah has its third crown in four years.

Lewis Throws De Vito

BOSTON, Nov. 28.—(AP)—Ed Strangler Lewis of California, won two out of three falls from Joe De Vito, of Providence, in the main wrestling bout here tonight. De Vito won the first in one minute when Lewis slipped. Lewis took the second fall in 28 minutes and 22 seconds with a head and hip hold and the third in 77 minutes and 20 seconds with the same hold.

HELLER BROS. FIVE NOSES OUT LOCAL Y. M. C. A. TEAM BY SINGLE POINT

A single point was the margin of difference between the famous Heller Bros. Five of Willimantic in the game last night with the Y. M. C. A. team at the local Y court. But that point meant victory for the visitors as they nosed out the locals 39 to 38 in as sweet a game as has ever been played on the local floor. The crowd was large and enthusiastic.

Opening the first quarter the Hellers jumped into the lead and were never headed although the locals made a desperate rally in the closing moments of the game but were unable to overtake the visitors. The second and third quarters were practically played on even terms. After taking a seven point lead in the first quarter which ended 13 to 6, the locals were unable to cut it down or the Hellers to increase it, the half time score being 22 to 15 and the score at the end of the third quarter was 31 to 24. The locals managed to cut off six points in the last quarter.

The locals played a nice game displaying a very much improved brand of team work. Brown, Normandin and Pingree were the leading scorers for the locals, while Max and Sam Heller starred for the Thread City boys.

In the preliminary game the Y. M. C. A. Seconds lost a close contest to the Eagles. The New Britain team which was scheduled to appear as part of the double attraction was unable to get to Norwich. The summary:

CROWLEY RESIGNS AS COACH AT COLUMBIA

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—(AP)—Charley Crowley, head coach of football at Columbia university announced his resignation tonight.

Crowley's announcement followed Columbia's 6 to 0 defeat by Syracuse, the second year in succession in which the Lions failed to score a major victory. Last year Columbia's best against major opposition was a scoreless tie with Cornell.

The resignation was announced by Columbia university officials in the following statement:

"The Columbia university committee on athletics has received the following letter from Coach Charles F. Crowley:

"'As you will recall in our previous conversations in connection with your football plans for 1930, I felt that my name should not be considered in those plans, and I am still of the same mind.

"'I would like to repeat that statement at this time when you will quite likely wish to take definite action regarding your coaching staff for the coming year.'

"In view of the foregoing letter the athletic authorities will take necessary steps to secure a new head coach."

Crowley, who came to Columbia in 1926 has been a frequent target for adverse criticism from Columbia undergraduates and alumni. There have been repeated rumors over a period of a year or more than he would resign. Several reports were to the effect that he would resign unless Columbia won at least one major game this season but the Lions lost to Dartmouth, Colgate, Penn, Cornell and Syracuse, Crowley's statement, however, indicated that he had reached his decision to resign some time ago.

In connection with reports as to possible successors is the name of Herb McCracken, former Pitt star who has been coaching Lafayette teams with great success in recent years. Other mentioned in the same connection include Dr. Clarence Spears, coach at Minnesota, Glenn S. Warner, Stanford coach; and Dick Hanley, Northwestern mentor.

CURTIS HIGH WINS NEWARK CROSS COUNTRY

NEWARK, N. J., Nov. 28.—(AP)—Undefeated since 1923, the harrier team of Schenectady high school, fell before the running of a sturdy team from Curtis high school of Brooklyn in the national inter-scholastic cross country championship race staged by Newark Prep school over a course of 7 7-10 miles in Branch Brook park here this morning, the Brooklynites winning by the close score of 56 to 59 points. Newark Prep school was third with 77 points.

To Frank Thomas Nordell of North East Catholic high school of Philadelphia went individual honors as he defeated Eugene Brown, dusky star of George Washington high of New York, stepping the distance over a course thoroughly soaked by an all night rain in the fine time of 13 minutes, 43 seconds, compared to the record of 13:35 2-5 made by Bob Barringer of Manlius, the winner a year ago.

Ray McManus, of La Salle Academy, Providence, R. I. finished in fifth place with a time of 14:05. His teammates, Eloi Loreau, with a time of 14:26, and Edward Conley, timed at 14:39, finished twelfth and twenty-fifth respectively.

Scores for the La Salle Academy, which finished in fourth place, were as follows: 4 10 22 33 37—106.

PINEHURST RACING SEASON OPENS WITH FEATURES

PINEHURST, N. C., Nov. 28.—(AP)—Pinehurst Jockey club opened its season today with a card of racing, trotting and specialty events.

The running race feature, a six furlong event, went to the bay gelding, Reminder, owned by B. Y. Barton of Akron, Ohio, and ridden by Paul Jones. The five furlong gallop was won by Shay Bark, owned by C. H. Place of Baltimore and ridden by Charles Wright.

CARNEGIE'S ATTACK IS BEWILDERING TO N. Y. U.

YANKEE STADIUM, New York, Nov. 28.—(AP)—Carnegie Tech's red jerseyed horde of ball hawks brought an assortment of forward passes to Yankie stadium today, so bewildering to New York university that the violets never did find out what they were all about and the Pittsburghers won the Thanksgiving game 20 to 6.

New York university kept its record of not winning games on Thanksgiving day clear and Carnegie Tech made a new record by defeating New York university for the first time in the four games they have played.

Supporters of the Scotch rushed on the field at the close of the game and after tearing the goal posts from their foundations, made a bonfire of the uprights in the center of the field. As a result of this fire new posts will have to be provided for the Army-Notre Dame game Saturday.

New York university held its own fairly well when the Skibos were content to hit the line but when the plaid troops took to the air, the home guard was all but helpless, especially when a completed pass meant a touchdown. Two of the counters were made in the first period, both coming on forward passes from the sure shooting McGurdy, the first to Eyth and the second to Flannagan. Mophitz plunged over from the one yard line for the final touchdown, which came as the last play of the game. But a pass from McCurdy to L. Flannagan, the other of the busy Flanagan boys, had advanced the ball to the 12 yard line.

New York university had only two real chances to score and the rugged and alert Tartans had enough left in each case to bring the drive up short.

The air was full of flying footballs all afternoon and on 15 occasions, red shirted arms were outstretched to gather the ball in for completed passes for Carnegie.

The ground, too, was covered from time to time with fumbled footballs. N. Y. U. was the greater offender but the winners also started fumbling early and continued into. The fumbles for the afternoon reached a total of 18, N. Y. U. erring 11 times and Carnegie Tech seven.

Beryl Follet, fast stepping New York back, suffered a knee injury in the first period and was carried from the field. Later he was sent to a hospital.

DUNLAP FEATURES GEORGIA TECH'S WIN OVER AUBURN

ATLANTA, Nov. 28.—(AP)—Earl Dunlap, a junior quarterback, stole the show today as Georgia Tech laced Auburn 19 to 6 in a game which saw the last appearance of Stumpy Thomason and Warner Migell, two of the Tornado's brightest backfield stars. It was Dunlap who scored two of Tech's touchdowns, one with a 31 yard sprint and the other on a dazzling 70 yard dash. Auburn's touchdown in the fourth period was the result of a 49 yard dash by Davidson, and a one yard plunge by Hatfield.

Thrills In Virginia Game

CHAPEL HILL, N. C., Nov. 28.—(AP)—The University of North Carolina football team today defeated their traditional rivals from the University of Virginia, 41 to 7, in a game packed with thrills. Captain Sloan of Virginia provided the individual starring feat of racing 90 yards from a kick-off to score the Cavaliers only marker. North Carolina's scores came from long runs by Ward, Maus and Nash and passes from Ward to Nash and Branch.

PLAINFIELD HANDS MARTINS FIRST DEFEAT OF SEASON

The Velvetmen suffered their first defeat of the season Thanksgiving morning on the home grounds when the fast-traveling Plainfield soccer team won 4 to 2 in an exciting game before a fair-sized crowd. Plainfield proved a better balanced side, their goals coming as the result of fine teamwork. The J. B.'s were off form and couldn't seem to get going. F. Thompson played a nice game and scored the locals' two counters, one being from a free kick just outside the penalty area. The Velvetmen go to Putnam next Sunday where they meet the National Rhea Co. team in a league game. The line-up:

J. B. Martin	Goal	Plainfield
J. Nevins, G. Kinder	RFB	J. Korsb
E. Eccleston	LFB	G. Marriott
H. Seidel	RHB	P. Allard
H. Troeger, A. Headon	CH	A. Lyons

Referee, J. Lang. Linesman, A. Puchts. Time 2 35 minute halves. Goals, Plainfield 4, A. Metts 2, F. Lang 1, J. Barrett 1, J. B. Martins 2, Thompson.

KENTUCKY UPSETS TENNESSEE BY HOLDING TO 6 TO 6 TIE

LEXINGTON, Ky., Nov. 28.—Clawing their way through a snow storm to a six-six tie with the mightiest Tennessee team in the history, the Kentucky Wildcats not only smashed volunteer title hopes but left a smudge on an otherwise unsullied record.

Outplayed two-thirds of the way and with their first defeat in more than three years seemingly only a matter of minutes, Tennessee made a desperate and savage bid for the game and the conference crown that may have gone with it.

A forty yard pass that came sweeping through the snow from the hands of Bobby Dodd, the Volt quarter, into the waiting arms of Buddy Hackman, one of the Tennessee touchdown twins, paved the way for Hackman's crash two yards through the line for the tying touchdown on the next play.

The game was scoreless until the start of that wild and woolly last period when the Wildcats rang up the first touchdown and hopped into the lead.

Starting from their own 44 yard line the Wildcats with Spotts, Phipps, and Covington, three speedy backs running the line, had the ball on Tennessee's eleven yard stripe when the last quarter ended.

Spicer put it on the one yard line in four tries and Jack Phipps hit the line for the needed yard and score. Covington's kick was wide.

FLORIDA HAS EASY TIME WITH GENERALS

FAIRFIELD STADIUM, Jacksonville, Fla., Nov. 28.—(AP)—Florida overwhelmed the Washington and Lee Generals 25 to 7, before 10,000 fans here today.

The Gators, using second string men through a part of the game, pushed their first score across in the first few minutes of play, and maintained their lead through the contest.

The Generals' touchdown came in the final moments of the game as the result of a 40-yard pass Martin to Williams. Mitchell took the ball over for the touchdown.

PAUL BUNYAN WINS NEW ORLEANS FEATURE

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 28.—(AP)—The winter racing season was opened in New Orleans today before 10,000 spectators with L. M. Severson's fleet Paul Bunyan winning the Thanksgiving handicap, the feature of the card of seven races.

Paul Bunyan was ridden by Jockey L. Martin, who brought his mount in two lengths ahead of Galahad, which was closely pressed by Calf Roper.

The race was worth $2,230 to the winner and brought his backers $2.60 for a two dollar mutuel ticket. Galahad paid $6.10 for place and Calf Roper $2.80 for show.

Springfield Swamps Vermont

SPRINGFIELD Mass., Nov. 28.—(AP)—Springfield college closed its football season here today by whipping Vermont, 20 to 0, in the annual homecoming clash. The Green Mountaineers held off the Red and White for the first half but Coach Rothacher's clan scored three touchdowns in the final half.

COLGATE RUNS ROUGH-SHOD OVER COMPLETELY DISORGANIZED BROWN TEAM

By WILLIAM R. KING
Associated Press Sports Writer

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 28.—(AP)—Colgate won its first football victory over Brown in ten years here today when Andy Kerr's husky and fleet ball carriers ripped the battered Bruins to shreds as they ran up a 32 to 6 score.

The Maroon backs, protected by exceptional interference, dashed on tackle and circled the ends almost at will. Many times during the morning conflict Tommy Dowler, one of the east's highest scorers, and Lee Hart, Kerr's triple threat, ripped off long gains. Dowler averaged about 10 yards every time he carried the ball and Hart, used mostly as a threat, was almost as efficient.

Whenever this pair rested, "Indian" Yablock, the quarterback, or "Ox" Macaluso usually were able to keep the Maroon running attack going at fast speed.

Brown was outclassed except for a few minutes in the third period, when the Bruins' linesmen waged a stubborn battle with the Colgate forwards. In this quarter Brown received a punt in mid-field and worked up to Colgate's 10 yard line on a lateral and forward. Lass, Link Fogarty, Brown's outstanding player, tried to break loose for a touchdown, but only to be swept back by the Maroon wave, which held him for downs.

Dowler put Colgate in a hole early in the first period by fumbling on Brown's 20 yard line, after smashing through his left tackle for 20 yards. On his first two kicking attempts, one team or the other was off side. He fumbled on his third try and Colgate took the ball. Dowler then wiped out his fumble by slashing through his left tackle for a touchdown. Stromello drop-kicked the extra point.

Dowler and Hart not over the second tally by rushing 7 yards on three plays, the latter circling his right end and galloping 23 yards to the Brown goal line. In the second period, Brown received a kick deep in its territory and Fogarty tried to sneak a forward pass over on Colgate. Orel, the Maroon right end, grabbed it and ran 15 yards for a second tally.

The other Colgate touchdowns came in the final period, which was played in a blinding snowstorm. Early in that session, Brown stalled a drive and reached Colgate's 38 yard line when Fogarty contributed a thrilling 35 yard end run down the sideline. Hart Rotell fumbled and Yablock recovered. An exchange of punts gave Colgate the ball on Brown's 48 yard line and Yablock threw a short pass to Dowler, who ran 40 yards for his second touchdown.

Hart put over his second tally after Huntington intercepted Fogarty's pass on Colgate's 40 yard line. Dowler smashed off his left tackle for 20, Hart hit the same spot for 15 and then went around his right end for 23 yards, shaking off Moulton, who replaced Gurll at quarterback for Brown, and Fogarty on his goal line journey.

The game was the collegiate final for seven members of the Colgate team and five of the Bruins, one of whom, Nels Munson, right guard, has played every minute of Brown's nine games this season.

N. L. BOYS' CLUB PROVES TOO STRONG FOR TROJANS

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 28.—The alertness of Sam Stockwell, high end of the Norwich Trojans, led to his team's only score here this morning at Moran park as the New London Boys' club beat the Rose City eleven, 22 to 6. Stockwell recovered a Boys' club fumble on its one-yard line in the early part of the game and Capt. Kirchn then dived over for the score on the next play. The extra point was not made so the

THE FARMERS' RIGHT TO BETTER ROADS

(Written Specially for The Bulletin)

I'm particularly glad to note the way in which the editor of The Bulletin keeps dinging away at the highway authorities in regard to the improvement of back roads.

Now that a major portion of the population has decided to make its home on the highways and to spend all its available time riding to and fro and in and out and back and forth and along and cross in more or less shiny cars, the problem of roads really becomes the most insistent of any with the powers that be.

Still further, since we've most of us given over trying to raise or make things for ourselves, preferring to buy them from the butcher and the baker and the cabbage-grower, the need of roads to make the quick transfer of boughten goods possible has much increased. How are said butcher, baker and cabbage-grower to get their beef and bread and cabbage heads to you if the road between isn't unsable?

Thus far, practically all the money that has been spent by any state for road improvement has gone to the main through avenues. This has been both natural and proper. The chief end of government is the greatest good of the greatest number. And no one disputes that greater numbers use the main thoroughfares than the side roads. Hence their improvement came first. By this time, they have been pretty well attended to. In a small and compact state, like Connecticut, there are very, very few through routes which are not now paved for all-weather travel.

To reach this condition a good many million dollars have been spent. Those dollars have mostly been raised by taxation. That taxation has been imposed, not only upon the residents along such roads and the gasoline-using travellers thereon, but also in often pinching measure upon the owners of backroad farms. We've all borne our share. And some of us haven't yet gotten very much advantage from paying that share.

It's all perfectly proper and highly commendable to have a good road between two big cities like Hartford and New Haven.—It might be a convenience to have about a dozen, so that when 11 were congested by football traffic the man on business bent could have at least one fairly open to him!—But convenience must, in this as in other matters, take a back seat behind real need.

More and wider and straighter through lines are, of course desirable. But passable side roads, acting as feeders, are at this time considerably more important.

What good is a concreted highway through the valley to the farmers living on the hills, three miles back, if the intervening three miles are impassable in spring or winter drifts?

No one can use a state or federal highway till he gets on it. To get on it, the average country-dweller must, somehow, get across the intervening territory. That preliminary stunt is, at certain times of the year, more than difficult—it is practically impossible.

I speak from sore personal experience. For more than 30 years, I lived on a side road which was frequently closed to travel for days at a time by winter drifts, and for from three to six weeks, every spring, was impassable by autos or even horses, on account of the bottomless mud.

When the spring showed signs of nearing and the mud began to soften, in those days, my first thought used to be to make sure that we had sugar and tea, etc., enough on hand to carry us through a six weeks' embargo. During that time it would be practically impossible to renew short supplies from the store.

Once, during the mud season, I had a horse taken suddenly sick. The veterinary came but, to reach me, he had to park his car nearly a mile away and wallow through knee-deep mud to my barn. When he finally arrived, he seemed disposed to hold me personally responsible for the mud as well as the equine distemper. Among other things he dosed Dobbin with was sulphur. He didn't need to give me any. His language was sulphurous enough to meet all possible requirements. It warms me up merely remembering it, after these many years.

Side thought: What wouldn't some of us give to have the same sort of language turned against Caraway and Borah and Norris and La Follette and a few other of the senate swelled heads!

I have a neighbor who lives on a big, fertile farm back among the hills of "the west part". He devotes himself chiefly to dairying, and has an arrangement to send his milk to a city 20 miles away. Most of the year, a truck from his city customer comes out to his barns, takes the milk and delivers it in town. But last spring, for a month, the truck couldn't get to his farm, the roads were so impassable. It had to park on the federal road, three miles away, and he had to get his milk to it across those horrible miles, or lose the sale. How he did it, I was never able to understand. He himself said to me, afterwards, that he didn't feel sure, any morning for a month, how he could do it, or whether he could do it at all. He worked every scheme he could think of and managed to save all but two or three days' milkings. But it took practically all the profit he made, the rest of the year, to pay that month's way, and it aged him more than a year's normal work would have done.

That occurrence suggests that there are at least two sides to this call for better side roads. Mr. Farmer wanted the pay for his milk. He needed a decent road to haul it over. Several hundred babies and sick people in the city also needed his milk, and they couldn't have it, unless he had a decent road to haul it over.

It was, as you see, quite as important to a large number of city people as to Mr. Farmer, that he should have that decent road.

Will he and they get it? That is a question for the road authorities to answer.

What is needed in his case—and he is but typical of thousands of others—is not a cement surfaced road, nor even a macadam road. One of good gravel, properly rounded to let the water run off, and adequately ditched to carry away that water excess, would make it feasible for his team, if not for his truck to reach the federal road and deliver his produce.

Such a road would not cost a tenth of what a state road costs yet, with reasonable yearly care and repairs, would end Mr. Farmer's problem and that of his numerous city customers. They would be sure of getting their milk and he would be sure of reaching his market.

Indeed, there are many roads crossing such high land and so naturally drained that only a bit of sensible work on the occasional bad spots would be needed to make them truly all-weather highways.

They wouldn't be trotting tracks of course. Nor might they seem specially attractive to the wide-roaming motorist. But, at least, they would put a stop to snow and mud embargoes against the orderly movement of supplies from producer to consumer.

As a rule, all the states have looked out pretty well for the rights and conveniences of through traffic. It seems as if the time had come for them to give a little more attention to the needs of the home folks.

In my own particular case, I have no further kick coming. Two years ago some of those influential in such matters, having themselves been stalled and stuck in the deep mud of my road, bestirred themselves to redeem it. I now have a far-bound macadam way leading straight past my door to the federal road, a mile away. It is cleaned of superfluous snow within ten hours after the drifts are deposited and it is as hard and smooth in April as in August.

Naturally it is used by a good many cars besides mine and my neighbors. In fact, such occasional counts as my curiosity has led me to make, indicate that it is used more by cars coming from other and often distant states than by local residents.

This particular bit of road lies in New York. The last count I made, when traffic was about normal on it, showed that the largest number of cars passing over it bore Massachusetts license markers; New York coming second, Connecticut third, with cars from Ohio and New Jersey and Pennsylvania and even Florida and Oregon adding up almost equal to New York's quota.

Now that dairy farmer over in the "west part," of whom I have written, had to pay his taxable share of the cost, not only of the state road running three miles away from him, but of this macadam country road of mine, running seven miles away from him.

He isn't to be blamed if he feels that he ought to be given a reasonable chance to live and do business on his own back farm.

Under our present system of government, the only way in which he and his many thousand compeers can get even fair treatment is to keep up so loud and so persistent a howl for it that the lords of traffic will at last yield, for the sake of their own eardrums.

It may very well be that the good Lord isn't apt to be moved mercy by much speaking. But a legislature, or even a board of highway commissioners is different. Very different.

The quiet people who, as a rule, inhabit farms on back roads and hills are not apt to be especially vocal. They are much less likely to howl and bellow than they are to brood in sullen silence.

That's why those of us who have voices and pens, and know how to use them, are doing well in speaking for them.

The dwellers in the hinterland cannot properly be called a "submerged tenth," but they are likely to be a rather silent fraction. They may not actually need spokesmen, but they will welcome any aid that helps them get their rights.

And their right to roads they can use, regardless of seasonal or weather conditions, is a rather fundamental one.

THE FARMER.

CLAIMING $75,866, HARTLEY IS OUT OF FOUR-DAY LINE

Papers filed in the supreme court at New York this week showed that Captain Herbert Hartley, who resigned as commander of the Leviathan in January, 1928, to become associated with the Transoceanic corporation of the United States, which planned to put out a fleet of four-day ships to Europe, had received only $8,500 of the $84,166 he asserts was due when his employment ceased in October, after the senate investigation of a marine lobby had begun. He is suing for a balance of $75,866 alleged to be due under the contract by which he became manager of operations.

The case will come before Justice Wasservogel on an application by the defendant corporation to vacate the service of the papers, which was made on Laurence T. Wilder, former president of the American Brown Boveri Electric company and head of the shipbuilding division of that company, and a director of the Trans-oceanic company. No answer has been filed as yet because the company contends that the New York courts have no jurisdiction over the case since the corporation was organized in Delaware and has done no business in New York. Papers were served on Mr. Wilder at 132 East 72nd street.

The papers contain no detailed statement of the services rendered by Captain Hartley or of the reasons for the discontinuance of his employment beyond the allegation that he performed his contract from Jan. 26, 1928, the day, on which he resigned as commodore of the United States lines after 35 years in the north Atlantic service, until last October.

Captain Hartley declared when he resigned his command that he was giving himself to this undertaking "to put our country back on the high seas and to give America again its proper maritime position." At the same time the Transoceanic company said that Captain Hartley's association with it would be "his only business connection." It was said the company planned to build six four-day passenger ships with government assistance and that it hoped to have the first ship ready before 1930. In the early months of his employment Captain Hartley visited Montauk point and New London seeking a terminus for the ships of the Blue Ribbon line, which was to operate the four-day service.

Mr. Wilder, who conceived the four-day service idea and induced Captain Hartley to quit the sea to help organize it, was called as a witness before the senate naval affairs lobby investigation Sept. 26 during the inquiry into the employment of William B. Shearer, self-styled naval expert, by the shipbuilding companies. He was questioned concerning Washington rumors that a $145,000 merchant marine lobby was active while the Transoceanic company was trying to develop its four-day liner project and borrow three-fourths of the needed money from the government.

Mr. Wilder ridiculed the stories, but submitted an accounting of $70,986 spent on his scheme, which included employment of a staff of experts in Washington. In addition to a payment of $4,500 to Mr. Shearer for painting four pictures and consulting on merchant marine matters, Mr. Wilder showed that the Ivy Lee publicity bureau had received $10,200 for services in 1928, while the only reported payment to Captain Hartley was $2,000 for "professional services, ship operation." A payment of $167 was made to a tailoring concern for a uniform for Captain Hartley.

Henry A. Gardner, of Swansea, who is ninety-four years old, maintained his perfect attendance record by participating in the eighty-sixth annual clambake of the First Christian Church society, held on the church grounds in Swansea. The first bake, held in 1844, was attended by Mr. Gardner, and he has not missed one since. Other veteran clambake habitues attending were Charles Williams, Franklin G. Arnold and his brother Arthur. Mr. Williams has been present at the annual event for the last sixty-four years and the Arnold brothers have records of more than fifty years' attendance.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

"Let me tell your fortune, mister."
"How much?"
"Half a dollar."
"Correct to a cent."
—Boston Transcript

Visitor—We're getting up a raffle for a poor old man. Won't you buy a ticket?

Sweet Thing—Mercy no! What would I do with him if I won him?—Exchange.

Uncle Sammy—Dat dorg is ma best friend, an' I wouldn't sell 'im for nothin'.

Brownie—I'll give you 50 cents for him.

Uncle Sammy—He's your dorg.—Detroit News.

Jim—You'll keep our engagement a dark secret, won't you Nellie?

Nellie—I'll tell the world!—The Pathfinder.

"John Barlecorn used to be the life of the party."

"Now he's apt to be the death of it."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Sentimental Spinster—Six times I have advertised that a lonely maiden seeks light and warmth in her life, and at last I have got a reply—from the gas company. — Meggendorfer Blaetter.

Old Salt—And after the old craft went down I swam around three hours before I was picked up.

Young Lady—Oh, how ducky! I just love swimming.—Pitt Panther.

"Why are you in prison, my good man?"

"For driving a car too slowly."

"You mean to fast."

"Naw. Too slow. The owner caught up to me."—Mostique, Charlrol.

The Guy—Peculiar fish, the sardine.

The Girl—How so?

The Guy—Well, his idea of twins is a whole school, and he loses his eyes in the sea and opens them up again in a can.—Detroit News.

Mrs. Bloop: Does your car have a worm drive?

Mrs. Bleep: Yes, but I tell him where to drive.—Exchange.

"My wife has run away with a man in my car."

"Good heavens! Not your new car?"—Keystone Motorist.

A somewhat cocky undergraduate met at a dinner party the proprietor of one of our great journals and mentioned his willingness to accept a position with him. The great man, with considerable tolerance, asked his qualifications.

"Oh," was the sure reply, "I edited our college monthly for quite a time."

"Ah," said the proprietor with a regretful headshake, "what a pity! We already have an editor."—Sporting and Dramatic.

KALEIDOSCOPE

France leads the world in walnut production.

Hailstones sometimes riddle the tops of automobiles.

While men have greater muscular strength than women, they have less vital stamina.

Glaring headlights are to be forbidden in France, according to new automobile regulations.

A farmer near Centralia, Wash., seeded 1,000 acres of land in half a day, using an airplane.

Bread sales decrease from 10 to 25 per cent. when the temperature soars above 85 degrees, say San Francisco bakers.

Of all mayors in Kansas, 28 per cent. are merchants and 22 per cent. of all councilmen and city commissioners are merchants.

Craighead cavern in Monroe county, Tennessee, one of a few marble caves in the world, is now equipped with stairways and electric lights.

The body of Dick Dowling, Confederate hero of the civil war, lies in an unmarked grave adjoining a little Mexican church in Houston, Tex.

Scarlet sails for lifeboats, aimed to attract attention even if the shipwrecked occupants are unable to make a signal, is the latest idea of Danish ship owners.

To foster in its students an interest in the preservation of bird life, Phillips Andover Academy has set aside a 125-acre tract of woodland wherein winged creatures may find sanctuary.

Any name shorter than the shortest in the Oakland (Cal.) telephone directory, just issued, would be nothing at all. The shortest is X, believed to be the only Mr. X in the country. His full name is Stuart X and the X is not fictitious, but a legal name adopted for convenience. The directory also contains the name of Ah Men, a Chinese subscriber.

The town of Danby, Vt., decided that one prisoner in thirty years was not enough to warrant maintaining a jail, so the building was turned over to the school children for a clubhouse under the direction of Francis S. Irons, high school principal. Boys removed the bars; girls scrubbed and cleaned, and the building is in a habitable condition. Simple cooking apparatus has been put in and the first activity is to serve hot lunches at noon to the school children.

An invention by an Ohio penitentiary prisoner may make automobile theft more difficult. Lawton Hileman, twenty-three, of Akron, serving a sentence of from seven to fifteen years for burglary, has filed with a patent attorney an application for a patent on his dual auto control ignition. When the motor is stopped, it automatically locks the ignition, steering wheel and starting switch. The mechanism can be inclosed in a box six inches square and four inches high and mounted beneath the dashboard.

A reporter and a photographer went to a Pittsburgh automobile agency to get a story and pictures. While they were there a man rushed in asking for a fire extinguisher, saying that a car outside was on fire. "C'mon" said the reporter to his cameraman, "Maybe it's worth a picture." They went outside, where the whole landscape was lighted up by flames rapidly consuming a car. In true newsbound style the photographer began to do his stuff. He suddenly turned pale, "Hey—wait a minute!" he yelled, dancing toward the burning chariot. "That's my car;" and so it was.

Reindeer moss, the crisp and curly lichen that is the chief dependence of reindeer in the far north, is an enemy of forest growth farther south reports Anne E. Allen, of Cincinnati, in the scientific journal, Ecology. This lichen is by no means confined to the lands where reindeer pasture, but grows over great areas, especially as a ground cover under trees, as far south as Florida and Mexico. It forms dense mats like fine shavings, and the seeds of trees and other plants caught on top, are held away from the moist earth where they might sprout and grow. They hang there in the air until they die of drouth. Even if they do work their way down to the earth and sprout, their troubles are not necessarily over. The reindeer moss heaves and moves about restlessly as it is alternately wetted and dried, and in doing so frequently breaks or uproots seedlings that have pushed their way through its meshes.

Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Grover Smith of Palmer, Mass., and her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Thompson, of this place. She received a number of gifts, also had a cake with seventy-nine candles on it. Mrs. Smith was greatly pleased with a post card shower from neighbors and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Thompson attended a party at the Community house at Pine Lake Shores, Eagleville, Wednesday night.

WARRENVILLE

The Rotary club of Willimantic had a coon dinner, furnished by the Nathan Hale hotel, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hazzett one night last week. Around seventy persons were present.

The snow which fell last Thursday furnished amusement for the children. Many lawns were decorated with snow-men.

O. P. Durkee and Mrs. Weeks were in Worcester several days last week.

Bert Gardner has been ill.

William Torillo of New Jersey is visiting his parents here.

Friends and old neighbors of Mrs. Jennie Bacon of Willimantic were saddened to learn of her death last week.

Robert Cushman is gaining at St. Joseph's hospital and is able to sit up.

Eleven members of the Dramatic club met at the parsonage Friday and enjoyed a social evening.

Paul Metsack is in a serious condition at St. Joseph's hospital as the result of an automobile collision about 12:30 Saturday night. A man from Andover was driving away from he dance at Knowlton Memorial hall and Metsack was going east from Whitehouse Brothers' store. Both cars were badly damaged.

Rev. E. B. Verney preached a Thanksgiving sermon Sunday morning. Rev. Harvey Lawson of Union spoke in the evening at the Baptist church.

"At the circus there was a girl who rode beneath a horse, on his neck and almost on his tail."

"That's nothing. I did all that the first time I ever got on one."—Geckenham Journal.

LET CLOROX DO THE JOBS YOU DREAD

"My wash is White and Sanitary too!"

So boasts a woman who does her own white wash—bed linen, table linen, towels, shirts, handkerchiefs, etc. For Clorox whitens and disinfects in one operation—making wash day easy. Use it in soaking or rinsing water.

Moreover stains, scorched spots and mildew are banished by Clorox. Nor will it harm the finest white cottons or linens. Follow directions on the bottle.

Unless we are greatly mistaken, a quarter of a century ago Marthas Vineyard did not have one permanent Jewish resident. But now the number of the island's Jewish inhabitants is enough to organize a synagogue. This reminds us of a dialogue that passed between a Jew and a Yankee one day.

"You're a Jew, ain't you?"

"Yes, I'm a Jew."

"Well, I'm a Yankee, and in the little village in Maine where I came from I'm proud to say there ain't a Jew."

"Yes? Perhaps that's why it's still a little village."—Marthas Vineyard Gazette.

Snaps Out of Cold In Record Time!

Pape's COLD COMPOUND STOPS a Cold

Did you ever hear of a five-hour remedy for colds? There is one, and it really does bring you out completely. That achy, feverish, feeling vanishes; dryness and soreness leaves nose and throat; mucous discharge stops; breathing becomes easy.

A simple compound the druggist has in tablets does the work every time. No laxative is necessary when Pape's Cold Compound is used. No sweating or other discomfort. These pleasant-tasting tablets are all you need to knock your cold in a hurry. See at all drugstores.

A Wonder Journey

There's a Wonderful Train on a Wonderful Line that runs to a Wonderful Town,
And it gets under way with its clatter and noise after the sun settles down;
Its journey lies far o'er the valleys and hills and along by the tinkety streams,
And comes to an end in the quietest way in the Wonderful
Station of Dreams.

It has a conductor, a curly-head boy, and he is the engine-man, too,
And he is the stoker, and trainman, and all who pilot the Wonder Train through;
He's baggage man, agent, and news butcher, too, and sleeping-
car porter as well,
And airbrake and sand box and everything else and he's his own whistle and bell!

The train is made up of the dining-room chairs with a library chair up ahead—
So staunch and secure a train I am sure not even the timid would dread;
Its time-table varies, yet oddly enough its schedule doesn't annoy
Its passenger list, which always consists of One Little Curly-
Head Boy!

Its gets under way with much clatter and noise, but the track is so smooth and so clear
That scarcely the engine puffs out of your sight are never a sound can you hear;
And Oh, but how silent the house seems to get! and Oh, how our spirits go down
When the Wonderful Train on the Wonderful Line has left for the Wonderful Town!

JEWETT CITY

JUDGE JOHN T. BARRY WEDS MISS MABEL H. MCBROOME

JEWETT CITY, Nov. 28.—Judge John T. Barry and Miss Mabel H. McBroome were married by Rev. J. J. McCabe at St. Mary's rectory, Thanksgiving day at 11 o'clock. The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. James Flannery of New Britain, and the groom by his brother, Joseph Barry, of Boston. The bride wore a brown transparent velvet ensemble, with lynx fur trimmed tan coat, and hat to correspond. She carried yellow chrysanthemums. The matron of honor wore black chiffon velvet and hat to match and carried bronze chrysanthemums. Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McBroome, on School street, for members of the two families. The color scheme of the decorations at the home was yellow, the flowers being chrysanthemums. The gifts to the bride were numerous and beautiful. Her gift to her sister was a gold mesh bag, and Judge Barry's gift to his brother was a cigarette case. Judge and Mrs. Barry are to tour the south for two weeks. On their return they will live in a home recently purchased on North Main street. The bride is one of Jewett City's own girls, whose long list of friends will be hearty and sincere in their wishes for her well being and happiness. The groom is a successful attorney with offices in Norwich, and is judge of the Griswold town court. He is an ex-commander of the local American Legion post with the record of service in the World war, following enlistment in a Massachusetts regiment. He will be congratulated by his legal colleagues, and a host of local friends.

Following a baby blizzard which did business for an hour during the early forenoon, Thursday, the weather cleared with the afternoon bright and fair, and a 10 degree drop in the temperature as compared with the early morning. Deserted streets, with very light traffic over the state road, gave indication Thanksgiving had come in for its very own, with home-coomings and home-goings the order of the day.

Edward A. Faust, Jr., and Miss Ellen C. Faust, of Hartford, are at home for the holiday.

Mrs. Ida Benjamin, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Benjamin and children, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Benjamin and daughter, and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Benjamin spent Thursday at Mr. and Mrs. George E. Willcox's, in Edgewood, R. I.

Mr. and Mrs. Adrian Maynard entertained a large family party, Wiladlo Bakanowsky coming home from Bowdoin college, and Mr. and Mrs. Louis Bakanowsky of Norwich, Mr. and Mrs. Alpheric Maynard of Newent, Mr. and Mrs. James Dysart and Evangeline Cookson being among the guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Myer of New Britain and Miss Hallie Burleson of Orange, N. J., are at E. F. Burleson's.

Timothy Dwyer of Newark, N. J., spent Thanksgiving with his mother, Mrs. Kathryn Dwyer.

Dr. and Mrs. G. H. Jennings were in Boston at Dr. John Jeanings', Thursday.

James McCluskane is in New York visiting his sister.

Mrs. Edmond Jodoin and daughter, Catherine, are spending the week and with Mrs. Jodoin's father in Brooklyn, N. Y.

Miss Claire Berard has been at home for several days from St. Francis' hospital, Hartford, where she is a student nurse.

Miss Emma Dearnley of Colby, Jr. college, New London, N. H., is at home for the holiday week end.

Mr. and Mrs. John Fitzgerald spent Thursday with Pawtucket relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Erme Myott and daughter, of Boston, are at Nelbert Myott's.

Mrs. Anna Cummings of Brooklyn, Conn., came this week to spend the winter with her cousin, Miss M. A. Burdick.

Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Whiting entertained Thursday Mr. and Mrs. George Babcock and three daughters of Plainfield. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Olson and Allen Brown, of Jewett City.

David Carter of Wesleyan university, Delwyn Martin of Providence Bible Institute, Miss Grace Gardner of Connecticut college, Ellen Prior of Brown university, and Linwood Mort of Rensselaer are at their homes for a few days.

Mrs. Ellen Paul entertained Mrs. Marion Strickland and three children and Harry Paul, of Middletown, Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Phillips and Mrs. S. F. Brown entertained Thursday, State's Attorney A. M. Brown and Mrs. Brown, Francis Brown of New York, Morton Brown of Dartmouth college, Mrs. Mary Y. Brewster and son, William.

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Hiscox, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Hiscox, Jr., and two children, of New London, were Thanksgiving guests at Earl S. Hiscox's, the date being the birthday of the host.

MUCH SNOW IN ARKANSAS SURPRISE TO TOURISTS

The tourists from this section continue thus to describe the incidents of their trip, the latest letter coming from Hotel Marion, Little Rock, Ark.:

We were held up in Memphis for three days on account of snow. More snow here than for 40 years in November. Since crossing the Mississippi river we feel as if we were some distance from home. The toll on the bridge was 30 cents for car and three. We came into a flat country—thousands of acres of tobacco, some picked and some that was not, were covered with about four inches of snow.

As we came nearer this city we were in a wheat country, shocks of wheat on each side of the road as far as one could see—great piles of wheat straw where some had been threshed. There was not a place on the road that had a grade as great as from your house to Dearnley's store. A dead level. In some places for miles the road was built above the surrounding country, with deep ditches (about 30 feet) on both sides. There were little bridges built from the road to each house (farm house) along the way.

Negroes everywhere! As we looked into the houses through the doors we could see the fire on the hearth. Evidently no stoves in these houses. All of the houses were on stilts, four to six feet above the ground.

Very few trees—some pecans under which were colored boys looking for the nuts. Mistletoe was growing on some of the oak trees.

Mule teams (Negro drivers) loaded with cotton, loose in sacks, on the road to ginning mills; returning with bales of cotton. These drivers used the blacksnake white (rawhide).

On the shocks of wheat in the fields were thousands of blackbirds. The woods looked about the same as woods in Griswold as of Sept. 25 or Oct. 1. The Arkansas river here is about the width of the Connecticut river at Hartford. From my window I can count five bridges—three railroads; two highways. Water in all the streams is about the color of very rich cream.

We saw one or two cattle ranches with hundreds of cows. One plantation had hundreds of mules at pasture. These cattle and mules stay at pasture all winter. Some small plantations had very fine Jerseys and Guernseys. We passed a great many men (white) on horseback. A good many fine saddle mules.

On our way to Hot Springs today—leaving 10 a. m.

WESTERLY

BULLET THROUGH WINDOW STARTLES DINNER COMPANY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Nov. 23—While seated at the dinner table in a home adjoining that of Judge William A. Wilcox on the Hinckley Hill road, shortly after noon Thanksgiving day the members of the family reported that a .22 rifle bullet came from the direction of a patch of woods and passing through the window lodged in the room. The bullet was picked up and given to Judge Wilcox. Patrolman Sheldon made a fruitless search of the neighboring woods to locate the hunters who took the sides of a dwelling for a target.

Patrolman George Seidel of Pawcatuck was called Wednesday night to investigate the work of destruction and vandalism perpetrated at the Wequetequock Community house on the Westerly-Stonington state highway. The destruction was probably engineered by young men.

HIT-AND-RUN DRIVER LEAVES TWO INJURED

Patrolman Adin R. Sheldon of Pawcatuck was called to investigate an auto accident caused by a hit-and-run driver on West Broad street Thanksgiving day afternoon. It was while returning from the Westerly high-Stonington high football game at Owen field, Stonington, the Ford car driven by Cecelia McHale, of the Chase Hill section, Hopkinton was reported crowded off West Broad street by an auto which failed to stop and which bore registration No. 81-087 R. I. The auto was forced upon the sidewalk between a large tree and the heavy stone wall in front of the property of Mrs. Leone Balfe Cottrell, 151 West Broad street, Pawcatuck, and was damaged considerably. The occupants were Harry Amadon of Washington, R. I., and from Chase Hill Miss Lillian Hill, who had her leg cut and her sister, Miss Hannah Hill, who received a cut on her forehead.

Mrs. Mamie Markoff, wife of Harry Markoff, proprietor of the White Rock store, while preparing the Thanksgiving dinner in her home, while at the stove spilled some hot jelly from a glass upon her right arm and hand. Dr. Michael H. Scanlon was called to treat her at her home for scalds and burns.

WEDDINGS

Martley-Inderdohnen

Thanksgiving morning at St. Patrick's church in Mystic, Leo Martley, manager of the Moran Shoe store on High street, Westerly, was united in marriage with Miss Catherine Inderdohnen of 10 Jackson avenue, Mystic. The ceremony was performed in the presence of the immediate families by the pastor, Rev. John P. Kennedy.

Kiberger-Algier

At the Church of the Immaculate Conception at 10 o'clock Thanksgiving day morning Miss Nancy Mary Algier of Westerly became the bride of George Andrew Kiberger of Cincinnati, O. The ceremony was performed and the nuptial mass said by Rev. Fr. Henry Bruno, S. M. The best man was Adelard Dinne and the bridesmaid, Miss Annie Mary Algier of Westerly, a sister of the bride. Following a short reception Mr. and Mrs. Kiberger left Westerly Thursday night on a wedding trip for New York, and Cleveland, O., where a reception will be tendered them before they proceed to Cincinnati, where they will make their home.

Patients Entertained

At the Westerly hospital Thanksgiving day afternoon a musical program was furnished for the patients by the Hospital Aid society. There was a choir of twenty voices, in charge of Mrs. Joel P. Sherman. Both piano and violin numbers were included in the program.

Thanksgiving day presented a variety of weather; in the early morning the air was damp and muggy with comparatively high temperature and before 9 o'clock there was a heavy downpour of rain. The wind changed from south, with a corresponding exceptionally high tide in the Pawcatuck river, to a northwesterly direction and before 10:30 the air was filled with snow; heavy flurries alternating with rain and clearing spells until the blue sky appeared. In the afternoon the sky was a deep blue with heavy clouds and wind which diminished at night.

Expanding Gas Distribution

Tuesday of next week one of the largest carloes ever to come up the Pawcatuck river will be in one of the larger boats of the Standard Oil Co. of New York, many thousand barrels of gasoline. At the plant in Lower Pawcatuck the newly constructed tanks will be in readiness to have the contents of the oil tanker pumped from the boat's berth, on the mooring crib. This was first tested in operation and a tanker with two barges came up the river and discharged, two years ago this Thanksgiving day making use of the facilities for the first time. Since last summer dredgers under contract of the Standard Oil Co., have removed many Pawcatuck river obstructions and it is now planned to bring larger steamers from the Bayonne, N. J., port of departure to the Lower Pawcatuck Standard Oil Co. plant. With the increased storage and supply capacity it is expected that additional territory will be added to the Westerly district and that Peacedale and even Narragansett Pier may be added. These latter places are now supplied from Providence but with Westerly as the distributing point there will be a saving in the number of miles now required to transport the gas and oil.

OBITUARY

John J. Davis

Late Wednesday night John J. Davis, 15, died at his home in Lower Pawcatuck, after a brief illness. Mr. Davis was born Jan. 16, 1854, and had lived his entire life in the town, engaging in farming. Dec. 7, 1898, he married Elizabeth Hamilton, who survives him. Mr. Davis was a member of Pawcatuck Congregational church and for a number of years served on the town board of relief. Besides his wife he leaves a sister, Miss Sarah M. Davis.

Attorney Albert Langworthy Saunders, Mrs. Sanders and their three children, arrived in Westerly Wednesday evening from their home in Boston, proceeding to their summer home on the Shore road to pass the Thanksgiving vacation.

Byron Wilcox of the Philco Radio Co. production office, arrived Thursday morning from Philadelphia for Thanksgiving day with his parents, Judge and Mrs. William A. Wilcox.

Ray Gardiner, Providence singer, was in Westerly Wednesday night en route to pass Thanksgiving with Stonington relatives.

Miss Anna Fraser of the Wall street bank, New York, spent Thanksgiving day with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Fraser.

DOG FROM THE WEST FINDS THIEF OF CHICKEN COOPS

Mrs. Jennie Patch, who owns a 35-acre farm on the outskirts of the fishing village, has a flock of over 700 white chickens, clean as the snow. People come from all over to buy their Sunday dinner and claim that she has the best chickens around this part of the Thames river. But the hardest times Mrs. Patch has is to catch the barn yard thief that has taken away about 50 of her prize stock. A trap was set in several coops but it did no good for the thief was too wise and would run all around the death trap. She was getting mad at not catching the chicken thief, so she sent out to the west for a skunk dog. In a few days the crated box from Michigan came with a dog. The trip was long and the dog had to get a little rest and some corned beef and potatoes before he could get to work on the thief that has been going around the barn yard when everyone was asleep and doing his mean work. It was a foggy night and the dog, Horse Fly, was ready to do his daily dozen on the robber. Mrs. Patch stayed up to see if the $125 dog was going to be worth his money or not. At the hour of 12 the dog was put in the coop. About one o'clock, when the thief came into the coop and looked all around to see if everything was O. K. it seemed as if the dog waited and let the thief get hold of a prize. All the chickens started to give the alarm. Soon the dog, Horse Fly, made a flying tackle and had the mystery thief and it was not long before the chicken raiser knew that it was a skunk, by the smell. How that dog fought his rival, like a prize fighter trying to stay up under the body punches! The battle lasted for about 25 minutes before the skunk was done. The dog sure got plenty of action. At first it was thought they'd have to bury the prize of the west but as long as he got the thief the lady excused him, also got dog Horse Fly a big piece of steak that weighed two pounds and how that piece of 75 cent meat went down the sure spot and then the western dog was all ready for his bed, for it was getting on to 2:30. Mrs. Patch said the skunk was all black with a 10 cent piece of white on the tail and worth a few dollars. Throwing the catch aside she went to bed to finish out her lost sleep. Getting up the next day a little later than usual she called up the man who takes skunk skins and had him come out and she showed the black kitten and his eyes were big as cocoanuts. He claims he never saw one with so much black and not much white and so big. The thief was put on the scales and it reached to 15 pounds. He paid what it was worth and threw the midnight prowler in his truck and went away, so the chicken raiser was happy to get rid of it and the dog was still having his eyes closed to the world after his good work. A little while after everything was all right and no chicken thief in sight so one morning the lady of the white chicken stock was out feeding them and noticed that one had six toes on each foot, something never seen in the chicken family. That freak chicken seems to eat as much as the rest. The freak was put in a small coop by itself and farmers came to see the chicken with less feet. The lady was offered all kinds of money but would not sell. She was studying the hen book, telling all about chickens, also baby chicks but could not find out about the queer chicken. She did not want to keep the queer bird so sent it away to her uncle up in the hills of New Hampshire, Ted Shooter, who likes to keep all the freak things, for he puts them in at different fairs where thousands of people can see his queer stock. Mrs. Patch's hobby is to go in among her barn yard birds with her rubbers on and talk to them, also they eat out of her hand. Her dog, Horse Fly, is considered the champion skunk catcher from the west.

MYSTIC

WESTERLY MAN CLAIMS A LOCAL BRIDE THURSDAY

At St. Patrick's church, Thursday morning at 10 o'clock, Rev. John P. Kennedy, the pastor, solemnized the marriage of Miss Catherine Veronica Inderdohnen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Inderdohnen, of 10 Jackson avenue, Mystic, and Leo Martley, son of Mrs. Esther Martley, of Westerly. The bride was gowned in a princess dress of white satin and tulle. Her tulle veil was trimmed with princess lace and was in cap shape, caught with orange blossoms. She carried calla lilies. The attendants were Miss Marguerite Duplaine, of Mystic, and John Gulick, also of Mystic, brother-in-law of the bride. The bridesmaid was gowned in a princess gown of baby blue moire, with hat to match. She carried pink snapdragons. The church was decorated with palms and chrysanthemums. The wedding march was played by the organist, Mrs. Daniel Devine and the soloist was Fred Whittle. Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Country club on Jackson avenue. Mr. and Mrs Martley left on a wedding trip and upon their return about December 7, will reside in a new apartment at 10 Jackson avenue, Mystic. The bride's gift to the groom was gold cuff links and to her bridesmaid she gave a mesh bag. The groom's gift to the bride was a sterling silver rosary and to his best man a cigarette lighter. Guests were present from New York, Long Island, Pawtucket, Philadelphia, Providence, Westerly and Mystic. Mr. Martley is employed in a shoe store in Westerly and Mrs. Martley has been employed at the Sadonia Silk mill at Industrial place. Her wedding gifts included linen, silver, china and cut glass.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

The Hunting of Hooty the Owl.

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Who on his eyes and ears depends
To e'en the smallest thing attends.
—Hooty the Owl.

It was late November. Only the evergreen trees and a few of the oak trees had any leaves left on them. The other trees were bare. Most of the birds had flown away to the Sunny South. Striped Chipmunk, Johnny Chuck, Nimbleheels the Jumping Mouse and some of the other little people like Old Mr. Toad, Grandfather Frog and the Snakes and the Turtles had gone to bed for the winter.

Hooty the Owl, who would remain in the Green Forest all winter, was not as fat as he had been. Hunting was not so good now. It was not so easy to find a meal whenever he was hungry. So he spent more time hunting. He had to. Every night just after jolly round, red Mr. Sun went to bed behind the Purple Hills, Hooty would

That tree was really his watch tower perch on the top of a certain tall, dead tree. Sitting upright, he looked in the dusk to be a part of the tree. That tree was really his watchtower. That's what it was, his watchtower.

Now, when Hooty is hunting he uses both ears and eyes. He trusts first to his ears and then to his eyes. From the top of that watchtower he will suddenly hoot. All the little people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows know that sound. Even though they do their best to keep from it, they are very likely to shiver and shake; at least, a little. It is a fierce sound, a hungry sound. The instant he has hooted, Hooty listens. His ears are very wonderful. They are not those two tufts of feathers standing above his head which look like ears and are called ears; his ears are on the sides of his head and the opening to each ear is very, very large. You do not see those ears, for they are covered with skin and feathers.

So wonderful are those ears that Hooty can hear the faintest rustle of a dead leaf, even at some distance, or the faintest scratch of a toenail. So when he hoots, he listens for some slight sound made by some little furred or feathered person who has been startled by his voice. The instant he hears a rustle, or the sound of a claw, he glides forward on those great wings of his, which carry him without any sound at all. They carry him surprisingly fast, too. He flies low and in a second from the time he has left his watchtower he is right over the spot from which came that faint sound. It is then that he makes full use of those wonderful eyes of his.

Hooty's eyes were made for seeing when there is very little light. As long as there is a wee bit of light Hooty can see and he can see surprisingly well. So if there is the least movement by the one he is hunting, he is sure to see it. Then those great claws of his strike and Hooty has his dinner. This is the way that Hooty hoots. Mostly he hunts for mice, but almost anything that is small enough for him to kill is worth catching from Hooty's point of view.

Now, hunting had been very, very poor for some time. Hooty had begun to think that he and Mrs. Hooty must have caught all the mice of the Green Forest. It certainly seemed to him that it was a long time since he had had enough to eat at one time. So now, as he sat on the top of his watchtower and hooted, he listened with more than usual care. He had no intention of missing any chance that might offer to catch something to eat.

When Babies CRY

Babies will cry, often for no apparent reason. You may not know what's wrong, but you can always give Castoria. This soon has your little one comforted; if not, you should call a doctor. Don't experiment with medicines intended for the stronger systems of adults! Most of those little upsets are soon soothed away by a little of this pleasant-tasting, gentle-acting children's remedy that children like.

It may be the stomach, or may be the little bowels. Or in the case of older children, a sluggish, constipated condition. Castoria is still the thing to give. It is almost certain to clear up any minor ailment, and could by no possibility do the youngest child the slightest harm. So it's the first thing to think of when a child has a coated tongue; won't play, can't sleep, is fretful or out of sorts. Get the genuine; it always has Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the package.

How To Lose Two Dozen Pounds of Fat

At The Same Time Gain in Physical Vigor and Youthfulness and Swiftly Possess a Clear Skin and Vivacious Eyes That Sparkle With Glorious Health.

Here's the recipe that banishes fat and brings into blossom all the natural attractiveness that every woman possesses.

Every morning take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water before breakfast.

Be sure and do this every morning for "It's the little daily dose that takes off the fat."—Don't miss a morning. The Kruschen habit means that every particle of poisonous waste matter and harmful acids and gases are expelled from the system.

At the same time the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels are tuned up and the pure, fresh blood containing Nature's six life giving salts are carried to every organ, gland, nerve and fibre of the body and this is followed by "that Kruschen feeling" of energetic health and activity that is reflected in bright eyes, clear skin, cheerful vivacity and charming figure.

If you want to lose fat with speed get an 85c bottle of Kruschen Salts from Lee & Osgood Co., or any live druggist anywhere in America with the distinct understanding that you must be satisfied with results or money back.

COLCHESTER

OSCAR ALLEN SCHWARTZ MAKING RECORD AS BOXER

Mrs. Gussie Schwartz, of Norwich avenue, recently received a letter from her son, Oscar Allen Schwartz, a private in the 43rd Co., 5th regiment, U. S. M. C., stationed at Estell, Nicaragua, stating that he expects to return to the United States with his company about the first of the year. He is a graduate of the Colchester public schools and has been in the United States marines for the past two years, during which time he has gained a reputation as a lightweight prize fighter. The following extract from an article on the sports page of the "Second Brigade News," U. S. marines publication, is of interest to Mr. Schwartz's friends and relatives in Colchester. "Oscar Allen Schwartz, the boy who made such a good impression when he fought in the recent smoker, was a stablemate of 1st Battalion who is now the 'king of the feathers,' having just recently decisively defeated the former champion, Andre Routis, of France, in a gruelling 15-round set-to. Schwartz joined the famous corps for the experience that he can acquire in sharpening his ring knowledge. Schwartz declares that he will challenge any lightweight in Nicaragua for the service championship of the second brigade as his best fighting weight is in the lightweight division. He was overweight in his recent bout. He satisfies and pleases and last but not least, he packs T. N. T. in both mitts."

At the meeting of the Ladies' Benevolent society to be held in the parlors of the Congregational church this (Friday) afternoon at 3 o'clock, a thank offering will be taken for home and foreign missions. Following the meeting a supper is to be served with Mrs. Clara M. Gillette and Mrs. H. H. Tompkins hostesses.

Plainfield High School News.

An interesting contest took place on the Plainfield high school athletic field recently, when 11 seniors attempted to conquer the remainder of the school. Neither side was able to score. The spirited playing of Lutz, Williams, Baldwin, and Shippee, was a feature of the game. The officials were: Referee Mr. Dysart. Field Judge Mr. Monaghan. Umpire Mr. Allard Head Linesman Mr. Johnson.

The letter men of Plainfield high school last week formed an organization known as The Varsity club.

1—To act as a research committee to gather information for the purpose of forming permanent records of athletics, i. e. An athletic log.

2—To assist the managers in selling tickets and promoting students interest in the various sports, i. e. To increase student attendance at the games.

3—To assist the coaches by inducing a greater number of students to come out for varsity sports.

4—To assist the Athletic association in promoting social and other activities for the purpose of raising money for athletics.

5—To act as a nucleus, ready at any time to better conditions in athletics, i. e. To carry on the works of the athletic field. To be responsible for orders and cleanliness in the locker room.

6—To increase the interest of the members of the alumni and other supporters of athletics. The organizers are: Paul Shippee, Howard Bellavance, Stanley Baldwin, Frank Polewaczik, Lewis Soignet, Stanley Lutz, Thomas Lang, Walter Collin, Lester Burdick, John Dodge.

The first undertaking of the Varsity club—will be a dance to be held in the high school early in December, the proceeds to go to the Athletic association.

Knowlton, district representative of the supreme forest, District No. 6, all of New London, were present. After the work upon which the drill team was complimented by the visiting brothers, all adjourned to the social room for refreshments. Charles B. Lund of New London forest, and Past Master Hollins, of Whitinsville, Mass., were also present.

COAL HOLE SKETCH SERIES PUBLISHED AFTER 65 YEARS

LONDON—(AP)—Once upon a time there was a medical student who admired coal holes. Coal holes, in fact, became a passion with him, and on all his rambles about the city he carried pad and pencil with which to sketch "their infinite variety and beauty."

His 150 sketches of coal hole covers remained in obscurity for more than 65 years, but now they are being published in a booklet called "Opercula," which is the scholarly name for any lid-shaped object closing the aperture of a tube.

"These coal hole opercula," explains Dr. Shepherd Taylor, the 90-year-old author of the booklet, "were all sketched by me in the year 1863 when a medical student in London.

"I was a lodger, at the time, in Argyle street, near King's Cross, in which district my attention was first drawn to the great variety of devices on the opercula."

BRITAIN MAY PENALIZE UNINSURED MOTORISTS

LONDON—(AP)—Three months imprisonment and a fine of $50 may become the penalty for driving an automobile in England without personal liability insurance.

A compulsory insurance plan, drafted by the ministry of transport and containing these penalties, now is before the commons.

The mounting annual toll of traffic accidents in England and Wales has been giving authorities much concern (the death list last year was more than 5,100), and an ugly feature of the situation is the exceedingly small number of those involved in fatal accidents who are in a position to pay damages.

Of last year's fatalities, for instance, 1,613 were caused by motorcycles—motorcycles owned for the most part by people unable to afford automobiles and still less able to afford damage judgments.

Owners of motor vehicles themselves have not shown much inclination to take out insurance voluntarily, the reason is that the idea of spending money on insurance still remains to be sold to the public over here. Even the commonest forms of life insurance have made small headway.

Another reason is the fact that the driver of a car which in some American states would cost only $3 a year for license, pays here about $100 annually in horsepower tax. There is little left for insurance.

The compulsory insurance plan contemplates issue of certificates of insurance by a selected list of companies, each of which would be required to deposit sufficient funds with the government to guarantee financial ability to meet all claims.

Compulsory insurance would not protect passengers in a private automobile against injuries due to the carelessness of the driver, but only "third parties" liable to be injured by the car.

A bill embodying the insurance plan is expected to be introduced in the house of lords by Lord Russell, parliamentary secretary to the ministry of transport.

STATE PARK ACREAGE SHOWS BIG INCREASE

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Thousands of acres of winding streams, cool waterfalls and deep woods have been added by 15 states to their park domains in the last year and a half.

Reports gathered by the national conference on state parks show that Oregon has added 19 new areas, more than any other state. Some are small being nothing more than a widening of the right of way to preserve a picnic spot or a fine view.

One, however, contains 1,463 acres in the form of a 1,000-foot-wide strip of timber along both sides of the old Oregon trail across the Blue mountains. Oregon is the only state in which highway funds are used for acquiring parks.

The most unusual park undertaking is the restoration of the pioneer Indiana village of Spring Mill in Spring Mill State park. The houses are to remain inhabited and the centre of more than a century ago will be carried on there regularly.

California has added three new parks and enlarged two others. All five have stands of giant redwoods which have diameters of from 10 to 20 feet or more and grow to be 300 feet tall.

Texas' new park is a great ranch in the southwestern part of the state. It is to be fenced and stocked with big game. Arkansas, which has had only one park, has acquired another. Illinois has purchased three new park areas with a total of 498 acres.

Kansas, Michigan, Iowa, Indiana, Missouri and New Jersey have added to or enlarged their park systems.

TWO AMERICANS RATED AS PILOTS OF GLIDERS

DETROIT—(AP)—Two Americans have won their wings as first class glider pilots.

They are the first to have obtained such recognition in this country from the Federation Aeronautic Internationale and the National Glider association.

The two, Lieut. Ralph S. Barnaby, naval officer stationed in Washington, and William H. Bowlus, one of the builders of the Spirit of St. Louis, far exceeded the requirements of five minutes of soaring flight above the point of their start.

Barnaby remained aloft 15 minutes at Cape Cod, Mass., and later made two cross-country flights of eight miles each in his motorless plane.

Bowlus established an unofficial American record for soaring duration when he remained aloft for 1 hour 21 minutes 9 seconds at San Diego, Cal.

Dr. Wolfgang Klemperer, chairman of the National Glider association's technical committee, who was the first licensed glider pilot in Germany, also was qualified for the F. A. I. glider license but cannot receive it until his final citizenship papers have been granted early in 1930.

He flew 18 miles near Uniontown, Pa., staying up an hour and maintaining 800 feet altitude in a soaring plane.

Philip Allen, Jr., of Boston, earned the "three-gull" insignia of a first class glider pilot in Germany last winter.

FRENCH CARS ADOPT NEW TYPE GREASING

PARIS—(AP)—The oil can and the grease gun are losing their jobs in France.

Centralized chassis lubrication was on many of the 1930 models shown at the Paris Auto salon and the accessory manufacturers are ready to take care of the others.

Recently one of the principal reasons equipment firms organized a string of 500 licensed stations throughout France to do a complete greasing job for a fixed price.

Employer—What we want is a smart boy—alert and intelligent. Are you quick to take notice?

Boy Applicant (proudly)—Yesser, I'm twice in a fortnight once.—Ipswich Star.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—(AP)—The New York Real Estate Securities exchange, the first of its kind in the country, will open for public trading on December 16. The exchange will have its headquarters on East 41st street, in mid-town Manhattan, whereas the other security exchanges are located in the down-town financial district.

M. R. Katzenberg, president of the New York Hide exchange, estimates that the domestic production of shoes will show a material falling off during November and December of this year.

The American Re-Insurance company, which recently offered additional shares to its stockholders, receiving therefrom $1,500,000, now has assets of approximately $8,500,000 and capital and surplus of about $4,000,000.

The Southeastern Fuel Co., a subsidiary of the Southeastern Power & Light Co., plans to redeem on Jan. 1, 1930, all of the outstanding 6 per cent sinking fund gold bonds, due July 1, 1948, at the principal amount and accrued and unpaid interest to redemption date.

SIX CONVICTIONS IN L. I. RUM RING CASE

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—(AP)—A federal jury tonight returned a verdict of guilty against six men charged with conspiracy to violate the federal prohibition law in the so-called Long Island liquor ring case. The jury acquitted Otto Biercks, the seventh defendant.

MANY CONGRATULATIONS FOR PRESIDENT VON HINDENBURG

BERLIN, Nov. 28—(AP)—President Von Hindenburg today received many congratulations from former German army officers on the 15th anniversary of his appointment as field marshal.

Von Hindenburg was elevated to this rank after the victory of his army at Tannenberg, on the eastern front, and his successful strategic retreat to Weichsel, which checked the Russian advance into Germany.

BENJAMIN F. YOAKUM CRITICALLY ILL AT HOME

NEW YORK, Nov. 28—(AP)—Benjamin F. Yoakum, financier and railroad executive, tonight lay critically ill at his Fifth avenue home.

Mr. Yoakum, who is about 70, has been ill for some time of heart trouble. Last Monday he suffered a serious heart attack, after which complications set in.

It has been found that in Iowa 200 boys and girls in each county are leaving the country for the city every year.

AGRICULTURAL INTERESTS

EARLY POTATO GROWERS TO INCREASE ACREAGE

Early potato growers in 11 southern states report intentions to increase the acreage of potatoes about 19 per cent over that planted in 1929 according to reports as of November 1, to the bureau of agricultural economics of the United States department of agriculture. If these intentions are carried out a total of about 233,400 acres of early potatoes will be planted in 1930 as compared with 218,450 acres in 1929 and 28,920 acres in 1928.

Florida growers report intentions to increase their acreage 38 per cent over that planted in 1929, which is 10 per cent more than was intended on September 1, as stated in the Early Potato Outlook Report for the lower Rio Grande valley of Texas and Florida, released September 18. This brings the intended acreage to be planted in 1930 by Florida growers to 6,300 acres, or approximately that planted in 1928. Texas growers intend to increase 16 per cent. The reported increases for the remaining states are as follows: Alabama, 27 per cent; Louisiana 15 per cent; Georgia, 33 per cent; South Carolina, 8 per cent; North Carolina, 9 per cent; Arkansas, 19 per cent; Oklahoma 16 per cent; Virginia, 3 per cent, and Maryland, 9 per cent.

This statement of farmers' intentions to plant is not a forecast of the acreage that will actually be planted. It is simply an indication of what farmers had in mind to plant at the time they made their reports, compared with the acreage planted by them last year, and is issued by the bureau of agricultural economics at the request of the growers for the purpose of aiding them in formulating their plans for the coming season. The acreage actually planted may be larger or smaller than these early intention reports indicate, due to weather conditions, price changes, labor supply or limitations of credit and the effect of this report upon producers' actions.

Another report on intentions to plant potatoes will be made by growers in January and considered in the preparation of the annual outlook report on potatoes which will be issued January 7 1930, by the bureau of agricultural economics. The latter survey will include reports on intentions to plant from growers in the northern main crop potato states.

EARLY DETECTION OF TB AIDS IN ITS ERADICATION

Post-mortem examinations are often regarded as the final word in determining the presence of diseases in animals although such examinations are valuable, the tuberculin test used in the eradication of bovine tuberculosis is actually more reliable than the customary postmortem for determining the presence of tuberculosis, according to Dr. John R. Mohler, chief of the bureau of animal industry, United States department of agriculture.

The tuberculin test indicates the presence of the disease but does not show the progress which the infection has made within the body, Doctor Mohler states. Hence in the early stages of the disease it is entirely possible for an animal which is actually infected with tuberculosis to show no visible signs on either ante-morten or post-morten examination.

"Tuberculin is a product prepared by sterilizing, filtering, and concentrating the liquid upon which the tubercle bacilli have been allowed to grow. It contains the sterile product of the growth of the germs, but not the germs themselves. When properly used it can have no possible injurious effect on healthy cattle. Tuberculin commonly used in testing livestock in the United States is made under government supervision, which assures its purity and potency.

The results obtained thus far in systematic tuberculin testing show the effectiveness of this means for eliminating infected animals. During the last 13 years more than 1,500,000 tuberculous cattle have been removed from herds in the United States and more than 2,000,000 heads have been freed of the disease.

A torrential rain of "red rain" in Manchuria has almost destroyed the village of Fuyu, not far from Mukden, Chinese newspapers report. Pools of blood-red water formed in the streets, and the rain discolored houses. The Chinese inhabitants explained the red rain by saying that some superhuman huntsman had shot a dragon in the sky.

CAMPANIONS OF HOLD-UP GANG LEADER SURRENDERED

MUNCIE, Ind., Nov. 28—(AP)—Irving Johns and Albert Nickerson, companions of Angus Cox, 21-year-old Muncie hold-up gang leader slain by officers in an ambush at "Little Chicago," a deserted village near Hartford City, Ind., last Saturday night, surrendered at police headquarters here today.

The two gangsters had been sought since last Saturday when they escaped from officers with the body of their fatally wounded leader, later tossing him in the door of the Grant county hospital at Marion, Ind., where he died ten minutes later.

Jones made a complete confession and Nickerson vouched for its truth before Chief of Detectives W. H. Everson and Prosecutor J. H. Davis. The confession detailed eight holdups committed by the gang in central Indiana since October 18.

The ambush resulted from a letter written to a Muncie school girl, making annointment with her for the meeting place. Her mother turned the note over to police, who kept the "date."

FEAR THREE FISHERMEN MAY HAVE DROWNED

ASHLAND, Wis., Nov. 28—(AP)—Fear that three fishermen who left Bayfield, near here, in a gasoline boat may have drowned while bound for Manitou Island during a snow storm and high seas a week ago today, was expressed tonight by Chequamegon Bay Marine authorities.

Although several boats have made trips between Bay Field and Manitou Island since the midnight departure of the three men, no word concerning their whereabouts has been received.

One of the men is known to residents here only as "Pete." The others are John Hanson and Harold Johnson.

WESTERLY GOES DARK WHEN AUTO HITS POLE; BURNS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, Nov. 29—Electric light service in Westerly was cut off this Friday morning at 12:45 for ten minutes when the Chrysler car driven by Frank Chrenzia of Pleasant street struck a high tension pole on Bright-man Hill on the Noose Neck hill road. Mr. Chrenzia fell asleep while returning to Westerly and was suddenly awakened by the impact, his only injury being a severe nose bleed. With difficulty he stepped from the car and proceeded to Westerly in a passing auto and barely got out of sight of his car when it caught fire from the high tension circuit and was destroyed.

MAY HAVE DR. LEAK TO HEAD NEW ASYLUM

The leave of absence granted Dr. Roy L. Leak, superintendent of the Connecticut State Hospital for the Insane at Middletown, to aid the commission which is building the new state hospital in Newtown, has started rumors that when the new institution is completed, a new plan of hospital operation will be inaugurated, with Dr. Leak as the official in charge of the three state institutions for the insane. The report is without foundation and is contrary to the policy of the state as it is formulated now, according to those who are responsible for the institutional policy of the government.

There is good ground for believing that when the new institution is completed, the board of trustees will ask Dr. Leak to take charge of it as superintendent, and that he will accept the post as a promotion from his present charge at Middletown.

The centralization of control is not looked upon with favor by the present powers in the state because of their belief that any board of trustees, or rather individual members of it, when charged with the care of more than one institution, will have very human preferences which will result unfavorably for the other institutions. Another side of the matter is that similar institutions under their own boards are in a measure competitive, and the efforts of each board to make its institution better than the others of its kind benefits the institution.

The connection of Dr. Leak with the Newtown institution already has justified itself, it is felt, in the suggestions which he has brought to the board. The new hospital will be the first institution this state has built with the advice of an expert on the operation of the plant in addition to the usual building commission and architect.

The power plant will be the first unit of the new institution to be constructed, and the trustees expect to advertise for bids on this job within a very short time. Actions looking to the construction of a spur track to the institution by the New Haven road and to closing a town road lying almost entirely within the state property have been instituted also.

GALE IN ENGLISH CHANNEL AND HEAVY RAIN INLAND

LONDON, Nov. 28—(AP)—A violent furious gale in the English channel drove many craft to shelter tonight in Dover harbor. Rain was general over England and many roads in western and southern England and the Midlands were flooded, especially in Devon and Cornwall.

BRITISH PRESENTATION JAZZES SHAKESPEARE

LONDON (AP)—Hamlet in plus-fours has been succeeded on the London stage by a Falstaff who carries an umbrella and reads the evening papers.

Modern dress presentations of Shakespearean plays are of course no longer a novelty; but the "The Merry Wives of Windsor" as produced here by the British Empire Shakespeare society is more than that. It is Shakespeare syncopated and ultra modernized, with a few original "gags" thrown in.

"I've run out of petrol," observes Master Fenton as he prepares to take the beauteous Anne Page for a ride on the flapper bracket of his motorcycle.

Falstaff wears a tail coat and soft gray hat, and, when his clothes seem rather damp after the celebrated ducking in the wash basket, Bardolph dries them with an electric iron.

Mrs. Ford has a grand piano in her drawing room and a telephone on which she calls the number "Windsor 34" in connection with arrangements for the final discomfiture of Falstaff.

The Merry Wives, of course, appear in the smartest of modern attire, and the parson of the play wears modern English clerical garments. Newsboys results of the Lincolnshire handicap and the boat race. Outside the inn a woman is playing a portable phonograph on a perambulator, and Pistol is seen as a down-and-out actor carrying a sandwich board advertising a motion picture called "Why She Lied to Her Husband."

Many popular songs are heard during the course of the comedy, and the final revel proceeds to the accompaniment of a portable wireless set playing a recent hit.

Electric cigar lighters and ash receivers for motor cars are not taxable as automobiles accessories under the revenue act, the court of claims holds.

MYSTERY IN THEFT OF 12 MACHINES FROM MARVEL CO. AT NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 28. — The Marvel Underwear company, 78 Water street, was visited by thieves last night, but whether the theft perpetrated, which consisted of the removal of 12 sewing machines and spare parts, representing an aggregate loss to the proprietors of $2000, was for the motive of acquiring the equipment, or to cripple the plant, has not been determined. At any rate by the removal of the machinery and the spare parts the company will be unable to resume operation tomorrow. It is more than probable, however, that the removal of the machinery and the spare parts was the work of some persons who desired to obtain the machinery and install it in another factory, rather than to purchase new machinery. The police throughout the state have been requested to be on the lookout for a truck supposed to have been used in transporting the machinery from New London.

The machinery stolen consists of three power machines of the individual value of $369; three union, special width, front power machines, value $225 each; one power special machine with narrow front; three Singer bar-tacking machines; one button hole power machine; one union special power machine.

The robbery occurred sometime after the suspension of business at the manufacture Wednesday afternoon. This noon, when an employe of the plant went there at 12:30 o'clock, the robbery was discovered. Entrance had been obtained, either by a duplicate key or because the door had been left unlocked. Entrance to the plant proper was obtained through smashing the door by using a crowbar or other heavy implement. The machines, which were distributed about the entire plant, were removed from their stations by prying and then were carted to Water street where they were loaded into a truck and carried away.

When the robbery was reported to the police Detective Sergeants John Cavanaugh and Nelson Smith were assigned to the case. The Connecticut Power company maintains an all night force on the ground floor, as well as a garage, but none of the employes heard any unusual noise or observed the removal of the machines from the building. Neither did railroad employes, and many of them pass the building during the night, notice the loading of the truck with the machines, although the work of the thieves in carrying the equipment from the building to the street must have required at least three hours. Neither did the police officer on the beat note anything unusual in front of the manufacture.

The police are inclined to the belief that possibly the motive of the perpetrators of the deed was more to cripple the industry than to rob. Should the offenders be arrested and this motive established they will be charged with sabotage and not breaking and entering.

CARL ALBANO APPEALS— JUDGE DOUBLES HIS BOND

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 28.—Carl Albano, 30 Home street, was in the police court today, charged with non-support, having been arrested by Detective Sergeant Nelson Smith and Automobile Patrol Officer George Cockell last night, when Prosecuting Attorney Max Boyer issued a warrant on complaint of Mrs. Albano, who said that she was compelled to provide for her care and maintenance because her husband refused to do so. In court, Judge Daniel M. Cronin sentenced Albino to 60 days in jail, but suspended execution of the sentence, conditioned on Albino's assurance to pay a sufficient amount to properly support his wife. He ordered Albino to post a bond of $500 as a guarantee that he would do as the court ordered. Albino would not accept the verdict of the court and took an appeal to the next session of the criminal term of the court of common pleas. Thereupon Judge Cronin ordered Albino to provide a surety on an additional bond of $500, which the husband did.

William Dooley, an unfortunate, deprived of normal sight and without home or friends, who is a nightly lodger in the tramp robes at police headquarters, was arrested today by Patrolman Henry Rick, charged with intoxication and will be presented in court tomorrow.

Charles Sawicki, 28 Cape Ann court, was presented on a charge of violation of the state motor vehicle law in failing to display his driver's license when requested to do so. But because of the nature of the offense, Judge Cronin ordered the discharge of the prisoner and a nolle of the charge. Sawicki was arrested yesterday by Patrolman Carlos Stone upon complaint of J. O. Belanger of the submarine base, who alleged that after the car Sawicki was driving collided with Belanger's automobile the former driver refused to reveal his identity by displaying his driver's license.

Conrad Devlin, 70 Maple avenue, was charged with violation of the state motor vehicle law in passing an automatic danger signal and driving without a license, having been arrested yesterday by Patrolman William Manice. Judge Cronin imposed a fine of $10 and costs on the former count and meted out a penalty of $3 and costs on the latter charge.

Seek Utica Woman

The police of Utica, N. Y., today requested the New London police to renew their search for Mrs. Beecher W. Crouse, 51, who is missing from her home and for whose apprehension a reward of $5000 has been offered. The Utica police stated that Mrs. Crouse was likely to appear at churches where worship was in progress or to church workers and request assistance, more especially because of the holiday, although there is no good reason why Mrs. Crouse should be seeking aid. Mrs. Crouse, who is suffering from a form of deficient mentality disappeared from her home early in the month and after she had been given much medical treatment. Since her disappearance Mrs. Crouse's whereabout have been sought continually and only recently she was reported as having visited in Hartford. Because of her reported visit to Hartford the police of New London were again requested to be on the lookout for the woman.

Mrs. Julia Ranananak, 35, of 216 West Main street, Norwich, and her son, James, 6, who sustained fractured skulls several days ago, when the automobile in which they were riding and which was driven by John Sak, also of Norwich, collided with a telephone pole, because of the reckless driving of Sak, are reported as gradually improving at Lawrence Memorial hospital. Their recovery is now practically assured. Sak will appear in the Waterford town court Monday next.

Patrolman Henry Sylvia was unable to perform duty last night, being confined to his home on Ocean avenue by illness.

Mrs. Rebecca Ulanoff, proprietress of a soda and confectionery store, 149 Howard street, reported to the police today that during last night a penny slot machine affixed to the front of the store had been smashed and what money had been in the machine was stolen. Mrs. Ulanoff has suffered from petty thieving before and it is believed that the thieves are youths who reside in the neighborhood.

JAMES AT GRAND RAPIDS GIVES HIMSELF UP

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 28.—Harry C. James entered a Grand Rapids police station tonight and gave himself up, saying that he was wanted in New London, Conn., for violation of parole and that his only reason for delivering himself into the custody of the police was to satisfy the young woman with whom he was in love. James declared that it was the request of his sweetheart that prompted him to give himself up, for the woman wanted James to "right himself with the law."

The only police record against Harry C. James in New London is for automobile theft. James, then 18, was bound over to the criminal term of the superior court. At that time James gave his address as 47 Chabot street, Everett, Mass. His arraignment in the New London court was in 1927. Probation Officer Richard W. Mansfield could not be located tonight to determine whether James was wanted for parole violation.

Ignored Danger Signal

Marie Roman, 43 John street, Westerly, was arrested this afternoon by Patrolman George Perkins, charged with violation of the state motor vehicle law in passing an automatic danger signal corner of Crystal avenue and Main street. He gave a bond of $3 for appearance in the police court tomorrow.

Street Sergeant Patrick Murphy was unable to perform duty tonight, being indisposed at his home on Lessard street.

Virginie Ferri, 30 East street, was arrested this afternoon by State Police Officer Michael Murphy, charged with violation of the state motor vehicle law in driving an automobile not equipped with windshield wiper and driving without registration. Ferri was ordered to present himself in the police court tomorrow morning.

A report of the existence of a dangerous depression in the cross-walk, corner of Berkley avenue and Vauxhall street, was received by the police today. The danger spot will be reported to the highway department tomorrow.

MISS RIPPEN INJURED BY FALLING TREE LIMB

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 28—Miss Rippen, 416 Pequot avenue, was struck on the head and injured this afternoon by a limb of a tree and is confined to her home, although not believed to have received injury that will require lengthy confinement or cause her to need more than ordinary medical treatment. Miss Ripper was walking on Glenwood avenue, when, without warning the limb fell and struck the pedestrian on the head and shoulder. She went to the residence, No. 100 and from there she was taken to her home in a taxicab. George Goodrich, driver of the taxicab, reported the incident at police headquarters.

A resident of 39 Bristol street notified the police this afternoon that the cellar there had been entered and that it was the belief of the resident that some one had slept in the building last night.

But one case of intoxication awaits presentation at police headquarters tonight and there were fewer vagrants occupying the tramp room than has been the case in many nights, in spite of low temperature.

Weather indications early this forenoon pointed to a white Thanksgiving, for snow fell in such quantity for a few minutes that it made it appear as though a heavy fall would result. The snow was accompanied by a strong wind, but did not continue falling long. The sun quickly broke through the clouds and in a short time all evidence of the snow had disappeared.

Holiday Cheer For Needy

Thanksgiving day was made enjoyable to many needy families in the city today through the generosity of men and women and because of the activity of Richard W. Mansfield, superintendent of the B. F. Learned mission. Many of the deserving poor were provided substantial baskets of food-stuffs, consisting of chicken, pork and vegetables, bread, butter, coffee, etc., that constituted a holiday repast.

Special services were held in several of the churches and were attended by good-sized congregations.

MISS GAGNON LIVES BUT MAY BE PERMANENTLY DISFIGURED

Miss Phyllis Gagnon, employed by the Connecticut Power Co. and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Gagnon, 9 Mott avenue, who sustained a fractured skull a week ago when the automobile in which she was riding with friends overturned at Station 7, Waterford, is reported today at Lawrence-Memorial hospital as improving gradually and it is believed that she will recover, although it is more than probable that she will be disfigured for life, for Miss Gagnon sustained other injuries, consisting of lacerations of the scalp and face, fracture of the upper and lower left jaw and a crushed left shoulder. Norman Mabel, a lieutenant at the submarine base, driver of the automobile, is being held on a charge driving while under the influence of liquor and will be given a hearing in Waterford town court whenever it has been determined that Miss Gagnon will survive her injuries. The other occupants of the auto escaped injury other than bruises and lacerations.

There are more stores vacant on Bank street at present than in many years and from indications through displays in the windows of other stores many other places of business will soon be idle.

Briquet Process Installed.

PHILADELPHIA —(AP)— Lehigh, N. D., is the first place in the United States to install the new German Lurgi process for turning low grade coal into briquets. The process is reported to the American Society of Mechanical Engineers by Max Toltz of St. Paul.

ACTIVITY OF LASSEN SEEN AS CHANCE FOR ERUPTION

MINERAL, Cal. —(AP)—Lassen peak, officially listed as a dying volcano, may be just playing possum, after all.

It had been 16 years since it erupted, after nearly 300 years of comparative quiescence, but records of the Lassen volcano observatory of the United States geological survey indicates that it is far from being dead.

For some time the peak has been under continuous observation by the observatory. During most of this period there has been an accumulation of southwest tilt which is interpreted as meaning a swelling of the Lassen edifice, declares a government observer.

R. H. Finch, associate volcanologist of the geological survey, who has watched at the crater of the volcano as jealously as a nurse at the bedside of a patient, concludes that "the one requirement for such a swelling of the mountain is an increase of internal pressure." Also, that "if the pressure increases enough some form of eruption will follow."

The record of the swellings, in Finch's opinion, "is too short to warrant a forecast of future activity, but they do indicate that Lassen peak still must be called an active volcano. It should be remembered also that steam continually is escaping from many vents in the craters at the summit of the peak."

During his time of sentry duty in the area in 1927, Finch counted more than 500 earthquakes, there being 146 in March alone. This summer the quakes were increasingly frequent, the number in July being the greatest for any summer month since the establishment of the observatory.

"The occasional 'swarms' of earthquakes recorded on the seismograph, the instruments which also measure tilt, indicate a restlessness of the mountain," he declares.

Except for the explosive eruptions of 1914 and 1915 when, there were two small lava flows, the last outpouring was 10 miles from Lassen peak, at Cinder cone, in 1360-'51. The volcanic activity which resulted in the upbuilding of Lassen peak, now 10,460 feet high, is believed to have been begun near the close of the eocene period.

FAME OF CHEMIST SPRANG FROM AWE

CINCINNATI —(AP)— Incidents which inspire youth to scientific success often are revealed only years afterwards.

Such an incident now comes to light in the career of Prof. H. Shinley Fry, head of the department of chemistry, University of Cincinnati.

In student days he was filled with admiration akin to awe by the ability of his old chemistry professor to expound the intricate formulas of benzene, a cyclic structure of six carbon atoms each united to a hydrogen atom.

He has owned up that perhaps the tinkle of delicate test tubes and the sizzing of boiling liquid helped stir his imagination. At any rate, he formed the ambition of developing a new benzene formula.

Years ago he conceived the first electronic formula which afforded theoretical explanation of benzene's chemical constitution and properties. It was so radical that American scientific editors once refused to publish it.

But prosaic, humble benzene spread into all sorts of daily application, becoming the most extensively used of the 200,000 known carbon compounds. The young scientist's formula served more and more to make clear formerly unexplained reactions.

Now at last comes the reward of the dream, for several books on chemistry by British authorities have paid Fry the tribute of listing his formula first.

NEW ORLEANS MAN HAS LINCOLN CANE

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP)—The ebony cane carried by Abraham Lincoln the night he was assassinated has come to New Orleans along with swords of Lord Nelson, the great British admiral and Marshal Joffre, of France.

Their owner, S. J. Shwartz, declines to tell how he came into possession of the Nelson and Joffre swords but explains he purchased Lincoln's cane recently from Arthur L. von Dolcke, of Charlesvoix, Mich. Dolcke had received it from his father, who in turn had got it from a Negro janitor of Ford's theatre.

An affidavit accompanying the cane relates that he janitor found it in the theatre box the night Lincoln was shot and had given it to Dr. von Dolcke, of Washington.

The cane is a straight, black ebony stick curiously carved and inlaid and was treasured by the president as a gift from a group of friends. Just below the handle behind thick glass is "Abe Lincoln" then a carved heart and "rail splitter." Next are nine square dots representing the nine states from which slavery was abolished. Beneath is a miniature carved log cabin, a likeness of Lincoln's birthplace.

The Joffre sword has a gold hilt, the figure of Marianne, symbol of embattled France and bears Joffre's name and the date 1919.

35-MINUTE CAMPAIGN PUTS MAYOR IN SEAT

BARTLETT, Tenn., (AP)—J. W. Tatum claims the shortest successful campaign for political office on record—35 minutes.

When the day of the mayoralty election came, Tatum was not in the race and had no idea of becoming a candidate.

Then some of his friends suggested that he enter. Shortly before noon Tatum was a candidate and after a 35-minute campaign he beat his single opponent, 66 to 27. The mayor gets no salary, but is city judge and receives $1 for each conviction in the court.

SAYS ARTIFICIAL LIGHT PROVIDES MOST COLORS

PHILADELPHIA —(AP)— The traditional standard of daylight for color discrimination has been the north skylight, says A. H. Taylor of the General Electric company in a report to the Illuminating Engineering society.

"Since north skylight from a clear sky is quite bluish," he says, "it makes the surfaces (pink, lavender, magenta, etc.) appear more bluish than they would in white light. Because of its deficiency in yellow, orange and red, north skylight suppresses these colors in objects illuminated by it."

DARING FLIERS SET UP 13 NEW WORLD RECORDS

Washington (AP)—This year has been a field day for record smashing by aviators of the United States, Germany, France and England.

Thirteen new world marks have been placed on the rolls of the Federation Aeronautic Internationale, the governing body for aeronautic contests, but only four were for major events.

Two of these major records went to the United States, the seaplane altitude record of 38,560 feet by Lieut. Apolle Soucek of the navy, and the much broken refueling endurance record finally by Dale Jackson and Forest O'Brine of St. Louis.

Great Britain's contribution was the performance of Squadron-Leader A. H. Orlebar, who raised the seaplane speed record nearly 40 miles an hour to 357.7 miles an hour.

The fourth major record, the land plane altitude mark of 41,794 feet set by Willi Neuenhofen of Germany, is to be the object of another assault soon by Lieutenant Soucek.

German aviators took the lion's share of the 13 new records, being responsible for six. Three were made in the United States and three in France. Four of the German records were the work of one man.

The nine other new records this year are:

Speed for 5,000 kilometers: Girier and Weiss of France, 116.82 miles an hour.

Speed for 1,000 kilometers (with pay load of 1,000 kilograms); Paillard and Camplan of France, 137.198 miles an hour.

Distance, air line, light planes: D. S. Zimmerly, Marshall, Mo., Brownsville, Tex., to Winnipeg, Canada, 1,650 miles.

Speed for 100 kilometers (pay load 500 kilograms); Rolf Starke of Germany, 161.51 miles an hour.

Speed for 500 kilometers (pay load 500 kilograms) Rolf Starke of Germany, 146.6 miles an hour.

Speed for 100 milometers (pay load 1,000 kilograms); Rolf Starke of Germany, 146.2 miles an hour.

Speed for 500 kilometers (pay load 1,000 kilograms); Rolf Starke of Germany, 161.51 miles an hour.

Altitude with pay load of 2,000 kilograms; de Valsseau of France, 15,837 feet.

Greatest pay load carried to an altitude of 2,000 meters: Steindorf of Germany, 14,220 pounds.

The 100 and 500 kilometer speed marks with pay load of 500 kilograms formerly were held by United States navy fliers.

One new mark has been recorded in the recently established category for women. It is the solo endurance mark of Mlle. Maryse Bastie of France, who stayed aloft 26 hours 47 minutes 30 seconds. That is 20 1-2 minutes longer than the unofficial American record of Miss Elinor Smith of New York.

Besides the world record, three American records were set up as well as several unofficial American marks.

Zimmerly supplemented his world distance mark for light planes with an official American light plane altitude mark of 20,820 feet for single seaters of between 440 and 771 pounds in weight.

Kenneth Gale, Los Angeles, made an altitude mark of 16,912 feet for two-seater light planes, and Lieutenant Soucek set a new American land plane altitude record of 39,140 feet.

Among the most notable of the unofficial marks are those of Capt Frank Hawks—17 hours 43 minutes for a west to east transcontinental non-stop flight, and 19 hours 10 minutes 33 seconds for the east-west hop.

This and other unofficial records, including those of women, are awaiting acceptance by the National Aeronautic Association.

HAMMERS TOLL WAR FINALE AT SCAPA FLOW

ROSYTH, Scotland (AP)—While the world is preparing to celebrate another armistice day, this British naval base is writing the noisy final chapter of the World Was on the sea.

The last of the scuttled German warships of Scapa Flow has been towed in, bottomside up from its parking place on the floor of the ocean.

Ten years of barnacles have been scraped from the hull, and amid the clang of sledgehammers and the hissing of torches, this once great ship is being reduced to junk.

Oddly, perhaps significantly, this final reduction of a proud fleet to junk metal is being completed at a time when statesmen are concentrating as never before on the problem of reduction of navies, and at a time when evacuation of the Rhineland is ringing down an asbestos curtain on the world war as waged upon the land.

When the sailors of the surrendered German fleet opened the seacocks of their ships at Scapa Flow June 21, 1919, they created a problem in salvage that taxed to the utmost the ingenuity of modern engineers.

Only three light cruisers and some smaller vessels were successfully beached by British crews that day; the other scuttled warships went to the bottom. One by one, however, they were pumped full of air and floated down from the Orkneys to the dockyards here.

The first to be brought to the surface was the destroyer V-30, a big ship of the 80 class which had sunk in 30 fathoms in the center of the Flow. That left 28 destroyers, 10 battleships and five battle crisers still to be salvaged—a long job.

After five years of laborious operations it is finished. Even the 28,000-ton Hindenburg, 700 feet long, the last word in German naval construction at the time it was surrendered, has been towed in and delivered to the junking crews.

ENGLAND FOLLOWS PRINCE INTO AIR

CROYDEN (AP)—Young England which always pays rather close attention to what the prince of Wales does and wears, has noted his enthusiasm for flying and is following him into the air.

That is one explanation for the boom in flying clubs throughout the land. In the past few months, during which the prince was more than usually active in the air and finally bought a private plane and learned to fly it, the flying clubs and schools of England enjoyed a rapid increase in membership.

Approximately 5,000 men and women now belong to these clubs or instruction groups.

PARIS LATEST STORY IS "THE X-RAY'LL GIT YOU"

PARIS (AP)—Paris is filled with x-ray goblins these days.

They are pictured as silent, invisible rays of death, filtering through apartment walls into homes all over the city. The basis in fact for the rumors is the practice of French professional men of having their laboratories and offices in their homes.

So the extent to which it may be possible for x-rays to penetrate the homes of neighbors has aroused the imaginations of laymen. Extremists demand that physicians sheath their offices in protective lead.

TRACES FOUND OF MAN 1,250,000 YEARS AGO

NEW YORK (AP)—Traces of prehistoric men in England believed to date back 1,250,000 years are described by Dr. Henry Fairfield Osborn, director of the American Museum of Natural History.

They are found in Red Crag beds of East Anglia near Foxhall, a hamlet on the east coast not far from Norwich. They are stone implements, roughly shaped, including pieces of flint fashioned apparently for scraping.

Dr. Osborn says the tools are positively of human origin and that they indicate men of sufficient intelligence to use fire.

Criminal So by Nature

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP)—The bodies of electrocuted criminals show physical defects that may account for their criminal natures, according to Dr. H. I. Gosline, former pathologist at Sing Sing.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre

Scintillating, brilliant, sparkling, literally "Hollywood on parade"—the Hollywood Revue," M-G-M's big musical all-talking picture spectacle—in reality, the screen's first actual revue—will have its Norwich premier at the Broadway tomorrow, starting a week's engagement of the most pretentious motion pictures ever made. The cast comprising twenty-five of the most prominent stars in Hollywood, backed by a beauty chorus of over 200, is the most imposing and high-salaried ever assembled for one picture. In the cast of "The Hollywood Revue" are most of the prominent players at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio. Marion Davies John Gilbert, Norman Shearer, William Haines Joan Crawford, Lionel Barrymore, Buster Keaton, Karl Dane, George K. Arthur, Marie Dressler, Conrad Nagel, Gus Edwards, Stan Laurel Oliver Hardy and Gwen Lee all appear in the new picture in addition to the star featured in "The Broadway Melody"—Anita Page, Charles King and Bessie Love. Their talents are supplemented by such stage luminaries as the Brox Sisters, Natacha Nat'ova, Cliff Edwards (Ukelele Ike), Jack Benny, the Rounders and the Albertina Rasch ballet. Some idea of the scope of the new production is conveyed in the information that more than 1,500 persons were involved in making it while more than three million feet of film were photographed to obtain the final footage of 11,000 feet. The hundred and fifty chorus girls and show girls were selected by Director Charles F. Riesner and Sammy Lee, who supervised the dance numbers.

Gorgeous scenes in natural colors, photographed by the technicolor process are scattered throughout the production. Twenty original song numbers were prepared by the large staff of writers and composers now under contract to M-G-M for the new song and dance production. Several of these, notably "Singin' in the Rain," "Orange Blossom Time" and "Your Mother and Mine" have already become popular numbers of the day.

Palace Theatre

Beautiful Billie Dove is the scintillating star of the big all-talking, singing, dancing drama which opens at the Palace theater Saturday, "The Painted Angel," a romance of the night clubs, and the finest and most daring of its type. Miss Dove portrays the part of Mamie Hudler, a cabaret hostess of the Helen Morgan, Texas Guinan type in New Orleans a banker and gangster fought over her and she had to leave that city. Later at Havana a planter fought the whole Navy for her and once again she moved—this time to San Francisco. Here a big oil man fell in love with her, and when she refused him, tried to kill her, but failed when her violinist took the bullet himself in his arm and prevented its striking her.

Changing her name to Rodeo West, Mamie moves on to New York where she becomes so famous that she is the acknowledged empress of the night clubs.

To give away the plot would not be fair. Suffice it to say that Rodeo is not a bad girl. Yet not until the end does she find love, and then in the strangest of all places.

Don't miss "The Painted Angel." It is a picture that carries a direct and staggering appeal—a picture that is unforgettable in its wide, brilliant scope and fiery in its emotional activity.

Today for the last time the Palace presents its big double feature bill including "Lucky in Love," and "Headlines." The first of these stars Morton Downey, the golden voiced tenor, who in the second, a story of the swift tempo of metropolitan newspaper life, are cast Grant Withers, Marion Nixon and Pauline Garon.

Speaker For The "Wets."

Concerning John Sergeant Wise, Jr., who will take the side of the "wets" in the debate to be held at the community meeting on Sunday evening in the Central Baptist church, the following information is given in "Who's Who." "He was born in Virginia, graduated from Virginia iltary institute and the New York Law school and he served as first lieutenant, U. S. 4th Vols. Infantry in Cuba and the army of occupation, 1898-99." He is now a practicing lawyer in New York. Dr. Albert Levitt as a member of the bar of Connecticut, the District of Columbia and of the bar of the United States supreme court is a well trained opponent to represent the "drys." The music of the evening will be in charge of Frederick J. Maples. Mrs. Eugene Jones of Groton, is the soprano soloist. Rev. Joseph Cooper will preside at the meeting, and Mayor the Hon. Lee Roy Robbins, will preside at the debate. The time is 7:45 o'clock. There will be no admission charge.

GREENEVILLE

THANKSGIVING BURNING OF BARRELS HELD

The Greeneville youth held their annual Thanksgiving barrel-burning Thursday evening. This is an old custom and each section of Greeneville had their barrel gangs, who were rivals in securing fuel for the fires.

The Fifth street and Durfe street gangs had the most barrels with four strings, each pole averaging about twenty barrels, while the Second street and North Main street clans had their share of barrels stowed away.

The largest crowd of spectators were drawn to the fires at Seventh and North Main streets. The North Main street gang burned their barrels at the lot which is known as the Old Garden, between Ninth and Tenth streets, on North Main street.

Engine company No. 2 received an oral call and made a run to a lot near St. Mary's convent at 7:03 p. m., where boys were burning barrels, but upon arrival of the firemen no danger was found to exist.

Raymond Higgins, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., is spending a few days with his aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gay, of Eleventh street.

H Club Meeting Held

Monday evening the Greeneville H club held their weekly meeting in their clubrooms on Fourth street with regular business being transacted, and the president, Wallace Atterbury, presiding. The committee in charge of a ladies' night, to be held in the near future, made a report of progress.

Mass Of Thanksgiving

A special mass for thanksgiving was offered at St. Mary's Memorial church at 7:30 o'clock, celebrated by the pastor, Rev. William A. Keefe. A large number of the parishioners approached the altar rail for holy communion.

Miss Helen Sutthill, a student of Boston university, is spending the holiday recess at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Sutthill, of Central avenue.

Maurice Downing, of New York city, spent Thanksgiving day with Mr. and Mrs. James Delaney of Fifth street.

Mr. and Mrs Harry Delaney, of Providence, spent the holiday as guests of Mr. Delaney's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Delaney, of Eighth street.

Miss Catherine Bergon, of Fifth street, spent the Thanksgiving holiday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Bergon, at Waterbury.

FORD MUSEUM ACQUIRES OLD ROCKVILLE CARRIAGES

Henry Ford has purchased three carriages from Rockville which will be added to his museum at Dearborn, Mich. He has purchased from Colonel Francis T. Maxwell the old country brougham which was used for many years by the Maxwell estate on North Park street. He has purchased from William Maxwell a spider phaeton and another old carriage which were at the Maxwell estate on Union street. All three carriages have been shipped, and are in good condition.

MYSTIC RESIDENT CHARGED WITH DRIVING WHILE DRUNK

When Fabian Moyer, 26, of Mystic, was operating his automobile in Baltic and ran it into the gutter there Thursday afternoon, he was arrested by Constable Filligar on the charge of operating while under the influence of liquor. He was brought to police headquarters here and was locked up in default of securing bonds.

The Committee in charge of the Second Annual Dance given by R. E. Hourigan Post, No. 594, V. F. W., wish to thank the public for their generous patronage, and also wish to thank all those who assisted in making the event a success.

NORTH FRANKLIN GIRL, STATE PRIZE WINNER, STARTS ON CHICAGO TRIP

Frances Lamb of North Franklin, who was recently selected from among Connecticut 4-H Club girls to attend the eighth national 4-H club congress at Chicago, leaves today (Friday) and will return December 4. This trip is donated by Montgomery Ward company of Chicago to the 4-H club girl doing the most outstanding club work in Connecticut for whom all expenses are paid.

County Club Agent R. W. Whaples said that Miss Lamb, who is 17 years of age, has been a club member for the past four years. During this time she has constantly been striving to live up to the 4-H Club motto—"To Make the Best Better."

In the following she tells her own story of her 4-H club work:

"It was in the year of 1925, when I first became enthralled with the spirit of the 4-H. It all happened after a number of local girls returned from our Connecticut state short course, where they had heard and seen much of the work done by 4-H members. Immediately we decided that we should have a club, and so in our small town of Franklin we gathered together 28 girls ranging from the ages of 12 and 18. So thrilled that we were to be members of a nationally known club, we asked Miss Trabue, our assistant state leader, to meet with us to help us to properly organize our club. At this meeting we decided to take up a clothing project, and started work on a program which was to be finished thatyear in order to receive a state charter and our individual certificates.

"Three years slipped by, and we had become well known throughout the state as 'The Franklin Thimble Wearers.' At the beginning of our third year, we were without a leader for about four months, but because we wished a state seal, we busied ourselves in finding someone who was capable of the position.

"As a delegate from our club, I attended the State Club Round-Up at our state capitol at Hartford. It was at this meeting, of about 500 delegates from various clubs from all over the state, that I decided to win one of the many trips offered to the boys and girls in club work.

"In November, 1928, when it came time for re-organization, only about eight of our original 28 returned. At this first meeting, we elected our officers, and I was made treasurer for the coming year. During the year, three girls dropped out and the remaining five girls carried on a very successful year. It was during this year that luck began to come my way.

"I was asked to be a member of our demonstration team because I had never been on one before. My partner and I decided to demonstrate the 'Judging at Club Meetings.' We worked it out and found it to be quite successful for we won in our county contest and were able to compete in the state fair contest.

"I never realized the value of exhibiting our articles at fairs until last year when all the fairs were over and my sister received several sums of money as prize awards. This year I sent five articles to two different fairs and I received three first places and two seconds at one fair, and two firsts and three seconds at the other. The total sum of the prizes was about five dollars.

"In July of this year ten girls got together and we organized a canning club. When the officers were elected, at our first meeting, I was elected vice president. We had just two months to complete our season's work, but just the same we set our goal for 1000 jars and made it, much to everyone's surprise. My sister and I worked up a demonstration on "The Canning of Peaches," and succeeded in winning the state championship. Besides winning the honor, we received $20 which will be used to pay our way to state short course next year. While at state fair, we entered a canning judging contest and I ranked first, thus becoming the state champion canning judge. Along with the title, I received five dollars which will be used for the same purpose as that won for the demonstration. We may not always have the money, but we can always keep our blue ribbon prizes. One quart of peaches that my sister and I did went to Chicago to be exhibited. At the state fair I exhibited five varieties of canned goods and received one blue ribbon and a number of fifth places. These goods also went to two other fairs and I received about eight dollars in cash prizes.

"Then in September, I received a big surprise, that I had been chosen as one of the six girls to represent Connecticut at "Camp Vail" held at the Eastern States' Exposition at Springfield, Mass. While there I placed as one of the superior clothing judges and received a blue ribbon superior reward.

"November first, of this year, our New London county held a Round-Up and at this meeting I received a special medal for my work done during the year. The next day we organized another club in our town. This one happened to be a cooking club and we decided to take up the milk project during the coming year. At our first meeting, we elected officers and I was elected vice president.

"The fifteenth of this month, the 12 very active clubs of the town of Franklin held their achievement night together. To close the program our clothing club held a candle light service of which I was in charge. I think our club was the first in the state, to hold a ceremony of this kind. I will have to admit that it was very successfully carried out.

"And so you will understand why I have said that luck began to come my way during my fourth year of club work. To complete this windfall of wonderful luck I was officially informed over the radio that I had been chosen as the winner of the Montgomery Ward prize."

EXPECT 1,000 DELEGATES FOR RELIGIOUS COUNCIL

More than 1,000 leaders of religious education in the Protestant churches of the state are expected to attend the annual meeting of the Connecicut Council of Religious Education which will be held in Hartford, Dec. 7, at the Center Congregational church.

They will represent the 950 churches which are affiliated with the council. Each church is entitled to send four official delegates to the annual convention, but anyone may attend as a visitor.

The convention will last only one day this year. In other years the sessions occupied three days. Important changes in the constitution and the election of officers will be two principal items of business before the convention.

Rev. Theodore A. Greene, pastor of the First Congregational church, New Britain, president of the council, will preside. The theme of the convention will be, "Character Education in the Christian Church." A forum will follow each address.

Rev. Joseph M. Artman, secretary of the Religious Education association, Chicago, will deliver the opening address on the subject, "What is Christian Character?"

The afternoon session will be opened with an address by Dean Luther A. Weigle of the Yale Divinity school, on "The Process of Christian Education." Rev. John W. Suter, Jr., of the department of religious education, National council, Protestant Episcopal church in the United States of America, New York, will then speak on "Worship in Character Education." This will be followed by worship and communion, to be led by Rev. Dr. Charles S. Mills, acting minister of Center Congregational church, and Rev. Dr. David A. Pitt, pastor of the Central Baptist church, Norwich.

The annual banquet will be served at 6:30 when Dr. Hugh S. Magill, general secretary of the International Council of Religious Education, Chicago, will speak on "We Believe in Christian Education." Mr. Artman and Dr. Magill will also address the evening session, the former on "The Greatest Enterprise in the World" and the latter on "The Greatest Enterprise in the Community."

CLAIMS $10,000 DAMAGES FOR AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENT

Suit for $10,000 damages has been brought against Anthony Vitiello of Point Pleasant beach, New Jersey, and Clark F. Hartley, of Bridgeport, by Mrs. Lucy M. Davenport, widow of Henry B. Davenport, of East Great Plain, on a claim for injuries received in an automobile accident on Oct. 18, 1929, on the Boston post road in the town of Bradford.

It is claimed in her suit that she sustained concussion of the brain and numerous bruises about the body, when the New Jersey man's car cut out of a line of traffic in front of the machine in which Mrs. Davenport was riding, causing her machine to collide with Hartley's. The accident happened about 7:45 in the evening when her automobile was driven by her agent, servant or employe.

The suit is returnable in the superior court in December.

Withdrawal Without Costs

Withdrawal without costs from the docket of the superior court has been filed with Clerk John H. Walker in the $5,000 damage suit brought by Margaret Guerin of that city, against Abe Davidson, of New London, doing business as the Union Cab Co. On Oct. 13, 1928, the plaintiff claims that she was injured in a taxicab owned by the defendant.

259 WAR VETERANS FILL FITCH'S SOLDIERS' HOME

Unemployment is seen as one of the factors responsible for the unprecedented increase at Fitch's Home for the Soldiers at Noroton which has reached a point unforseen at the time the last budget was made up, resulting in the probability that the executive committee will find it necessary to appear before the board of finance and control for authority to transfer funds in order to carry on.

Conditions were announced at the meeting of the committee. The future policy governing the admission of veterans was discussed at some length. The resident population is now 259, compared with 110 a year ago, and in addition many veterans have been picked up through various sources, making a present total of 359. The capacity of the home is 400.

Because of unemployment and other circumstances the capacity will be reached in two or three months, it was thought. All but twelve beds now are filled, and the supply of uniforms is depleted, though this condition will be remedied.

The new service building representing a total outlay of $90,000 will be completed and turned over to the institution for use within two weeks, the building itself being the result of a $70,000 appropriation and the laundry machinery and other equipment representing $20,000.

PRESIDENT TRUMBULL SHOWS CONFIDENCE IN BUSINESS

President Henry Trumbull, of the Connecticut chamber of commerce, calls upon business men and manufacturers of the state to show their confidence in the underlying stability of business conditions in a statement issued to the members of the chamber.

In his statement he says:

Certain views that I hold with respect to the present business situation and the part that members of the Connecticut chamber of commerce can play in maintaining a high level of activity and prosperity in this state may be, I believe, most properly expressed at this time. There is most naturally at this time so much discussion as to the effect of the recent market collapse upon business that a dispassionate and logical survey of fundamental facts with respect to our actual situation should be considered.

To maintain that the tremendous losses recently sustained in the market are paper losses only and that they will not be felt by those who have sustained them, would be silly, because without question the inclination to buy by those who have sustained such losses and in many, many cases their ability to buy will be definitely impaired.

That the business men and particularly the industrial people can, however, offset this impairment to the great and general good of our state, is my firm belief.

Most of our underlying factors are sound and encouraging. These should give base for vigorous and active policies that will surely make for equilibrium and permit us to go forward on an acceptable level of prosperity. We know already, for instance, that loans to brokers by members of the federal reserve system have already been reduced by more than a billion dollars. There is just as much money in the country today as ever. Great volumes are being released from speculative channels to channels making for sound business activities. Business staggers and then halts when excesses have been indulged in; when stocks of goods have become too great and when buying from producers and distributors is curtailed. There is no excess of manufactured goods at the present time—inventories and stocks are conservative and close and the money market is easy.

The volume of orders now flowing to Connecticut manufacturers is normal notwithstanding all that has happened. The one thing that everybody in Connecticut would like to see happen now is to have business of every sort in this state go forward steadily and actively. I believe that such an outcome can be accomplished. Advertising should not be curtailed. Sales programs should be pushed vigorously. Plant and equipment programs should go forward uninterruptedly. Those whose plants or equipment need reshaping, overhauling or enlargement should undertake the work now. Curtailed spending at this time will reflect itself immediately in curtailed manufacturing and in turn curtailed employment would of course result in an immediate decline in wage disbursements.

I urge, therefore, that we continue to buy and to spend and to advertise as usual to the end that business may go forward without interruption.

SHARON MAN WINNER IN 4-H EGG-LAYING CONTEST

STORRS, Nov. 28.—(AP)—Edward H. Kinsman, of Sharon, Litchfield county, has been declared the winner of the fifth Connecticut 4-H club egg-laying contest with the high record of 287 eggs per bird from the original 12 Rhode Island Reds which he entered in the competition.

This record, according to A. J. Brundage, state leader of 4-H clubs, betters by 56.7 eggs per bird the previous high mark. Kinsman has been awarded the Rhode Island Red cockerel offered by the Homestead farms, owned by E. J. and G. C. Morgan, of Newtown.

All flocks in the contest showed an increase in production over last year, and 18 of them averaged 200 eggs per bird or better. The contest was over a 12-month period.

The names of the successful producers whose flocks were higher in production than the standard of 162 eggs per bird were: Harold McDonald, Northford, 266.41; Rhoda Bartholomew, Torrington, 250.50; William Depeau, Stafford, 246.6; Vincent and Joseph Ruwet, Torrington, 242.43; Albert Scheidel, Collinsville, 241.34; Jack Herril, Suffield, 240.16; Lawrence Dick, Stratford, 239.50; Martin A. GROTON AMONG LEADERS IN PACKAGED FISH TRADE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—The report of the United States bureau of fisheries expresses great concern for the future supply of products in several parts of the country. Over three billions pound of fishery products amounting to $113,000,000 received by fishermen was the result of last year's harvest of fish.

Referring to the New England fishery production the report states that there was a large increase of landing of fish at Groton, Connecticut and a heavy demand for haddock fillets.

The packaged fish trade in New England now centers in Boston and Groton, is on a sounder basis and more modern methods used than ever before. The output of packaged fresh and frozen fish in New England increased preceptibly and the 1928 value was over $9,000,000.

New York, Boston and Groton carried off the palm in the landings of fresh fish.

Shell fish investigations are being continued. Referring to oyster culture the report states that Milford, Conn., and Onset, Mass., developed great effectiveness in the method of catching oyster seed on shells contained in wire bags planted at varying depths.

A final report of the biology of the New England smelt will soon be completed, with recommendations for the conservation of depleted fisheries.

SMITH AVENUE SHED DESTROYED BY FIRE

A small frame and metal shed, located off Smith avenue and owned by the Peck-McWilliams company, was destroyed by fire early Thursday evening. The department was notified of the blaze through an oral call, which came in at 9.03 o'clock, calling out Engine No. 2, Squad A, and Deputy Chief Dennis Brennan. The building was burned to the ground on the arrival of the fire apparatus and the burning embers were smothered with water from a 1½ inch line of hose.

VARIETY OF WEATHER FOR THANKSGIVING DAY

Thanksgiving day gave a variety of weather with typical New England changeableness. In the early part of the morning there was rain with a fairly thick fall of snow flakes. This began to clear off about 10 o'clock and by noon the sun was making some attempts to shine with a fair degree of success at times. As the afternoon wore on it was cloudy, there was a brisk wind and the temperature dropped until by dark it was down to the freezing point and held there for the rest of the night.

PUNCH BOARDS SEIZED IN GROTON AND NIANTIC

Continuing their drive to rid New London county of punch boards and other gambling devices, State Troopers John H. Smith and James Dygert of the Groton barracks Tuesday, seized boards which they found in stores operated by George Barker and Theodore Sullivan in Niantic, and Mrs. Mary Ordway in Center Groton. All three proprietors were arrested on charges of violating the gaming laws and the two Niantic men were held for trial in the East Lyme justice court, while Mrs. Ordway was ordered to appear Monday in the Groton town court.

Central Church Thanksgiving Social.

A Thanksgiving social is planned for the Central Baptist church this (Friday) evening beginning at 7.30 o'clock, at which Dr. and Mrs. J. F. Barton of Hartford are to be the guests of honor. Dr. Barton is one of the prominent laymen of Connecticut and is at the head of the Baptist laymen of the state.

The decorations are in charge of Harold S. Burt and Peleg H. Bromley. Music will be furnished by the choir; also violin solos by Miss Dorothy Stewart and Mrs. Courtland Whitney. Mrs. Henrietta Tefft and her committee will have charge of the refreshments, which will be served by Miss Mildred Cass and a group of the young people. Each guest will be asked to wear a name card of which Eldred Coles and his committee will have charge. Over 200 attendants are expected at the social which is for the entire church and congregation.

Makes Claim For $800 Damages

Frank Bros. Paper Co., of Springfield, Mass., has brought suit in the superior court against Shalett's Cleaning and Dyeing Co., of New London, claiming damages of $800, according to papers filed with Clerk John H. Walker.

Divorce Sought For Desertion

On the ground of desertion since June 1, 1925, Dorothy Metcalfe Atkinson of New London has brought suit for divorce from Arthur W. Atkinson of Niantic. They were married Sept. 6, 1919. The suit is returnable in the superior court in December.

Southern mills are now consuming more than one-fifth of all the cotton used in the world.

BOYS SUSTAIN OLD NORWICH CUSTOM WITH DIMINISHING BARREL FIRES

The annual barrel bonfires which for many years past have blazed forth in Norwich on Thanksgiving nights are rapidly dwindling in numbers. Not so many years ago huge stacks of barrels were set afire by the youth of Norwich as soon as the shades of night had fallen. There were, in those days, in all sections of the city and town, tall poles, on which the barrels, collected for weeks by boys ranging from 5 to 20 years of age, were strung and to which the torch was applied at nightfall.

Throughout the entire day the boys of all ages were busy carting barrels from secret hiding places to the open lots on which the poles had been erected. Others were as equally busy stringing the barrels as fast as they were brought forth from cellars and sheds in which they had been stored. Then, after night had fallen, the tall piles of barrels were touched off, and blazed to the heavens as tired boys and, in many instances, their parents, watched the work of many weeks turned into ashes and smoke within a half hour or less.

The barrel fires thus brought to a close the annual observance of Thanksgiving in Norwich. Today things are different. There are fewer barrels to steal, that is, wooden barrels. Many people now use galvanized iron barrels in which to deposit their ashes, cinders and household refuse. It is becoming more difficult, as the years roll on, for young hopefuls to secure the much-coveted barrels. Wooden and paper boxes, old mattresses, excelsior, and, in fact, anything inflammable, have replaced, in large part the flour, sugar and potato barrel collections of other days.

It was noticeable Thursday night that there were few Thanksgiving fires, compared with the numbers in years past. all Hill had its barrel bonfire, as usual. There was a good-sized bonfire near the New Haven railroad tracks in Greeneville, another at Fanning eadows, Norwich Town, one at the Falls, one or two small fires on Laurel Hill and a couple of bonfires at Thamesville. The annual barrel fire at the Norwich State hospital was lacking this year. In other years the Norwich State hospital was more or less famed for its Thanksgiving night fires.

WOODIN RESIGNS FROM RELIGIOUS COUNCIL

Wallace I. Woodin, for 18 years general secretary of the Connecticut Council of Religious Education, the offices of which are in Hartford, has resigned effective December 31. Selection of his successor will be made soon and will be announced at the annual meeting of the Connecticut council which will be held at the Center Congregational church in Hartford on December 7.

Mr. Woodin has not yet announced his future plans. He has been general secretary of the Connecticut council since January 1, 1912, and shares with William H. Hall, associate superintendent of the West Hartford public schools, the distinction of having served as general secretary longer than any other man in the 72 years of the organization's history, both Mr. Woodin and Mr. Hall having held the office 18 years.

Gas produced from smouldering wood was made to drive a motor truck in a test at Sonora, Cal., in the presence of army officers.

VOL. LXXI—No. 287 POPULATION 35,000 NORWICH, CONN., SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 30, 1929. TWELVE PAGES — 96 COLUMNS PRICE TWO CENTS

TO HASTEN $160,000,000 INCOME TAX REDUCTION

House and Senate Leaders Will Attempt to Get the Bill to President Hoover as Soon as Possible After Congress Convenes Next Week—Would Mean Cut of About $68,000,000 in Individual Income Tax Payment—Corporation Taxes Would Be Reduced Approximately $92,000,000.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—(AP)—Legislative action on the $160,000,000 program for reduction of taxes on 1929 incomes, will be expedited by house and senate leaders in an attempt to get it to President Hoover as soon as possible after congress convenes next week.

Chairman Hawley, of the house ways and means committee, predicted today that before the regular session is five days old the house will adopt the joint resolution, which will call for a flat one per cent cut on normal incomes of individuals and corporations.

Quick approval by the senate was forecast by Chairman Smoot, of the finance committee, who said he expected only one day would be required for that branch to complete action.

There has been no apparent disposition in either house seriously to oppose the program. Senator Borah, republican independent, of Idaho, has intimated, however, that there might be some questions asked with regard to whose incomes would be affected.

Given the legislative right of way in the house, the resolution will be introduced Monday by Hawley and be brought before the ways and means committee Wednesday morning for hearings. Hawley plans to seek a special rule to bring the measure up for consideration Thursday.

Individual income tax payers under the plan would receive a reduction of about $68,000,000, while the corporations taxes would be cut approximately $92,000,000. It applies to incomes of 1929, and affects the returns in the fiscal year of 1930.

THREE DEATHS CAUSED BY COLD IN NORTHWEST

CHICAGO, Nov. 29—(AP)—The icy breath of a premature winter blew down from the northwest today bringing bitter winds and snowstorms and attendant death and suffering.

At least three persons died as a result of the sudden zero snap that centered over the north-central states; another, with hands and legs frozen was thought to be dying in Clinton, Iowa, and numerous highway mishaps throughout the western states were attributed to the snow and ice.

Up in the Minnesota woods where the lowest temperatures in the country were recorded, fear was expressed for the safety of hunters unprepared for the severe cold. Farther north, near the cradle of winter, a 30-mile gale drove a blizzard over the Saskatchewan lakes where 50 fishermen were dashing north on a 50 mile trip. They had been gone three days.

Thief River Falls, Minn., glanced frosted window panes at thermometers that registered unofficially 36 degrees below zero, the equal of White River, Ont., which had the lowest official temperature on the weather map. It was 16 below at Duluth and 20 below at Winnipeg.

SIX MONTHS' SENTENCE FOR STAR WITNESS FOR STATE

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—(AP)—David Rockola, star witness for the state in the prosecution of six police captains and others charged with conspiracy to operate slot gambling machines, was sentenced to six months in jail today for contempt of court when for the third time he refused to testify.

Rockola, when called to the stand, stood upon his constitutional rights and refused to testify on the ground he might incriminate himself. The state dismissed a charge of conspiracy against him, but Rockola still refused to answer questions.

Finally, in a motion asking the court to hold Rockola for contempt of court if he did not testify, the state read a transcript of his testimony before the grand jury in which he told of paying bribes to police captains and politicians for the privilege of operating slot machines in their districts.

NEWSPAPER AD. CASE UP TO FED. TRADE COMMISSION

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—(AP)—Determination of whether national associations of advertising agencies and newspaper publishers have been engaged in unfair competition through an alleged conspiracy to compel advertisers to do business through selected agencies rested tonight with the federal trade commission.

The closing presentations on the matter, which has been studied by a commission examiner for some time, were made by Eugene W. Burr, attorney for the commission, and by counsel for the American Association of Advertising Agencies, the American Newspaper Publishers' association, the Southern Newspaper Publishers' association, the Six Point league of New York and the American Press association. Thereupon the commission took the case under advisement.

SEDATIVE WAS FATAL TO MRS. DOROTHY E. MARTY

FLORENCE, Italy, Nov. 29—(AP)—Mrs. Dorothy Easton Marty of New York, taking an overdose of a sedative in the shock which followed the sudden death of her young husband last night, die din Vesucci hospital today shortly before her father-in-law arrived to comfort her.

She was 22 years of age and her husband, Jemuel G. Marty, Jr., a native of Kansas City, Mo., was her elder by one year. They are survived by two young children, a girl 14 months old and a boy of two.

Just after the young couple had eaten their Thanksgiving dinner together yesterday Marty fell down a flight of stairs in a public ballroom and fractured his skull. He died a short time later and his wife collapsed. She was treated first at the hotel but when her condition became serious was taken to the same hospital where her husband had died.

MERGER OF ICE PLANTS IN SEVEN SOUTHERN STATES

NORFOLK, Va., Nov. 29—(AP)—With the announcement here today of the acquisition of the Atlantic Ice and Coal company of Atlanta, Ga., it was learned from an authoritative source of a merger of ice plants in seven southern states with resources totaling $24,000,000 headed by Fred W. Beasley, of Norfolk and Portsmouth.

The companies involved in the merger were given as the Southeastern Utilities corporation, operating plants in Virginia, North and South Carolina; Southern Virginia Ice Utilities company, controlling plants in Richmond, Norfolk, Petersburg and Newport News; Atlantic Ice and Coal company, plants in Georgia, Florida, Alabama and Tennessee.

TWO MEN INJURED IN TRAIN-TRUCK COLLLISION

PORTLAND, Conn., Nov. 29.—(AP)—Two men were injured, one critically, here today in a train-truck collision at the Air Line avenue crossing of the New aven railroad.

John Zywar, 47, is on the danger list at the Middlesex hospital, Middletown, with several fractured ribs and possible internal injuries. Jacob Rogers, 46, is at the same hospital with multiple body bruises and possible internal injuries, but his condition is not considered critical. Both live in Middletown.

Zywar, Rogers and the latter's 11 year old son, who escaped injury, were buried out of the truck when it crashed into a train of the type known as a "gas bug." George Mellon and Edward Daymon, both of New Haven, were the engineer and conductor, respectively, on the train.

The train, which operates between Middletown and the Berlin junction, was disabled and was replaced for the remainder of the day by one powered by steam.

The truck was headed for Middletown with a load of hay when the accident occurred.

BILL TO LIMIT EMPLOYMENT HOURS OF YOUNG PERSONS

LONDON, Nov. 29—(AP)—In what he called "sweet revenge" for his own boyhood, the Rev. R. Sorensen, labor M. P., today move the second reading in the house of a bill limiting the hours of employment of young persons.

Within its scope enter alike the ill-clad newsboy of the streets, the page boy glorying in his uniform of brass buttons, and the bespangled child of the circus. Mr. Sorensen described boys and girls employed in moving picture theatres as "graduating from Hollywood university with first class

He told how he himself had worked 12 hours a day as a messenger and had Honors in vulgarity."

suffered from the effects of it. He said that it was to remove such shadows from other boys that he submitted the bill.

One objection raised to the bill was that an army of inspectors would be required to enforce it.

ADEQUATE FUNDS FOR HOME FOR SOLDIERS

STAMFORD, Nov. 29—(AP)—Although the population of Fitch's home for soldiers at Noroton has increased to 259 as compare dwith the 110 veterans of three wars under care there last year, Col. W. H. Welch, the commandant, expressed the belief today that sufficient funds were at his disposal for adequate maintenance of them during the present biennium.

Commenting on the reported "rigid economy" policy that would have to be instituted because of the increase, the colonel, himself a veteran of several campaigns in 1917 and 1918, declared further that such a plan was not needed and not contemplated by him.

His views were confirmed by a telephone conversation with Major Raymond F.

PHILA. PHILANTHROPIST COMMITTED SUICIDE

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29.—(AP)—John B. Sidebottom, prominent manufacturer and philanthropist, committed suicide at his home here yesterday, it became known tonight. He shot himself through the head in his bathroom while preparations for a Thanksgiving dinner and a family reunion were under way downstairs.

No definite motive could be ascertained, but members of his family said he had been in poor health for some time.

Mr. Sidebottom, 53, was head of the firm of John B. Sidebottom, Inc., one of the country's largest manufacturers of tapes and bindings.

His brother was found dead in his garage on November 17 from carbon monoxide fumes.

TWO ALLEGED ROBBERS ARRESTED IN BUFFALO

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 29.—(AP)—Clinton Duke, 30 years old, alleged leader of the seven bandits who held up and robbed guests at a society dinner in the home of Edward L. Carson at ryder, N. Y., of $250,000 in jewelry on November 14 and Theodore Rozacki, another alleged participant in the robbery, are under arrest here, it was revealed tonight.

SUSPENDED SENTENCE FOR WOMAN LIQUOR LAW VIOLATOR

MUNCIE, Ind., Nov. 29.—(AP)—Convicted of liquor law violation on information supplied by neighbors who listened in on her party telephone, Mrs. Grace Hopping today received a suspended six months sentence to the Indiana women's prison.

Her husband, Lewis Hopping, is serving a term at the state penal farm because liquor was found in his home when it was raided several weeks ago.

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

TOKYO, Nov. 29.—(AP)—The vernacular papers here today assert the Japanese government is unwilling to assent to the American proposal of some form of international action in the Chinese-Soviet situation.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—(AP)—The Prince of Wales and George Bernard Shaw divided interest with Prime Carnera, the seven-foot Italian heavyweight boxer, at a ring show conducted under amateur rules for charity. A fashionable crowd of spectators was on hand.

VATICAN CITY, Nov. 29.—(AP)—The Osservatore Romano suggests that prayers for the safety and prosperity of Italians outside the motherland should be offered up in all the churches of Italy next Sunday, on "The day of the emigrants."

COMMANDER BYRD FLEW OVER SOUTH POLE IN SAFETY

NEW YORK, Nov. 29—(AP)—The New York Times, the St. Louis Post-dispatch and newspapers affiliated with them in publishing reports from Commander Richard E. Byrd's expedition, announce that Commander Byrd has safely returned to his base, Little America, after a successful flight across the South Pole in which he surveyed much adjacent territory.

The flight was without mishap and everything worked well.

(By The Associated Press)

Commander Byrd's flight across the South Pole has made him the first man in history to fly across both of the earth's poles.

He was the third man to reach the South Pole.

Commander Byrd's expedition reached the Antarctic in December of last year. After various reconnaissance flights from his base, he and his party established winter quarters on the ice barrier about the Antarctic continent. Only recently, with the coming of spring in that frozen territory, activity was resumed.

HOLD-UP SUSPECT TAKEN NEAR NEW ORLEANS

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 29.—(AP)—By trailing footsteps in the sand for five miles near here today detectives captured John Arnold, 44, as a suspect in the $15,000 holdup of the Algiers branch of the Canal Bank and Trust company Wednesday. They recovered from a farmhouse $7,740. The officers set out again to round up other suspects. Arnold said he came here from Boston.

The footprints led from an automobile used by the bandits and abandoned about 12 miles from the farmhouse. The trail led through the sand for a distance, then was lost and taken up again to lead the officers to the house.

The farm home belonged to Joseph Marcella. He told police that on the afternoon of the robbery two men came to his home and gave him three pistols to keep. He said the men told him they would "give him some money" on their return to keep quiet.

Arnold was found in the hallway of the house with two loaded revolvers, the officers said. He was overpowered.

MURDEROUS LOVE PACT ALLEGED IN CONFESSION

DURANT, Okla., Nov. 29.—(AP)—A love pact in which the mother of three and the father of eight children agreed to kill their spouses, was alleged in a confession made to county authorities here today by Mrs. Ila Hughes. A murder charge was filed immediately after the confession against the woman in connection with the killing of her husband, Will Hughes, last Tuesday night.

Mrs. Hughes, 35, named as her alleged accomplice, A. J. Eastep, 38, who lived near her husband's farm in Bryan county, asserting that upon a prearranged signal she lured her husband to a barn where Eastep clubbed him to death with a motor car spring. Eastep, who is held at the state prison at McAlester, also has been charged with murder.

The statement declared also that Eastep had informed her in October that he would poison his wife and that Mrs. Eastep died three days later.

County authorities have ordered the woman's body to be disinterred and the viscera examined.

Officers said Hughes carried $1,500 life insurance and that Eastep had collected $1,000 insurance which he had taken out on his wife's life.

CHARGES THAT HUSBAND IS FOUR TIMES A BIGAMIST

NENO, Nev., Nov. 29.—(AP)—Alleging that her husband, James Millidge Pitts, now somewhere in Georgia is four times a bigamist, Mrs. Mollie Viola Pitts, filed suit for divorce here today.

Mrs. Pitts set forth in her complaint that she married Pitts in Clinton, S. C., on May 5, 1909, and that she is his first and legitimate wife. They have one daughter. She alleges that she left her husband in 1919, when he married another woman and that since that time Pitts had wed three other women.

Pitts, the complaint alleges, is now being sued in Georgia for divorce by his third bigamous wife and is at liberty under bond for the support of the second bigamous wife and three children.

ENTRUSTED TO FORM NEW BELGIAN CABINET

BRUSSELS, Nov. 29.—(AP)—Former Premier Henri Jaspar today was entrusted by King Albert with the task of forming a new cabinet to replace his government which resigned a few days ago because of controversy over the use of the Flemish and French languages at the University of Ghent.

No definite solution of the political crisis is expected before next week.

M. Jaspar is a member of the Catholic party which formed a coalition with the liberals in the last government.

DECREASE IN LOANS TO BROKERS AND DEALERS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—(AP)—Loans to brokers and dealers held by New York Federal Reserve member banks for the week ending Nov. 27, were announced by the Federal Reserve board today as $3,450,000,000, representing a decrease of $137,000,000 as compared with the preceding week.

Former Gov. Al Smith Heads County Trust

Has Been Elected Chairman of Board of Directors and Vested With Power of President.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—(AP)—Former Governor Alfred E. Smith today was elected chairman of the board of directors of the County Trust Co. The former governor said he was vested with power of president of the company and eventually will head the trust company. He succeeds the late James J. Riordan, who recently committed suicide.

Mr. Smith has been a director of the County Trust since his retirement from the governorship last January. The announcement of his selection as chairman said he will now take an active part in the management of the bank's affairs.

Since Mr. Riordan's death, William H. English, one of the directors, has been acting president and John J. Raskob has been acting chairman of the board of directors.

Both of these are succeeded by Mr. Smith, who, by a resolution of the board, is vested with full powers of the president.

Mr. Smith said the condition of the bank was excellent and that since Nov. 8 when Mr. Riordan's death was announced, the bank's deposits have increased.

China And Russia Agree To Negotiate

To Settle Peaceably the Crisis in Manchuria Which Had Resulted in Armed Conflict.

(By The Associated Press.)

Despite earlier emphatic denials by the Nanking government, dispatches from several sources late Friday asserted that the nationalists government of China had agreed with Russia to negotiate directly to settle peaceably the crisis in Manchuria which had resulted in armed conflict.

From Geneva, Mukden, Tokyo and Shanghai came categorical reports that the nationalist government had followed the lead of its Manchurian territory in making an independent truce with the Soviet government, and had consented to negotiate with Russia to end the controversy over control and operation of the Chinese Eastern railway, the cause of the dissension.

Military activities in Manchuria by Russian forces that forced this decision to arbitrate, apparently had dwindled to raiding attacks by Soviet bombing planes upon western Manchuria communities. Russian forces were reported withdrawing from Manchuria.

China and Russia, having initiated movements for peace, said a Paris dispatch, the United States, France and other great powers who had agreed to joint action to pacify the situation by dispatching a note to Moscow, refrained from communicatin gtheir views to Russia.

With developments toward peace on her extreme northern border, China's nationalist government gave further attention to quelling the civil war in her southern provinces of Kwangtung and Kwangsi, which has threatened the city of Canton. Nationalist planes dropped bombs upon rebel troops along the Kwngsi border and it was reported that President Chiang Kai-Shek planned to go from Nanking to Canton to take personel command of his troops, of whom 70,000 were reported available.

Central China bandits who took advantage of disturbed conditions to kidnap Mrs. Oscar Hellsetad, an American missionary from her home at Sinyen, Honan province, Thursday, released her after a few hours. The Rev. Ulrich Kreutzen of Calumet, Mich., who was abducted from the Franciscan mission at Wuchang early this month, was still held by bandits who demanded $3,000 gold ransom.

They Knew What They Wanted

Several years ago a play with this title was popular. It depicted the solution of the problem of domestic happiness because the members of a household had the good fortune to know what they wanted.

Today housewives everywhere are solving the problems of housekeeping—simply, easily, happily—by knowing what they want before they start out to buy. It's a matter of foresight and forethought.

They read the advertisements—regularly, thoroughly! They save hours of shopping, they know qualities, values, merchandise and they waste no time or money in investigating "unknowns and "just-as-goods."

Advertised goods are reliable. Read The Bulletin's advertisements every day. Know what you want before you spend a cent.

Reading the advertisements is an important part of successfully managing a home.

GERMAN FOREIGN OFFICE SUPPORTS THE YOUNG PLAN

Dr. Julius Cortius, New Foreign Minister, in His First Speech in the Reichstag Aggressively Opposed Passage of the So-Called "Law Against Enslavement of the German People"—Declared That the Recent Plebiscite Against the Young Plan Was an Attack on the Authority of the State—That the Whole Plebiscite Demand is Based on Obvious Dishonesty.

BERLIN, Nov. 29—(AP)—Surprising even his friends by his aggressiveness, Dr. Julius Curtius, Germany's new foreign minister, threw the weight of the German government behind the Young plan today in his first speech to the Reichstag since he succeeded the late Gustav Stresemann.

Dr. Curtius, affirming that the Young plan was a great improvement over the Dawes plan, opposed on behalf of the cabinet the passage of the so-called "law against the enslavement of the German people," which came up for its first reading today.

He asked the Reichstag to reject the proposed law, which was introduced by the Nationalists, and declared that the recent plebiscite against the Young plan wa san attack on the authority of the state.

After reviewing the efforts of post-revolutionary cabinets to explain to the world that Germany was not alone guilty of the war, he said that the nationalist proposed for renouncing the German confession of guilt "attempts to ram open doors, and is based upon senseless assertions that Germany's foreign policy has been hitherto built on the recognition of her guilt in the war.

"The whole plebiscite demand is based on obvious dishonesty."

Dr. Curtius accused the nationalists of rousing false hones in the German people "as though international treaties could be abrogated and reparations burdens shaken off by a plebiscite.

"It is nonsense to determine by a plebiscite that a people doesn't want to pay. Of course it doesn't want to pay. The only question is whether it must pay or not. A plebiscite on this question is sheer nonsense."

Dr. Curtius played on what he called the demagogy of Alfred Hugenburg and his nationalist followers, asking Hugenburg ten questions about how German's foreign political situation would be improved by the passage of the law.

One question read:

"You feel certain that upon Germany's declining to accept the Young plan the people of the United States will join you in recognizing that the only road toward real pacification of the world is wiping out the war debts. Whence do you gain this certainty? Can it be that your letter last spring made the United States willing to cancel the debts?"

There was loud laughter at this reference to the vain appeal of the nationalists for American support last march.

Although admitting that he was obliged to make certain reservations for the present, Dr. Curtius openly endorsed the Young plan.

"In comparison with the Dawes plan, the Young plan on a new political basis is to bring an important amelioration of the burdens on Germany. German economy and the German people will be benefited by it."

The foreign minister briefly summed up these advantages to Germany. He said that the plan removed the influence of foreign countries in German economy and administration, especially in the directorates of the Reichsbank and the federal railways. The reparations commission and the agent general for reparations would disappear, and the bank for international settlements will not be able to interfere in German affairs. The Rhineland would be completely liberated.

PATENTS FILED ON 4,612,722 ACRES OF PUBLIC DOMAIN

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—(AP)—The day of the pioneering homesteader still is here.

Citizens of the United States filed patents on 4,612,722 acres of public domain during 1929.

The general land office revealed in its annual report today over 30,000 persons filed claims on land during the year in addition the organization collected over $6,000,000 accruing to the government from public land activities.

Total receipts under the mineral leasing act, which included oil lands, aggregated $8,864,878.

Among the other outstanding accomplishments of the general land office during the year, was the cancellation of 2,906 permits to prospect for oil under the Hoover oil conservation program. Leases resulting from discovery of oil or coal on the public domain were granted to 145 persons.

CASEY AND BINGHAM DEATHS WERE CAUSED BY MONOXIDE

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 29.—(AP)—Supt. of Detectives James J. Casey and Mrs. Dora Bingham, of Viking street, died from the effects of carbon monoxide poisoning in the summer camp of Supt. Casey, at Brooks pond, Spencer, early Sunday morning.

This was the announcement of Attorney Charles B. Rugg late this afternoon after an all day investigation into the tragedy which included conferences with Medical Examiner Timothy Leary, of Boston, and associate Medical Examiner Ernest L. Hunt. Officials went to the Brooks pond camp this morning, made a minute examination of the furnace there.

Dr. Leary said that the analysis disclosed beyond all doubts that the blood of Casey and the woman carried carbon monoxide.

The investigation as far as he is concerned is closed, Mr. Rugg said.

BODIES OF SOLDIERS ARRIVE FROM SIBERIA

WILLIMANTIC

WILLIMANTIC READY FOR CITY ELECTION MONDAY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 29—The selection of half a hundred workers at the polls had been completed today in preparation for the biennial city election next Monday. The election officials are to meet with Andrew P. Gunn of Hartford in the old town hall on Church street Saturday evening to receive final instructions as to recording the vote on the voting machines and filing of returns. The machines will then be sealed in the presence of committees from both parties.

City Clerk Arthur L. Clark who is custodian of the machines has arranged to have three machines in use in the second ward and two each in the remaining three wards of the city. There is a law forbidding the use of the machines for demonstration purposes later than two days before election. A model machine owned by the democratic city committee will be set up in the second ward polling place, however, Saturday from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.

The voting places and officials of each follow: First ward, lobby of town building at High street entrance. Moderator, George E. Gifford; deputy registrars, Wilbert F. Jacobs, Orville H Loveland; challengers, Albert F. Young, Dennis S. Shea; checker, William V. Palmer, Sr.; machine tenders, Louis Dansereau, William Piche and Patrick McSweeney.

Second ward, old town building on Church street. Moderator, John J. Sullivan; deputy registrars, James J. Casey, Attorney John B. Harvey; challengers, Frank M. Lincoln, Francis Boucher; checkers, Romeo Benoit, Lewye G. Gerry; machine tenders, Joseph Lefebvre, H. O. Eccleston, Clarence A. Bowen.

Third ward, voting booth at corner of Milk and Ives street. Moderator, L. Vincent Sweeney; deputy registrars, James Casey, Roy Keables; challengers, Anthony Meehan, G. Leroy Howlett; checkers, James F. Twomey, Jr., Russell A. Andrews; machine tenders, Thomas Perreault, William Peloquin, Arthur Cartier, Charles H. Wilson.

Fourth ward, voting booth at 99 Pleasant street. Moderator, Harold C. Wiggins; deputy registrars, William S. Johnston, John Stoughton; challengers, Amos E. Lewis, Thomas Pickett; checkers, Homer M. Harrington, Marie Simmons; machine tenders, Edward F. Ellsworth, Joseph P. Cotter, Milton Smith and O. Bachand.

Both parties will maintain headquarters in the vicinity of the various voting places. It is indicated that these quarters will be hives of activities as workers of both parties hustle about getting voters to the polls. It is considered probable that much of this work will be necessary owing to a lethargic interest in the election. There are 5,343 names on the voting list: 1,106 in the first ward; 2,184 in the second; 860 in the third and 1,193 in the fourth. There were 130 of these names placed on the list this month.

The polls are to be open from 6 a. m. to 4 p. m. the final returns will probably be announced at the second ward voting place about three hours later. The meeting will then adjourn until Tuesday at 2 o'clock in the town hall to receive the reports of city officers and act on the appropriations contained in the budget.

As they go to the polls this year the voters will have an opportunity of voting yes or no on a referendum providing for an increase of from $500 to $1,000 per year in the salary of the mayor and fixing a salary of $300 annually for each of the seven aldermen. The latter officials have not received compensation in the past. The vote is to ratify an act amending the charter of the city of Willimantic, concerning salaries of city officials and known as No. 168 of Special Acts of Connecticut, 1927. Two levers with arrows will point to figures, lever No. 5 to be pulled if the choice is yes and No. 6 if no.

Walter R. Kline, republican and John Reilly, democrat, candidate for mayor and whose biographies were published in Friday's issue of The Bulletin, are, as previously stated, veterans in political campaigning.

Candidate King's running mates, Cyril A. Lamoureux and William E. Webber, candidates for aldermen-at-large are also veterans. Alderman Lamoureux is one of the three present aldermen-at-large and has filled former city and town offices with much credit. Alderman Webber is dean of the board, now completing six terms or 12 years as a member of the common council. He served one term as alderman of the first ward, one of the second ward and four terms as alderman-at-large. He is president of the board and has held practically all of the more important council chairmanships during his tenure of office. He also served as city tax collector one year.

James E. Gaviran, democratic candidate for senior alderman-at-large has been in the employ of the New Haven railroad for some 20 years. Herbert I. Sanderson, candidate for junior alderman-at-large on the democratic ticket is a native son of the city. He was a candidate for alderman of the first ward two years ago.

There is every evidence that the battle of ballots will be concentrated in the "sector" of the city clerkship and treasurership. Arthur L. Clark, republican candidate for re-election was swept into office by a large majority two years ago, running ahead of the ticket to be the first republican city clerk to be elected in 27 years. He will have as an opponent this year, Roderick G. Dion, a native young man who is making his first try at the political game. Ralph J. Lussier, republican incumbent of the office of city sheriff is seeking re-election. His opponent is William E. Guilford, another newcomer in the political field.

The republican candidates for city assessors are Gerard E. Loiselle and Charles R. Cone while their respective opponents are Joseph F. Gaudreau and Mrs. Loretta V. Costello, democrats.

In the first ward Robert A. Harna, republican and Aime J. Boucher, both new to politics, are opposed for the office of alderman.

John P. Carlsen republican, served as alderman for two terms, from 1920 to 1926 and is now seeking election as alderman of the second ward. He is opposed by Walter J. Costello, democrat, making his first bid for office.

The third ward candidates are James M. Smith, former selectman and old-time politician, republican and Louis C. Vestard, democrat, whose first political office came to him recently in his appointment as special collector of personal taxes.

Eugene B. Lewis, republican and present incumbent is seeking re-election as alderman of the fourth ward and to this end he is receiving opposition from John T. Melkie, democrat.

FINED $50 AND COSTS FOR DRIVING WHILE INTOXICATED

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 29—An alternative sentence of accepting a ten-day jail sentence or a fine of $100 and costs, with $50 of the fine remitted, was imposed on Orin B. Whitehouse of Storrs, by Police Court Judge Frank H. Foss, this morning. Whitehouse was found guilty of driving a car while under the influence of an intoxicant and elected to pay the balance of the fine and costs. The arrest was made late Thursday night by Captain Frank W McLean and Officer Roderick Lariviere after a complaint had been received. The officers, using the department car, gave Whitehouse a chase that led from 1067 Main street to the junction of Main street and Mansfield avenue. The accused admitted having had a few drinks but denied being under the influence of liquor. The officers testified that the man was intoxicated when overtaken and that he was driving his car in a dangerous manner along the streets. Prosecuting Attorney Harry S. Gaucher recommended a remittance of one half of the fine to enable Whitehouse to settle rather than be forced to accept the jail sentence.

REV. A. H. ABBOTT TO BE LODGE OF SORROW SPEAKER

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 29—Rev. Alexander H. Abbott of Norwich will deliver the oration at the annual memorial exercises for the deceased members of Willimantic lodge, No. 1811, B. P. O. Elks to be held at the lodge room of the home on Pleasant street next Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. There are 60 names on the necrology list, ten of these members having been lost by death during the past year. The exercises are to be public, according to custom. There will be vocal solos and selections by the B. P. O. Elks band, C. N. C. Wheeler, bandmaster. The ritual service will be in charge of the officers of the lodge with Exalted Ruler Roy W. Downer, presiding. The committee of arrangements for the exercises comprises, Ralph H. Gibson, chairman, J. Z. Mathieu and Eugene E. Hickey.

LOUIS RUSSO BOUND OVER—IN JAIL UNDER $15,000 BONDS

(Special to The Bulletin

COLCHESTER, Nov. 29. — Louis Russo, of Newark, N. J., was arrested in that city last week by State Policeman William Elmer Mackenzie, of Groton barracks for the part he is alleged to have taken in the theft, June 15, of a new Dodge sport coupe from the Arthur H. Chapman garage, a 1926 Hudson brougham from the Hyman London garage and a large quantity of dress goods from the Cohen Bros. factory. Russo was brought before Justice of the Peace Charles F. Brown for a hearing at 3 p. m. Friday. The accused was bound over to the next term of the superior court to be held in Norwich in January. Pending the raising of $15,000 bonds he was taken back to the New London jail by Officer Mackenzie.

At the Congregational Junior C. E. meeting, Sunday at 4 p. m., the leader will be Miss Mamie Gyome. Miss Ruth E. Bertsch will lead the Y. P. C. E. meeting at 7:30.

Joseph Cherrie, of Colchester, was arrested about 2:30 o'clock Friday morning on a charge of intoxication and breach of the peace by Constable Harold Clark after Cherrie created a distrubance at the Solomon hotel on North Main street. He was brought before Justice of the Peace Charles F. Brown and Grand Juror Myron R. Abel in a session of the local court at 1 o'clock Friday afternoon and a fine of $1 and costs on each of the two charges was imposed, making a total of $15.45.

ST. ANDREW'S PARISH HOLDS SUCCESSFUL DANCE AND FAIR

There was a large attendance at the annual dance and entertainment held Wednesday and Thursday evenings in Grange hall for the benefit of St. Andrews' Catholic church. Among the entertainment features were a play effectively presented by the children of the parish, a monster midway, and dancing with music furnished by Brennan's ideal orchestra of Norwich. Among those in attendance were people from Norwich, Salem, Colchester, Hartford, New York city, and Fitchville with a big crowd coming from Naugatuck.

Sherman—Kilroy

Randall H. Sherman, oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin R. Sherman, of Colchester, and Miss Estella Mae Kilroy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Kilroy, of Yantic, were united in marriage at the Congregational parsonage in Bozrah at 11:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Rev. George H. Strouse, pastor of Bozrah Congregational church, performed the ceremony. There were no attendants. After the wedding a dinner was served at the home of the bride's parents, with only members of the two families in attendance. Mr. and Mrs. Sherman are on a wedding motor trip to Boston and upon their return Sunday next will reside at No. 36 Norwich avenue, Colchester. The groom has been employed for a number of years with the local repairs division of the state highway department.

John Wrinn, of Brooklyn, N. Y., former local resident, is visiting for several days with relatives on Windham avenue.

The special Thanksgiving services held in the Congregational church Thursday evening were well attended. Rev. Allan Carr, rector of St. Peter's church, Hebron, joined with Rev. Mr. Tompkins in making it a community service.

Elmer E. Foote is making a week end visit with Mr and Mrs. George M. Rogers and son, G. M. Rogers, Jr. in Litchfield Maine.

THE SABOURIN-TAYLOR WEDDING THANKSGIVING

Miss Laura Taylor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Phillias Taylor of Fisk avenue, and Wilfred Sabourin, son of Mrs. Louise Sabourin, of Willington avenue, were united in marriage Thursday morning at seven o'clock, in St. Edward's church. Rev. Felix O'Neill performed the ceremony and officiated at the nuptial mass. Miss Florence Taylor, a sister of the bride was bridesmaid, and Lionel Sabourin, brother of the groom was best man. The bride wore a gown of minuet blue transparent velvet with hat to match. She carried yellow chrysanthemums. The bridesmaid's gown was of independence blue crepe with hat of the same color and she carried an arm bouquet of bronze chrysanthemums. The bride's gift to her bridesmaid was a necklace of sapphires and the groom presented his best man a gold wrist watch. Following the ceremony a breakfast and reception was held at the home of the bride's parents for members of the two families. Late in the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Sabourin left for a wedding trip by motor. The bride wore a travelling dress of English green crepe and a platinum colored coat and hat. They will be at home in their newly furnished apartment on Main street after January first.

GOSHEN

The supper, entertainment and sale given under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid society was well patronized by people from Norwich, Lisbon and a large delegation from Lebanon. The Norwich C. E. union orchestra composed of five violins with piano accompaniment, was very much enjoyed as also were the many readings given by Frank Mell, of Lisbon. Over $80 was taken in during the evening.

The union Thanksgiving service, held with the local church Sunday evening was well attended notwithstanding the rainy evening. The pastor, Rev Howard Bushnell, conducted the service, Rev. Walter Vey, of Lebanon Center Congregational church led in prayer and the sermon was delivered by Rev. Andrew Littlefield of Lebanon Baptist church. The Junior choir came in the processional and the response.

Among those entertaining for Thanksgiving were Misses Annie and Clara Gillette, who had the Thomas and Jones families; the Lewis-Brewster and Faulkner families composed another group. Others numbered among family groups were the McCall and Hinckley families.

A number of New York people visited with local relatives over the holiday and week end.

Mr and Mrs. J. A. Randall were guests of Mrs. F. E. Hyde in Lisbon on Thanksgiving day

Rev. Howard Bushnell received a fine 18-pound turkey from the members of the choir which was enjoyed by a family party at his home in Occum.

Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Lathrop entertained a party of 12 at dinner. Among the number were Mr and Mrs Arthur W. Lathrop of Hartford and friends from Branford and Middletown.

Thirty-one years ago November 30, there was one of the worst snow storms of the winter, the high wind caused bad drifts and country roads were snow bound. The steamer Portland that put out in the storm from Boston foundered and all on board were lost.

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

Fifty years ago this week the Arcanum club held a large and most successful ball and reception at the Arcanum club. The same week a house on Smith avenue was burned to the ground as was also a dwelling on Bundy Hill, Lisbon. That year Thanksgiving day was warm and hazy. Outside of the usual church services there was no unusual observance of the day locally. Interesting extracts taken from the files of the Norwich Bulletin of November, 1879, are as follows:

Monday, Nov. 24, 1879—The Thames River oysters are said to be the best bivalves now in this market, excepting Saddle Rocks.

The fortnightly social of Christ church will be held at the residence of Mr. J. E. Goodwin, Washington, street, this evening.

The Laurel Hill reservoir supplied skating to the boys on Saturday.

There is considerable petty thieving going on in this neighborhood.

Speculation has struck kerosene and the capitalists are hoping to double the costs within a short time. Within a week it has advanced fifty per cent by the barrel.

Tuesday, Nov. 25, 1879—Mr. Nehemiah Upham died at his residence on Church street, Sunday afternoon, after an illness of some four weeks. He was born in Thompson, March 22, 1818 and at the time of his death was 61 years of age. He came to this city about 1839 at the age of 21 years.

At a meeting of the directors of the Uncas National bank, yesterday morning, E. H. Learned, who has been its cashier since its organization in 1852, resigned that position, and Mr. Charles M. Tracy, who has acceptably officiated as teller for many years, was elected to fill the vacancy. The cause of Mr. Learned's withdrawal is not yet made public, but Col. Myratt, United States examiner, has been looking into the affairs of the institution and the result of his investigations will be made known in due time.

Miller's orchestra will furnish music for the Caledonian ball at Greeneville on Wednesday, Thanksgiving eve. The programme embraces a long list of popular dances. Refreshments will be furnished in the society's rooms.

Wednesday, Nov. 26, 1879—Mr. William C. Lanman retired yesterday from the well known drug firm of Lanman and Sevin, of which he has been a member for nearly 15 years and Mr. N Douglas Sevin continues the business. The retiring partner has our well wishes in any new enterprise in which he may engage. And to Mr. Sevin we heartily wish bon voyage.

Those who fail to secure tickets for the concert of the Yale Glee club, this evening, will miss one of the most delightful entertainments of the season. At the last concert in Hartford, nearly every piece was encored. Tickets for sale at Noyes and Davis.

On Friday evening there is to be an entertainment at the rooms of the Norwich Literary society. It consists of humorous, pathetic and dramatic recitations by Prof. Charles Roberts, Jr., of New York.

Thursday, Nov. 27, 1879—A Franklin street butcher saw a man take a saddle of mutton from the front of his store at dusk a night or two since, but thinking it to be the work of a practical joker he paid little heed to it. The mutton has not been returned yet and it now looks like the operation of a very bold thief.

The residence of Patrick Sullivan on Smith avenue, Preston, opposite Greeneville, was discovered on fire at 3 o'clock a. m., Wednesday. It was a story and a half house and was valued at $1,200. It took fire from a defective chimney The family saved all the furniture in the lower part of the house. Insurance $500, loss $400.

The assessors finished their labors yesterday. A number of weeks will be occupied in tabulating their work and then the board of relief will begin its labors.

Friday, Nov. 28, 1879—The largest reception and ball ever held by the Arcanum club was that which took place last night in Steiner's hall. When the dancing began there were fully 75 couples on the floor. The unique and odd looking programme contained 12 dances. Prof. Miller's orchestra furnished the music.

Thanksgiving day dawned and declined like its modern predecessors in Norwich. All business stopped and supreme quiet ruled the place. It was a soft, hazy day, without any special center of attraction or confining circumference and the people were scattered in pursuit of happiness, like bees in pursuit of honey.

A thief broke out a pane of glass in the front window of Kempner's pawn shop in Bundy's block, Main street, Tuesday night and carried off a dozen valuable rings and two watches. The loss is about $100.

Saturday, Nov. 29, 1879—At about 6 o'clock Friday morning a bright fire was seen by the policemen a little east of north from the city. During the day it was learned that the dwelling of Mr. A. S. Prentice, on Bundy Hill, Lisbon, had been burned to the ground.

The Hard-ds shinny nine, Capt. Parsons played a match game with the Maple street shinny nine, on Thanksgiving day, the former club winning by a score of 9 to 6.

The Elmes Mill, East Killingly, has been purchased by E. H. Robinson of Providence. Price $30,000.

After Syed Abdul Hafiz, a Bombay taxicab driver, had slept and eaten for five days in his cab with the meter running waiting for a passenger who called on a steamer to return and pay his fare, Hafiz was arrested because his taxicab license had expired.

DANIELSON

DANIELSON FACES HOUSING PROBLEM IN 1930

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Nov. 29.—A major matter of public interest to the people of Danielson during 1930, will be that of increasing its housing facilities. Half a hundred new homes would be occupied here immediately, were they available. The need for homes is largely due to the rapid development of the business of Powdrell & Alexander, largest manufacturers of curtains in the world and employing upwards of 1,600 persons in their six mills in Killingly, three of these plants in Danielson.

J. W. Powdrell of the firm said this afternoon that the company is willing to practically donate land for home sites. Modest homes, costing in the neighborhood of $5,000 each, if built in groups, would meet a pressing need of many employes of the company. It so happens that scores of the employes of this company are resident outside of Danielson. These come from various villages of the town of Plainfield, from Brooklyn from Dayville, Putnam, the Grosvenordales and as far away as Webster. Many of them, the majority of them, would come here to live were homes for them available, and coming here would spend much of what they earn here, whereas as things are now they spend very little in Danielson.

It is likely that the chamber of commerce will seek in the immediate future for some means of financing the construction of 50 or more houses. Various methods of doing this have been suggested, and it seems well within the realms of probabilities that those interested in the advancement and well-being of Danielson will exert themselves to successfully attain the end sought.

Mr. Powdrell pointed out this afternoon that the company prefers to use its assets in extending its business operations, putting its funds into enlargement of plants, equipping them with machinery and open the way for the employment of more workers. Among the projects planned by the company for the coming year is the erection in Danielson of a larger bleachery.

At the present time the concern is using a million yards of cloth each week in manufacturing the 3,000 styles of curtains it produces and is turning out 20,000 pairs of curtains every working day. Its sales organization covers the entire United States and Canada and its product is making the name of Danielson familiar in every nook and corner of the continent. Its payroll in Killingly at present is $33,000 a week, and in addition to this it spends a very considerable sum every week in employment of special workers from local concerns doing the many things that are constantly being done around its mills.

It is sensed in business circles here that this industry is all important to the town's industrial welfare. For that reason the housing requirement looms as something requiring the town's most careful attention, it would, incidentally, be in line with President Hoover's program for maintaining and forwarding prosperity during 1930.

The annual meeting of the Danielson chamber of commerce next Tuesday evening will bring the first opportunity to place the matter of more homes for Danielson before the business interests of the community and to start the program of working out the financing of the building project.

Powdrell & Alexander have had a tremendous increase in business during 1929, and now rate one of the two most successful textile concerns in New England. Mr. Powdrell is confident that during 1930, a still further increase in sales will be achieved. The company is proud of the fact that it buys raw cotton, processes it through all the yarn-making phases, weaves its own materials, bleaches them, manufactures them and, through its own sales organization, markets the finished product—curtains, and that it numbers among its customers the greatest and best known wholesale, chain and retail organizations in the nation and in Canada.

Misaiszek Bound Over

Martin Misaiszek of Putnam came into the town court here today to face a charge of manslaughter growing out of the death of Thomas Moran, Sr., of Dayville, who was struck by a hit-and-run driver on the night of Saturday, Oct. 19, and died shortly thereafter of the injuries he sustained. Attorney Irving H. Miron, counsel for the accused, filed a demurrer to the complaint, but this was overruled and Misaiszek bound over to the next term of the Windham county superior court having criminal jurisdiction. He was released under bonds of $500. Misaiszek previously, in early November, had been bound over on another charge—that of operating a motor vehicle while he was intoxicated, on the night that Mr. Moran was fatally injured.

The only other business before Judge W. Fenner Woodward at this morning's session of the court was a case in which James L. Campbell of Wauregan was charged with operating a motor vehicle while he was intoxicated. The court imposed a fine of $100 and costs, which was paid.

Local Fire Co. Called to Moosup

The Captain Put Engine company of the local fire department made a quick run to Moosup, leaving here just before 1 o'clock this afternoon, to aid the Moosup department in fighting a dangerous fire in Dupuis' Motor mart. Eleven men made the trip, among them Deputy Chief C. A. Hamilton. The local firemen laid one line of hose and played a stream of water on the burning building. The company and the big pumper returned to quarters here at about 2:30, after a cold but interesting experience. The last trip of the Danielson firemen to give assistance to the Moosup department was in the spring of last year, when the Baptist church in that community was destroyed.

As in other recent years, one finds local business interests riveting attention on how those who draw down Christmas club checks on Dec. 10 are going to spend such part of what they receive as they may decide to spend. Experience of the past has shown that approximately 25 per cent of these club checks are re-deposited in savings accounts. The total releases in club checks here will be in excess of

CITY GETS DEED TO LAND FOR STORAGE TANK

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Nov. 29.—Mayor Charles A. Richard, in the presence of officials of the Putnam Savings bank, this afternoon brought the three year old city water system reconstruction problem to a close when the savings institution assigned to the City Water company a deed of quit claim for land on Oak Hill, desired by the city for the erection of the one and a quarter million gallon steel tank. Mayor Richard re-assigned the option on a large tract of land on Oak Hill assigned to the city some months ago by S. Nickoloff of Pomfret street in exchange for a similar tract. The city's chief executive asserted that the sale price of the land had been paid and the deed forwarded to the town clerk's office for recording in the Putnam land records.

The smaller plot of land procured from the savings bank by the city includes a right of way for the water department, which incidentally is another vantage point for future growth of the city.

The original land grant by Mr. Nickoloff was secured by the city at a reasonable figure, considering the size of the plot, but by carrying out the original plan, several hundred feet of land which would be useless to the city would be in possession of the water department after the standpipe is built. This, Mayor Richard held, was not in harmony with the economy plank in his platform, which he had upheld since taking the oath of office two years ago. Last Friday evening the mayor called the council together for a special session and by a favorable vote authorized the special water committee to make negotiations with the officials of the Putnam Savings bank for the purchase of the desirable plot in the larger tract of land on the hill. The finance committee of the council was likewise instructed to secure the land at a price of $500. Both committees were successful, their efforts culminating in the completion of technical details of the reconstruction project.

Mayor Richard was highly elated this afternoon as he witnessed the legal transactions which took place at the offices of Corporation Counsel Ernest C. Morse. The chief executive's statement at this time was, "Well, its all over now. This is the last contract and we are all set to go."

The contract for the building of the standpipe was signed by the mayor this week and forwarded to the Chicago Bridge and Iron Works while the contract for the building of the foundation on the plot on Oak hill has been signed and awarded to a firm of contractors in Providence, R. I.

THIRD BURGLARY IN 48 HOURS BAFFLES PUTNAM POLICE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Nov. 29.—Putnam police circles were chagrined this morning at the report of Courtland D. Arnold, proprietor of Arnold's Sea Grill and fish market on Bundy street, that his place of business had been burglarized sometime during evening hours of Wednesday and Thursday and cash amounting to more than $20 taken.

The third of a series of breaks and thefts to be discovered in local business hours within the past 48 hours is believed by the police to be the work of the same criminals involved in the breaks at the Cloverdale store on Front street and the Miller restaurant on Livery street, which were discovered Thursday.

Captain of Police William J. Jarvis, assisted by Lieut. Ross V. Urquhart and Officer Henry M. Mayo of the state police barracks at Danielson, investigated the Arnold break early today. Excellent finger print impressions were procured and photographed by Officer Mayo, an expert of the finger print system. Captain Jarvis said this afternoon that entrance to the sea grill was gained in the same manner as in the other two establishments by the forcing of a window. The captain intimated that the person or persons responsible for the first two crimes, doubtlessly committed the

THE CHRISTMAS SEALS

Along with the rest of the state, Norwich is interested in the campaign which is being conducted by the state tuberculosis commission for the sale of Christmas seals.

Last year Norwich raised about $4,000 for tuberculosis work in this locality as the result of the sale. The work it does for those afflicted with the disease is highly commendable but it should not be forgotten that while it received and used such funds for the relief of the sick it could have used more. It would have been possible to have done much more of the same good work had there been more money available.

It should also be understood that 85 per cent of the money contributed through the purchase of the seals goes for the local work. In other words, the more seals that are sold here the more the local committee will have to devote to tuberculosis work. This in itself should make a strong appeal to those interested and those who can contribute.

Connecticut has always been deeply interested in this work. It has responded most generously to the appeals for waging an effective war against tuberculosis and it has had an opportunity to witness some gratifying results.

The fight against the white plague cannot be allowed to lag. It must be as ceaseless and relentless as the disease. Through the purchase of the Christmas seals there is an opportunity for the public in general to participate in this excellent work. There can be large or small purchases, in keeping with the state of the pocketbook, but all should be desirous of having some part in maintaining this successful work.

All will quickly admit that the efforts to prevent and check tuberculosis are needed in reducing the ravages of the disease. They are efforts, however, which ought not to be left entirely to the other fellow. They should, and it is believed there will be, a common desire to make the fight more effective the coming year than in the present. The way to do that is to provide more funds. More funds will be in hand through the purchase of more Christmas seals. Get as liberal an amount of them as possible and know the satisfaction of helping those among the afflicted who are unable to help themselves. Let Norwich go well over the top.

THE GAS TAX

From the fact that all the states in the country and the District of Columbia are now collecting a gasoline tax there is good evidence of the popularity of this method of raising funds for road construction.

Good roads were the demands of the motorists. They gave the strongest kind of backing to a movement which had gotten underway and it is apparent that there is not much more that contributes to the comfort of motoring than good roads. Thus, with the number of motorists increasing, good roads and better roads were widely demanded. Many of them have been built as the result of bond issues, but that method involves much more than the actual cost of construction.

When the idea of placing a tax on gasoline was advanced it was apparent that it hit the owners of automobiles particularly but it also hit the highway users who were demanding the better roads, and when the money received from that form of taxation is devoted to the maintenance and construction of modern roads it simply means that those paying the special tax are getting a special benefit and everyone is satisfied.

What that tax means is shown by the figures for the first six months of this year, totaling $175,140,000, or a gain of almost $35,000,000 for the same period in the previous year, with the consumption of gas taxed increasing by over 1,000,000,000 gallons. Some of this gain was due to the fact that in the first half of 1928 taxes were collected in only 45 states and in 1929 in 47 states, but now the tax is general throughout the country and the average tax is slightly over three cents a gallon. The tax is giving great aid to the motorists in getting what they wanted.

MORE MAIL SHIPS

Within a few days there should be something definite in the way of information as to what can be expected from construction in the shipyards during the next few years. We have been anxious to get our shipping into private hands. The change has been partially accomplished through the sale of some of the best ships, some that were not up good and some that were fit only for junking. We have been endeavoring to get the government out of the business of owning and operating merchant vessels in competition with private enterprise, and even though it will be some time before it is accomplished the way seems brighter.

In connection with certain of the sales there was anticipation that certain fat mail contracts would go with them. Such would be a service for which the government is now paying and yet it would also be a subsidy to the lines getting them. Inasmuch as it meant easy money there was a scramble for them, but it remains to be seen what the final decision is as to the requirements.

Recommendations have been made by the interdepartmental committee that a number of additional routes be established for which mail contracts totaling $10,000,000 a year will be awarded to the successful bidders. It will be required, however, that those getting the contracts must agree to enter upon a shipbuilding programme as the result of which 40 new ships would be constructed over a period of ten years at a cost of a quarter of a billion and meaning the addition of almost a half million gross tons to the merchant marine.

This means that if the shipowners are going to get the mail contracts they must agree to provide for adequate shipping facilities for the future. They must build ships of a certain type intended for certain service. They would not get enough from the mail transportation to pay for this construction work but neither would it be open to the view that it is just so much velvet for the shipowners to the handicap of the postoffice department.

The aim appears to be to lend encouragement to the shipowners and have something in the way of ships to display after a decade has passed. Furthermore, any such building programme would help materially to stabilize the shipbuilding industry over a considerable period of years.

PROTECTING THE VILLAGES

In connection with the great development of the automobile and its effect upon communities the question is asked, "Is it not time for thoughtful people to take up the question of maintaining the village center as a unit, where architecture remains virtually unchanged, where trees are not mutilated for stringing of telegraph cables, where life is safe for little children and where tired city people can obtain quiet and beauty?"

No doubt this same thought has occurred to others. It is fully and painfully understood what a change in street conditions has been brought about by the motor vehicle. It has aided in developments and with them have come permanent highways, tree removals and in many instances substantial transformations in the appearances of villages and in some small cities.

There is no chance that there will be any let-up in the volume of motor traffic. On the other hand, it can be expected that it will increase. With the gain there will be congestion and increased danger, more disturbances from the noise and confusion and the getting away from that quiet and beauty of village life which is so much deplored.

There are many villages where there is little chance for the suggested relief. They are on main highways and must take the traffic and its results as it comes. But there are others which can experience relief in the construction of straighter routes in much the same way that through traffic is in many instances at the present time being routed around cities in the interest of speed for the motorist and traffic relief for the city.

It has been the demand of many small communities that any road development plan should include its main street, even though it meant a crooked route in complying. They are now finding that the traffic which goes over their streets leaves very little business but it does create hazards and forces the community to changes which involve many expenses such as signal systems and traffic cops, and handicaps the use of the streets by the village residents. Experience has revealed the undesirabilities quite the same as the anticipation of the highway improvement brought visions of advantages. The plea for keeping the villages intact follows some of the unpleasant developments which have accompanied their disfigurement.

THE COAL SUPPLY

Every now and then someone raises the question as to how long the available supply of coal, oil or other much-used commodity will last.

Invariably it is nothing for anyone to sit up nights worrying about. All appeals for the prevention of waste and the conservation of natural resources are deserving of careful attention but it is often the case that no immediate danger of exhaustion exists. It is in consideration of the future that much of the thought is given.

According to the department of commerce, this country has an anthracite reserve that is regarded as ample for years to come. In this instance, there is the possibility of avoiding waste but there is no chance of establishing new coal fields the same as can be done in growing more trees to take the place of the denuded forest land.

For the year of 1928 there were mined 67,000,000 tons of anthracite. That represents quite a pile of coal but it seems small when it is disclosed that there is an available supply of 16,000,000,000 tons and more than half of that can be mined with existing facilities. Thus it will be a long time before anthracite will be unobtainable.

The fact is that it seems probable that consumers will be turning to substitutes before that day arrives. Conditions in the anthracite fields, the Pennsylvania coal tax and the labor connected with the handling of coal have caused consumers to give some thought to themselves. They are today recognizing that they have a choice of fuels and they are exercising that choice. Each year sees many departing from the use of anthracite, not because something else is cheaper, but because they find something else preferable even though it may cost as much or more. Thus anthracite may last much longer than the past year's production and the available supply might indicate.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

Sometimes we hear criticism about sending money to help those at the far distant parts of the earth when there is need of looking after those around about us. The question arises if these critics are very anxious about helping the sufferers at home. The field can be nothing short of the whole world. The following paragraph taken from the November issue of the Review of Reviews shows the need in the near east: "The devastation which finally swept all the countries of the near east rendered not thousands, but actually millions of people destitute. The records of the near east relief show that it alone saved the lives of a million and a half of people; that it clothed at the same time practically an entire nation—more than 300,000 in Armenia; that after it was well under way 132,552 children were sheltered in institutions and an incalculable number served in other ways."

Nearly every issue of the public has some item concerning the criminal use of firearms. Sometimes they are in the hands of minors, sometimes in the hands of incompetents, but usually at the disposal of criminals. If there is a law against the promiscuous sale of poisons, why is it that the above class seem to be able to get possession of dangerous weapons, for which there is absolutely no good reason any more than there is for bombshells and many other dangerous utensils. Outside of the protection of the public peace, what reason is there for any others carrying concealed weapons? People of excitable temperament, unable to control themselves when angered or frightened, whip out a revolver and commit the awful crime of murder. There is every reason for restricting the sale and use of fire arms to the public generally.

When Galileo made his startling statement that this earth of ours actually revolved on its own axis, the statement at the time was deemed so outrageous that the powers then in control forced him to retract or suffer the extreme penalty. It is said when he retracted that he uttered in an undertone "but it does move." But today how many things there are that once moved that are now stationary! Books on theology once so precious that they were handled tenderly when used, and then put in a glass case when not in use to keep them from being desecrated by the dust. But these same golden nuggets have been for years dumped in a pile up in the attic and cannot be given away. If the early fathers could see how ruthlessly their precious monuments of ancient theology were treated in this modern age they would think that this world was headed straight to perdition.

Not only does the older theology find difficulty in fitting into the modern "wineskins," but the older novels find much of the same difficulty. The environment in which they were cast has largely disappeared. There was quite a bunch of female novelists in the mid-Victorian era and earlier that are rarely read today, such as Hannah More, Jane Austen and many more both in Europe and America. How some of them did make their female characters weep! One caustic writer has said that "if the tears of these frequently crying women could only have been bottled up they would have helped the farmers amazingly in dry seasons!" Once how popular were Marion Harland's stories! but, who reads them now? They were well written, but the old southern background upon which the best of them were based has entirely disappeared. The very name of this once popular author is unknown to the present generation.

But the men who have written great works have suffered just as much as the women by the changing ideas of time. There are many now living who can remember when Bulwer's great novel, "The Last Days of Pompei" was all the rage. We scarcely see it mentioned today in any lists of the world's great novels. Like the flower of the field it has faded. More remarkable still is the fate of some of the world's greatest historical works. For breadth of view, and stately march of imperial sentences what history ever surpassed Gibbon's "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire"? How often do you find it offered for sale by any publisher today? No work of fiction is more fascinating, but who now cares for the splendid military pomp that illuminated its pages? His work is a great reminder of this theme:

"Crowns and thrones may perish, Kingdoms war and wane!"

The most powerful plea that the Thanksgiving season urges us to make is that we could not live at all without God's merciful gifts. Human beings from the least to the greatest are dependent creatures; dependent on outside forces which they under no conditions can originate and maintain. Mark the four things we must have if we live at all: First, there is the air which only the Creator can provide for us. How long could we live without this great gift? Secondly, there is food which the God of nature furnishes. Of course we can plow, plant, cultivate, fertilize and so forth, but a greater power makes things grow and ripen for our use. "It is God who giveth the increase." Thirdly, there is clothing which comes from raw material which nature furnishes. This we can utilize but not originate. Fourthly, there is shelter which comes from using what God provides.

During the last week many of us read with deep sorrow the passing of Dr. George A. Gordon, for 40 years the able and eloquent pastor of the Old South Congregational church of Boston. He retired several years ago, not because he was extremely old, but because of failing health. In the opinion of some of our best judges he was the greatest preacher of his day. "In quality of thought, depth of background, beauty of imagry and diction, clarity and strength of exposition, and in all that is implied in personality in the pulpit, Dr. Gordon was preeminent." Hardly more than this could be said of any preacher, living or dead. When the news of his death came to the writer's knowledge, he at once took up Gordon's work, "My Education and Religion." He turned once more to that chapter in which he compared his ancestry to that of Queen Victoria's. Gordon was right in spite of British criticism.

We have to take off our hats to some of the exploits that are done in these days of expert civil engineering. If 100 years ago when, under President Monroe's administration, improvements began in the navigating facilities of the Ohio river, it had been told Daniel Boone and other pioneers of that region, that 100 years later this river would have navigating facilities for the largest boats all the way from Pittsburgh to New Orleans, he would have said, "impossible! impossible!" But the great feat has been accomplished, and now mammoth boats float the stream where once in many places the canoe was in great danger because of rocks and snags. In no line of human activity has progress been made more amazing than in civil engineering. If one doubts this let him look at some of the bridges being built, like the one now crossing the Hudson at New York.

HOW TO IDENTIFY THE NEW BIRDS VISITING HEREABOUT THIS FALL.

The horned larks which early this month settled on Preston Plains for a good stay are merely repeating earlier sojourns which observers recorded in February of last year and in January of this. As before, the picturesque visitors have located in great numbers on or near the Dawley and Shedd farms. This time, however, they are also accompanied by other welcome flight companions, namely the snow buntings or snowflakes. Nearby neighbors—as the crow flies—and neighbors that have been unrecorded in recent years, are American pipits near the Norwich state hospital and myrtle warblers in the Jewett City section. All these visitors, except the warblers, are primarily shore birds.

For the ready reference of bird lovers, many of whom have motored to the present haunts of these visitors, the following descriptions of the birds are digested from "A Guide to the Birds of New England and Eastern New York," by Ralph Hoffman, a book which may be obtained at the Otis Library:

Horned Lark a Shore Bird.

The horned lark or shore lark (otocoris alpestris) "is a common winter visitant along the seacoast from October to April; small flocks occasionally occur inland. Shore larks 'feed in' flocks along the flats left bare by the tide and on the fields and hillsides within sound of the surf. Their notes are shrill, resembling the syllables 'tsee tsee-de-ree'; it is hard to distinguish them from those of the titlark, which may be found in the same localities in fall and spring, but not in winter."

"They are restless birds, flying high when disturbed and passing back and forth from one hill to another, so that their notes are often heard high in air. On the ground they run or walk; in the air their wings look long and pointed. The 'horns' show as little tufts of elongated feathers projecting backward on each side of the head."

In the adult male the forehead and a patch back of the eye are yellow; "horns," or tufts of black feathers project backward from the head. The front and sides of the crown are black, as is also a line from the bill under the eye along the sides of the throat, as well as a band across the upper breast. The back of the head, back and rump are pinkish-brown; the tail is dark; outer pair of feathers is edged with white; the throat is yellow, the belly white and the sides pinkish brown. The bird is about seven and three-quarters inches long.

"The females are smaller, the yellow of their throats is duller. Shore larks are often associated with snow buntings but may be known by their heavy, square-shouldered build, the yellow throat and the black markings which include it."

The Snow-Bunting's Mournful Note.

The snow-bunting is a common winter resident on the coast of New England and along the shore of Lake Champlain, arriving late in October and leaving toward the end of March. On the seacoast flocks of snow-buntings associate with horned larks, but the former frequent the beach more than their companions, and the grassy hills less.

"The notes of the snow-bunting are a high, sweet, though slightly mournful 'tee' or 'tee-oo', a sweet rolling whistle and a harsh 'bzz.' The great amount of white about the bird serves to distinguish it; the white on the wing is especially conspicuous as it flies over. On the ground it either walks or runs."

The snow-bunting's scientific name is Passerina nivalis. It is a little less than seven inches long. In autumn and winter the head and under parts of the adult show white, but the white on the head and sides of the breast are washed with brown. The black feathers of the tail are veiled with gray and brown; the wings and tail are black and white, and the bill is reddish brown.

The Migrant Pipit.

"The American pipit, or titlark, is a migrant through New England and New York, rare in New England in spring but common in the fall, especially near the coast. It passes north in April and May and returns in late September, October and early November.

"Near the coast it frequents the short grass of the tidal marshes or grassy hills, where it feeds in company with shore larks and snow-buntings; it often occurs in large flocks, which rise when disturbed and fly off over the marsh with a shrill 'tsee-tseep tsee-tsee-tseep', very like the call notes of the shore lark. Inland it is fond of plowed fields, mud flats or low meadows, but is also found on grassy hilltops, even at great elevation.

"Its long tail is constantly wagged as it walks; this wagging should identify it at once, as the birds with which it consorts do not have this trick, and the other birds that do, the water-thrushes, etc., are not found in open fields. When the titlark flies it shows two outer tail feathers tipped with white."

The American pipit, or anthus pensilvanicus, is about six and four-tenths inches in length. The upper parts of the adults are brownish-gray; the end of the outer tail feathers is white, the next pair is tipped with white, the breast is streaked with black and the belly is white.

Our Only Winter Warbler.

The myrtle warbler, or yellow-rumped warbler (dendroica coronata) "is the only member of its family which winters in New York and New England; it is found in winter from Ipswich, Mass., southward along the seacoast wherever bayberries are abundant. It breeds commonly in the extensive spruce forests of northern New York and New England; sparingly in Berkshire and Worcester counties, Mass., and here and there in the uplands of southern New Hampshire and Vermont, wherever there are patches of spruce; in the southern part of its range it breeds occasionally in white pine groves.

"The song is difficult to learn; it generally consists of two sets of phrases composed of the syllables wee-see-see, the second sometimes on a lower, sometimes in a higher key than the first, but neither of them at all sharp or decided. It is the only white-throated warbler except the chestnut-side that has any yellow in its plumage. In winter, when it adds bayberries to its insect fare, it feeds in low bushes; when it flies up, the bright yellow rump and the spots of white on the outer tail feathers make an unfailing field-mark."

The myrtle warbler is about five and two-thirds inches long. It nests in coniferous trees, 5 to 10 feet up. The eggs are grayish white, spotted with brown. In winter the adult bird shows a yellow crown-patch partly hidden by brownish coloration; the back is brownish; a brownish coloration washes the black of the upper breast and the yellow of the lower breast; the rump is yellow and the tail feathers are spotted with white.

YOUR HEALTH

Hoarseness.

By Lewis T. Buckman, M. D.
Wilkes-Barre, Pa.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

The "throat" means to most of us that part back of the nose and mouth through which food and water pass to the stomach. Let us look at it. We will find a structure called the larynx, known otherwise as the "voice box." It is this which forms the protuberance seen and felt in the front of the neck and called the "Adam's apple". The larynx permits air to enter the lungs and, by the vibration of the vocal cords, it produces speech. Interference with its function by disease necessarily interferes with breathing and with the voice.

Probably the first indication of throat trouble is hoarseness. This may be subsequent to a cold, part of a croup, or come on suddenly of itself as a laryngitis or "cold in the throat". It may be more or less constant with certain persons, representing the influence of a chronic catarrh of the nose and sinuses or of infection from the mouth, or it may be the manifestation of a gouty or rheumatic condition elsewhere in the body. It may follow over-use or strain of the voice; or exposure to inclement weather; or irritation by gas or dust.

The hoarseness that should be a warning signal and call our attention to the throat is the hoarseness that develops without apparent cause, that is painless, and that is persistent, for it may be the first manifestation of tuberculosis of the lungs; it may be the result of syphilitic infection or it may be due to cancer of the larynx.

If it means tuberculosis it requires early and prolonged rest, and the trouble and expense of this treatment is reason enough why an unexplained hoarseness should have attention. If syphilis is the trouble the outlook for relief and cure is good if treatment be persistent and adequate. As for cancer, certain types of cancer of the larynx can be absolutely cured in 8 out of 10 cases. The 20 per cent. that are almost always fatal are simple cases too long neglected, or relatively rare cases of specially malignant type.

In each form of disease early recognition and adequate treatment are essential, and so form a sound reason for seeking early advice in the event of painless, unexplained, persistent hoarseness.

Hoarseness is a symptom that cannot be missed. Any person can recognize it. The dangerous type is without pain. If it persists and there is no obvious cause, it demands prompt attention. Of the three usual conditions causing it, all are curable except a small percentage of cancers of the throat that are hopeless and these usually have not been ushered in with horseness.

Avoid hoarseness by making your family physician responsible, through annual health audits, for keeping you well.

Christ's Value of a Soul

What man of you having an hundred sheep, if he lose one of them, doth not leave the ninety and nine in the wilderness and go after that which is lost, until he find it. Luke 15:14.

The fifteenth chapter of Luke is a chapter of loss and recovery. In the three parables which constitute the chapter we have the whole story of man's fall and of God's redemption. In the first parable we have the shepherd seeking the lost; in the last parable we have the son seeking his father's house. In the first there is sorrow on the shepherd's part; in the last there is repentance on the son's part. The whole chapter is a unity, every word of which is packed with the wisdom and love of Him who came to seek and to save that which was lost. These are the parables of God's love—the love that sent His only begotten son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish but have everlasting life. "Let men say what they will," wrote Pascal, "I must avow that there is something astonishing in the Christian religion." There is nothing more astonishing in it than this: that God should have come to seek the lost. It is the glad news which, like some strain of unexpected music makes these parables a joy forever. We shall never know how much sinful and despairing humanity owes to the story of the lost sheep, until the books are opened and the secrets of all hearts are laid bare.

It is not a pleasant sensation to be lost. Some people get lost in a strange city, but there is always an opportunity of asking the way. If one is lost in the maze of strange roads in the open country, he knows that any road will ultimately lead him to some human habitation. But if one is lost in the wilderness, out on the boundless prairies, or on the sea without chart or compass, there is little hope of safety. That is the sort of loss spoken of here in the parable. It was hopeless unless the shepherd should miss the wanderer and seek him.

This illustrates perfectly man's spiritual condition. He is lost without hope of recovery unless someone comes to the rescue. Do you think that the poor wrecks of humanity which you see about you, will ever find their Lord unaided? Do you think that the people of central Africa or the bushmen of Australia will ever envolve the religion of Jesus Christ out of their inner consciousness, and thus save themselves? No, they are lost sheep which must be sought and brought into the fold.

Is it due unto ourselves if we find ourselves within the Master's fold? Nay, many times have we strayed and the shepherd has a great deal of trouble with us. There are pastures that look more inviting and more interesting than those where the master leads. The fold seems tame and the world offers things that tend to draw you away from the house of God, and from the sound of the master's voice. The sheep strays a step at a time until it has become separated from the flock and is lost, and is there any tragedy equal to that? Life holds many tragedies. The history of many a life is sad, indeed. But what can equal the terror and the tragedy of the epitaph, "He is lost?"

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Hooty Strikes Hard.

The smartest and most wideawake,
Awake,
Will sometimes make a bad mistake.
—Hooty the Owl.

Hooty the Owl sat on the top of his watchtower. He had come there early. From it he had looked across and seen jolly, round, red Mr. Sun go to bed behind the Purple Hills. He had watched the Black Shadows come creeping out across the Green Meadows and through the Green Forest. It was cold, but Hooty didn't feel the cold. His coat was warm and so he didn't feel the cold.

Hooty waited patiently. "It seems to me I never was so hungry in my life," thought he. "I don't care who comes along if he isn't too big for me to kill I shall catch him. Yes, sir. I don't care who it is. I would even tackle Black Pussy the Cat if she happened along."

But Black Pussy didn't happen along. Old Man Coyote did. He didn't see Hooty, but Hooty saw him. How Hooty did wish that he dared strike at Old Man Coyote! He felt that he hated Old Man Coyote. He hated him because he was too big for him to catch and he hated him because he knew that Old Man Coyote was also hunting and thus making it all the harder for Hooty and Mrs. Hooty to get enough to eat.

The Black Shadows filled the Green Forest. It was very dark in some places. In other places it was dusky. Hooty leaned forward just a week bit and hooted as only he can. Instantly he opened his ears as widely as possible. Ha! what was that? He had heard the faintest sound just back of the tree on which he sat. Silently he turned his head and looked hard in that direction. Then he sailed out from the top of the watchtower on those great, broad wings of his. In those great eyes of his was a look of alert, fierce hunger. It was very dark, for the Black Shadows were very close together at the point from which that faint sound had come.

But what was that? There was something moving! It was just above that little hemlock tree. He couldn't see clearly what it was, but he was sure that it was something alive and that it was furry. With a swift stroke or two of his great wings Hooty shot forward and struck with those great sharp curved claws of his. He struck hard and he clutched hard. And then he let go as suddenly as he had struck.

Such a roar of rage as followed when Hooty the Owl struck. Hooty had made a very serious mistake. Yes, sir, he had made a very serious mistake. What he had seen was furry, but Hooty hadn't seen enough. What he had seen was the back of Buster Bear's head as Buster had suddenly stood up back of a little hemlock tree. Hooty had seen the back of his head and one ear and that was all. You should have seen how quickly Hooty had turned in the air after he discovered his mistake. As you know his wings made no sound. He had turned and disappeared behind a tree before Buster Bear could turn his head. So Buster Bear did not know what had hit him or who had hit him. Oh, but he was angry, was Buster Bear! He growled and he fairly roared with rage. He dug his great claws into a tree and tore out a piece of bark, as if to show what he would do to the one who had struck him, if only he could find him. For a long time he looked this way and that way for this unseen enemy, and, of course, he looked in vain.

He growled and fairly roared with rage.

As for Hooty, he straightway made for another part of the Green Forest to hunt for the remainder of that night. Yes, sir, that is what he did. And to this day Buster Bear doesn't know who it was that had hit him over in the Green Forest that November night.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29—The senate's experience with the tariff bill along in early November gave a striking reminder of the lad who caught a bear by the tail.

Between spasms of debate on rates—and monotonously regular victories for the variously styled republican irregulars and the democrats over the republican old guardsters—it sought desperately for a way to let go.

With the by-elections approaching, however, most of the senators had strong ideas about what might be the result of voting themselves even a brief vacation with the tariff job nowhere near finished.

That persistent and optimistic "wet," Rep. Sol Bloom of New York, had an idea about that time which might have helped the senate out a lot had it been resorted to.

The Beer Bill.

He was thinking, however, about prohibition and his pending bill to legalize 12 per cent. wine and 3 per cent beer through amendment of the Volstead act.

And Sol announced that, come the regular session in December, he would seek action on his companion proposal, a secret vote in congress upon his modification bill.

He popped a resolution to that effect into the house hopper during the special session dog days of that body when it was meeting in perfunctory fashion once every three days.

"No one," he argued, "who is upon a footing of personal acquaintance with any number of senators and representatives can be ignorant of the fact that many of them, perhaps a majority, vote diametrically the opposite of their own convictions in order to conform to what they conceive to be the convictions of their constituents whenever a liquor measure is before them for action."

Senator Copeland of New York had almost the same point of view as to what moved the vast majority of the senate to vote down various resolutions for adjournment of the tariff debate to the regular session.

"Politics," Says He.

"If we had 30 cents worth of courage we would vote now to adjourn; and that's what we ought to do," Dr. Copeland said. "This is all politics."

Now supposing the Hon. Sol's plan for a secret vote could have been adopted? Would the senate have adjourned weeks before it did?

There is no doubt of it whatever, for even the freshest of the senatorial freshmen, the first termers, could not have failed to realize after the first dozen or so votes on tariff rates had been taken that there was no prospect whatever of completing tariff legislation for months to come.

Dr. Copeland insisted that the acrimonious exchanges on the floor during the adjournment sparring showed senate nerves to be so frayed by the struggles as to be dangerous to health and sound legislation.

"The senate is not in a frame of mind to legislate as it should," he said, adding that as a doctor, he had become a sort of "confessional" for his colleagues.

"Senators have come to me and said 'I can not sleep nights, I am worn out,'" Copeland said, adding that his republican colleague of the medical profession, Senator Hatfield of West Virginia, no doubt had similar experiences.

But there are no secret votes in the senate any more, even on treaties and nominations.

POETRY

Over and Done is the Summer.

Over and gone is the summer, and over
the reign of the rose;
Rapt moments that rippled in meter,
flow pass to the plainest of prose;
For the myriad melodies rising at morn,
from the leafy hill,
The continuous chirp of the crickets at night, when all is still.

With the first faint breath of autumn,
southward the swallow goes;
Over and gone is the summer, and over
the reign of the rose.
From the withered weeds by the wayside, the web of the spider is spun,
And the sunflower droops in the garden, that yesterday looked on the sun.

A few of the wildflowers linger, true
votaries of her gay train;
But their heads are heavy with sorrow,
their eyes are blurred by the rain.
Over and gone is the summer, and over
the reign of the rose.
And with her foot on the threshold waits
our lady of the snows.

The sun withholds his fire fervor on the far edge of the southern skies:
With his golden largess lessened, "the light of the world dies."
The beautiful story is ended! With a sigh, the volume we close;
Over and gone is the summer, and over
the reign of the rose.
—Alonzo Rice.

A Thought for Washing Day.

The clothesline is a rosary
Of household help and care;
Each little saint the Mother loves
Is represented there.

And when across her garden plot
She walks, with thoughtful heed,
I should not wonder if she told
Each garment for a bead.

For Celia's scarlet stockings hang
Beside Amelia's skirt,
And Billy's breeches, which of late
Were sadly smeared with dirt.

Ton kerchief small wiped bitter tears
For ill-success at school;
The pinafore was torn in strife
'Twixt Fred and little Jule.

And that device of finer web
And over-costly lace,
Adorned our eldest when she danced
At some gay fashion place.

A stranger passing, I salute
The Household in its wear,
And smile to think how near of kin
Are love and toil and prayer.
—By Julia Ward Howe.

In Memoriam.

A voice is hushed; but ere it failed,
The listening echoes caught its tone,
And now its message clear and keen
On every wind of heaven is blown.

A staff is broke; but ere it snapped,
Those who had leaned on it so long
Had made its steadfast fiber theirs,
And fare now forward, straight and strong.

A light is quenched; but ere it paled,
It lit a hundred torches' flame,
That shine across the darkening sky.
And star with gold one honored name.
—Ellen H. Richards.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

Bill—Did she blush when you told her that?

Jim—No, she couldn't. She'd forgotten her compact.—Cincinnati Inquirer.

Irate Diner—Here, waiter, I've just found this vest button in my soup.

Waiter (beaming)—Oh, thank you, sir. I've been looking all over the kitchen for it.—Brooklyn Eagle.

"My wife's learning the piano, and my daughter the violin."

"And you—what are you learning?"

"To suffer in silence."—Toronto Telegram.

Visiting Doctor—How is it, Sambo, that you and your large family keep so healthy?

Sambo—Well, suh. Ah tell you. We done bought one of dose sanitary drinkin' cups, an' we all drink outen it.—Exchange.

"Did you hear that Smith advertised for a wife?"

"No; what happened?"

"Oh, he received ten replies from men saying he could have theirs."—Tit-Bits.

Wife (apologetically)—I took the receipt for this cake right out of the cook-book.

Husband (tactfully)—You did quite right, darling. It never should have been put in.—Montreal Star.

Canon Tollington tells of a lady who asked one of her domestics, after the latter had returned from church, what the preacher had said.

"Well, ma'am," was the reply, "I can't tell you all he said, but he did say that hell is not what it used to be."—Boston Transcript.

"What in the world is that?" exclaimed the visitor to the hospital as he entered the long hall. He pointed to a treadmill arrangement at one side on which several worried-looking men were unconsciously walking and getting nowhere.

"That is for prospective fathers," said the escorting nurse. "We get enough power from them, while they are waiting, to run all the machinery in the place!"—Exchange.

Thanksgiving, 1928, D. F. Clammer, of Topeka, Kans., bought a turkey for the family dinner. The fowl's crop was found to be full of corn when dressed. Clammer saved the corn, planted it last spring and has just husked five bushels from it, which would fatten several turkeys. In a good corn year the seed be planted would have made twenty-five bushels, Clammer declared.

At Twyford, England, George Enderby, at the age of seventy, has achieved his life's ambition. He utilized his savings of sixty-three years to erect a tombstone to the memory of his mother, buried in the little churchyard. Enderby's mother died when he was seven years old. He decided then that he regularly would bank his savings until he had sufficient to erect the memorial.

WOMAN TESTIFIES IN M'MANUS MURDER TRIAL

NEW YOR, Nov. 29.—(AP)—A small, grey haired woman, an innocent bystander at one of New York's killings, today testified at the murder trial of George A. McManus that she heard a "crash" in the Park Central hotel the night of Nov. 4, 1928, and saw a man staggering down the hallway a moment later.

The witness was Mrs. Marian A. Putnam, a cafe owner of Asheville, N. C. She was a guest in the Park Central the night the slate contends McManus lured Arnold Rothstein there and shot him down in retaliation for "framing" a stud poker game against him, a game in which McManus lost $51,000.

NAVY TEAM CONFIDENT OF WINS OVER DARTMOUTH

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 29.—(AP)—The Navy completed its preparation for tomorrow's game against Dartmouth at Franklin field in Philadelphia by going through a skeleton scrimmage on the home field against a scrub team using Dartmouth plays. A signal drill topped off the work-out. Bill Ingram, Navy coach, tonight seemed confident of victory despite a preponderance of expert opinion to the contrary. He placed Art Spring at Gannon's quarterback post and Leo Kiraz, end of the West Virginia Wesleyan game, at left half to complete the backfield with Paduzak Joe Clifton at full and Harold Bauer at right half.

The team will depart for Philadelphia on a special train early tomorrow. The corps of midshipmen will be on the same train.

CENTRAL BAPTIST CHURCH THANKSGIVING SOCIAL

With an attendance of over 200, the Central Baptist church held its Thanksgiving social at 7:30 Friday evening in the assembly room and a programme full of interest was provided.

After the opening of the social, at which prayer was offered by Rev. Dr. F. C. Wright of Yonkers, N. Y., a former pastor of the church, who was a visitor, Dr. J. F. Barton of Hartford, head of the Baptist laymen of the state, was the speaker, addressing the gathering in an impressive way as he told of his experience in realizing his opportunities and obligation to support the work of God's kingdom.

The social was preparatory to the every-family visitation in the church on Sunday when a total of $30,000 is to be sought in pledges, which will cover all the church work of the year, both local expenses and benevolences. At the church service Sunday morning the young people are to bring their offerings forward to the communion table and in the afternoon the visitation will be made.

At the social there were vocal selections by the church quartette, and violin solos by Mrs. Courtland Whitney and Miss Dorothy Stewart. Refreshments were served under the direction of Mrs. Henrietta Tefft, with Miss Mildred Cass in charge of the waitresses. Introduction cards which were worn by all contributed a novel social element to the evening.

FUNERALS

Miss Marcia C. Stanton

With a very large attendance of relatives and friends, the funeral of Miss Marcia C. Stanton was held at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John B. Stanton, East Great Plain, Friday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock. Rev. Joseph Cooper, pastor of Trinity Methodist Episcopal church, conducted the service, and Miss Elizabeth Johnson of this city, sang "O Love that Will Not Let Me Go" and "Nearer, My God, to Thee." The burial was in Evergreen cemetery, Central Village, and the committal service was conducted by Rev. A. H. Stanton, an uncle of Miss Stanton, of Maplewood, N. J.

There was a wealth of very beautiful floral tributes, and the bearers were six cousins, Edward Fuller Stanton and Harwood Stanton of Hartford, Carl Stanton Gallup and Donald Clifford Gallup of Plainfield, and Lawrence Benjamin Jerome and Benjamin Stanton Jerome of Uncasville. Mourners were present from Hartford, Plainfield, Uncasville, Maplewood, N. J., Newark, Boston, Killingly, Dayville, Moosup, Baltic and Voluntown. Undertaker Tillinghast of Central Village had charge of the funeral arrangements.

Mrs. James T. Woods

At 8:15 o'clock Friday morning the funeral of Mrs. James T. Woods was held at her home, No. 10 Elmwood avenue, with a solemn high mass of requiem at 9 o'clock at St. Patrick's church, Rev. Myles P. Galvin was celebrant of the mass and was assisted by Rev. Raymond G. LaFontaine of St. Thomas seminary, Hartford, as deacon, and Rt. Rev. Msgr. Michael H. May as sub-deacon.

Henry J. LaFontaine presided at the organ and rendered Chopin's Funeral March at the processional. At the offertory Roderick F. Sullivan sang Pie Jesu and as the waiting hymn Frank R. Murdy sang Thy Will Be Done. The recessional selection was Lead, Kindly Light. A quartette comprising Mrs. Bernard Coyle, William Shannon, Mr. LaFontaine and Mr. Sullivan sang during the mass.

Burial was in the family plot at St Joseph's cemetery and Rt. Rev. Msgr Michael H. May conducted the committal service. The bearers were J. Edward and Timothy Driscoll and Patrick Hayes, all of this city, Jeremiah Driscoll of Franklin, Daniel Lucy of Hartford, and Michael Murphy of Boston. There were many beautiful floral tributes and the large attendance included mourners from Boston, Hartford, New York, Westerly and other places and delegations from the Rosary society, Mercy assembly, Ladies of Columbus, and the Southern New England Telephone Co. The funeral arrangements were in charge of Undertakers Cummings & Ring.

WEDDINGS

Kelsey—Chapman

Miss Violet Pearl Chapman, daughter of Charles Chapman of Guilford became the bride of Edwin Truman Kelsey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred E. Kelsey of Waterford, Thursday night at 7:30 o'clock, at the home of the bridegroom's parents. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth, pastor of the First Church of Christ, of New London.

The bridegroom's sister, Mrs. Charles F. Morgan, Jr., was matron of honor, and Mr. Morgan was best man.

The bride wore a blue canton crepe dress and carried a bridal bouquet of pink carnations. The matron of honor wore a dress of the same color and a corsage of pink rosebuds.

A reception followed the ceremony, at which relatives of the couple were present. The house was prettily decorated with pink and blue crepe paper, Japanese lanterns and laurel.

Many lovely gifts were received by the bride.

Fox—Tyler

Miss Lenora M. Tyler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Tyler of Oakdale, became the bride of Charles R. Fox, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert J. Fox of Oakdale, Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock at the Uncasville Methodist church. Rev. Charles Smith officiated, and Robert French was at the organ. The couple were attended by Mr. and Mrs. George Johnson of Uncasville.

The bride wore a taupe ensemble of tweed and her attendant wore brown chiffon velvet.

The wedding guests were members of the immediate families of the bride and bridegroom. The bride was the recipient of many beautiful and useful gifts.

After the ceremony the wedding party motored to New London, where a supper was served. The couple left for an extended honeymoon through New York state and New Jersey. On their return they will make their home in Oakdale.

RED ARROW BAG OF GOLD GOES TO WEST END COMMUNITY ASSOCIATION

With a bid of $49,046.40, one of several made by various organizations in the city, the West End Community club, the highest bidder, was awarded the bag of $200 in gold, 40 brand-new $5 gold pieces, at the Red Arrow auction conducted Friday evening at the Palace theatre by the Red Arrow Auction club of Norwich. The bag of money was one of 167 articles, valued at $1,400, given away to the highest bidders by the store-members of the club. As at previous auctions there was a capacity audience, which entered into the spirit of the auctions with zeal, especially in the closed auction, at which many valuable articles were offered in addition to those in the open auction.

Following the evening's performance, which was of high calibre and very entertaining, the large list of articles were arranged upon the stage by those in charge and the auction was opened by Max Hanover, treasurer and spokesman of the auction, with brief remarks. He thanked the audience for their presence at the auction and the interest manifested by them; also spoke of the Booster voting contest, the winners of which will be announced at the December auction.

The auctioneers in both the open and closed auctions, which went off without a hitch, were Anthony J. Bernard, proprietor of the Ideal Service station, who, with his witty and apt jests, kept the audience in good humor, and Bert Ferguson of Ferguson's Jewelry store. The bids handed in in the closed auction ranged from 35 cents to over $1,500 in Red Arrow money and several high bids were also made in the open auction.

At the conclusion of the auctions, Mr. Hanover announced the winner of the $200 in gold, the announcement being the cue for enthusiastic and sustained applause from the large number who remained to the end. The next auction to be held by the club will be in December, when the winners of five valuable prizes in the Booster voting contest, in which there are about 150 contestants, will be made. There is considerable interest in this contest, in that several prominent Norwich men and women are competing and are running a close race, with Mrs. D. Louise Atterbury of Greeneville out in front, according to the standing published recently.

The list of articles auctioned off and the bidders in Friday night's auction follow:

WILL RENDER GOUNOD'S MOST FAMOUS ORATORIO

Gounod's famous oratorio, Messe Solennelle (St. Cecelia's Mass), will be given its first rendition in New London at the First Congregational church at 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon. The augmented choir under the direction of A. B. Lambdin with Roger N. Daboll at the organ will be assisted by the following soloists: Gladys P. Highmore, soprano; William W. DeRoin, tenor, and Frederick Weld, bass. This is the fifth oratorio rendered by this choir and the 17th choral vesper of a series inaugurated in December, 1927. The series to be given during the coming winter months, of which the one on Sunday is the second, promises choral works varied in character and appeal, including another oratorio, Gaul's Holy City, on March 2.

The St. Cecelia mass is divided into seven parts, opening with the "Kyrie," a humble and touching prayer, full of religious emotion, followed by the "Gloria in Excelsis," one that truly conforms in every way to the sense of the text. The "Credo" has a majestic setting, while the "Offertory" is for orchestra or organ without the voice, being a masterpiece of graceful melody, penetrating harmony and exquisite instrumentation. The "Sanctus" that follows is probably one of the finest gems in all choral literature. Saint-Saens wrote, after hearing it for the first time, "I recollect no melody simpler and sweeter in cantilena or loftier in its tone than that of the 'Sanctus.'" With a fullness of symmetrical beauty, justify the old poet's epithet of "ravishing," is combined a devotional fervor and dignity which renders the strain totally inapplicable to any secular purpose.

The "Benedictus" that follows is treated in the old style of ecclesiastical chant for soprano solo with organ only, the strain being afterwards repeated in chorus; the composition winding up with the usual return of the "Hosannah" on its repetition strengthened by increase of force in the orchestra. The work closes with the "Agnus Dei," a beautiful setting in the matter of execution and skill.

The entire work will be sung in English instead of the original Latin text. The entire service is open to the public, no seats being reserved.

STERILIZER MADE SMALL BLAZE AT SANATORIUM

An overheated electric sterilizer accidently left turned on caused a small blaze in the dental room in the general building at Uncas-on-Thames about 1:45 o'clock this (Saturday) morning. Box 135, the private box at the sanatorium was pulled in calling out most of the fire apparatus in the city, but fortunately the services of the firemen were not needed as an employe at the institution squelched the flames with the contents of a three gallon can of chemical. The resulting damage was little or nothing.

When the box sounded Captain Thomas F Murphy despatched Sergt. John T Casey to the sanatorium and stood ready to send the patrol wagon and a squad of officers should the services of the police be needed. The recall was sounded a few minutes after the box was pulled.

Gifts to Wm. F. Shaw

The employes of the Norwich United Metal Co., sent a very beautiful and well-filled basket of fruit, and the Ladies' Aid of the Greeneville Congregational church a lovely floral bouquet to William F. Shaw of Stanton avenue, who has been ill for several weeks.

Entertained N. S. Club

Mrs. Gabriel Paquette entertained the N. S. club at her home on Germania avenue this week. The regular sewing period was followed by a social hour, during which Mrs. Charles Zerlaski assisted the hostess in serving of refreshments. Mrs. Arthur Allard will entertain next week.

OBITUARY

Mrs. George H. Griswold

Mrs. Elizabeth M. Griswold, wife of George H. Griswold, died about 3 o'clock Friday morning at their home in Mystic, following several months of illness. She was born in Mystic, Oct. 31, 1886, the daughter of Mrs. Georgia A. Woodmansee and the late Charles Woodmansee. She was a lifelong resident there, attending the public and high schools of the community and later going to school in Westerly.

She affiliated with the Union Baptist church, in which she was a faithful worker, teaching a class in the primary department of the Sunday school. She was also active in fraternal circles, being a member of Charity chapter, Eastern Star; Liberty council, Daughters of America; Mystic Rebekah lodge and Thames Past Noble Grands association.

Mrs. Griswold is survived by her husband; a son, Arthur S. Griswold, her mother and one sister, Mrs. Harry L. O'Brien, all of Mystic.

George W. Weller

After a long period of failing health, George W. Weller, 61, prominent citizen of Norwich, and well known Taftville newsdealer, died at 12:30 o'clock this (Saturday) morning at the home of his son, George W. Weller, Jr., of Lisbon. He had been in poor health for two years and suffered a heart attack several weeks ago from which he failed to rally.

Mr. Weller was the son of the late John and Mary Hall Weller and was born in one of the first tenements erected on Providence street, Taftville. Throughout his long life he had resided continuously in that village. Mr. Weller received his early education in the local schools and attended Snell's Business college in Norwich. He was always actively associated with the business life of the community.

At one time Mr. Weller was employed as a clerk in the old Penmah store on Front street, Taftville, and later conducted a grocery business on Merchants avenue. He was assistant postmaster at Taftville for several years and at the time of his death was proprietor of a newsstand and variety store in the Penmah building.

Mr. Weller was ever actively interested in the welfare of the Taftville section of the town and for several years served as treasurer of the Taftville Athletic association. Politically he was a staunch republican and was elected a justice of the peace on his party's ticket for several terms.

Fraternally Mr. Weller was a member of Somerset lodge, No. 34, F. and A. M., Franklin chapter No. 4, R. A. M., and Franklin Council No. 3, R. and S. M. He was also a member of Yemroud Grotto, M. O. V. P. E. R. Mr. Weller was a prominent member of the Taftville Congregational church, and a member of the Taftville Pioneers, of which organization he was secretary and treasurer at the time of his death.

A number of years ago Mr. Weller was united in marriage with the late Sarah H. Kinder. Rev. Mr. Kellogg performing the marriage ceremony at Taftville. Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. William H. Downing and Mrs. Leonard C. Prentice of Norwich, and one son, George Weller, Jr. of Lisbon. He also leaves two sisters, Mrs. William Hamilton of Danbury and Mrs. Henry Bishop of Providence and seven grandchildren.

Mr. Weller was always ready to help and accommodate his fellowmen and was admired and highly respected by his friends who were legion. He was probably the best known resident of Taftville and his numerous friends and acquaintances will be deeply grieved to learn of his passing from earthly life.

The club will meet next week with Mrs. William Hastedt on Linden parkway.

JEWETT CITY UNIT GIFTS FOR EX-SERVICE MEN

At the request of Orville LaFlamme unit, No. 15, American Legion, of Jewett City, John P. Corcoran carried comforts before Thanksgiving to ex-service men in Norwich. Seven at Uncas-on-Thames were given boxes of fruit, while to the 30 at Norwich State hospital supplies of cigarettes were distributed. The gifts were greatly appreciated by the men.

Returned For Thanksgiving

Two Norwich young men, Clarence Gwiazdowski, who is known as Starr, and Francis Durro, have just returned from a motor trip of several days which took them as far as Montreal, during which they covered from 1,200 to 1,400 miles, but were home in time for their Thanksgiving turkey.

Won Treasure Hunt

Over 100 boys participated in the treasure hunt Friday morning under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A., making a search in the woods around Norwich for the little slips which would entitle them to the prizes donated by Norwich business men.

Homer Bonville of Union street took first in the two-mile run, Stephen Stefano was second and Constantino Mologrides third. The full result of the hunt will probably not be known until this (Saturday) morning when the boys have turned in all their slips.

Pays on Intoxication Charge

Joseph F. Burns, 26, of this city was fined $5 and costs in the city court Friday morning on an intoxication charge. Burns smashed a plate glass window at the Wauregan Coffee Shop late Thursday afternoon. He has agreed to pay for the broken window.

B. C.-HOLY CROSS GAME CLOSES N. E. SEASON TODAY

BOSTON, Nov. 29.—(AP)—New England college football will have its usual finale here tomorrow, when Boston college and Holy Cross, those ardent Jesuit rivals, clash at Fenway park. For the first time in several years, the Purple appears to be the favorite.

Cleo O'Donnell, Holy Cross coach, has admitted that he will be greatly surprised if his team fails to defeat the Eagles. The rival mentor, Joe McKenney, predicts that Boston college will either win by one touchdown or be defeated by several.

The Holy Cross team is probably the best machine O'Donnell has assembled since 1925, when the Purple defeated Harvard. Though defeated three times this season, by Fordham, Harvard and Brown, it has shown great defensive strength and a fair running attack.

NORWICH TO DO PART IN ECONOMIC SITUATION

Mayor Lee Roy Robbins makes the estimate that $[illegible] is to be expended in the next twelve months and $[illegible] in the next six months is a response he made Friday to an inquiry which Governor Trumbull is addressing generally to the cities of the state to see what Connecticut may do to offset the depression in economic conditions.

Mayor Robbins mentions in his reply what may be expected in the line of city expenditures and in several pieces of new building that have been initiated in the city and town limits.

The letter received by Mayor Robbins from Governor Trumbull follows:

State of Connecticut
Executive Chamber
Hartford
Nov. 27, 1929.

His Honor, the Mayor
Norwich, Conn.

Dear Sir:

As you have undoubtedly read in the press, President Hoover has called upon the governors of the various states to furnish him with information and assistance in his endeavor to give strength to the present economic situation and to provide for the alleviation of any unemployment which might result from present disturbed conditions.

I have assured him that Connecticut will cooperate to the utmost and in this regard I am requesting that you furnish me with data concerning the following matters:

What expenditure will be made by your city for public works such as roads, streets, public buildings and other construction of this type during the next tw

ROOF FIRE FRIDAY NIGHT AT HOME OF CONGRESSMAN FREEMAN, NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 29.—Fire tonight caused damage to the residence of Congressman Richard P. Freeman, 73 Mott avenue, Neptune Park. The fire was discovered on the roof and was unquestionably caused by a defective chimney or sparks from the fireplace. When the blaze became threatening an alarm was rung in from Box 87, causing Deputy Chief Calvin Edmunds and four pieces of apparatus to respond. Because of the headway the fire had gained when the firemen arrived it was necessary to apply a stream of water to extinguish the blaze. The damage will not amount to over $500.

MRS. SADIE GLYNN STRUCK BY CAR OF NEWPORT MAN

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 29.—Mrs. Sadie Glynn, married, residing on the Fog Plain road, Waterford, is a patient at Lawrence Memorial hospital tonight, suffering from a possible fractured skull, but more likely from concussion of the brain, multiple abrasions of the head and face and lacerations of the body and head.

Mrs. Glynn had ridden with her husband on a truck to a point near Wild Rose avenue. Alighting from the truck, Mrs Glynn walked to the highway and as she stepped from behind the truck she was struck by the automobile driven by Peter Talbot, of 19 Mt. Vernon street, Newport, R. I. Mrs. Glynn was hit by the fender of the car and knocked down, her head striking the concrete surface. Talbot was arrested by State Police Officer Donald Brown and will be in Waterford town court Monday next, on a charge of reckless driving.

L. C. Pirevano, 147 Howard street, reported to the police this afternoon that an Auburn coupe, carrying Connecticut registration, L—766 was taken from his garage during the day and no trace of it has been found.

John M. Lyman, 153 Bank street, reported to the police that during last night or early today a spare tire was stolen from his auto while the car was parked in front of his store.

SKELETON KEY WAS USED TO ENTER MARVEL PLANT

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 29.—The police have been unable to obtain any clue to the identity of the thieves who entered the building, 78 Water street, Wednesday night and stole 12 sewing machines of the plant of the Marvel Underwear company. Today the police ascertained that the plant was entered by means of a skeleton key and that the truck that was used to carry away the machines was parked in an alley. The police failed to try the door of the industry, nor did they go to the rear of the building for had that course been pursued the truck must have been discovered, if indeed it had not been found loading with the loot. As a result of the laxity of the patrolmen on that beat they will not patrol that street during December, for next Sunday they will find themselves removed from the beat and doing duty on the outskirts of the city.

Blocked Crosswalk

Charles Harris, 36 Denison avenue, was arrested this afternoon by Patrolman Henry Hick, charged with violation of the state motor vehicle law in parking too close to the curb, at the corner of Green and Golden streets, blocking traffic on the crosswalk.

Philip Dufresne was arrested tonight by Patrolman Clarence Wells, charged with intoxication and will be presented in the police court tomorrow.

KOUSMAS, JEALOUS, IN JAIL—THREATENED ITALIAN GIRL

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 29—Although married and with a family, Louis Kousmas, truck driver residing at 359 Bank street, allowed his jealousy of Mary Morano, youthful Italian girl residing with her uncle, Louis Villano, 18 Elizabeth street, to work upon him to such an extent last night that he threatened the life of the girl. He is a prisoner at police headquarters on a charge of breach of the peace and will be presented in the police court tomorrow.

Kousmas became infatuated with the girl some time ago and when she consented to making appointments with him, his love for her increased. When the girl informed Kousmas recently that she was to become the wife of Nicholas Margo, the truck driver's jealousy was aroused and with the approach of the wedding, Kousmas could not control his feeling. He scribbled the threat to the girl on a scrap of paper last evening and going to her home made the paper secure to the front entrance by forcing the blade of his knife through it. His act was heard by merrymakers in the house, for the girl and Margo had been married during the day. One of the celebrators at the wedding went to the door and found the knife and note, the latter reading, "Don't do anything I wouldn't do and that you might be sorry for because I will be on the lookout." The note was signed "A Friend, Good Luck." The note and knife were turned over to the police and this afternoon Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh arrested Kousmas, who admitted placing the note where it was found and owning the knife. He now regrets permitting his jealousy to rouse his feelings to such a pitch that he is under arrest.

Appeal Vacated

Carl Albano, 30 Home street, was sentenced by the court yesterday to 60 days in jail, which sentence was suspended on a charge of non-support, conditioned that he pay his wife a stipulated sum of money weekly for her support. Albano took an appeal but today in the court he gave notice that he desired to vacate the appeal. Albano then posted a bond of $500 to assure the carrying out of the order of the court.

Vincenzo Ferri, 20 East street, was charged with violation of the state motor vehicle law in not driving with windshield wiper, or mirror and driving without registration. Two of the counts were nolled but on the last a fine of $2 was imposed.

Mario Remar, 42 John street, Westerly, was charged with failing to stop at an automatic danger signal, corner of Main street and Crystal avenue. He failed to appear in court and his bond of $15 was declared forfeited.

Three cases of intoxication were tried. A man of advanced years, without home or friends, who has been arrested 41 times on the same charge, was sentenced to 10 days in jail. He had been occupying a bunk in the tramp room several weeks. Another man was sentenced to 30 days in jail, while the third was discharged.

Donald B. MacDiarmid, U. S. Coast Guard, was charged with violation of the state motor vehicle law in not equipping his car with proper lights. He was fined $5 and costs.

Edwin T. Meleny, of Waterford and Miss Violet P. Chapman, of Guilford, were married yesterday at the parsonage of the First Church of Christ by Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth.

CIGARETTE MAY HAVE CAUSED FIRE WITH LOSS OF $3000

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 29.—Fire broke out this noon in the three-story wooden building, occupied by stores on the ground floor and by a half score of tenants on the other two floors, at Nos. 26-28-30 North Bank street and for a brief time it appeared as though the entire structure would be demolished, but the flames did not reach the exterior of the building. Because of the seriousness of the fire, a second alarm was sent in, bringing eight pieces of apparatus to the burning building. The building is owned by the estate of Benjamin A. Armstrong and the damage, both to the building and the tailor shop of Harry Hollender, where the fire originated, will reach $3000, it is believed. The fire was discovered about 11.30 o'clock, but a short time after Hollander had closed the store to go to lunch. Great clouds of smoke poured from the windows and between clapboards and when discovered by pedestrians a still alarm was sent to fire headquarters. Deputy Chief Calvin Edmunds and a fireman responded with a hand extinguisher, but by the time they arrived at the building an alarm had been rung in for Box 23, corner of State and Bank streets. When Deputy Chief Edmunds observed the seriousness of the fire a second alarm was sent in and within a few minutes three streams of water were being poured into the building from front and rear. The fire was located in the rear of the store and after a half hour's work the firemen were successful in extinguishing it.

Just how the fire originated is not known, but it is believed that a patron who had been in the rear of the store dropped a lighted cigarette among inflammable material, which was ignited and burned without knowledge of Hollander, who left for his home without suspecting anything so that the fire smouldered until it burst into flame.

HERBERT HALL, OF GROTON, MAY DIE FROM INJURIES

Herbert Hall, R. F. D. No. 1, Groton, sustained probable fatal injuries last night when the motorcycle he was driving collided with an automobile driven by George Gebeau, 148 Pearl street, Noank. Hall suffered a fractured skull, fractured left leg, fractured right wrist and multiple contusions and abrasions of the head, face and neck. He was taken to Lawrence Memorial hospital, where his condition was said to be critical. Gebeau was arrested by State Police Officers James Dygert and Michael Murphy, charged with reckless driving and furnished a cash bond of $200 for his appearance in the Groton town court next Monday.

Hall, who is but 21, was driving a Harley-Davidson cycle and when the cyclist approached the automobile, which was traveling in the opposite direction, Hall could not guide it safely past the automobile, which was traveling at a fast rate of speed on the Poquonoc road, Groton, and where the crash occurred there is a bad curve.

SCHOOL GIRL TOOK POISON SUPPOSING TABLET ASPIRIN

Miss Helen E. Reardon, 15, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Reardon, of Cohanzie road, Waterford, and a student at Williams Memorial institute, died yesterday at Lawrence Memorial hospital by her own hand, but though error for the young lady swallowed a bichloride tablet, mistaking the poison for aspirin. Besides her parents, Miss Riordan is survived by a sister, Mrs. Harry Buchmann and a brother, David Reardon, both of Waterford.

Miss Riordan about a week ago experienced a severe headache and during the evening, when the pain was unbearable, she went to a medicine cabinet and intended to take an aspirin tablet. Without turning on a light, Miss Riordan removed a tablet from a vial, but instead of the drug being aspirin, it was bichloride of mercury. Swallowing the poison, Miss Reardon's act was not discovered until the poison began to take effect. She was then rushed to the hospital where a diagnosis of her case revealed that the young school girl had swallowed the deadly drug.

Collided At Montville

A Dodge automobile driven by Walter E. Smith, Mystic, and a Buick coupe, driven by Leo Duprey, 39 Main street, Webster, Mass., collided last night in Montville. Both automobiles were damaged and Smith sustained concussion of the brain and cuts and bruises about the face and head. He is a patient at Lawrence Memorial hospital, where his condition was said to be favorable. Duprey was arrested by Groton state police, charged with driving while under the influence of liquor and driving without a license. He will be in the Waterford town court Monday, next.

Mrs. Margaret Ferguson and infant daughter, of Niantic; Mitchell Purnell, 18 Shapley street; Mario Santora, Belden street; Mrs. Owen O'Neill, Prospect street, Willimantic; Albert Leandri, 60 High street, Groton; Miss Jessie Williams, 244 Colman street; John DeLisle, 73 Belden street; Celestini Rochetti, 48 East street, and Mrs. Raymond Stearns and infant daughter, 740 Williams street, patients at Lawrence Memorial hospital, were discharged yesterday and today.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre.

Many a sucker has paid a $5 cover charge to see the inside of a New York night club, but that is no reason why you should do likewise—not when there's an up-to-date little club of this sort right here in Norwich—at the Palace theatre in fact where Billie Dove is playing in "The Painted Angel" today, tomorrow, Monday and Tuesday. Four big days of mirth, dance, music and hilarity. Four great days.

Among Billie Dove's lovers in "The Painted Angel" are a banker, a gangster, an oil king, a big planter and a large part of the United States navy. In that same picture which stars Miss Dove as a hard-boiled but really innocent cabaret girl are also found a chorus of dancing girls who weren't allowed to make dates and had to go to bed right after the show. The gowns worn by Miss Dove in this film, by the way, are of such unusual design that the studio kept them hidden until production was released so that they would not be copied.

An interesting feature of the film is the fact that the members of the cast enjoyed a banquet that lasted for three days while the picture was in production in California. While the star and her "love 'em and leave 'em" girls sang and danced on the floor of the big cabaret, other members of the cast sat at the long banquet table. Of course none of them ate all the time during the three-days period but enough fine steaks and trimmings were served to prevent the members from patronizing the studio cafe during that time.

The three song hits in the picture are "Help Yourself to My Love," "Only the Girl" and "Everybody's Darling." All of them are big hits and all Norwich will be humming them after they've been heard once. Wait and see.

Breed Theatre.

Youth, romance, drama, thrills.

Those four words describe "Salute," the West Point-Annapolis all talking Fox Movietone picture which made its debut yesterday at the Breed theatre.

"Salute" is unusually fine screen entertainment, graphically unfolded, with many a laugh to relieve tense moments, and has a smashing finish.

The tale concerns two brothers—George O'Brien, an athletic hero at West Point, and William Janney, a midshipman at Annapolis who tries hard but unsuccessfully to duplicate his famous brother's athletic triumphs. O'Brien's dominant personality sweeps all before him, but when the handsome athlete seems about to take the heart and hand of Helen Chandler, Janney realizes for the first time that he, too, loves her.

O'Brien proves himself perfectly at home in the talking screen medium, while Miss Chandler, in her first leading film role, registers as a distinctly new and pleasing personality. Excellent performances are given also by Janney, Stepin Fetchit, Frank Albertson, Joyce Compton and David Butler, the noted director, who appears as the Navy coach.

Broadway Theatre.

Buster Keaton, an Egyptian dancer!—Conrad Nagel singing love ballads to beautiful Nita Page!—Laurel and Hardy, magicians in the Keller class!—John Gilbert and Norma Shearer, a jazz Romeo and Juliet!—Marie Dressler, fat and fussy, a queen!—no, it's not a nightmare after too much Thanksgiving turkey—it's just a few high lights of the marvelous "Hollywood Revue," which opens a brief stay at the Broadway, with 25 of the brightest stars in Hollywood displaying talents never before even suspected by their screen friends. With scenic backgrounds of glittering beauty, changing with the speed of light, with lilting melodies already popular on radio and records, woven into the fabric of a show worthy of Aladdin's lamp, these stars, comprising the highest salaried group ever to appear in one motion picture, present a snappy, scintillating revue that is a revue—for unlike most pictures of its kind there is no hard-boiled chorine with a gunman sweetheart telling a possible but not probably story—in fact there's no story at all, just a bewildering succession of nifty novelties, classy comedy, divine dancing, rollicking repartee and melodious music, for two solid hours of absolute enjoyment, without the necessity of carrying an involved plot in one's mind. Charlie King and Bessie Love, famed in "The Broadway Melody," are again at their best. Jack Benny vies with Conrad Nagel for honors as master of ceremonies, Ukelele Ike is there with his little uke and appealing voice, Joan Crawford is again a "dancing daughter," Bill Haines is "wiser" than ever, Polly Moran has a screaming bit, Marion Davies is a peppy comedienne, Lionel Barrymore a dignified stage manager, and "every star in Hollywood" contributes to the feast of splendor, to say nothing of the sonorous Albertina Rasch ballet, Natacha Nattova, the sensational adagio artist, the winning Three Brox Sisters, Gus Edwards, composer and singer of many popular hits, and the famous Rounders. "The Hollywood Revue" salary list looks like a lotta telephone numbers, the production cost, like the U. S. treasury balance, but regardless of cost, the Broadway brings it to Norwich at regular prices, and with showings so arranged that every one can see it.

Breed Theatre.

Bringing film fans their initial opportunity of seeing—and hearing—the three Moore brothers, Tom, Owen and Matt, in one feature, Radio Pictures' all-talking production, "Side Street," comes tomorrow to the screen of the Breed theater for an engagement of four days.

Although the Moores are veterans in films, each has chosen to travel his path alone until RKO executives convinced them they had a story worthy of their combined effort. Mal St. Clair, who has a long list of screen successes to his directorial credit, has collected new laurels in this, his initial talking picture for RKO.

Besides the three Moores, there is a sterling cast of players, some of whom have gained fame on the stage. Emma Dunn, remembered for her work on the stage in "Old Lady 31," plays the mother role, while Frank Sheridan is cast as the father of the three Moores.

Kathryn Perry, wife of Owen Moore, lends romantic interest to Side Street. Others prominent in the cast include Walter McNamara, Al Hill, Mildred Harris, Arthur Housman, Charles Eyer and Heinie Conklin.

Several song numbers are introduced in the action of the story including "Take a Look at Her Now" and "In Our Little Home," written by Oscar Levant and Sidney Clare. RKO songcomposing team. RCA Photophone was used to record "Side Street."

Woman's love for ribbons may be due to her having originated from a rib.

The man who pays as he goes seldom goes fast enough to overheat himself.

ELKS' LODGE OF SORROW TO BE HELD SUNDAY AT 3 P. M.

The reception committee for the Elks Memorial day exercises to be held at the United theatre Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, consists of the following members of the lodge: Judge O. H. Williams, Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown, Dr. J. M. O'Connell, Dr. Harold F. Doyle, Simon Wreschinsky, Charles S. Kenyon, Henry D. Bailey, John Burdick, George A. Dolan, Howard Stillwell, Charles H. Cushman, Robert Chapman, William Rosen, William McVay, Herman Ernshaw, Albert McInness, Lawrence C. Purtill, James Reale and Girard Nardone. A fine musical program will be a feature.

FINES OF $5 AND COSTS FOR DRIVING PAST SEMAPHORE

Angelo Durandi was before Judge Oliver H. Williams in the Third district court Friday charged with passing a red semaphore beacon, Nov. 26, at the junction of Elm and School streets. Judge Williams fined him $5 and costs. Michael Murano was fined $5 and costs for passing the same semaphore, Nov. 25, when the red light was set.

Franklin E. Smith, of Meriden, charged by State Trooper Howard C. Lewis of the Hope Valley barracks with the operation of his Essex car on the Noose Neck Hill road Nov. 22 at 70 to 75 miles, pleaded guilty. He was fined $50 and costs.

Gottfred E. Lundberg, of East Greenwich, who had pleaded guilty to a charge of operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor, Nov. 22, changed his plea to nolo. Judge Williams gave him 10 days and a fine of $200 and costs. Lundberg appealed to the February session of the superior court, furnishing bail in the sum of $2,000. The machine driven by Lundberg, after hitting George Quattromani on Franklin street, continued to Dunn's Corners, where it struck a machine driven by Mrs. George P. Clark, of Shannock. Two persons in the Clark car were slightly injured.

An alarm from Box No. 43, Mechanic and Palmer streets, was rung in about 10:40 Friday morning for a grass fire which started at the end of Prospect street, Pawcatuck. The blaze was located between the main tracks of the New Haven railroad and the siding switch leading to the printing press works of the C. B. Cottrell & Sons Co. The switch engine was being operated on the siding and the fire was undoubtedly started by sparks from the locomotive which were fanned by a high wind. The blaze threatened to set fire to a pile of ties and came close to the rear of the house at 39 Prospect street occupied by the families of George W. Winterbottom and Earl G. Clark. The occupants of the house notified John O'Connell, residing at 25 Prospect street, and he sounded the alarm. The Hook and Ladder truck and the motor pumper of the Pawcatuck Fire department responded. A line of hose was laid from the hook and ladder truck and the fire was put out without damage. The recall sounded in a half hour.

SOCIAL CORNER POETRY

Bitter-Sweet.

Somehow, about this time of year,
Each heart must feel it so;
Though everybody's happy
A-rushing too and fro,
Buying dolls, an' wiggly doggies,
An' little birds that sing,
An' bears, an' trains that stop an'start
By pressing on a spring;
There comes a thought of sadness
Way underneath your skin,
A longing for the old days
When life was only spring.

Can see my dear old mother
Baking cakes an' lots of things,
Cutting funny holes in doughnuts,
Makin' silver thimble rings,
Mixing up her jar of mincemeat—
Say! but didn't it taste good!
How we youngsters used to swipe it
When upon the shelf it stood!
An' the funny ginger babies,
Raisin eyes, and' lips o' spice;
Strange, why all the ones I'm baking
Never seem quite half so nice.

Dad—he'd be a-cutting kindlin'
At the woodpile by the gate,
Whistlin' tunes like "Yankee Doodle,"
Teasing me an' sister Kate
Bout there being no St. Nicholas,
An' how he'd just like to know
Could a sleigh come full o' playthings
When there wasn't any snow.
Those glad days are gone forever,
Still, somehow, this time o' year,
Cedar boughs an' bright-hued holly
Blend with memory's falling tear.

THE LOOM OF TIME.

Man's life is laid in the loom of time
To a pattern he does not see,
While the weavers work and the shuttles fly
Till the dawn of eternity.

Some shuttles are filled with silver thread,
And some with threads of gold;
While often but the darker hues
Are all that they may hold.

But the weaver watches with a skillful eye
Each shuttle fly to and fro,
And sees the pattern deftly wrought
As the loom moves sure and slow.

God surely planned the pattern,
Each thread, the dark and fair,
Is chosen by his master skill
And placed in the web with care.

He only knows its beauty
And guides the shuttles withhold
The threads so unattractive
As well as the threads of gold.

Not till each loom is silent
And the shuttles cease to fly
Shall God reveal the pattern
And explain the reason why
The dark threads were as needful
In the weaver's skillful hand
As the threads of gold and silver,
For the pattern which he planned.

What Is Good?

"What is the real good?"
I asked in musing mood.

Order, said the law court;
Knowledge, said the school;
Truth, said the wise man;
Pleasure, said the fool;
Love, said the maiden;
Beauty, said the page;
Freedom, said the dreamer;
Home, said the sage;
Fame, said the soldier;
Equity, said the seer;—

Spake my heart full sadly,
"The answer is not here."

Then within my bosom;
Softly this I heard;
"Each heart holds the secret Kindness is the word."

A Service.

My garden in springtime
Is like a song of praise,
When every little flower throat
"Acknowledges His ways."

My garden in the summer
It is like a golden text,
Full of His loving kindness,
And peace for hearts perplexed.

My garden in the autumn
Is like a tender prayer
That ends in benediction
For all who linger there.

Our Own.

If I had known, in the morning,
How wearily all the day
The words unkind would trouble my mind
That I said when you went away,
I had been more careful, darling,
Nor given you needless pain;
But—we vex our own with look and tone
We might never take back again.

For though in the quiet evening
You may give me the kiss of peace,
Yet it well might be that never for me
The pain of the heart should cease.
How many go forth at morning
Who never come home at night,
And hearts have broken for harsh words spoken
That sorrow can ne'er alt right.

We have careful thought for the stranger,
And smiles for the sometime guest,
But oft for our own the bitter tone,
Though we love our own best.
Ah, lip with the curve impatient,
Ah, brow with the shade of scorn,
Twere a cruel fate were tile night too late
To undo the work of the morn.

PUMPKINS

Dear Social Corner Friends: I was glad to see the page full. I enjoy reading the letters as well as I like going to the picnics and I find many others that like to read the letters that don't belong to the Corner. Am glad L. T. H. and others have eaten some of those nice dried apple pies and she has also told us how they are made out of green apples.

Moses and his wife drove in the other day and tooted the horn for me to come out to the car. I looked in and if there weren't pumpkins! One of them didn't reach quite half the length of the car, but it was the longest one I ever saw. Moses' wife said, "Now you can have this large one or two smaller ones, just as you choose." I said, "I guess I would take the smaller one."

"Oh!" Moses said, "take both; they will keep." So I did. Now this all came about by my guessing the right weight of one pumpkin. Such wonderful luck as I am having with pumpkins; and now when there is one piece of pumpkin pie left on the plate, Mr. B. says, "Take it, I know you want it." ROSALIND.

A PLEA FOR TTHE GOOD OLD PICNICS.

Dear Corner Friends: Some writer asked why yellow was the Social Corner color. At one of the gatherings of Club No. 1 (when in its infancy) held at the home of Tidy Ady in Willimantic, Samantha brought a bunch of beautiful yellow chrysanthemums. They were so bright and cheery that Married and Happy suggested we choose yellow to represent the Corner spirit, so each club as formed has adopted the yellow streamers.

This letter was written some weeks ago when "discussion was in order", but owing to sickness was not mailed, yet I venture to send it along as I want to make a plea for our Social Corner as we "wid timers" remember it. No doubt some of the new members think the Corner page is only the gateway whereby one enters, so as to be able to enjoy the good dinners and pleasant times. We are all apt to forget the commercial value of the page that is given us each week, (if used for advertising), and that we as members should try and make it one of the most interesting pages, in one of the most popular newspapers. We all feel that our own contribution is of small interest, but if we do our best, we have done our bit.

The older members do know that the Corner page was for the exchange of ideas or suggestions that might be a help to members and readers, the hall gatherings in the winter and the picnics in the summer were for sociability alone, to get acquainted exchange ideas, etc. We also remember that our deceased editor who originated the page and approved of the gatherings, was never willing that anything should lower its standard. I may be old fashioned, but it seems to me, that by keeping everything in those same lines, we are only showing our loyalty to one who on many occasions made our gatherings more enjoyable by furnishing ice cream, and never failed to make our interest his interest.

About the collection for the picnic hostesses, several have spoken to me about it, and I feel I am expressing the opinion of many, in saying that no hostess should be expected to furnish so much that it becomes necessary to take up a collection. We never had to do it for years and years after the picnics were started. I know we have grown, and that the members at the picnics are many more in number, but in the same proportion the amount of food brought by the guests is larger. I wondered what the readers thought of the Social Corner suppers, when they read in a recent letter, that at one of our late picnics the hostess furnished "four or more quarts of dried beans (equivalent to eight or more when baked); 12 to 20 quarts of vegetable salad with pickles, and two or three pounds of coffee, with cream and sugar. Add to all this the rolls, sandwiches, salads, pies, cakes, cookies, doughnuts, cheese, etc., brought by the 240 or 250 guests." In Biddy's plea for the collection, she wrote "Do we not eat all we can hold?" Some do, and we also have our "after dinner remarks," usually accompanied with a long sigh. They are all along these lines: "Oh dear, I am so uncomfortable. I have eaten too much, and of things I am not supposed to touch."

I plead guilty with the rest, for we want to taste of this and that, that looks so tempting, but is it wise, or even necessary to oblige our hostesses to furnish more than she can afford in pocketbook or strength, that we may eat all we can hold? So I make a plea for the good old Social Corner picnics, when they meant a long day in the country, pure air, and sunshine, a lunch that satisfied and was not a burden either to our stomachs, or to the hostess. How well we remember those picnics given voluntarily, but with the hearty cooperation of all and especially the ones held by Aunty No. 1 (one of our oldest and best loved members) at the beautiful place in Franklin, with its long rustic arbor covered with clematis, leading to the fountain and little fancy bridges and streams below. These grounds with the beautiful flowers made it one of the show places for many miles. We were always made so welcome, and "Uncle" tried to add to the pleasure by passing large baskets of peaches to the many guests, with a hearty "help yourself." At the last picnic Aunty looked so tired and worn it must have been anything but a picnic for her. Let us go back to the days when a big dinner was not the all important thing at a Social Corner picnic.

The sister who said that at our hall gatherings the hostess was under no expense, is all wrong. I have served many times in all these years, and always paid my share of the expense for all hot dishes furnished at those dinners. That was what was decided when the gatherings were first started at Club No. 1.

About bringing things to sell at our gatherings that too, is against what they were intended for. I have all the sympathy in the world for those who have to struggle to make both ends meet. I know from experience of former years. (Thus the pillow slips, Biddy. But as you were the buyer we were equally guilty. Ha, ha, ha.) It is not the harm of today in selling articles at the hall, or collecting for the hostesses, it is the danger that in time our gatherings will mean more of a place to sell things than for sociability and that homes and grounds will be opened for picnics more for the compensation received, than from a true Social Corner spirit. The closing lines in an editorial printed on the Corner page on its tenth anniversary are true and to the point: "The Corner is what the members make it." PRACTICAL POLLY.

DIANA'S BROTHER KILLED

Dear Editor and Corner Sisters: I see as if I had lost track of many of you. My paper ran out and my mind was so confused I did not attempt to write it over as I should have done and not wait for the year to be out, but I expect it took any time as the subscription has been renewed.

As I heard from a few of you, I thing you know that my brother was killed instantly by an auto accident directly opposite his home and next house to us. The shock stuned me and I have not been able to rally. My nerves went to pieces, so to speak, and then I missed him so, for he always called each day to see me so I have been very lonely.

Then the season was a discouraging one, being so dry, and so it has been one thing and another. But I am some better than I was but the neuritis in my arm still bothers me at times.

I trust that all who have been sick are some better, if not well, and those to whom grief and adverse troubles have come are strengthened and helped by divine power, for we cannot meet these troubles alone and only Our Father can help us. Life is a struggle and we must always cling to our faith for without faith and hope we would not be able to peep out between the clouds that at times surround us.

Time has flown so to speak and another Thanksgiving is at hand and we find that although we have had much to contend with we still have much to be thankful for. So let us all be happy on that day, if we cannot all be merry-making and joyous, let us be filled with quiet happiness because of sweet and sacred memories of the many such days of the feast and thankful for the sustaining and strengthening power which has been given us all these many years.

I thank those who have written me personally and shall answer now as speedily as I can.

We have had lovely fall weather and must now expect the snows and cold of winter to come. Best wishes to each one and shall be glad of a letter from any of you at any time.

DIANA

CANNOT HAVE MEETINGS AT PLAINFIELD NOW

Dear Corner Members: For many reasons it is impossible for Club 4 to have a meeting at Plainfield, Dec. 5. I think there will not be one held at that place until spring.

Aries: I tried to see you in regard to this but couldn't find you.

Happy Thanksgiving to all. BUG

MUSIC.

Dear Corner Members: Isn't it fine that instruction in music plays so much more important a part in our school curriculum than it did years ago. I have a young niece in her first year at high school who is taking an elementary course in music as part of the regular work. I venture to predict that she will get much real pleasure in after school years from this, and find it a source of really usable knowledge both for herself and for others.

I have included the radio among my Thanksgiving blessings for the pleasure I get from hearing music that I could never have any other way. I am thinking of my favorites the spirituals by the jubilee singers, as a place pretty near the top. The half-hour programme seems like five minutes and when they sing such pieces as "The Devil Can't Do Me Harm," "You Must Come in at the Door" and "Little David Play on Yo Harp" the splendid harmonies sound in our memories for days.

Who doesn't love organ music? Two years ago I saw the picture "Annie Laurie" in New London. It was fine but the organ with favorite old Scotch melodies and with the refrain "Annie Laurie" occurring again and again was best of all and I like to remember it even yet.

What a little thrill of pleasure comes over one when an old tune, perhaps one she has not heard or even thought of for years comes even over the radio. Very likely it's something that you've never even seen the words or music, something that some one has sung to you when you were quite small, or even sudden, it brings back those days again. Such a piece was "The Little Old Log Cabin in the Lane" which I heard the night of the Edison celebration. And by the way wasn't that a programme for you—"Old Susannah," Edison's favorite and the rest of the old songs.

And when they gave us another evening two of Chief Justice Taft's favorites "The Glide Dance" and "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes" I felt that great folks have tastes quite in comon with the rest of us.

BO PEEP.

WHO KNOWS ABOUT FLOORS?

Dear Editor and Social Corner Members: Was pleased to see so many letters in Saturday's paper, but it made me feel that I am a real slacker. Perhaps if I could write like some other sisters, I would write oftener, but alas! however I do not miss reading a single copy of our paper.

I wonder if some sister who has had experience could advise me if it is best to stain or oil a new soft wood floor, also can a floor that has previously been painted be oiled to good advantage?

Arlie: Would you be kind enough to repeat your "sure cure for reducing" and how to prepare it? Would be very grateful to you.

O. D.: Have tried your quick coffee cake and like it.

Here is my way of making

Doughnuts: Two yeast cakes, 2 cups sugar, 2 1-2 cups milk, 1-2 cup of shortening, 8 cups flour, 2 eggs, 1-2 teaspoon nutmeg and salt. Put yeast in bowl with 1-2 teaspoon sugar, mi, until it liquifies. Add milk which has been scalded and cooled, also 2 cups flour. Beat well and let rise till full of bubbles, about one hour. Cream shortening, sugar, add nutmeg and the beaten eggs. Combine with first mixture adding remainder of flour sifted with salt. Knead about 3 minutes, cover and let rise until doubled in bulk. Turn onto board and roll 1-3 inch thick and let rise again until light. Coon in hot fat and drain. Sprinkle with powdered sugar. Will sign off now wishing all a very joyous Thanksgiving. PINKEY.

USING FRANKFURTERS.

Dear Editor and Friends: Well it looks as if winter had come to stay, but we have had a fine fall. My, but it's cool down here on top of the rock, but we must take the bitter with the sweet.

A lady said to me that she liked frankfurters, but there were only two ways to eat them and she was tired of those. I told her there were a number of ways such as frying them like sausages, baking them in the oven or cutting them fine and frying them and using them like dried beef. Then you can cut them up and fix them like a beef or pork stew. They are nice either way.

She looked at me in surprise and said she would try them.

On a cold morning before putting on your shoes breathe in them several times and your feet will be a lot warmer.

Butterfly: How are you and hubby these days? I would like to write more but my eyes are on the blink now.

I think Kochie will be frozen up this winter and I am sure I will.

Peter Pross: Please send in one of your jolly letters to cheer up a lonely old lady.

Well, I hope the sick are better and may God be with them all is my wish and prayer. NONESOPRETTY. Club 4

WHEN MAKING WOOLEN DRESSES AND BLOUSES.

Dear Social Corner Friends: We have had such beautiful weather this fall, that when real winter comes suddenly, as it did last week, extra fires and warmer clothing feel all right. For those who make their own woolen dresses and blouses and wish to give them a tailored effect, make bound button holes, tie slashes or inset pockets. I will tell you how I make them.

Practice makes perfect, and it's better to practice on something besides the dress until you get the hang of it. Bound button holes are much easier to make than the real button holes especially in coats. I well remember the first button hole I made when I was a little girl. To make bound button holes mark or sew a straight line on the wrong side of material, indicating the length and position of buttonhole. Then cut a strip of the same material to extend a little more than an inch on all four sides of the marked line. This strip may be cut on the bias or true with the thread of the material. Lay the strip on the material right sides together with the center of the strip exactly over the marked line and baste together. Stitch a rectangle around the basted line, as far from the line itself as the desired width of the buttonhole.

Cut through both thicknesses of material, almost to the end of the line. At each end make a very small diagonal clip toward the corner of the rectangle. Turn the free ends of the strip through the slash. Baste in place, press and stitch.

In making the inset pocket, make the strip long enough for the desired width of the pocket. Hope these instructions will help some one.

Snowball Biscuits: Two cups flour, 2 level teaspoons of baking powder, 1-2 teaspoon of soda, 1 rounded tablespoon of shortening, salt, and 1 cup of sour milk.

So Say We All of Us.

November days are short in hours,
And many often murky;
But there's one day we do enjoy
The day which brings us turkey.
The largest plates are used that day
To hold the "turk and trimming",
And tatoes mashed and creamy white
In pools of gravy swimming
We wonder how we eat so much
When to the day beholden
We find a space for pumpkin pies
So spicy, rich and golden,
And golden, too, are thoughts which come.
For all the joys of living
For all the blessings through the year
We celebrate Thanksgiving.

CLUB NO. 5 MEETS DECEMBER 4

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: Does it seem possible that nearly a month has passed since our last meeting?

Now please, all of you, remember that on Dec. 4 each and every one attending our meeting is requested to bring a ten cent present. Also bring a lot of nice home-made cakes, pies, salads, pickles, cheese and anyone wishing to bring cold sliced meat may do so. All those that promised beans, do not forget them.

Aunty No. 1: If it is not possible for you to come kindly let me know and I will come up and get your donation as I promised but we all want to see you.

Twice-Twenty: Thank you so much for the recipe for those delicious filled cookies. I certainly missed your sweet smiling face at South Killingly.

Artificial Flowers: How are you this fine morning? Shall you go to Club 4 this time? I will see you at the meeting in Buckingham Memorial.

Now everyone come that possibly can to the next meeting of Club No. 5, on Dec. 4, in the Buckingham Memorial. Stub is to be hostess and I know that we will have a nice dinner if you all do your best.

Best wishes to those of our sisters that are ill. May God restore them to their usual good health. A Merry Christmas to all. BAY STATE

A FLOOR LAMP

Dear Sisters and Editor: I attended the meeting of Club 6 in Mechanic's mill and had a very nice time. May Bug with her helpers gave us a lovely dinner and Bonnie Belle furnished the program. It seems good to start meetings again on regular schedule after the summer picnics. We were sorry to hear of the illness of Powaset who is in the Westerly hospital and B. Natural who has been confined to her home in Mystic for many weeks.

I wonder how many read Dr. Myers' articles on "Children" in the Sunday Post? They are certainly inspiring and after thinking them over one wonders why these things never occurred to us before. In this same paper a week ago there were directions for making a floor lamp that were so simple and inexpensive that most any one might have one. It was made from a square board (an old stand top) with four silkateen spools glued on for legs. A hole bored in the center and a five-foot piece of gas or water pipe fitted into it. The wire was run up through the pipe and a two bulb fixture was attached. This can be finished in any number of ways but the way given was diagonal strips one inch wide cut from full page colored ads in magazines and wound slantwise up the pipe. The base and legs were gilded. The shade was made of brown paper with stars and crescent cut out and the section lined with a darker color of tissue paper. Paraffin was shaved on these sections and pressed with a very warm iron. This gives a parchment effect. Then holes were punched at regular intervals and the pieces were laced to the frame.

Connie: Send the recipe for eggless cake, will you? Did I say brown bread with frosting, why! why!

Raven: Did you get a ride?

I wasn't the least bit enthused over the snowstorm this morning and the less we have of them the better I will like it. The youngsters were up at 5:30 and wanted me to get up and get their sleds from the cellar. Of course I did! SUMAC (No. 6).

WHEN A DOCTOR ISN'T HANDY.

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: What an intuition some one had when they first thought of the Social Corner and what it would mean to those who were lonely and I think it just wonderful to have the privilege of becoming acquainted with respectable and common people. As the snow commences to fall I think of those living away from a doctor or drug store and that are susceptible to croup, bronchitis or pneumonia. In case of inflammation of the bowels it is always advisable to send for the doctor but sometimes we have a long wait and anxiety makes the time seem long anywhere. In such a case make a paste of salt and lard, fold a wide pillow case so that is always at hand, spread on the paste and lay the cloth smoothly. There is no particular rule only be sure to stir in enough salt. Change when all the lard is absorbed. This is my first letter. Hope some one remembers this in time. Wishing you all a happy Thanksgiving.

ARON.

MAKES CORRECTTION.

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: I wish to correct a mistake in Saturday's Bulletin, Nov. 23 where I said cut 23 pieces of card board. I should have said 2 of triangle shape each side of triangle 1 1-8 inches. I think I made this plain to the readers of the Social Corner page and many thanks to our obliging editor for correcting my mistake as ever.

STRANGER IN THE CITY.

DANCES IN HAMPTON.

Social Corner Members: In continuance about Hampton I must mention a few of the dances we enjoyed in Hampton hotel; Lancers, a graceful figure if well executed; Spanish dance, easy but pretty; chase the squirrel, name not misapplied for you followed your partner down the outside then back, crossed over and partner followed you down the outside and back joined hands and down center, back, cast off and right and left as contra dances usually finish; French four, Virginia reel, opera reel and chorus jig.

Once a man by the name of Frank Olds was at a dance in the hotel when some one announced, "Now we will have a jig from Mr. Frank Olds." I never saw him there before or since. The younger ones thought it a great feat, so Mr. Snow's daughter, Ednah and I often went up into the dance hall when mother let us go over there. Really in those days children were not allowed to roam as pleased them but got consent to go although I'll confess they did not know just what we were up to after reaching our destination always. Well, upon getting to the hotel Ednah and I soon went up into the ball room where she would say, "Now we'll have a jig from Mr. Frank Olds" and we took time in announcing and executing the difficult figures to our young minds equaling if not surpassing Mr. Olds. I remember we always stood just where he did at the south side of the hall. We sort of side stepped around twice in a circle then came to center and did the stunt to our entire satisfaction. I cannot recall a step we used for the jig but we so enjoyed ourselves with no criticism from the audience or applause, just unobserved we thought. But the observer kept quiet and after we left Hampton we learned that Vera Snow, eldest daughter, became so curious to learn our attraction for the empty dance hall that she went up in the attic, punched a tiny hole and after a respectful length of time went to her place of observation and it was so nice of her not to interfere or tell of what she discovered. How it would have spoiled our pleasure. Once when Randolf Bullard taught dancing in the hotel in Hampton my parents thought they would like to dance once more in the old hall and we invited Ednah Snow to ride over to her former home. She accepted. We had learned to dance the Danish polka here in our city successfully so during the evening asked Mr. Bullard to play it for us. I suppose we thought of astonishing natives. I certainly was more than astonished, for when the time came to hop I failed to do it—some say one foot belonged to the meeting but both of mine did. No round dance then without a hop.

In a well known musician's house recently he spoke of Vasouvanna whereupon he just hummed the tune and showed how it went and was quite able to put a hop in successfully and gracefully.

I found a clipping from a Norwich paper about Mr. Hazen saying: "He was of most abstemious habits, gentleman by bearing, the soul of courtesy and good manners and it has been remarked of him since his death, probably made more ladies and gentlemen in manners in this part of the state than any other one instrumentally."

"He died at the age of 77. He was going to Moodus to conduct a ball, riding on the outside of a mail coach, a bleak April day and took a hard cold causing his death. He expressed a wish that his favorite violin should be buried with him and those who took a farewell look as he lay in the casket saw a violin lying by his side, the bow across the breast of the old dancing master."

Pez-away: "Them's my sentiments tew" about commercializing the Corner.

Blackeye Susie: Sorry you did not have better luck with "bachelors' buttons." They need support they grow so tall and slender. Try some "old-maids' pinks" to be company for them. Nice you were able to keep them in your own garden.

CRETIA (Club No. 11).

THANKSGIVING DAY.

Dear Editor and Friends: Thanksgiving day is a day for meditation and prayer and returning thanks to God. Our Heavenly Father, who has not withheld His many blessings and has generously bestowed all mankind with a bounteous harvest. It is also a day of feasting and family reunions.

During the past few months I have had an opportunity to watch the growing and caring for of a flock of turkeys. The little poults at the tender age of a day old leaving from the west by express and arriving at Norwich on a very hot day having been on the road for four days were in a weakened condition when they got here. However with the right care and careful attention they soon began to grow and responded quickly due to their many kinds of grain mashes, grits and semi-solid buttermilk. They are of the mammoth bronze turkeys so that their plumage finally showed their true type. At killing time the young toms weighed over 25 pounds.

In conclusion a very vivid scene is reviewed of a mother's home and a mother's table. Placed thereon is a roast turkey and all the fixings that make the perfect dinner and grouped around this abundant spread is the complete circle of young men and young womanhood enjoying the dinner, a custom carried out for many years. But with the shifting scenes of life the links are broken and the space widened and finally the social gathering discontinues and to those that remain precious are the sacred memories of the by-gone days when I spent some of the happy hours of life with brothers and sisters in a family reunion at mother's home on Thanksgiving day.

MAKING PAPER PULP.

Dear Social Corner Members: I think it was Arlea who asked how paper was chewed up to make statues, etc. In school we used to make papier mache maps and I think that process would be the same as far as preparing the paper.

As I remember it we tore up the paper in small pieces and soaked it thoroughly in water. Then we wadded it up in balls and rubbed it on the large half round household graters. This chewed it up so that it became just a pulp and could be fashioned into any shape desired. This or some similar process would produce the p[illegible]

Hope everybody had a pleasant Thanksgiving. CONTENTED.

THE GAME PLAN

Dear Social Corner Editor: As your department has been such a great help to me, I have unconsciously formed the habit of turning to it before reading any other part of the paper. I have a fine collection of recipes in a loose-leaf book and the majority of them are from your department.

I am one of those busy mothers who have so many problems confronting them every day and who in turn find many times the solution in another's suggestion. And so I'm sending along a plan that is working wonders with my little ones. I have a little daughter just three who is quite willing. Coaxing, demanding, punishing, etc., seemingly have failed to get results and so I conceived the "game plan." It works and of course is subject to changes as she and baby brother grow older. She used to pout about eating her cereal, but now she is playing a "game" to "beat brother." There is no scolding now when we cross the streets where there may be danger, as she really thinks she is holding mother's hand for fear mother may fall or be hurt. Everything is a game, no matter what, and when she and baby brother have their dinner at five a story goes with it and even going to bed is a game, when the clock strikes seven.

third offense intending to obtain a large amount of money.

The investigation resulted in several local suspects being brought to police headquarters today and held for questioning. All were finger printed and the impressions compared with those at the Miller and Cloverdale business houses Sunday.

Captain Jarvis added, that developments today will enable them to make an arrest, possibly on Saturday. The Arcadia break today is the fourth to take place in the city during the past month. The first took place on the night of November 14, when burglars gained admittance to the rectory of St. Mary's church, ransacked the home of the clergymen and made their way out with money and valuables amounting to about $300. All efforts to bring about an apprehension have failed.

On Wednesday evening, December 4, F. W. Barber, counselor in field service for the Junior Achievement Organization, will address a public meeting at the Putnam high school auditorium. The Junior Achievement is a plan of work for urban groups of both and girls. Training teachers in hand work is another feature effective of the organization. Invitations to be present at this meeting have been extended to the Putnam Parent-Teachers' association, town school committee, teachers of all local schools and the public in general. It is expected that representatives of the educational departments of the towns of Woodstock, Pomfret, Thompson and Eastford will also be present.

A special meeting of the teachers of Putnam was held last Tuesday for the purpose of conferring with Miss Helen Betobel of the state bureau of tests and measurements. Miss Betobel is at present engaged in making a small survey of the local schools.

All schools in the city and town will re-open Monday at the regular hours, following the annual two day recess this week in the observance of Thanksgiving day.

Football fans who attended the annual Killingly-Putnam high schools grid game at Adams field Thanksgiving day were pleased at the remarkable talent displayed by the group of musicians who constitute the Putnam high school symphonic band, now in its organization stage. The band has been organized but a few months, and at this date has developed to a point far in excess of expectations.

Sidney King, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. S. King of Center street, a student at Springfield college, is passing the holiday week end at his home here.

Philip Bibeault returned to his studies at a Boston school today after spending the holiday at his home on South Main street.

Philip Arnold, a student at Bryant-Stratton school of business administration in Providence is spending the holiday recess at his home on Chapman street.

Gilbert F. Perry of Providence street, returned to his duties at the State Bureau of Engineering at Worcester, today, after spending Thanksgiving with his parents, City Engineer and Mrs. G. W. Perry.

Apparatus at the Central and North end fire stations responded to an alarm from Box 24, on Walnut street today for a chimney and roof fire at the residence of Alderman-at-Large Warren S. Ames. The firemen under the direction of Deputy Chief Alphonse Dumas quickly extinguished the blaze. Chief Dumas reported this morning that fire loss caused by the spread of flames to the roof will amount to about $15.

Only two days remain for the republican and democratic nominees for tax collector, to carry on their campaign, which to date has been one unmarked by any demonstrations of rallies or even a newspaper talk to the voters. Both Harvey Grinnell of Providence street, republican standard bearer and James J. Charron, democratic candidate, are equally confident that the results of Monday's election will place them in office. No public interest whatever is being manifested in the forthcoming election. The race between Charron and Grinnell will be the only contest and since the winner may be easily elected by the ordinary turn-out of voters for a city election it is believed to be reason for the absence of enthusiasm on the part of the voters.

Thermometers in the city and suburban sections dropped several degrees below freezing marks today. Ice almost an inch in thickness covered ponds hereabouts today and with the indications of continued coldness have prompted that skating and other ice sports will be enjoyed at the week end or early next week.

$100,000. Of that amount about $75,000 is expected to flow back into trade channels. How much of it here? That's the big question right now. Local business men are not at all unreasonable as to what becomes of the money. They only ask that club members living here at least look over their holiday offerings and give them a chance to sell.

Miss Barbara Alexander, student at the House in the Pines, at Norton, Mass., is spending the week end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Alexander, of North Main street.

On this school holiday some of the borough's children were courting tragedy by playing about on the thin ice of ponds in this vicinity.

Lieut. Ross V. Urquhart and Officer Henry Mayo of the Danielson barracks were in Putnam today, assisting in an investigation of two recent burglaries in that city.

At the Connecticut Village plant of Powdrell & Alexander a cafeteria is being fitted up for the convenience of employes, of which there are several hundred. At the noon hour the workers will be able to obtain lunches at cost.

James A. Manton of Fall River is spending the week end with friends in Danielson.

The new general offices of the Quinebaug Co. and the Wauregan Co. in Providence for many years past, will occupy the new quarters here in early December.

It is given out that no leniency is to be shown those who would operate motor vehicles on and after Jan. 1, with 1929 markers. Not a day is to be allowed them. In official circles the hint is given that applications for renewal of registrations should be made now, to avoid the rush and delays of late December.

Personal taxes continue to dribble in, but there are hundreds in Killingly who have not as yet discharged their obligation to pay, but must do so, to avoid penalties, before Dec. 15.

Chief John McFarland expresses his appreciation of the manner in which the motoring public is observing the new no-parking regulation in effect on Main street between Academy and Spring streets. Drivers of cars are equally grateful for a better traffic way and the lessening of danger of accidents.

JEWETT CITY

J. H. STAFFORD'S FATHER HAD NOTABLE WAR SECORD

Joseph H. Stafford, is home from Providence where he went to see his father, Joseph R. Stafford, now in his 86th year. The Providence Journal, speaks of Mr. Stafford as one of the few remaining in the thin blue ranks of Rhode Island's G. A. R.

The story tells how young Stafford, of the Ninth Rhode Island, Company D was only 17 when he enlisted. The commanding officer told him, when his regiment reached the southern front, that he was too young, and would have to go back home. This the lad refused to do, with the result that the captain of the company wrote to the young man's mother, telling her that her boy was determined to be a soldier. Her consent was asked and he went into battle that night.

Today J. R. Stafford is 84, broad-shouldered and tall, a man of outstanding appearance in every way. He is a past department commander of the Grand Army of the Republic for Rhode Island, is chaplain of the department and of Slocum post. The Journal says: "His tall erect figure and white carded face make him familiar as the man who offers the prayers at the Soldiers' and Sailors' monument on Memorial day, and later recites the Gettysburg address at the North Burial ground.

He is very proud today, of an enormous cane fashioned of a sunflower stalk, leatherbound, a gift to him from the late Thomas W. Gardner of Pawtuxet.

Mr. Stafford, has living in Jewett City his son Joseph H., also 4 grandchildren, Joseph Chester, James I., Mrs. Elizabeth Crotty, Mrs. Olive Thornton and Misses Marjory and Catherine. There are 4 great grandchildren, Verna and Betty Thornton, Joseph Chester Jr., and his brother Robert.

Our Christmas club for 1930 opens Monday, December 2nd. Weekly deposits in amounts ranging from 10 cents to five dollars will be received, with interest paid on all accounts kept up to date. Jewett City Savings bank. —Adv.

PILES FOR FOURTH PIER BEING DRIVEN ON FRIDAY

With the mercury at 28 Friday morning, the piles were being driven for the anchorage of the fourth and last pier for the new Quinebaug bridge. The west channel of the stream has been deflected at this point, so that the entire river runs east of the long wooded island, which is owned by E. P. Burjeson. The east abutment and three piers are completed. The steel cofferdams were being bolted in place Friday. So far, the weather breaks have all been favoring the contractors, with unusually low water and mild temperatures. One more pier and the west abutment is all that remains of the work that concerns the river bed.

Ask for Underpass

It was said here Friday that a petition is to be sent to the N. Y., N. H. and H. R. R. Co., asking that they establish an underpass for pedestrians at the foot of Main street, at such time as the crossing shall be closed to vehicular travel. When the new bridge is completed, some time during the fall of 1930, there is no doubt about it, the crossing is to be absolutely and totally closed to traffic. Yet, it was pointed out today several hundreds at least would be greatly accommodated each day, if the railroad company would establish an underpass for pedestrians only, as it is said they will be constituted to do. One major benefit is seen in the fact, that those who must go to and from South Main street all day, would use a tunnel and be grateful, or otherwise, there is always the temptation to cross the tracks at grade at points further north, where such crossing would be a trespass and at their own risk.

UNFAVORABLE ARGENTINE REPORTS LED TO ADVANCES IN WHEAT VALUES

CHICAGO, Nov. 30—(AP)—Broadening of wheat export business from North America, together with reports of unfavorable Argentine crop reports, led to sharp advances of wheat values here. Prominent bulls on United States wheat taken for shipment overseas, sold at the highest terms yet on the long curve, and showed signs of holding the market. Incidentally, today's rise in prices comes to apparent fading away of prospects of heavy delivories here on December wheat contracts.

Chicago closing quotations on wheat were strong at virtually the day's top level, 3 1-8c to 6 1-8c per bushel higher than Wednesday's finish. Corn scored unchanged to 3-4c up, oats 1-4c to 1-2c and 5-8c advanced, and provisions varying from 15c setback to a rise of 25c.

Helped by a lively advance of prices at Liverpool and by active future delivery purchasing here for houses with trans-Atlantic connections, the Chicago wheat market today went up as soon as trading began. Despite a world of wheat taking, offerings continued to be readily absorbed, and values at one time underwent severe reaction. In some quarters it was estimated that in the last 48 hours 3,000,000 bu. or more of North American wheat had been bought for export. Back of this export business were advices suggesting that the 1929 Argentine and Australian combined surplus of wheat available for shipment abroad would be as low as 100,000,000 to 120,000,000 bu.

One well-known American crop authority now in Argentina cut 10,000,000 bu. today from his latest previous forecast. Meanwhile Argentine government experts estimated the 1929 wheat yield in the Rosario district at only 40,000,000 bu. contrasted with 125,000,000 bu. in 1928. Stripe rust was blamed today for much of the crop damage done in Argentina. Word from Liverpool that continental Europe, Germany in particular, was buying at Liverpool wheat to be loaded out of store immediately had a special stimulating effect on this. So did also announcement that Argentine wheat shipments showed a big falling-off in quantity this week compared both with last week and a year ago.

Corn and oats borrowed strength from the action of wheat, despite weather likely to facilitate marketing of the new corn crop.

Provisions averaged higher reflecting upturns in hog values and in grain as well.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30—(AP)—Extreme discrimination in the making of new commitments is urged by leading commission houses in their weekend letters to customers. It is pointed out that the action of the market during the past week indicates that the deflationary movement has not been entirely completed, and that there is a likelihood of many issues breaking below their lows of November 13. Considerable switching of the stocks is expected next month in connection with the establishment of the losses on 1929 income.

Possibility of additional gold withdrawals for shipment to Europe is expected in Wall street to act as a deterrent to any further reduction in the New York federal reserve rediscount rate, at least until after the turn of the year. It is believed, however, that for the time being such withdrawals will be offset, as a credit factor, by the increased purchase of bills and government securities by the federal reserve banks.

Jones & Company reports that orders for structural steel in the past week amounted to 22,000 tons compared with 41,000 in the previous week. Inquiries, however totaled 95,000 tons compared with 60,000 in the preceding week.

H. A. Scandrett, president of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific railroad, reports that the road's capital expenditure budget for 1930 will consummate $32,000,000 of which $6,000,000 will go into new equipment and $16,000,000 for improvements.

The Otis Steel company is making a license agreement with the American Rolling Mill company for the latter's continuous rolling process for manufacturing sheets. Installing the necessary new equipment will involve a $10,000,000 expenditure by Otis.

Production of pig iron is being curtailed and several blast furnaces have been closed in the past fortnight. Indications are that the month end will find less than 60 per cent. of the furnaces active.

Insolvencies in the United States this week, as reported to R. G. Dun & Company for the five business days, totaled 371 compared with 471 in Thanksgiving day week last year.

Treasury Balance.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29—(AP)—Treasury receipts for Nov. 26 were $4,873,698.75; expenditures $4,556,463.22; balance $127,934,902.35.

DAYVILLE

At St. Joseph's church at 8 o'clock, Thanksgiving morning, Doris, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Billings was united in marriage with Joseph Gauthier of Danielson. The bride was accompanied by Anita Cournoier of Putnam, and the groom by Arthur Billings. The nuptial mass was sung by Rev. Ignatius Kost, pastor of St. Joseph's.

Moran—Hopkins

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hopkins at the Valley, Thanksgiving afternoon, their daughter, Gladys Ruth, was united in marriage with Walter Vernon Moran, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Moran of West Gloucester, R. I. The bride was attended by her sister, Mildred Hopkins, and the groom by Howard Place, of West Gloucester. Gertrude Moran, sister of the groom, was ring-bearer. The officiating clergyman was the Rev. William Swainson. The ceremony was attended by many friends and relatives. Mr. and Mrs. Moran left for Providence, with the best wishes of all.

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Putt have returned home after a lengthy visit in Fort Wayne, Ind.

Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Lehrer of Springfield, spent Thanksgiving here.

Doris Billings was given a miscellaneous shower at the home of Mrs. Irwin Miller Monday night.

An Unusual Reunion

Joseph Berth and family spent the holidays at Worcester, where four brothers were brought together for the first time in twenty years.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Nicholson and Harold Brown, of East Glastonbury, and Mr. and Mrs. Norman Brearley were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Nicholson for Thanksgiving.

Earl Brearley and family, of Quincy, Mass., spent Thanksgiving with Mr. and Mrs. Harry Brearley.

Ruth and Hazel Weeks are spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Albert Rollinson.

James Ray has sold his property and moved with his family to Sketerville.

The body of Mrs. Mary Hopkins, widow of Stephen Hopkins, and a former resident here, was interred at the local cemetery Wednesday morning.

Emil Lehrer is spending a few weeks at Wales, Mass.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Moving Pictures at Y. M. C. A. Sunday.

At 4 o'clock on the coming Sunday afternoon in the big gymnasium of the local Y. M. C. A. one of the most beautiful moving pictures will be shown, namely, Edgar Allen Poe's famous poem, "Annabelle Lee." The wonderful genius of the popular southern poet is well known and this particular poem is one of his choicest.

The theme that sincerity must win over pretense. An exquisite production; it's locale, the picturesque New England coast with beautiful tropical scenes of an island

NOTRE DAME-ARMY GAME TODAY IS FEATURE OF EASTERN GRID FINALE

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—(AP)—The eastern football season will be brought to a spectacular climax tomorrow by the attempt of Captain Red Cagle's gallant Army team to check the wild rush of Notre Dame's warriors undefeated contenders for the national gridiron championship.

The odds tonight were all in favor of Notre Dame, in spite of the fact that the Fighting Irish enter the fray without their star center, Tim Moynihan, who broke his ankle a week ago, and minus the coaching direction of the famous Knute Rockne, kept at South Bend with an infected leg to listen to the game by radio.

The unbeaten Notre Dame array was a 2 to 1 favorite in the wagering. But the Army has completed plans for a sustained attack, led by Captain Cagle, making the last eastern appearance of his brilliant career. West Point's hopes are pinned on Cagle, the law of averages and a fair share of the "breaks."

To make it a colorful finish to the eastern season, the greatest crowd of the year in this gridiron sector is expected to pack the Yankee stadium to a capacity fixed officially at 82,500. To meet the biggest demand ever witnessed for tickets to any football game in the east, every inch of space in the big American league park has been utilized.

Speculators tonight were reported to be asking and obtaining as high as $150 a pair for such tickets as they could obtain in even reasonably desirable locations.

At the face value of $4 each, the "gate" for the game will exceed $326,000 but the actual prices paid probably will make the cost of admission pass $400,000.

The great gathering will need a plentiful supply of blankets and furs, with around freezing temperatures existing today and a further drop expected for tomorrow. The Cadets spent the day at the New York Athletic club's grounds at Travers Island, going through a light drill under the direction of Head Coach Biff Jones, who is directing his last Army team. At the Westchester-Biltmore Country club, Rye, the Irish were put through signal practice by Tom Lieb, Rockne's chief assistant.

With the exception of Moynihan, the Irish center, and Dick O'Keefe, star Army halfback who is suffering from a head injury, both squads were reported in good condition. O'Keefe will be unable to play and his place will be taken by Jim Glattly, South Dakota product who has developed rapidly this season.

Tomorrow's battle is only the 16th in the series between the rivals, begun in 1913, but the game has grown to classic proportions in this comparatively short period. It occupies the banner spot on the eastern program this year especially because of Notre Dame's great record and the fact that victory tomorrow over the soldiers will give the Irish a clean slate of nine victories and as strong a claim as any team to the national honors of the year.

For West Point and Captain Cagle, the contest offers a chance through triumph to redeem a season of disappointments. Beaten by Yale and Illinois, tied by Harvard, the Cadets have failed to win a single major engagement so far. They had their own great record last year spoiled by Notre Dame before the Stanford cyclone hit New York, so that the soldiers are anxious to obtain revenge.

The probable lineups:

Army.		Notre Dame.
Carlmark	L. E.	Collins
Perry	L. T.	Leahy
Hillsinger	L. G.	Law (C)
Lazar	C.	Nash
Humber	R. G.	Canno

Notre Dame scored 178 points, Army 149.

Smith Gets Verdict

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 29—(AP)—Steve Smith, Bridgeport, Conn., came back tonight to take a close newspaper decision from "Cowboy" Eddie Anderson, Casper, Wyo., in ten rounds here tonight. When the fighters met here several weeks ago, Anderson was given the decision.

OUTBOARD RACING RULES CHANGE FOR 1930 SEASON

(Special to The Bulletin.)

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—The changes in the racing rules for outboard motor boats which have been officially announced as effective January 1st by the National Outboard Racing commission, promise to open a new era for enthusiasts in the fastest growing of water sports.

This becomes evident after a study of the changes made in the rules as worked out by the race commissioners, Charles F. Chapman, A. T. Griffith, A. L. Bobrick, Ray Lechenger, and Geo. O. Hoehn, secretary of the National Outboard association. Outboard racing next year will take on an entirely new aspect with amateurs dominating the sport—something which the National Outboard association has been working for during the past season.

This change will be accomplished, it is planned, by the creation of a third division among the pilots of the outboards in which the drivers who are in any way connected with the outboard industry, or who race for commercial gain, will compete exclusively. Further, there will be no competition by amateurs in Division I or II for cash prizes.

Other important changes in the new rules which will make a big difference in racing next year, include weight restrictions on racing hulls, restrictions on motors, provisions for the racing of "Family Runabouts," and the abolition of Free-for-All events in which the drivers of all divisions may compete.

Hull restrictions were decided upon because of the realization that the hulls being used, in many cases, were far too light for the engines used with them with the result that there were increased upsets during races particularly in rough water. Race spills are not only dangerous but expensive. The hull restrictions do not apply to boats driven by Class III drivers.

All drivers in Divisions I and II will use the regular stock motors, with no restrictions on motors to be used in Division III. And so that all who wish to race may do so, the new rules provide for races to be held for "Family Runabouts." This, of course, was aimed to give everyone the chance to get the thrill of outboard racing, whether they have racing equipment or not. No official record will be kept of any performance made by race drivers other than amateurs.

The main reason for the changes in the racing rules was because the National Outboard association was anxious to free the sport of any taint of professionalism. The "simon-pure" amateur has had little chance in competition with professionals, and from now on professional drivers will be barred from all amateur races.

The following official changes in the outboard racing rules for 1930 will take effect January 1st, according to an announcement made December 1st by the National Outboard association through its racing commissioners: Charles F. Chapman, A. T. Griffith, A. L. Bobrick, Ray Lechenger, and Geo. O. Hoehn.

Hull restrictions—Racing hulls, with steering wheel, must weigh, at least, the following amounts:

Divisions I and II: Class A, 100 pounds. Classes B and C, 150 pounds. Classes D and E, 190 pounds. Division III, no restrictions in any class.

Records—Division I, all classes, 1 mile. Division II, 5 miles and 10 miles. Division III, no records. Also 3-mile mile trials in all classes in Division I and Division II.

Length of courses for records: 1 or 2½ miles.

Motor restrictions: Division I, all classes. Stock motors. Division II, stock motors. Division III, no restrictions.

Owners and drivers. Division I—Those who have started in less than 15 races or heats since March 1, 1929, irrespective of class, and do not qualify in Division III.

Division II—Those who have started in 15 or more races or heats since March 1, 1929, irrespective of class, and do not qualify in Division III.

Division III—Those who are in any way connected with the outboard industry, race for pay or commercial gain, compete in events where cash prizes are offered; or race with Division III drivers (Note: Service or record previously to January 1, 1930, does not apply.)

Family Runabouts—Provisions to be made for the racing of the so-called "Family Runabouts."

Prizes—No cash prizes to be offered in Division I and Division II.

Free-for-All events—No free-fore all events in which drivers of all divisions compete together shall be held.

Richards Gets Pro Job.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—(AP)—Vincent Richards, former American Davis cup tennis star, was engaged today to serve as club professional at the Norwood Country club, Long Branch, N. J., for the summer of 1930.

Vincent Is Two-Letter Man

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 29.—(AP)—The Yale Athletic association tonight announced that Francis T. Vincent, who was elected captain of Yale's 1930 football team Tuesday, was awarded a Y in football last year. Previously it was announced that the letter award this year was Vincent's first in football.

Participation in the Harvard game in 1928 earned Vincent his first letter, the association announced. He played left tackle in that game.

MASSIE MILLER IN TIE FOR 11TH PLACE IN BERKELEY $5,000 OPEN

BERKELEY, Calif., Nov. 29. —(AP)—Shooting a brilliant 69, one under par, for the difficult Berkeley Country club course, Billy Burke, of Westport, Conn., today led the field with a 140 at the end of the second round of the 72-hole $5,000 Berkeley open golf championship. In yesterday's first eighteen, Burke posted a 71.

One stroke behind Burke came Johnny Farrill, Feather River Inn, California professional and Abe Espinosa, Chicago. Each had cards of 71-70—141.

In the 142 class was Willard Hutchinson, Chicago, with 72-71.

John Rouse, Chicago, added a 76 today to his 68 of yesterday for a total of 144. Ed Dudley, Concordville, Pa., turned in 75 today, giving him 71-73—144.

Horton Smith, Joplin, Mo., entrant and pre-tournament favorite, took a place in the 145 station with rounds of 74-71. Craig Wood, Belleville, N. J., posted 75-70—145.

Leading scores included:

William Burke, Westport, Conn., 71-69—140.

Johnny Farrill, Los Angeles, 71-70—141.

Abe Espinosa, Chicago, 71-70—141.

Willard Hutchinson, Chicago, 72-71—143.

John Rouse, Chicago, 68-76—144.

Ed Dudley, Concordville, Pa., 71-73—144.

Craig Wood, New Jersey, 75-70—145.

Horton Smith, Joplin, Mo., 74-71—145.

Thomas Creavy Port Chester, N. Y., 75-72—147.

W. H. Cox, Dykes Beach, N. Y., 72-75—147.

Al Espinosa, Chicago, 74-75—149.

Massie Miller, Norwich, Conn., 73-76—149.

C. E. Clark, Tulsa, 75-75—150.

Denny Shute, Columbus, Ohio, 77-73—150.

Tommy Armour, Detroit, 77-73 — 150.

Didja see where that German, Dr. Waldemar Schweisheimer, says that "Love is Only a Disease?"

Boy, he ain't telling us married folks nothing. He puts it mild when he says it's only a disease. We could think of lots better names than that such as, calamity, disaster, the great mistake, a malignant form of insanity, etc.

He likens the "love-germ" to measles. But whoever heard of anybody going to the courts to get cured of measles or paying alimony because they had had 'em.

He says the infection does not make one violently ill immediately after the germs have lodged themselves in the system. He's right in that matter but they sure do raise particular hades after they get a foothold.

He says once the "love-disease" has broken out the symptoms are indubitable. The eye is blurred, the face becomes pale, the heart palpitates, sleep is irregular and sufferer loses weight.

There's lotta symptoms he left out such as a sudden decrease in the pocketbook; an addiction to the use of slickum and perfume; a sooty and mooney absent-mindedness; a desire to pester everybody with a line about the "one and only," and a number of like symptoms.

Those that are unhappy in love fade away like flowers deprived of sunshine and water, says the doc. Whatta lot of hooey. They either turn on the gas and go quick or they just transplant their affections to more fertile fields. They don't fade.

In conclusion the learned doctor says that inoculation against the "love-disease" is not yet possible, nor has curative serum been discovered. Now ain't that wonderful.

But let me tell the doc a few cures that are sure cure for that love disease. A coupla flat-irons administered externally with a powerful right arm will cure the most aggrevated cases.

For mild cases the continued consumption of onions, the aroma of which should be exhaled directly in the face of the afflicted. This is almost a positive case.

A person with halitosis is immune from the disease as is the person who is a chewing-gum addict. There are many other cures depending on the cases. Some cases can be cured with a diet of burned toast every morning, cold cabbage or soup at lunch, and a canned dinner at night.

Some cases are harder to cure than others but that's your own lookout. If it was like scarlet fever so when you have it once you don't have it again, wouldn't it be great. It would —not.

DARTMOUTH-NAVY GAME HOLDS PLENTY OF INTEREST

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29.— (AP) — Philadelphia will be the scene of another outstanding football battle tomorrow when Dartmouth and Navy match power and skill on Franklin field. Dartmouth fills the place on the Navy schedule formerly occupied by the Army.

With the services of "Special Delivery" Al Marsters lost to them because of injuries Dartmouth did not loom as a strong favorite tonight to take the measure of the Midshipmen. Marsters is here with the big Green squad from the New Hampshire hills and, his back encased in a special brace, will watch the game from the sidelines.

The Dartmouth eleven has been in town for two days. After watching the Penn-Cornell game yesterday, the players worked out for a short time today. Conceding that Dartmouth has a fine line and some hard running backs, the critics contend that Marsters will be missed in tomorrow's game and Navy probably will be at the top of its game for this contest.

The Navy squad, accompanied by the famous Navy band and about 3,000 midshipmen, will reach Philadelphia shortly before noon. The team was reported in excellent condition and primed to end its season with a victory.

TWO UNBEATEN TEAMS FACE CRISIS TODAY

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—(AP)—The ranks of the gridiron unbeaten meet two more tests tomorrow, with Notre Dame opposing the Army at the Yankee stadium and Texas Christian playing Southern Methodist in the decisive game of the Southwest conference. Notre Dame has won eight games and T. C. U. nine.

Purdue, Pittsburgh, Utah and Tulane, all have finished their campaigns with spotless slates. Tennessee's otherwise perfect record was spoiled by a tie with Kentucky yesterday. St. Mary's of California, enhanced its standing by trouncing Oregon yesterday, but was held to a scoreless tie by California early in the season.

Among the teams less conspicuous in the national spotlight, but nevertheless exhibiting imposing records, are Western Maryland, with ten victories; Ohio university, with nine; Davis and Elkins, with ten, and a tie; Fordham, with seven victories and two ties.

NATIONAL SWIMMING MEET AT NEW HARVARD POOL

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 29.—(AP)—The National Collegiate association will conduct its annual swimming championship meet here in the new Harvard pool on March 28 and 29 next, according to an announcement made today by William J. Bingham, director of Harvard athletics.

Director Bingham said that this championship meet would serve as the dedication exercises for the Crimson's new pool, located in the new indoor athletic building, now under construction. The swimming pool will be completed in February, though the rest of the athletic plant will not be ready until June.

TOUCHDOWN IN LAST MINUTE GIVES DESTROYER DAVIS TEAM U. S. C. G. TITLE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 29.— An intercepted pass which resulted in a touchdown in the last minute of play gave the U. S. Coast Guard Destroyer a 7 to 0 victory over the team of the U. S. Detroyer Wilkes in the Coast Guard Destroyer Forces championship game played at Morgan field here this afternoon. Strong defensive work by both teams for 59 minutes of played furnished little excitement for the 1000 shivering service men who watched the struggle.

It was a break that turned what had been a stubbornly fought game from a scoreless tie into a spectacular victory. Both teams had threatened to score early in the first quarter but stonewall defense had prevented. The Wilkes team had carried the ball to the Davis five-yard line in a sustained march down the field. At this point the Davis line held and took the ball on downs and the rally was ended. The game then tightened and neither team came within scoring distance.

With one minute left to play in the final quarter and the ball in possession of the Wilkes team on the Davis 40-yard line the Wilkes team elected a forward pass as the last desperate chance of breaking the deadlock. It broke the deadlock but not as the Wilkes team had anticipated. Reaves, fullback for the Davis eleven, saw the ball as it came hurtling over the line of scrimmage and leaping in the air snagged it.

As the ball nestled under his arm he was away, shaking off desperate tacklers as he threaded his way through the entire Wilkes team. With a clear field ahead he sped 64 yards to a touchdown and victory. He also kicked the extra point from placement.

The lineup:

U. S. D. Davis		U. S. D. Wilkes
McDonald	LE	Casey
Bergeron	LB	Williamson
Rogers	LG	Young
Weathers	C	Wilson
McElwain	RG	Janzylik
Pressel	RT	Scott
Hughes	RE	Krause
Glynn	QB	Burnhart
Dugger	LHB	Mayes
Wheeler	RHB	Anderson
Reaves	FB	Delozier

Substitutions: Destroyer Davis — Muller for Rogers, Foster for Muller, Todd for Hughes, Cooper for McDonald, McDonald for Cooper. Destroyer Wilkes—Shaw for Mayes, Pleasanton for Delozier, Mayes for Anderson, Johnson for Samuels.

Score by periods:

Wilkes	0	0	0	0—0
Davis	0	0	0	7—7

GRIFFITH HAS BETTER OF PAULINO IN SAVAGE BOUT

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.— (AP) —Jerry "Tuffy" Griffith defeated Paulino Uzcudun in a savage ten-round bout at the Chicago stadium tonight, getting the decision of the referee and two judges.

The first three rounds of the main bout were whirlwinds of action with Griffith spearing the rugged Paulino with left hooks to the head.

Griffith bounced rights and lefts off Paulino's iron jaw apparently without even fazing him during the fourth and fifth rounds.

Uzcudun found the corn-fed Iowa youth tougher than he anticipated and charged in ruthlessly in the seventh, eighth and ninth rounds. Griffith was punching cleaner, however, and scored smartly with both hands to head and body, with Paulino doing considerable missing with right hand shots to head and left hooks to jaw.

The tenth was savagely fought with Paulino desperately trying to stage a rally that would win the fight, but Griffith outscored him, even beating the Basque at body punching, as he pumped both hands to the mid-section.

BIG GATHERING PAYS RESPECT TO BILLY MULDOON

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—(AP)—Celebrities from all walks of life paid tribute tonight to William Muldoon, aged "solid man" of sport, at a testimonial banquet in honor of his 85th birthday. There were 850 guests who paid $5 apiece to gather and sing the praises of the veteran member of the New York state athletic commission.

Speeches likewise were limited to 85 words each. In a somewhat lengthier speech of gratitude, Mr. Muldoon thanked the celebrants for their thoughtfulness not only to himself but also to the charities which benefited from the banquet subscriptions. Among the guests, who included prominent bankers, sportsmen, famous industrial leaders, was Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion, while Gene Tunney, who succeeded the Old Man Mauler to the throne, wirelessed felicitations from the liner carrying him back to the United States from a lengthy stay in Italy.

Although Mr. Muldoon, in perfect health despite his 85 years, has gained his chief fame through his activities at the head of the New York boxing commission, his career has been one of the most varied and colorful in sports history. He served on the New York police force, fought in the Civil war, is credited with inventing the shower bath, and later became the Graeco-Roman wrestling champion of the world.

In the bare knuckled days of boxing he became the sponsor of John L. Sullivan, and ruled the training of the old heavyweight king with an iron hand in the final stages of the Boston strong boy's career. He appeared on the stage with Maurice Barrymore, Modjeska and Mantell and founded the New York Police Athletic association.

Before the guests quit the banquet to attend the bouts at Madison Square Garden, a huge birthday cake, bearing 85 candles and so large that four men staggered under the load, was presented Mr. Muldoon.

LONG ISLAND U. WINS GAME UNDER NEW RULES

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—(AP) — The Long Island university football team won the Metropolitan championship today by defeating Brooklyn City college, 12 to 11 in a game played under new rules suggested by Glenn S. (Pop) Warner, Stanford coach. Under the rules, first downs counted one point each and touchdowns two. Long Island scored in each of the four periods.

WESTERLY AND CHAPMAN LEADING E. C. HIGH SCHOOLS

Thanksgiving day closed the eastern Connecticut high school football season when Stonington beat Westerly and Putnam trimmed Killingly and, believe it or not, the leading team in the percentage column was none other than Jack Conway's Chapman Tech eleven in New London. Tech won five games, lost two and tied two for a season's mark of .714 while Westerly won seven and lost three for a percentage of .700.

Westerly, however, is without doubt the leading team of the section, having won the conference title and played a tougher schedule than Tech. Tech supporters, though, will point out that their team beat Westerly, 7 to 0. Three of Chapman's five victories were over the smaller high schools in eastern Connecticut, Killingly, Plainfield and Putnam, one was over Middletown, a team that did not win a game all year and the other over Westerly.

Westerly slumped in the last two games and lost a chance to run up a remarkable record. Coach Rogers boys won their first seven out of eight games, losing only to LaSalle academy at Providence in that time and then by 14 to 13. However, Chapman Tech and Stonington halted the Rhode Islanders in their final starts.

In matter of scoring Chapman Tech bested Westerly, 108 to 89 but had the poorer defensive record, 89 to 41.

Stonington had the next best season's record of the seven largest schools in eastern Connecticut. Stonington won four, lost three and tied one and outscored its opponents by one point.

Windham was the in-between team, finishing just below the first three and just above the last three and was outscored by one point.

N. F. A. led the second division with three victories in nine starts. Putnam was sixth and had the worst defensive mark, letting the opposition run up 116 points while Bulkeley brought up the rear by failing to win a game in nine attempts. Bulkeley had the poorest offensive mark, scoring but 25 points, and played the most ties, three. Only Westerly and Putnam went through without playing a tie.

The highest score of the year was made by Chapman Tech, which beat Putnam, 46 to 0.

The traditional games resulted as follows: N. F. A. won over Bulkeley, 7 to 0; Westerly beat Stonington, 7 to 0, and Stonington beat Westerly, 6 to 0; Putnam beat Killingly, 12 to 0; Chapman Tech and Bulkeley in their first game in seven years for the New London city title, played a scoreless tie.

The final records of the teams follows:

	W.	L.	T.	Pct.	Pts.	Op. Pts.
Chapman Tech	5	2	2	.714	109	41
Westerly	7	3	0	.700	89	39
Stonington	4	3	1	.571	40	39
Windham	2	3	2	.400	50	51
N. F. A.	3	5	1	.375	51	84
Putnam	2	6	0	.333	59	110

PENN HAS RUGGED GRID SLATE FOR 1930

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29.—(AP)—Five new opponents, University of Virginia, Wisconsin, Kansas university, Notre Dame, and Georgia Tech, appear on the 1930 gridiron schedule of the University of Pennsylvania, made public tonight by Sydney E. Hutchinson, chairman of the football committee.

Pennsylvania state college and Columbia, old rivals of the Red and Blue, are among those dropped for next fall's campaign. Of this year's opponents only Swarthmore, Lehigh, Cornell and Navy are retained.

The Navy contest will be placed back of the annual Cornell classic on Thanksgiving day.

MISSOURI PLACES THREE ON ALL-BIG SIX TEAM

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 29.—(AP)—Selections for the All-Big Six football team of 1929 announced tonight found the honors well distributed and no unanimous choices among the conference coaches, athletic directors and sports writers canvassed by the Associated Press.

Missouri captured three places on the first team and two places each went to Nebraska, the Kansas Aggies, Oklahoma and Kansas. Finishing at the bottom of the conference standing, Iowa State received no recognition on either the first or second elevens named.

Although winning the conference championship, Nebraska gave way to Missouri in the first team rankings but took four positions on the second team including the captaincy.

The lineup follows: Burwell, c; Reid, p; Clifford, 1b; T. Tracy, Mgr., 2b; J. Moody, ss, Capt.; Gromko, 3b; Kirk Wilcox rf; Blinderman, cf; Lieberman, lf; Coleman, Kearney and Ensling, utility.

TUNNEY OFFERED PRESIDENCY OF NEW YORK COLISEUM

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—(AP)—Gene Tunney, retired heavyweight champion, has been offered the presidency of the New York Coliseum, it was announced by Coliseum officials today. The offer was made in a radiogram to the steamship Vulvania on which Tunney is returning to the United States.

Jess McMahon, who was voted out of the presidency at a meeting of the board of directors, is to be retained as matchmaker, it was announced.

Lomski Beats Belanger.

DETROIT, Nov. 29.—(AP)—Leo Lomski, of Aberdeen, Wash., pounded out a ten round decision over Charley Belanger, of Winnipeg, Canadian limit heavyweight champion here tonight. Under the point system of scoring each round, Referee Al Day awarded seven rounds to Lomski and three to Belanger. Total points awarded were 47 for Lomski and 40 for Belanger.

LOCAL "Y" FIVE CLASHES WITH THREAD CITY "Y" HERE TONIGHT

Probable Lineup.

Norwich.		Willimantic.
Brown, lf		Olds, lf
Normandin, rf		M. Mandel, rf
Harris, c		Sweet, c
Eccleston, lg		Tinker, lg
Pingree, rg		J. Mandel, rg

Norwich reserves: Grebe, Leffingwell, Ludlow. Willimantic. McSweeney.

The attraction at the "Y" gym will be the fast Thread City Five against the local "Y", Norwich's court representatives. Willimantic has a nice combination and includes Tinker, who took Hy's place in the Heller outfit on Thanksgiving night. Sweet, one of the tallest men in basketball, will be at center.

Coach Demerest has the local five coming along in great shape and are out for a victory tonight after dropping the first two games by single points.

When the starting whistle blows Brown and Normandin will without doubt be at forwards. Harris at center and Eccleston and Pingree in the backcourt. Grebe, Leffingwell and Ludlow will be ready to step in at any time and possibly two ex-Academy stars will be added, namely, Barber and Lynch.

The local team with the lineup it has should go far towards bringing the state title to Norwich this year.

A fast preliminary game is scheduled between two of the church league teams.

The preliminary will start at 8 p. m. with the big game starting at 9 p. m.

Randy Whaples will referee.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Mitchell Memorial Concert

Hugo Kortschak, who will be the soloist at the Mitchell Memorial concert to be held next week at the Slater Memorial hall, is an eminent violinist of great attainment. His tone is of phenomenal intensity and his interpretation unites repose with a glow of feeling. Mr. Kortschak was born in Gratz, Austria, and at first entered the university preparing to become a civil engineer, but his great love for music prompted him to go to Prague to study the violin under Prof. Sevcik. He graduated in 1904 with highest honors, and was at once engaged as first violinist of the Berlin Philharmonic orchestra.

In 1907, Mr. Kortschak came to Chicago with Prof. Heermann and occupied the position of second concert master of the Chicago Symphony orchestra. During the years of 1912-13 Mr. Kortschak toured the principal European cities appearing in concerts of leading orchestras. On his return to the United States he occupied the position of soloist with the Chicago Symphony orchestra which added to Mr. Kortschak's fame as an accomplished violinist and a finished musician.

In 1916 Mr. Kortschak formed the Kortschak String Quartet, in which he played first violin. The Kortschak quartet figured most prominently in the music festivals of Pittsfield, Mass. Since the dissolution of this quartet Mr. Kortschak became particularly popular as a successful soloist. He is at present in charge of the violin department of the Yale School of Music. Mr. Kortschak's violin is a rare Stradivarius (1698) formerly owned by Joachim.

Mr. Kortschak is particularly interested in the Norwich concert having been the teacher of Dr. Frank Drazo, conductor of the Norwich Symphony orchestra, for six years. Mr. Kortschak will be accompanied on the piano by Felix Hupka, of Vienna, known at the music lovers of New York as a pianist of noted accomplishment. Mr. Kortschak will be accompanied to Norwich by his wife and the noted artists will be the guest of Mr. John Porteous during their stay in Norwich.

F. C. SAYLES, BALTIC MILLS PRESIDENT, DIES AT HIS HOME ON THE HUDSON

Frederick Clark Sayles, president of the Baltic Mills, which were established by his father, died Thursday at his home in Aldwill, Irvington-on-Hudson, after a brief illness that climaxed a year of failing health. He was a son of the first mayor of Pawtucket, R. I., and a lineal descendant both of Roger Williams, founder of Providence, and Joseph Jenckes, who settled Pawtucket.

Mr. Sayles left Pawtucket 20 years ago and his business interests were directed through Baltic and New York city, but he also maintained an office in Providence.

He was born Aug. 21, 1868, the second oldest of five children of the late Frederick Clark and Deborah Cook Sayles, after the latter of whom the Pawtucket Memorial library has been named. His father was descended from Roger Williams twice on the paternal and four times on the maternal side. His descent from Joseph Jenks was through Jenk's oldest son, Governor Joseph Jenks, one of the early chief executives of the Plantations.

In addition to being the first to occupy the mayoralty of Pawtucket after that community became a city, Mr. Sayles's father, with the latter's brother, William F. Sayles, founded the Sayles Bleachery, which is now the Sayles Finishing Plant, Inc., at Saylesville, in Lincoln. Upon the death of William F. Sayles, his interests were acquired by his son, the late Frank A. Sayles, who eventually bought out Frederic C. Sayles, Sr.

For years Frederic C. Sayles, Sr., lived with his children in their mansion on East avenue, Pawtucket, opposite the estate of the late Frank A. Sayles. Following the elder Frederic Sayles's death, however, Frederic Sayles, Jr., removed from Rhode Island to take over direction of the Baltic plant established by his father.

Frederic Sayles, Jr., was a graduate of Amherst college, for which he prepared at the Mowry and Goff school in Providence. He leaves a widow, Mary Kingman Sayles, five children, a brother, Robert Wilcox Sayles of Chestnut Hill, Mass., and a sister, Mrs. Frank Ferry of Winetka, a suburb of Chicago. Frederick T. Sayles of 145 Broadway, this city, is a cousin.

MAN WRECKED FURNITURE: WOMAN WRECKED "SPEAKEASY"

At the city court session Friday morning Frank T. Wysowski, of No. 18 Kinney avenue, was fined $25 and costs and given a suspended 30 day jail sentence for intoxication, breach of the peace and resistance. Wysowski was arrested early Thursday evening after he had partially wrecked the furniture in his house. He put up a battle when Officer Michael Pounch took charge of him and Officer Eugene Calkins assisted Officer Pounch in landing the man at police headquarters.

Wysowski, according to his wife, worked around the house Thursday morning and then told her he had to go to work for a few hours during the afternoon. He failed to show up for his Thanksgiving dinner and late in the afternoon, his wife and another woman went to an alleged liquor joint on Thames street which she called Nick's place, and where they found Wysowski. Mrs. Wysowski became incensed at finding her husband in the place and smashed bottles, glasses, etc.

On her arrival home she was attacked by her husband, who struck her, tore her fur coat, smashed dishes, a window and the telephone. Mrs. Wysowski went to a neighbor's house and telephoned to the police station for help. Wysowski pleaded guilty to intoxication and breach of the peace but refused to plead guilty to resistance, claiming he didn't know what he was being arrested for.

NIANTIC PUNCH BOARD DEFENDANTS PAY FINES

Henry J. Deablk of Flanders was presented before Justice of the Peace Effie G. Haynes at Niantic for operating a truck without a mirror or windshield wiper and was fined $2.50 on each count, with costs amounting to $16.65. He said he had been out of work for the last month and had no money. After being told he would have to give a bond or go to jail he asked a Mr. Barker if he would go on his bond. Mr. Barker said he would. "Well, if that is the case I will go to my car and get my book and give you a check for it," said the defendant, and did so.

In the cases before the court on the charges of violation of the punch board law, both defendants, through their counsel, pleaded guilty and each was fined $10 and costs, amounting to $20.65 in each case. One defendant was Theodore Sullivan and the other George Barker of Dickenson's gas station.

NORWICH UNION FIRE BENEFITS BY DECISION

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—(AP)—The appellate division of the supreme court today reversed a judgment of $78,752 against a group of insurance companies in connection with losses alleged to have been suffered in fire that destroyed the Leipzig Fur Dressing Co., East Norwalk, Conn., on June 27, 1925.

In an opinion written by Justice Francis Martin, the court held that the judgment was against the weight of evidence and ordered a new trial.

The action brought by Samuel D. Leidesdorf, as trustee in bankruptcy for Brody & Funt, Inc., fur dealers, was tried before Justice William Harmon Black, who directed a verdict on the motion of plaintiff's counsel.

The defendants, among which was the Norwich Union Fire Insurance Co., charged that the more than 13,975 furs alleged to have been destroyed were not on the premises at the time and that there was a suggestion that the fire was incendiary.

The furs were valued at $67,828.

Cattle raising is making headway in the south seas, the island of Upolu now having between 15,000 and 20,000 head.

FOX HUNT WILL FOLLOW PERKINS-BULKELEY WEDDING

Mrs. Margaret W. Bulkeley, former wife of Alderman Houghton Bulkeley, of Hartford whom she divorced some time ago, will be married to Donald Gilbert Perkins of Westport and New York, formerly of Norwich, at her country home, Peace High, in Fairfield on December 7 with principals and a large wedding party, including fifty members of the Fairfield County Hunt club, attired in hunting garb. The ceremony will be followed immediately by a fox hunt, with the bride mounted on her favorite horse, Cuba, and a wedding breakfast to be served at the end of the hunt. The couple will not begin their honeymoon until Christmas, when they will go south on a hunting trip.

Mrs. Bulkeley, the mother of two small daughters, Nancy and Hope, is the former Margaret Whitmore, daughter of the late William F. Whitmore of Highland street, West Hartford. She married Mr. Bulkeley in 1917, and divorced him abroad some time ago. Mr. Perkins, who has been master of the hounds at the Fairfield County Hunt club since its organization several years ago, is associated with the Standard Statistics company of New York city. He divorced his wife on April 16 and has three children, Donald, Barbara and Nancy. Until recently Mr. Perkins maintained a residence in Westport.

The ceremony will be picturesque and colorful, with many guests coming from Hartford and New York. Although they will not take part in the wedding hunt, they will be enabled to follow it in autos if they wish. The wedding will take place on the spacious grounds outside the house, with Rev. John J. Scott, pastor of the Congregational church of Greenfield, officiating. As soon as Mrs. Bulkeley becomes Mrs. Perkins, she will mount her favorite horse, Cuba, and the attendants and special guests, wearing the colorful hunting garb, and astride their prancing steeds, will immediately take up the hunt. The bride will wear the regular hunt livery—silk hat, black coat trimmed with blue and gold, and black breeches. Most of the women, however, will wear side-saddle habits.

Mr. Perkins will wear the customary servants black velvet cap at the ceremony, although other members of the club will be dressed in high silk hats. All, however, will appear in scarlet coats with blue and gold collars, the club's colors, and yellow breeches. Mr. Perkins will ride the hounds on Clinker, a bay. Mrs. Bulkeley and Mr. Perkins are prominent members of the club and both sports enthusiasts. The club holds hunts every week. The wedding will add a brilliant touch to this event.

Mrs. Bulkeley's home, recently completed, stands on a hill west of the Redding road and five miles from Fairfield and seven miles from Westport. In an old building nearby she keeps her autos and four horses.

LOST COWS BY FIRE; HORSE KILLED BY AUTO

While driving his coupe in the direction of Norwich Thursday night on the North Stonington road, Herman S. Atwood of Elm street, Stonington, struck a horse owned by Carmelo Rustici and injured it so it had to be killed. Rustici was driving three horses across the road when the accident occurred. Two had made a successful crossing when the Atwood machine came along, after striking the animal, Mr. Atwood notified Constable George I. Babcock, who ordered that the horse be killed to end its suffering. Three shots from a 32-calibre automatic in the hands of Everett Chapman ended the career of the horse.

The other two horses are the only livestock that Rustici now has. His 20 cows were lost in a fire that destroyed his barn about two weeks ago.

Nolle On Alleged Theft.

For lack of evidence, an absolute nolle was entered in the theft case against Sebastian Stepanek, 68, at the Thursday morning session of the city court. He was arrested Wednesday evening on complaint of Joseph Domdiski, of No. 150 West Main street.

Stepanek was a boarder at the Domdiski house, and according to the complaint, stole a watch, clocks and blanket from the house over the last week end while Domdiski was locked up at police headquarters on a breach of the peace charge.

Entertained On Thanksgiving Day.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Cruthers of 760 North Main street entertained for Thanksgiving dinner their sons and families. Their guests were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Frederick Cruthers of 507 Boswell avenue and sons, Charles, Jr., and Gerald Milton; also Mr. and Mrs. Perry Gordon Cruthers of Varnason avenue, Norwich Town, and son, Gordon.

EIGHTY SCOUTS TO HIKE TO FORT SHANTOK

According to the local scout headquarters about 80 scouts are expected to attend the hike today (Saturday). Because of the cold weather any scout who reports and who is not warmly clothed will not be allowed to attend the hike. Sheepskins, jerkins, sweaters are advised. Many scouts will bring along mess kits and utensils suitable to cook meats and prepare hot drinks. The scouts will leave Franklin square at 1:15. According to Scout Commissioner A. L. Peale who will tell the story of Fort Shantok, an interesting program has been planned which will include active games, test passing, and some exploring.

SEEKS FORECLOSURES OF THREE STONINGTON MORTGAGES

Foreclosure of three mortgages for $1,000, $1,200 and $1,000 is sought by the Washington Trust Co. of Westerly against Anna Jewett of Stonington. The property is land with a house and barn in the town of Stonington and in Wequetequock on the highway leading from Stonington borough to Westerly.

The mortgages were given April 11, 1924, Jan. 13, 1926, and Sept. 27, 1926. Party defendants named are the Lenihan-O'Connell Co. of Newport, R. I., claiming a mortgage for $1,151.93, and the town of Stonington, claiming a $68.03 tax lien in 1928 and a $79.75 tax lien in 1928, both with interest.

The suit has been brought in the superior court for this county, the papers having been filed here Friday with John H. Walker, clerk of the court.

STONINGTON WOMAN IS PETITIONER FOR DIVORCE

In a suit brought in the superior court for this county, returnable in December, Charlotte Joseph Tuite of Stonington seeks divorce from Thomas F. Tuite of that place, whom she married Jan. 31, 1920. She alleges intolerable cruelty since Jan. 1, 1926, and claims that from that time her husband has been guilty of a statutory offense with one Elizabeth King at 84 Garden street, Hartford, and at other places, and also with others whose names are unknown to the petitioner. She asks the custody of a daughter aged 9 and a son aged 5.

PAYS $200 FINE FOR DRIVING UNDER INFLUENCE

In the city court Friday morning Fabian Moyer, 26, of Mystic, was fined $200 and costs after he pleaded guilty to operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated. He was arrested at Occum Thursday afternoon by Constable P. Pilgar after the Mystic man ran his car into the gutter.

Silver Stolen From Automobile

The Westerly police department sent out notices within the last ten days that a reward is offered for the recovery of a small lot of silverware belonging to John P. Huntington, 4 Broadway, this city, which was stolen from a parked automobile at Watch Hill on June 16.

The silverware was packed in a lunch basket and was marked J. B. W.; it consisted of 4 knives, 5 spoons and a child's set.

Sea Gull Inn Incorporated

Incorporation papers for the Sea Gull, Inc., of New London, have been filed with the secretary of state at Hartford. The papers show an authorized capital of 5,000 shares of common stock of $10 par value, of which $2,900 is paid in. The incorporators are Harry J. Sigal, Samuel W. Sigal, Charles N. Sigal and Oscar Sigal.

Against Riding on Sidewalks

A warning to boys forbidding them from riding on the sidewalks was issued Friday by Chief of Police George Linton. Numerous complaints have been received by the police about boys riding their bikes on the sidewalks.

ECHOES FROM THE LODGE ROOMS

PATRONS OF HUSBANDRY

Norwich grange, No. 173, held its regular meeting Wednesday evening with Worthy Master A. W. Lillibridge presiding. The ladies auxiliary reported on buying card tables for the grange with money earned by running a card party. A committee for running dances every Friday night at Grange hall was appointed.

Ninety-four members and several visiting grangers were present.

Monday evening the two degree teams of Norwich grange went to Salem and conferred the third and fourth degrees on a class of candidates. The work was excellent and very impressive with Mrs. Helena B. Church as soloist.

The lecturer's program for Wednesday evening was a Thanksgiving hour. Tableaux of the Pilgrim days were put on in a very pleasing manner with Sister Abby Olsen in charge as follows: The first, Landing of the Pilgrims at Plymouth, 1620, Miss Charlotte Fowler, Mrs. Buckley, Dorothy Waterman, Charles Lillibridge, Thurston Lillibridge and George Durr; second, Meeting with the Natives Samoset and his tribe, John Olsen as Samoset; Indians, Mrs. Ruth Coit, Mrs. Louis Russell, Mrs. Powell and Master Perry Coles. Third tableaux, John Alden and Priscilla, Thurston Lillibridge, Dorothy Waterman. A talk on Thanksgiving by Rev. G. Warren Potter was very interesting.

Solos by Miss Charlotte Fowler were given accompanied by Mrs. Olsen. An original paper, written by Sister Coit and read by the lecturer and songs by the grange concluded this excellent program. The next meeting is Dec. 11, in charge of Mrs. A. Boyens, home economics night, a very pleasing program has been arranged.

SHEPHERDS OF BETHLEHEM

Rose of New England lodge, No. 62, held its regular meeting Monday evening with Vice Commander Michel Duggin presiding. A very favorable report of the card party, held at her home, was given by Mrs. Margaret Rogers. A very substantial sum was realized. The next home card party is to be held at the home of Mrs. Oscar Bjork on Elizabeth street. Refreshments of sandwiches and soda were served by Mrs. Ethel Hoelck.

MOOSEHEART LEGION

Women of Mooseheart Legion, No. 125, held its regular meeting Thursday evening at Moose home with Senior Regent Emma Beaver presiding. Under nominations of officers the following were nominated: For senior regent, Mrs. Evelyn Hane and Mrs. Margaret Comire; junior regent, Mrs. Teresa Watters and Mrs. Marie LaValle; chaplain, Mrs. Irene Burns; recorder, Mrs. Nellie Dorr; treasurer, Mrs. Mary Edwards. Mrs. Ethel Hoelck was nominated for recorder for the fourth time but declined to accept the nomination.

Under new business the first Mooseheart Legion Sewing circle of Norwich, was organized with the officers for the first year as follows: President, Mrs. Minnie Smith; vice president, Mrs. Emma Beaver; secretary, Mrs. Teresa Watters; treasurer, Mrs. Ethel Hoelck; chaplain, Mrs. Irene Burns; chairman of work committee, Mrs. Nellie Dorr. The sewing circle will hold its first meeting the first Thursday of December at Moose home. All legionaires are urged to be present to enroll as members. They will sew for a sale to be held later in the season. At the next regular meeting there will be election of officers.

Lamb, recording secretary of the K. of C. World war secretaries, has announced at Brooklyn, N. Y. Mr. Lamb, whose address is 1119 East 18th street, Brooklyn, is in charge of the distribution of the medals.

REBEKAHS

The regular meeting of Hope Rebekah lodge, No. 31, I. O. O. F., was called to order by the noble grand, Mary Dow, in Odd Fellows hall. The regular routine of business was followed and other new business was the first nomination of officers for the year, 1930. The lodge closed in due form.

A. O. H. AUXILIARY

The regular meeting of Auxiliary No. 14, took place Tuesday evening in Buckingham Memorial with the president, Mrs. Mary D. Sullivan in the chair. Mrs. Adeline Levitsky's report on the recent whist was read and a very gratifying sum was realized. She, as chairman of this whist, was accorded a rising vote of thanks.

The K. B. sewing class of the auxiliary starts activities for the winter by meeting for the first time on Wednesday night at Mrs. Sullivan's home on North Main street. The usual meeting night Thursday was changed to Wednesday to accommodate any members who may wish to attend a whist on Thursday evening to be held for raising of funds for Christmas cheer for the little crippled children of the Seaside Sanatorium. Mrs. Edward Sullivan spoke of this worthy project and it was voted that as many members as could try to attend. The meeting closed in the usual manner.

Preceding the business meeting of No. 14, L. A., A. O. H., the committees in charge of the installation ceremonies of the branches and auxiliaries of the A. O. H. of Norwich met and made reports of progress. This installation takes place Sunday, Dec. 15, at 2 o'clock in A. O. H. hall on Main street. Mrs. Sullivan reported that all arrangements had been made for a turkey supper to be served after installation. Mrs. Brooks reported that if possible the same music would be provided that proved so enjoyable last year. A short entertainment of speeches and singing will follow, after which the old fashioned box social and dance will be enjoyed. The committee is working very hard to make this a notable success, and all members of the two men's branches and the two ladies' auxiliaries are invited to be present and enjoy this occasion.

DEGREE OF POCAHONTAS

Sebequanash Council, No. 11, held its regular meeting Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock in the Buckingham Memorial with Pocahontas Grace Hallisey presiding. One candidate was taken in. At the next meeting there is to be nomination and election for the next six months. Most interesting remarks were heard from our deputy, Alice Lockhart and Deputy Gt. Poc. Mary Thompson. Remarks were heard from Past Sachem Thompson of New London. A prize has been offered to the sister bringing the most members in.

Refreshments were served after the meeting with Ida Clifford in charge.

Women Voters' Memorial Fund

Dec. 2 is the date on which Mrs. Richard Edwards of Peru, Indiana, will meet with a group of Connecticut women for the purpose of discussing the anniversary and memorial fund of the National League of Women Voters. Mrs. Edwards, who is chairman of the work to be carried on under this plan, was the first national treasurer of the league. She happens to be in the east at present and Miss Mary Bulkley, president of the Connecticut League of Women Voters, has secured her for luncheon at the town and County club, Hartford, next Monday. Women from every section of Connecticut, who are interested in the plan for the league's memorial fund, have been invited to attend the luncheon, to hear and talk with Mrs. Edwards.

Securities valued at $25,000,000 are dispatched from San Francisco daily on the trans-continental air mail planes.

BOY'S MISDIRECTED VIGOR JANGLES UP THE CITY'S FIRE ALARM SYSTEM

Box 64, Main and Mulberry streets, was pulled in by a boy at 8.45 o'clock Friday evening for a small fire caused by an overheated stove in the residence of Joseph H. Moore, No. 7 Hammond avenue. Mrs. Moore left the house for a short time on a visit to a neighboring house, and during her absence a wicker chair near the overheated stove caught fire. Earl Caulkins, brother of Mrs. Moore, threw the burning chair out of a window at about the time the box was pulled. The services of the firemen were not needed as the blaze was confined to the chair. There were two or three children alone in the house at the time. The house is owned by Wesley Caulkins.

The fire alarm box was put out of commission by the boy who sent in the alarm as he did not know how to pull the box properly. After opening the door he pulled the hook down, and, instead of letting go, forced the hook back so far that it became jammed against the casing of the box.

As he forced the hook back after pulling it down, the result was a rapid succession of bells in all the engine houses. The bells came in so fast that it was impossible to count them and it was not until the last round came in that the firemen were able to count the box. The bells came in so fast that the indicator at the central station jammed and was put out of commission after registering nine strokes. Later in the evening the registering device was released.

The recall was sounded by Chief Taft at 3.55 o'clock but failed to ring, as the box had been short circuited when the hook was forced back. Chief Taft repaired the damaged box immediately.
